One exercise she puts students through calls on them to imagine they are in a whole room filled with bubbles. She tells them to move as though they have to get through the room without breaking any bubbles. Then Weber directs them to move as though they must break all the bubbles as quickly as possible.

The children also pretend they are walking with an elephant on their back or that they are lighter than a balloon. Sometimes they must lead with their elbow, their chin or their knee. The possibilities for movement are endless.

The children love to play the dance version of "follow the leader."

As students move along in the hierarchy of classes, more dance techniques are introduced. They work on body alignments, learn the positions and movements of classical ballet.

Weber emphasized that her classes are developmentally sequenced. Children are not pushed to tackle dance elements for which their bodies and technical elements are not yet ready to protect them from injury.

Weber also offers a dance fundamentals class for adults.

"That's a fun class," she said.

At the end of the semester, her students put together a dance concert with a unifying theme.

In the spring, the classes presented "Poetry in Motion." The youngest chose their favorite nursery rhymes to interpret through movement with music created especially for them by one of the conservatory's piano instructors. Older students used famous poems or wrote their own.

Last winter, the students performed a dance version of "The Night Before Christmas." Weber doesn't know what the new crop of students will perform — the theme arises from the interests of the performers.

Her dream is to develop a dance troupe that will perform all over the South Shore. With luck, her "boys only" class will produce strong dancers for the troupe.

Weber is prepared to work for her dream. She's nurturing the seeds now — and loves the garden she's working in.

"The environment is so lovely," she said. The conservatory is up a long driveway to the top of Fort Hill. She describes the building as a beautiful old Southern plantation-style home made into a studio.

The conservatory offers education in music, dance and drama. There are also enrichment and instructional programs for pre-school children.

Weber said there is a void in the South Shore that desperately needs to be filled — unless you travel into Boston, there is no dance to be seen.

Sharon Weber

Weber plans to tend her garden well. There will be no wallflowers at her dance.

For more information about the programs and classes offered at the South Shore Conservatory, call 749-7565.

Flynn protects seniors

Bill Flynn of Weymouth, candidate for State Senator in the Norfolk/Plymouth district, stated that the homes of senior citizens were protected in the FY '91 budget.

Flynn said, "During the budget debate, I worked hard to exclude the language which would have resulted in a senior citizen losing their personal residence if they had to enter a nursing home."

Ambler sponsors abuse bill

A bill co-sponsored by Rep. Robert Ambler (D-Weymouth) which would require state agencies to notify certain licensees of their responsibility to report cases of child abuse, sexual abuse, or neglect has been passed by both houses of the legislature and is awaiting the Governor's signature to become law. The bill represents an effort to educate members of professional fields who work in close contact with children and teen-agers of their legal responsibility to report such instances of abuse.

"Sadly enough there have been instances when people simply were not aware of their obligation to report abuse to the Department of Social Services," Ambler noted.

McDonald challenges Ambler

Brian J. McDonald, candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state Senate seat, challenged Rep. Robert Ambler's roll call record, saying that Ambler has missed over 1,400 roll call votes in the House since 1978.

McDonald added that in the last four years alone, since 1986, Ambler has missed nearly 500 roll call votes. McDonald said he feels that this record is grossly irresponsible. "The very essence of our system of representative government is to elect officials who will represent their constituents' views. If that elected official is not around for roll call votes, those constituents simply are not represented," McDonald said.

Mihos committee formed

serves as an elected member of the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Lemonias, a former Project Manager for the GAO (General Accounting Office in Washington, D.C.), is currently the President of The Whitman Co., a real estate and metal finishing company in Whitman.

Flynn will handle labor relations.

Rep. Murray has been a representative in the Hingham, Hull, Cohasset district for the past 14 years; Rep. Murray will handle local affairs issues.

Kasperowicz is a former staff reporter for the Patriot Ledger, and a former Mariner Newspaper Group editor. She will serve as press secretary to the Mihos campaign.

Lillian Murray serves as the Mihos campaign chairman. Mary Doucette is office manager, Josh Stevens is volunteer coordinator. Mihos headquarters are located at 400 Lincoln Street, Hingham.

Hedlund wants redistricting

Robert Hedlund, Republican candidate for State Senate in the Norfolk-Plymouth district, has called for the limiting of terms of legislators to eight years, and the reform of the pension system for elected officials.

Hedlund also stated his support for the bill sponsored by the public interest group Common Cause, which would force candidates to return leftover campaign money to a special state fund and prevent office holders from receiving money for speeches.

Hussey says Mihos too busy

Donald Hussey, Republican candidate for state senate, has called for the withdrawal of his GOP opponent from the Norfolk-Plymouth district senate race, saying candidate Christy Mihos is too busy and cannot properly serve the voters.

Hussey questioned whether or not Mihos could continue to manage his 147 Christy's Markets, defend his company's interests amid charges of racism and Civil Rights violations, and sufficiently represent the concerns of the seven-town district.

Hussey stressed the need for a full-time senator. "The Commonwealth is in dire straits and needs someone who is ready to put in a full time commitment," Hussey said. "It is virtually impossible for my opponent to tend to his vast business affairs while simultaneously governing the interests of his constituents."

Doyon gets a new raise

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Payday should be a little sweeter for the town accountant and the executive secretary – selectmen approved raises for both individuals. The raises, retroactive to July 1, are over and above the three percent cost of living increase granted earlier this year to non-union personnel.

Under the terms of their contracts, Town Accountant Mary Matthews and Executive Secretary Greg Doyon get an additional annual raise that can range from three to five percent at the discretion of the board of the selectmen.

This raise is in lieu of the step raise system used for other employees, according to Doyon.

Doyon was given a four percent increase. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle recommended exceeding the minimum in recognition of the quality of Doyon's work and the supervisory responsibility he has over town boards, committees and employees.

"We rely on him for the day-to-day operations," Laugelle said.

"In my opinion Greg has been an exceptional employee," Selectman Ned Tebbetts said.

Matthews received a three percent raise.

Selectman Diana Kornet said that Matthews' lower raise should not be construed as a reflection on the quality of her work.

"We all realize the money crunch and I guess she realizes this also," Kornet said. "She's done a great job."

Hazardous waste collected this Saturday

Hazardous wastes probably find their way into the town's trash, Dr. Joseph Godzik, health agent, said as he explained what the board of health is doing to deal with the problem of toxics.

"The best way is not to buy them," Dr. Godzik said. "The main thrust of our program is education. We would like to see people utilizing products that are not toxic."

Since the education process is a slow one, there will be a safe way to get rid of the toxics available Saturday, Sept. 15, to all residents.

A Household Hazardous Waste Collection Day is planned from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the junior/senior high school, 143 Pond St.

The collection will be open to residents of Cohasset only. Northeast Solvents Reclamation Co. of Andover will handle the actual disposal.

Last week Dr. Godzik called a press conference at town hall to talk about what items could be accepted and to urge people to find ways around use of the hazardous chemicals.

Alix White, who writes the Care column for the Cohasset Mariner, has developed a list of alternatives to toxics. Her list is on page XX.

Board of health member Sharon Becker pointed out that if the town wants to continue using SEMASS to take the trash, then it will have to provide an ongoing means of hazardous waste collection.

Right now there is no requirement the toxic chemicals be collected but it is certain to be an item built into future contracts.

"They don't want to be burning hazardous waste," Becker said.

The waste collection day is expected to cost

Vedanta Center provides peace

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The Vedanta Centre is one of Cohasset's hidden treasures. This island of peace and tranquility sits in the woods off Beechwood Street.

The center is devoted to the search for spiritual truth and understanding. Its ecumenical spirit rests on the understanding that there are many paths to one truth.

As one source of illumination, the Rig-Veda, says, "Truth is one, sages call it by various names."

The Rev. Shuma Chakravarty shared the message and mission of the center on a rainy day recently. While the rain drenched the groves and gardens outside, dim lights flickered inside, illuminating the portraits on the walls, and the sweet-spicy smell of incense pervaded the room. The sense of peacefulness was all-encompassing as the slight and soft-spoken minister explained Vedanta.

The Vedanta Centre was first established in Boston in 1909 by Swami Paramananda.

The Swami Paramananda was a disciple of Swami Vivekananda, the founder of the Ramakrishna Mission in India. The mission was a well-known religious and philanthropic organization in India.

Paramananda and Vivekananda followed the teachings of Sri Ramakrishna. Nearly illiterate, Sri Ramakrishna taught in parables and exemplified by his conduct and spirit the message of Vedanta.

According to Chakravarty, his example transformed the brilliant Vivekananda who was struggling to find the meaning of life. He, in turn, passed his understandings and wisdom to Paramananda.

Swami Paramananda came to Boston in 1906 as a pioneer in the ecumenical movement. He spent the next 34 years, until his death in 1940, preaching his message of unity and universality.

In 1929, the Swami founded an Ananda Ashrama – or peace retreat – on 22 acres of land in Cohasset. The land was purchased for the grand sum of $2,000. The summer retreat would become the headquarters and home of the center with the building of the temple and main house in 1952. The center also has guest cottages for individuals who wish to make a more intense journey of spiritual

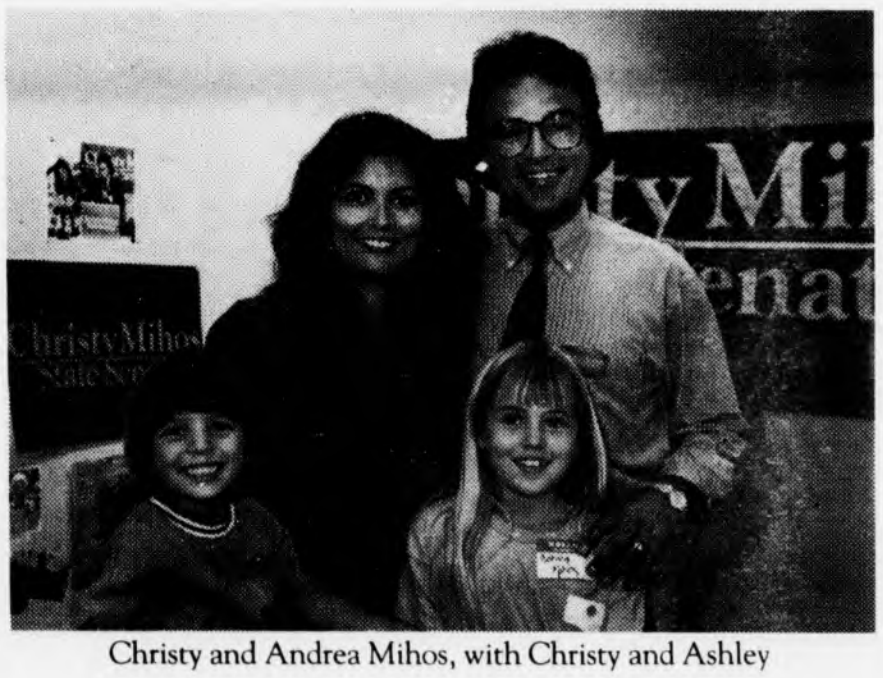
"IT'S BEEN UNBELIEVABLE BATTLING THE BIG-SPENDING, FUZZY-THINKING DUKAKIS GROUP WITHOUT HELP!



CHRISTY MIHOS CAN BE OUR NEXT REPUBLICAN STATE SENATOR. HELP US ELECT HIM SEPTEMBER 18!"

Mary Jeanette Murray,
State Representative

Charlie Mann,
State Representative

Christy and Andrea Mihos, with Christy and Ashley

Republicans you've elected can spot a winner. Christy Mihos – supported by elected representatives, state and town committee chairmen and the last Republican to hold the same job.

With Massachusetts in financial chaos, Christy Mihos is the only State Senate candidate from either party who has the management skills and hands-on track record to make hard decisions, come up with creative solutions and balance budgets. Just as he has done for a $140 million company employing 1000 at more than 125 Massachusetts locations.

Christy Mihos: strong on issues, mature business judgement, experienced financial manager. Christy Mihos: the Republican supported by the Republicans you support. You can make him our next State Senator, starting with your vote in the Republican primary on Tuesday, September 18.

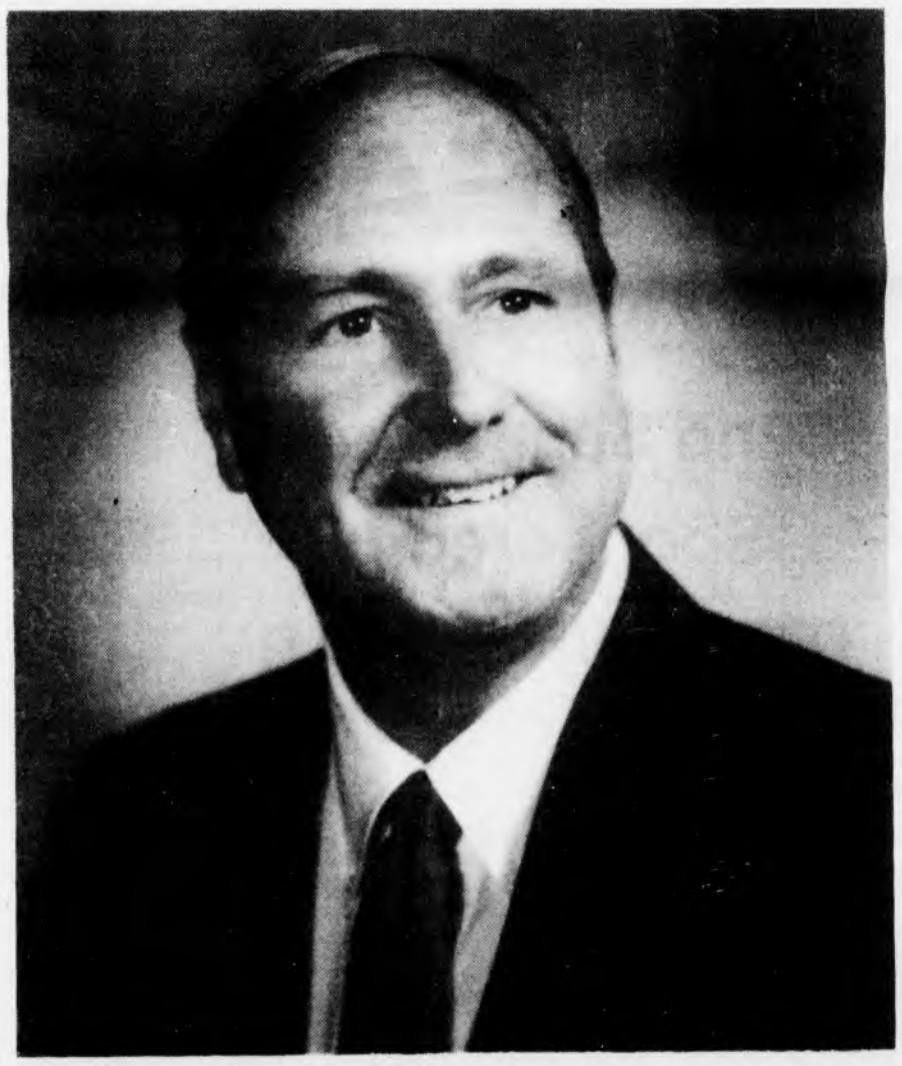
ON SEPTEMBER 18, VOTE FOR A CANDIDATE WHO WILL DO THE JOB FOR COHASSET.

BOB AMBLER.

Rocco Laugelle, Jim Farren, Ken Cosman, and Fred Parker all agree on one thing.

When it comes to Cohasset, the best thing this year is Bob Ambler.



Bob is running for the State Senate based not only on what he's done but on what we know he'll do.

Unlike so many others this year, he's talked specifically, forcefully, and positively about Cohasset as well as the whole district.

And to us that's not only refreshing, it's necessary.

On September 18, you'll have some tough decisions to make on whom to select in the races for Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Attorney General and State Treasurer.

When it comes to State Senator, however, the choice is easy.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Sanderson talks to PSO

PSO fall meeting will feature Derek Sanderson, former Boston Bruin and recovering substance abuser, speaking on his experiences with drug and alcohol abuse.

The date is Thursday, Sept. 20 at Cohasset High at 7:30 p.m.

Coffee and refreshments, followed by brief greetings by incoming PSO president, Kathy Walsh and Superintendent of Schools, Stephen Hart.

Students of appropriate age are also encouraged to attend in hopes of facilitating family discussion on the effects of substance use.

Early release days coming

There will be an early release day Thursday, Sept. 13, for the Deer Hill and Osgood schools and Sept. 20 for all schools.

Teachers will be involved in workshops on both days.

Flu shot clinics approved

Selectmen gave the Social Service League the green light to hold flu clinics Saturday, Oct. 13 and Saturday, Oct. 20. Both clinics will be held from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the town hall auditorium.

Last year the clinics inoculated 257 people, primarily elderly, against influenza. The public health nurse inoculated another 150 individuals in their homes or residential facilities.

The league needed to get permission from selectmen to use the auditorium.

New sewers may be on tap

Cohasset is eligible for the new no-interest loan program for sewer construction, according to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon.

According to selectman Martha Gjesteby, she received information indicating Cohasset was in the middle of the priority list. Priority status is based on environmental concerns, Gjesteby said.

Doyon told selectmen that he was one of several Cohasset representatives at an information session held at Massasoit College this week. Doyon said Cohasset qualified for the 75 percent combination grant and loan program.

"There is no question we will have to go back to town meeting for additional spending authorization," Doyon cautioned selectmen. Since the town

Liquor license hearing set

Selectmen set Sept. 24 as the hearing date for a transfer of the liquor license held by Sea 'N Cheese. The public hearing will be scheduled as part of the regularly-scheduled board of selectmen's meeting.

The Cushing Plaza establishment wants to transfer their license from their present location to the new quarters they are leasing in part of the building that housed the bankrupt Cohasset Meat and Produce market.

Town contractor chosen

Selectmen authorized the town to contract with Harbor Mechanical Contractors Inc. for maintenance of the heating, ventilation and air conditioning systems in town hall.

The contract is for $2,200.

Although the previous contract was held by Prime Mechanical, the company did not respond to the specifications in the request for proposal sent out by the town. Doyon also expressed some dissatisfaction with the work done by Prime Mechanical.

Doyon told the selectmen the money to pay for the contract most likely would have to come from an emergency transfer of funds.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Deferred a decision on purchasing videotapes of town meetings from 1986 through 1990 from Continental Cablevision until they could discuss the matter with Town Clerk Frances Marks.

• Signed contracts for the purchase of sand and stone negotiated through the regional South Shore Coalition. The contract for sand was awarded to P.A. Landers and the contract for stone went to Clifton Sand and Gravel, both low bidders. According to Doyon, the coalition was able to get a better price than earlier bids submitted to the town.

• Unanimously appointed J. Anson Wheeler as an associate member of the zoning board of appeals.

Selectmen set Sept. 24 as the public hearing date on a proposed intersection redesign. Abutters will get a copy of the plans drawn up by the Norfolk County engineers.

Some controversy is likely to erupt over the Norfolk County engineering recommendation that trees, bushes and a fence be removed along the intersection to improve visibility.

More options for giving

Town employees will have more options for charitable contributions now that the United Health Appeal has come to town.

Selectmen gave approval for the national organization to join with the United Way in the annual payroll deduction plan.

According to UHA representative Dwight Schenk, the health appeal lists eight volunteer health agencies contributors can earmark donations to one or more of the health organizations.

Fiscal 1989 audit is on

Selectmen ordered the town to move forward with the audit of federal funds received by the town in fiscal year 1989. The audit will cost the town approximately $7,000. According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, the money is already in the budget.

When Cohasset discovered they barely exceeded the $100,000 limit that triggers the audit, the selectmen directed Doyon to seek a waiver from the federal government. Doyon wrote the letter in late July, but has received no response as yet.

According to Doyon, he has followed up with phone calls and left the town's fax number with federal officials without any luck.

Doyon said federal officials have told him "we think it would be approved, but we have to get sign-offs from our agencies."

Under town bylaws, an audit is necessary only every two years. The audit for 1989 came as a surprise. Town Accountant Mary Matthews discovered the town misrecorded money received in July as having been received in June of 1989.

Town roof springs a leak

Highway surveyor Harold Litchfield sprang the bad news on Executive Secretary Greg Doyon: the highway department roof leaks.

Litchfield told Doyon that he could probably make it through the winter without any trouble, but repairs need to be made. Doyon recommended the selectmen put it on the town warrant for the regular town meeting.

Doyon got a quote from Joseph T. Cazeault & Sons of $9,745 for the repair work.

COHASSET HOUSING AUTHORITY

The Cohasset Housing Authority has a grant from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development to purchase a site in the Town of Cohasset for the purpose of constructing state funded public housing. Parcels with at least 60,000 square feet of buildable land on sewer line, otherwise 90,000 square feet of buildable land, that meet the requirements of the Request for Proposals (RFP) will be considered. Proposals will be received until 1:00 p.m. on October 16th, 1990, at which time they will be publicly opened and read aloud at the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Proposers may obtain a copy of the RFP which describes the site specifications and the submission requirements and the proposal form from the address indicated below. Proposals should be sent to and questions or requests for assistance should be directed to:

BILL FLYNN
DEMOCRAT FOR STATE SENATE

EXPERIENCE:
• Member, MA House of Representatives, 1975-Present
• Assistant Majority Leader
• Graduate of B.C. 1960 - N.E. Law, 1964
• U.S. Navy Veteran

STANDS FOR:
• Strong Economy for Good Jobs and Good Wages
• Quality Education - would support an ear marked tax if necessary
• Recycling Programs/Clean Environment
• Controlling Medex Costs and Protecting Seniors' Homes from Confiscation by the State.

SUPPORTS: Citizens for Limited Taxation petition (C.L.T.) - not as a final solution, but as an essential first step to stop the "spend and tax cycle" of the past 3 years. All my opponents are against C.L.T. and for entrenched special interests which you will pay for dearly through even more taxes and higher fees.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

There are three ways that hazardous waste effects all life on Earth. They are: air, land and water. Incineration of hazardous waste is the most common way for them to become airborne. Pesticide spraying is another. Land is contaminated by improper dumping of chemicals down the drain or into the sewers and then leaching through the earth and into the ground water. Hazardous waste leaching from landfills is a common way to contaminate ground water, as is run-off from pesticide, herbicide, and fertilizer spraying.

"Can we live in the 20th century without hazardous waste?" I asked this question of Kenny Bruno, Toxics Coordinator for Greenpeace Action here in Boston. He said "No, there are only ten years left; even the penguins in Antarctica have been found to have DDT, and that has been banned for over twenty years. The answer for the 21st century is . . . almost."

The alternatives to hazardous products that you find below are designed to correspond to the products being accepted Sat., Sept. 15 at Hazardous Waste Day at the High School from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. They are incredibly simple to use and easy to incorporate into your lifestyle. They are usually far cheaper and safer than the products that they replace.

Shopping List:
1 gallon white vinegar
3 boxes baking soda
1 box salt
1 box Borax
1 small bottle olive oil
3-4 lemons
specific herbs as needed rechargeable batteries battery charger

Kitchen & Bathroom:
drain cleaner: clean food/hair etc. from sieve after each use. Pour boiling water down drain once a week.
Powder or abrasive cleaners: Borax as disinfectant and whitener.
Toilet bowl cleaner: toilet brush and baking soda or Borax.
Oven cleaner: scrape crust off with spatula. Clean with baking soda and water. OR: place 1/4 cup ammonia in shallow pan (not aluminum) and add enough water to cover bottom of pan. Heat oven for 20 minutes and place pan in oven overnight. Tough dirt will loosen and can be cleaned with baking soda and water.
Linoleum floor and ceramic tile floor cleaner: Mop with 1 cup white vinegar mixed with 2 gallons water to remove dull greasy film. Polish with club soda.
General House Cleaning:
Window cleaner: 1 part white vinegar and 2 parts water. Store in squirt bottle for easy use. Rip up newspapers to handy size, use to dry window, then recycle paper.
Carpet cleaner and upholstery cleaner: To fully clean and deodorize carpet, mix 2 parts cornmeal and 1 part borax. Sprinkle liberally, leave 1 hour, then vacuum.
Furniture polish: 1 part lemon juice, 2 parts olive oil or vegetable oil (white vinegar works in place of lemon juice). Use soft cloth for polishing.
Polishing Metal:
Stainless steel: Baking soda or mineral oil for shining. Vinegar removes spots.
Copper: Lemon juice and salt, or hot vinegar and salt.
Chrome: Rubbing alcohol, or a small amount of ammonia with hot water. Also try white flour in a dry rag.
Brass: Equal parts salt and flour, with a little vinegar.
Silver: Bring to a boil in a large pan: 1 quart water, 1 tablespoon salt, 1 tablespoon baking soda. Drop in silver, boil for 3 minutes and polish with a soft cloth. OR: polish with a paste of wood ash and water.
Batteries:
Auto and boat: Recycle at RTF
Toy and flashlight: buy rechargeable batteries and battery charger.
Pesticides, herbicides, and fungicides:
Please look for alternatives to this group in next week's article. The suffix "cide" means killer and should be included in this year's hazardous waste collection and eliminated from your shopping list.
The Town of Cohasset is grateful for the grant it has received from Norfolk County Conservation District for its Hazardous Waste Collection Day.

Collecting hazardous waste

$13,000. The town appropriated $12,000 last year and the Norfolk County Conservation District provided a grant of $1,000.

In the past the town has participated in regional hazardous waste collections. Each time the operation closed before the stated time because of the limited amount of money available for the event. The last collection was in 1988 in Scituate.

During the hazardous waste collection, the board of health will run a paint swap — also on the ground of the junior/senior high school — away from the traffic flow of the collection. Hours for the paint swap are 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The event won't actually be a swap.

You needn't bring paint to take it away.

Latex paint as well as oil-based paint will be accepted at the swap area.

Any oil-based paint leftover after 1 p.m. will be carted away with the other toxics.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer
Chiropractors

INFLAMMATION OF THE BURSAE

Just mention the word "bursitis" and many people automatically think of pain in the shoulder. However, bursitis is actually an inflammation of the bursa. This is a fluid filled sac that provides lubrication to joints where bones move in tight opposition. Bursae may also be found in the knee and elbow. Over-exertion in any of these joints may induce inflammation in the bursa. The result is often pain and deposits of calcium in the area, which are evident upon X-ray. The object of chiropractic therapy is to reduce the inflammation by allowing nerve energy to flow freely to the affected area. For instance, nerves that supply the shoulder, exit between vertebrae of the neck. Once subluxations in this area are corrected, pain and inflammation subside while calcium will be reabsorbed by the body.

For this as well as other discomfort, DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, offer the chiropractic applications that offer relief from such pain. Discover the availability of a resource that will return you to a state of well-being, free from unwanted discomfort. Call today for an appointment for a chiropractic exam. Follow this column in the weeks ahead to learn more about how chiropractic can benefit you. By appointment . Worker's Comp cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Nutritional supplements may also help nourish a weakened bursa.

AROUND TOWN

❑ There was a lot of hooting and hollering last weekend at Frank Evans house! Frank had a hole-in one at Cohasset Country Club on the second hole, the first one of his career. Congratulations Frank, you achieved every golfer's greatest dream!

Speaking of the Evans family, Jane Goff had a nice experience recently too! She was at a luncheon celebrating her birthday, given to her by all of her friends. They chose Kimball's-By-the-Sea for the location, and it happened to be the time when Smokey Robinson was in town for his performances at the Music Circus. The gals were all busy chatting away when in Smokey and his crew walked (the Miracles) . . . one of Jane's party asked if he would come over and say hello to Jane and give her a birthday greeting and he did! — Needless to say, everyone was thrilled. By the way, happy birthday Jane.

❑ Annette Sawchuchi is one of the chairpersons for the Village Fair this year, the one that is on the Common at Christmas time, sponsored by the churches. She and her committee are hoping that someone will be able to assist them in finding the banner that goes over Main Street and the one that hangs on the town hall. To have another made would cost plenty of dollars, so she is hoping that someone will be able to help her out. Put on your thinking caps, last year's committee, and give her a call if you remember anything at 383-0500.

❑ Happy belated birthday to Kathy Becker who had a really big one on Sept. 3. There was a nice celebration, and let me tell you, Kathy looks the same now as she did years ago, so only the dates change, she hasn't!

❑ We want to extend get well greetings to Frank Wheelwright, who had a heart attack recently. Here's to a speedy recovery, Frank, see you "around town" real soon!

Paul Cellucci, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, left, campaigns last week at Cushing Plaza as Russell Whitney, right, and Allan DeVito, center, both of Cohasset, talk about the upcoming primary. The polls at town hall are open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 18.

❑ Another belated wish goes to Bob Pape, who celebrated a birthday last week. Tons of friends stopped by to extend their best wishes, and a great time was had by all.

❑ News from Alfred G. Odermatt, chairman of the Cohasset Red Cross Community Bloodmobile. The next Cohasset Community Triannual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 25, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street. Blood is always needed! Come and enjoy the pleasure that one receives when giving the gift of life. Give in the name of a relative or friend who has received blood in the past or will need it in the near future.

❑ The PSO has an exciting fall meeting planned, and they would like everyone to be aware of it now so that you can make your plans. On Thursday, Sept. 20 at 7:30 p.m. the meeting will begin with coffee and refreshments, followed by brief greetings by incoming PSO president Kathy Walsh and Superintendent of Schools, Stephen Hart. At 8 p.m. Derek Sanderson, former Boston Bruin, will speak on his drug and alcohol abuse. He will be speaking at no charge, and he certainly has quite a story to tell! Students of appropriate age are also encouraged to attend in hopes of facilitating family discussion on the effects of substance abuse and use. Be sure to mark the day on your calendar, then make your plans now, you will be glad that you did. By the way, it will be held in the Cohasset High School Auditorium.

❑ Happy birthday greetings go all the way to Hawaii this week, where the Mariner is delivered every week! Happy birthday to Zane Aikau, and we hope you had a wonderful celebration and many more. We love you!!

Marisol Perry of Cohasset placed first and was awarded a Gold Medal in the Preliminary Girls Freestyle class, a Bronze Medal for a third place finish in the Preliminary Girls Showcase with a ribbon presented for her costume which she designed herself.

That's the news from here for this week, let me know what's happening.

Schools promote alcohol-free homes

The school committee, meeting Sept. 5, endorsed the Safe Homes proposal of the town drug and alcohol committee.

The plan calls for parents to sign a guarantee there will be alcohol served in their homes.

The program is used in Weston and Duxbury. School Committee member Ralph Kidder, who could not attend the afternoon session, had checked with people in communities where the concept is used and found that it works, according to others at the meeting.

"It's a good step," said Stephen Hart, school superintendent.

Russell Reidy said he supports it but he pointed out there are times when a parent might not be able to enforce it.

"There are times when we're absent from the home," he said.

Reidy said he hoped other parents would still check.

"It's an important concept," School Committee chairman Barbara Bliss said.

"It's a start," Hart added.

Teachers urged to turn down CLT

Mary Babaian, guidance counselor at the junior/senior high and president of the Cohasset teachers union, delivered a fact-filled speech to her fellow teachers on the opening day of school, warning of the dangers of the passage of the referendum sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT).

"Barbara Anderson and CLT tune in on the anger people feel," Babaian said. "They are taking this opportunity to feed the anger."

She said people are angry at the legislature but that the legislature won't cut the items like the doorkeepers that create the anger.

She said the cuts would be made in education and human services.

"It's going to be a very difficult year," Babaian said.

"I hope you think about it carefully and not vote for it (CLT)." She urged the teachers to vote against CLT.

She said CLT would cut $600 million from the current fiscal budget and half of the cuts would come from public education money. If CLT passes, she said, there would be $6.4 billion cut in the next three years.

"This has to effect education and humarr services," Babaian said. "People are saying they want lower taxes. They don't care about the programs."

She went on to say the year would be a difficult one for the teachers.

"We can't afford to be divided," she said. "Put yourself in the other person's shoes before criticizing. Cooperate as much as possible. The contract is to be used as a guide. I'd like to think neither side would try to use the contract to its own advantage."

Editorial

Get your news into the Mariner

There is no magic to getting stories into a weekly newspaper. We want your news. Publishing news about the local community is our reason for existence.

We need your help to provide the community with the best possible newspaper. We have limited space and limited human resources. We do the best we can.

The key to getting news about your pet project or your organization into the Cohasset Mariner is to submit it, in timely fashion. Our deadline for news from the community is Monday at noon.

We are always happiest to see news that's typed, double-space. Never use all capital letters, we try to scan the typed copy into the computer. Neat, hand printed copy is acceptable. Many of us have eyes that are already strained from long hours at the computer terminal.

Don't forget to put a contact name and telephone number on item.

There are dropspots at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy on South Main Street and at the Cohasset News in the Village. There is a post office box in Cohasset – P.O. Box 71, Cohasset, MA 02025. And news items can be brought to the Marshfield office at 165 Enterprise Drive, Marshfield, MA 02050, or faxed to the office at 837-9619.

Anyway you choose to send us your item is fine with us. Don't expect us to take it over the telephone – we just don't have the time.

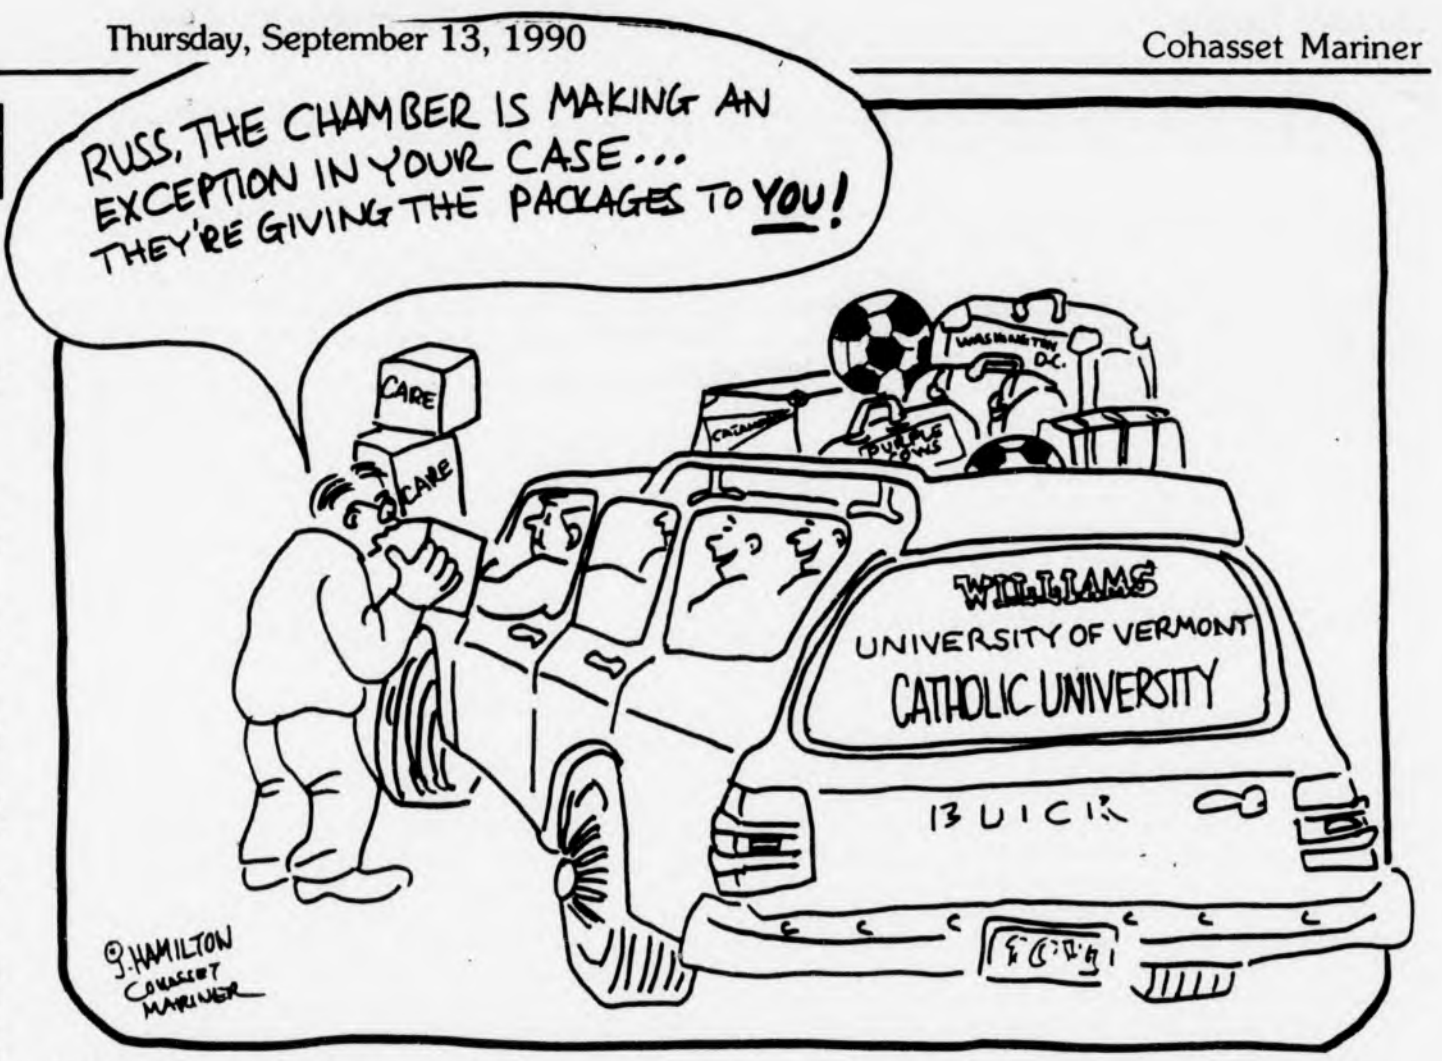
And don't think that using the fax to Marshfield means you can submit an item on Wednesday morning with the hope of finding it in type in your mailbox Thursday morning. The fax can give you some leeway Monday – if you miss noon pickup in Cohasset – but it doesn't perform miracles.

After the stack of news items get to the editor at Mariner (who happens to be Pat Desmond for those of you who like to put names on envelopes), each one is read and edited, given a headline and sent into the production for typesetting and then moved on to page layout.

We do the best we can to run all items about upcoming events before the events happen. But you help us and your chances of getting the item in right away by being as brief as possible. We can always find space for a paragraph or two.

We try to run news about people in the community as quickly as possible. We wish we could promise it would be printed in a week or two. We just know our track record isn't there.

In a boom economy, we would have plenty of space each week for all the school honors, business promotions and weddings. The truth is: space has been tight for quite some time. We run these stories as soon as possible.



If there's a fantastic photo opportunity you want to tell us about, don't wait until the day of the event. Our photographers are not in radio contact with the office. Sometimes their schedules are filled a week in advance. Indeed, sometimes they actually have a whole day off.

For years, newspapers wanted black and white photos for reproduction. Times have changed. Color photos – by not Polaroids – can be reproduced. If you send us a snapshot of interest, we will consider using it.

Letters to the editor must be signed. Include a phone number where you can be reached during the day. We won't print the number.

The Mariner's toll-free number is 1 (800) 649-6661. You can't always reach someone from the Cohasset staff. There are times when we're out gathering news. And we aren't a 24-hour a day operation. But Desmond is known as someone who calls back everyone who leaves her a message. Mornings are the best time to reach her. She is usually in the office by 9 a.m.

Incidentally, we are looking for someone to cover high school sports in Cohasset.

College-bound students can look forward to care packages, thanks to the efforts of the Chamber of Commerce. Each package contains a subscription to the Cohasset Mariner as well as a tote bag filled with contributions from local merchants.

'Nightmare' accident is handled well

To the Editor:

On Friday, August 31, 1990, we received a phone call that is every parents' worst nightmare, "Your child has been hit by a car".

One neighbor called the ambulance while another phoned us. When we arrived at the scene on King Street the Police and Fire Departments had already arrived. The thoroughness, professionalism and compassion shown by these people was commendable.

We extend our gratitude to all, particularly Capt. Silvia, Capt. Gurry, Firefighter Protulis and Firefighter Davis.

Our son is at home and expected to recover fully from his injuries.

Joe and Jane Hamilton

Commission draws its conclusion

To the Editor:

At its last meeting, the conservation commission decided to take issue with the editorial cartoon appearing in your Aug. 9 edition relating to the recent destruction of a substantial area of beach dune and beach grass at Sandy Beach by an irresponsible Hingham youth in a 4 x 4 vehicle.

The tone and implication of the cartoon was that the commission was overreacting to the situation and was picking on the offender by seeking to enforce the imposition of a fine under the town Wetlands Bylaw.

The commission would like to thank the Cohasset Police Department (and, in particular Officer Healey who alerted the commission to the incident and sought out the commission for the purpose of seeing what action, if any, could be taken), the Sandy Beach Association and other citizens of the town for their support of the commission's actions and their recognition of the seriousness of the incident and the importance of the barrier beach to Cohasset's environment.

The commission also wishes to thank the Massachusetts 4 x 4 Association for its letter of support published in your Aug. 16 edition.

The commission is confident that most of the citizens of Cohasset appreciate the fact that the commission was doing its job in protecting this valuable resource to the community, which is what the citizens of the town should expect from their town officials.

The commission recognizes that a public board needs to have a thick skin and is certainly willing to take its lumps when they are deserved. Nevertheless, the commission does not feel that such sarcasm as is represented by the cartoon in question is deserved or serves your paper's readership, particularly when it comes from a newspaper which never covers our commission meetings notwithstanding that we are one of the busiest boards in town and one that affects a great number of citizens of the town. Perhaps if the Mariner better understood what our commission does, it would appreciate the actions we took in this incident.

RTF wants stolen flags returned

To the Editor:

Yes, the American Flag and the World Flag (representing Earth Day) have been stolen from the R.T.F. (Recycling Transfer Facility). These flags, along with the flagpole were donated to the Town of Cohasset by the Eagle Flag Company of Weymouth.

I am writing in hopes that the person or persons, who went through the work of climbing over the fence, will read this article, feel shame and remorse, and return the flags. This can be done after hours, the same way that they were taken.

Stop and think about what you have done. Look at the world around you and the millions of people who take pride in the symbols of our country. Many thousands of Americans are in distant countries right now, defending those symbols and what they represent. Your thoughtless act is disrespectful to yourself, your family and a disgrace to your community and country.

Please, if you have any conscience, return the flags!

Golden wants to be state's number 2 man

By Robert J. Flavell
Executive Editor

"There's been no governor or lieutenant governor south of Braintree for 100 years. For the first time in this century, we have a chance to have a person from the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts in the second-highest office in the state."

Thus does state senator and lieutenant governor hopeful Bill Golden cast his net for votes amid the sprawling South Shore region he calls home.

Golden, perhaps best known for filing the federal lawsuit that forced the court-mandated cleanup of Boston Harbor, represents the Norfolk-Plymouth Senatorial District in the State House.

He's well-known on the South Shore, a point in his favor as he campaigns for what he agrees is a less-than-glamorous statewide run.

"The lieutenant governor's office is only as good as the person who holds it," says Golden, careful not to take any swipes at its present occupant, Evelyn Murphy, under whose aegis he thought he might find himself serving next January. (Murphy has since pulled out of the gubernatorial race, announcing Monday that she would vote for Frank Bellotti.)

"You need someone who doesn't need a job description to get things done," said Golden in a visit to the Mariner last week. "It's a perfect office some someone who wants to shake up the way we do business in this state; but it's also a perfect office for a ribbon-cutter."

UNVARNISHED REALITY

The unvarnished reality, of course, is that the lieutenant governor relies upon the good graces of the sitting governor for assignments and authority.

In John Kerry's case, that grace brought him an appointment to the U.S. Senate.

Frank Sargent served John Volpe well, and ascended to the corner office when Volpe joined the Nixon Administration.

But Tommy O'Neill, a liberal in a den of Ed King conservatives, found himself largely ignored, as has Evelyn Murphy.

The lieutenant governor's post is neither fish nor fowl. Created by the constitution, and filled by statewide election, it nevertheless carries only the scantiest of official duties, unless the sitting governor has the temerity to leave -- as Michael Dukakis did last week, unleashing a torrent of vituperation between his adherents and Murphy's in the home stretch of the primary crusade.

Murphy has tried before to assert herself, as O'Neill did, neither with much success.

If the job is what you make it, what would Golden make of it?

"I'd fight as an advocate within the administration. You can bring change. In 1982, when I filed the lawsuit to clean up Boston Harbor, people said 'forget it, it's gone, it's too late.' But now, we have a system and a plan that can work. I'm not saying it will work, but it can."

Golden has raised $750,000 for his first statewide bid, a figure he proudly asserts was culled from citizens and voters, not PACs or lobbyists. He faces two state representatives in the Democratic primary Sept. 18: Marjorie Clapprood of Sharon and Nicholas Paleologos of Woburn.

Diplomatically, he expresses no preference for a gubernatorial running mate, though, as his liberal roots would suggest, he seems less comfortable with the idea of serving with John Silber than with either Francis Bellotti or Evelyn Murphy.

And he dismisses oft-heard suggestions from supporters that he should have run for governor, the third-floor office, not second-place on the second floor.

Bill Golden

"I'm not in that weight class," he acknowledges with a twinkle that clearly imports an intent to tone his political muscle for a climb upstairs in the future.

'SOUTH SHORE AGENDA'

Why should it matter if the lieutenant governor -- a job with few official responsibilities, and a post mostly beholden to the sitting governor for something to do -- is from the South Shore?

"I'd put the South Shore and Southeastern Massachusetts on the forefront and our agenda and our needs would get attention," vows Golden, who points to the sorry state of South Shore roads, transportation and state services as proof of Beacon Hill's neglect. "I would bring sensitivity about the needs of our area for transportation, the environment, and economic development."

Though a home-grown candidate, Golden doesn't seem to mind ruffling feathers in Hingham by endorsing the three-line Old Colony railroad restoration, including the controversial Greenbush segment, a cause célebre among some Hingham business owners and residents.

Allowing that "a lot of people are critical of Greenbush," Golden nevertheless describes himself as a "strong supporter."

"We're drowning in traffic. We're close to gridlock, not just on Route 3 but on secondary roads as well -- Queen Ann's Corner, Route 53, Route 18, Route 139 -- and now it's spilling onto tertiary roads -- into neighborhoods," says Golden.

"People say only 20 percent of the population commutes to Boston, but that's all you can address. You can't affect the local network of traffic. But the beauty of commuter rail is that people can go a few miles and reach a station. Their cars are off the road, and you reduce traffic 20 percent."

Golden says all three Old Colony lines are needed to justify the cost, officially estimated at $561 million, financed half by federal funds and half by state bonds.

The Old Colony restoration, says Golden, "is a significant issue for the entire South Shore area. People have to separate self-interest from the public interest."

ECONOMY IS #1 ISSUE

Golden is widely recognized for his environmental agenda and support of liberal causes. Brought to earth by the realities of finance, though, he lists the economy as the key issue facing state government.

And he visualizes himself as an essential player in slaying the fiscal dragon.

"We need a strong advocate, who can focus on the big picture, which is the economy," he says.

"It's time to get government and business working together to create jobs," he adds, citing his 16-point plan for economic growth and stability.

Among his points:

• Massachusetts government should invest in Massachusetts, buying its goods and services from home-based firms, and using state pension fund investments to create jobs and housing. ("The huge Boston Harbor engineering contract went to a California firm, when we have Stone & Webster right here.)

• Aggressively pursue tourist business, help entrepreneurs in the high-tech industry, triple the investment tax credit to three percent, and accelerate the pace of public works projects.

• Convert foreclosed condo developments for use as affordable housing and encourage mortgage lending by depositing government funds only in banks that follow fair lending practices.

And, in a point already in the thoughts of many a primary voter, Golden says it's time to restructure state government.

"State government is out of control," he asserts, suggesting a "citizen's audit" of state government agencies, a mini Gramm-Rudman approach to limit spending, civil service reform, "sunset" provisions to eliminate unproductive agencies and programs, an expanded "rainy day" fund for use during budgetary shortfalls, and adoption of a two-year operating budget and a four-year capital budget.

'MAD AS HELL'

"People are mad as hell. It's been business as usual on Beacon Hill while the private sector is suffering."

Golden opposes the Citizens for Limitation Taxation petition to roll back taxes and fees to 1988 levels as "unworkable," though he admits it stands a "good chance of passage.

If it does pass -- and if he's elected -- "I'd reach out to the business community and CLT support groups, and not have the private and public sectors at war. I'd suggest we delay CLT, and give the legislature until February to act."

What makes him think the legislature, having considered the state's fiscal woes for two years without solving them, could suddenly focus?

That, says Golden, all depends on the new gubernatorial administration's willingness to "bite the bullet" and take control of government.

Massachusetts, he says, will face a billion-dollar deficit next year; a new administration -- in which he hopes to play second fiddle -- must "act within the first month, and make massive cuts" -- or risk its credibility from the outset.

Get out and vote Tuesday, Sept. 18

Letters

To the Editor:

We are writing to urge you to exercise your vote in the state primary, Tuesday, September 18.

The two party system in Mass. is non-existent. The Democrats, through lack of responsible leadership, have brought economic disaster to our state with increased taxes, huge deficits and our bond rating is the lowest in the nation. Businesses are leaving the state and unemployment is at 6.7 — a 100 percent jump in two years!

Mass. needs new leadership. Use your opportunity and privilege to create a positive change in our state by voting in the Republican Primary. Select the candidates of your choice to produce a winning ticket in November.

Think and act on Tuesday, September 18. The polls are open 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Reader expresses amusement at letters

To the Editor:

I read with both amusement and deja vu the letters written by Mike Sullivan and Dan Leahy regarding the sign on Sohier Street.

I used to get all upset and write letters similar to Mike's. I soon found that all I accomplished was to encite someone to write a letter like Dan's.

Now I just get a chuckle out of anything in Cohasset concerning the illustrious "Mr. S." Two years ago I stated it, and I'll state it again," Mr. S, with his money, will get his way in this town regardless of any board or any regulation." It's a fact, and it has been proven again and again.

As I also stated two years ago, I hope we're not wasting my tax money on legal fees. You can't beat "Mr. S" and "Mr. H." What a combo!

Sincerely
John E. O'Brien

Second encephalitis case reported on South Shore

A 75-year-old Kingston man has been confirmed as having the second case of Eastern equine encephalitis on the South Shore this year.

The man, Amelio "Mike" Ruffini, was reported in serious condition at Jordan Hospital, Plymouth.

The first encephalitis case, confirmed two weeks ago, involves a seven-year-old Marshfield boy, reported improving at New England Medical Center.

That case was announced Aug. 28, the day before the state began aerial spraying of South Shore towns to kill mosquitoes that spread the potentially-fatal disease.

Mr. Ruffini entered the hospital on the next day, Aug. 29, officials said.

BULLETIN BOARD

Tour of 'The Glades' set

The Cohasset Historical Society will hold a tour of the fabled "Glades" estate, Strawberry Point, Minot, on Sunday, Sept. 23 from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. Through the courtesy of the association that owns and operates the "Glades" summer estate, members and friends of the Historical Society will have a rare opportunity to view this famous oceanside estate in Scituate's Minot. The tour will present an opportunity to learn the history of the Glades and to walk through its scenic grounds.

Street, Cohasset 02025. Admission to the tour will be $10 for Society members and $12 for non-members, payable by check in advance. Due to limited facility we urge that reservations be made before Wed., Sept. 19.

Parking for the tour will be provided. It is expected that three hourly buses will be available at 1 p.m., 2 p.m. and 3 p.m. to take tourgoers into the estate and return. Please indicate which of the three hours you prefer. Parking and bus accommodations are still being planned and will be announced soon.

For further information call the society at 617-383-6930.

Sixty-plus club to meet

Cohasset Sixty-Plus Club meets Thursday, Sept. 20 at the Unitarian Parish House, Main St. A sandwich lunch is served at noon, with a business meeting to follow.

The social service nurse will be present to take blood pressure. "Lady Lee Wool" will present a program on "Hats, Famous and Not So Famous." All are welcome.

SSCC offers family fun

South Shore families in search of good food and wholesome entertainment should circle Sun. Sept. 23 on their calendars. The South Shore Country Club's development committee is sponsoring a family fun night for the general public from 4:30 to 7:00 p.m.

The evening features an old-fashioned ham and bean dinner complete with homemade Brown Betty. The dinner is served from 5:00 to 6:00 p.m. A magician will provide entertainment.

Tickets are $7 for adults and $4.50 for children 12 and under.

For additional information or advance tickets, call 749-1747.

Terry Fox event set to run

Scores of South Shore road runners, joggers, walkers and even skateboarders are readying for their participation in Making Strides: The Fifth Annual Terry Fox Run, a noncompetitive, five mile "move-along-athon" set for Sunday, Sept. 23, in Boston for the benefit of the American Cancer Society.

The event is held in memory of a young Canadian who captured the hearts of the world when he persisted, despite the loss of a leg and cancer, in running across Canada to help battle cancer .

South Shore participants are busy signing up sponsors whose contributions will all go to support the cancer information and service programs of the South Shore Unit of the Cancer Society, covering the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Quincy, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Participants may walk, run, roller skate, or ride bicycles, skateboards or wheelchairs around the five-mile course which starts and ends at the Four Seasons Hotel across from the Public Garden. Registration, a cancer information fair, and an aerobic exercise warmup begin at 9:30 a.m., and the run starts at noon.

"We're encouraging former cancer patients, health professionals and all who want to help in the fight against cancer to participate or support participants," Barbara Sullivan, president of the South Shore Unit stated. "The funds will help us continue and expand the many services our volunteers offer to cancer patients on the South Shore."

For information and registration forms, call 1-800-952-7664 .

Fall Story Hour at library

Registrations are currently being accepted for fall story hour series at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The series begins on October 11, and lasts for six weeks. Sessions will be offered at 10 a.m. on Thursdays and Fridays. Each 45 minute program consists of several picture book stories and simple fingerplays, songs, and crafts. Children must be a at least 3 1/2 to participate.

To register, stop by the Children's Room, or call the children's librarians at 383-1348.

Cable channel 53 schedule

September 18, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal "Economic and Political Climate in the Philippines." Jethro Pettit and colleague Daisy Leyva, native to the Philippines, share with viewers their experiences working for the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee on economic development in the Philippines. Jethro has traveled to many third world under-developed countries and last appeared on this program in early January when he talked about issues and events in Central America.

Primary will be televised

Primary election results will be telecast live next Tuesday night on Continental Cablevision Channel 53 in six area communities, as part of a special presentation of "Newsbeat 53," the South Shore's weekly cable newscast.

Newsbeat's election coverage will feature live and taped reports from various locations around the Art Center registration set

The South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset announces registration is open to members for the fall term.

Eight-week courses beginning the week of Sept. 24 for adults will explore the areas of Drawing, Painting, Calligraphy, Portraiture, Oriental Brush Painting, Printmaking, Photography, Monotype/Collagraph/Intaglio, and Clay. Several courses in each medium are offered for all levels of ability. A multitude of workshops, which are 1, 2, 3, or 4 classes, throughout September, October, November and December offer an alternative to the longer eight week courses. Dabble in an area totally new in Color Theory, Drawing Basics, Painting in Acrylics or Watercolor or Oils, Collograph, Silk Screen, Faux Finish, Papermaking, Silk Painting, Clay Jewelry, and Photography.

This fall, the concept of the family working and learning together will be reinforced through a series of family art workshops. All family workshops are open to parents, grandparents, older siblings and/or adult care-givers, and children. Learn to make art together, gravestone rubbings, origami/holiday ornaments or clay ornaments/gifts. These workshops provide a stimulating environment where parents and children can experiment together with art materials in an informal manner. Instruction, demonstration and exploration of a wide range of materials, tools and processes will encourage participants to discover their own forms of self-expression especially in the workshop series Making Art Together.

Also new this fall, young adult courses have been developed with teenagers in mind. Art Explorations, Expressive Photography, Combining Art Skills and Self Expression and Portfolio Preparation for College, Scholarship, Art School or Job Hunting will be offered for your young adult.

Young Artists courses (8 weeks) beginning the week of September 24 include the areas of Drawing, Painting, Printmaking, Photography and Clay. A variety of courses for different age levels are offered in each of the mediums. During the week of October 20, the SSAC will offer a series of special Halloween Workshops for your young goblins. In addition to this week of workshops, there will also be special Holiday Workshops during the week of November 27.

Registration for members is open now. Registration for the general public will open Sept. 9. Membership may be taken anytime. To register or for more information regarding any or all of the many programs and activities at the Art Center, please call 383-9548 between the hours of 10 a.m. and 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday. Please note the new hours of the South Shore Art Center are: Tuesday-Saturday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For experienced rowers

Experience rowers are invited to participate in the third annual Minot's Light Roundabout at 9 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 15, under the sponsorship of the Alden Rowing Association and the USRA.

The five-mile race runs from Sandy Beach to E-marker, southward around the light, returning to Sandy Beach. The course will change in the event of bad weather.

Art Center offers exploration of your creative side

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The grass is still green, the fountain on the Cohasset common is still spritzing and the South Shore Music Circus tent is still up, but it feels like change is in the order of things. If you are want to make some changes in your life, the South Shore Art Center offers South Shore residents the option to explore the creative side of themselves.

If you're ready to cut loose and get arty, the choices waiting for you are downright boundless.

If you are a neat and tidy type, you may find drawing suits your fancy. Or you could simply mess about with paint capturing the beauty of South Shore seascapes. If words are your forte, you could embellish them in high style in the calligraphy course.

Students can learn how to put a faux finish on their walls, create a set of pottery dishes or piece a quilt.

Too busy to sign up for a series of classes? Then sample the delights of the creative life with a workshop or lecture.

The center hasn't forgotten about families and children. Parents and children can explore the wonderful world of making art together. Choices include – but aren't limited to – making pop-up cards, making gravestone rubbings, and creating original holiday ornaments out of clay or origami paper.

Children can get their hands in clay or dabble in painting. Holiday workshops include Halloween mask-making and pumpkin carving.

The complete catalogue can be yours for a phone call or drop-in visit.

If you need inspiration to get you started or if you just want to feed your soul, a visit to the two exhibits currently on display is definitely in order.

The Dillon Gallery is home to "On the Edge," works by Scituate artist K. A. Calnan and Hingham's Elizabeth Burke.

Hingham's Mrs. Flemming teaches students the art of acrylics.

Calnan and Burke both work in intensely vibrant colors like mustard yellow, teal blue and purples that range from violet to heliotrope to eggplant. Although their palettes coincide, their visions take them in two different directions.

Calnan began her career doing representational and semi-abstract work. Cezanne was an early influence. Then she discovered Matisse and began experimenting with abstractions in a wild interplay of color.

Calnan's works are big and bold and full of energy. Her preferred medium is acrylic or oil paint, although she has been experimenting with monoprints.

Burke prefers highly-stylized representational themes. Flowers and Boston brownstones are recurring images, but everything is rendered in a riot of color and life.

Like Calnan, she prefers to work in acrylics. On-location painting energizes and motivates her work.

The works of two artists also grace the walls of the Bancroft Invitational Gallery.

Pia MacKenzie and Joyce Zavorskas are featured in "Pia and Joyce Paint Paris."

Although both artists drew their images from scenes of Versailles, the Tuilleries gardens and the French countryside and then rendered them in oils and monoprints, their style is very different.

MacKenzie draws from the memory of a girlhood spent in France, jogged by photographs. Her work is lush and vibrant and her colors are rich and bold.

Her oil crayon paintings of the doors of Paris make you long to open them and step through.

Zavorskas is a calmer, more romantic painter. She works from color slides and graphite studies to "get the buildings right, get the trees just right."

Her colors are opaque and luminous and the architectural details more defined.

Their work is like velvet and silk – wonderful to the senses in very different ways.

The exhibits continue through October 12 and registration is open for courses now. The center is open Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

For more information, call the center at 383-9548.

Modeling course offered

This fall, the world of modeling is coming to Cohasset — and any teenage girl who would like to be a part of it is invited to attend. Cohasset Community Center and Candy Ford, director of Ford Model Management of Boston, presents "Introduction to Modeling," a five-week intensive workshop for girls ages 12-18 who would like to explore a career in modeling or just learn the tricks of the trade.

Candy Ford brings to this workshop her own invaluable experience as a top model and models' agent as well as a team of professionals, each with their own expertise.

- One of Boston's leading make-up artists will demonstrate and explain a variety of make-up techniques designed to accentuate the positive and minimize the negative.
- A leading hairdresser will help girls choose styles that are flattering and trendy.
- Alfred Fiandaca, a professional runway instructor, will teach posture and grace, important skills for models and non-models alike.
- Mike Connell of K.C. Visuals will direct participants in their own thirty-second TV commercial spot.
- Cynthia Kulfan, photographer and former model, will discuss how to "move" for the still camera and provide girls with their own 8 x 10 glossy.

Girls also will meet a professional model and models' agent who will answer all questions.

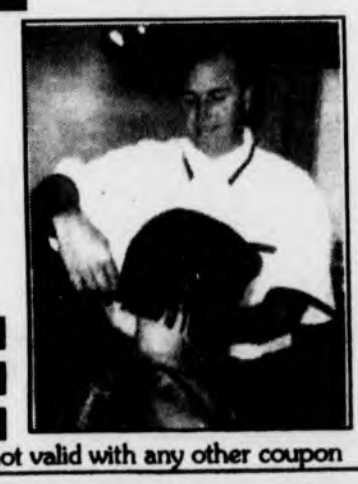
"Introduction to Modeling" will be offered at Cohasset Community Center on Wednesday from 4 to 5:30 and 4 to 6 (last week) starting Oct. 3. Cost will be $125 for the 5-week course.

To register or for more information, call 383-0088.

Children's choir begins

A special singing experience called Junior Voices (formerly Kinderchor) is about to start in Hingham, with Tuesday afternoon rehearsal/classes for children seven to 12 who love to sing and perform. Music reading skills are incorporated into the program, so that new music can be learned from reading notes, not just by ear. Each hour's activities include games, songs, exercises, and drills, taught with enthusiasm and energy to improve reading and the ability to sing with proper voice production in two and three parts.

JV's instructor/conductor Margo Euler is incorporating the children's program into her Broad Cove Chorale (women's voices) and Unicorn Singers (mixed voices) organization, and has high hopes that the commitment and excellence of the parent choruses may influence the new kids on the team! Margo also is music director of "That New Theatre" based in Norwell, a group which produces several quality music theatre productions each season. Margo graduated from Smith College and Harvard's Graduate School of Education, and has taught music at all levels in public school.



Junior Voices will be performing as a chorus several times a year, so a serious commitment to the weekly rehearsal/class is required. Children considering enrollment should have a strong love of singing, good attention span and ability to match pitches accurately. Please call JV's administrative coordinator Liz Murphy at 749-0056 for further details about pre-registration; the program will start the second week of September. Details about the first rehearsal/class will be relayed to all who are pre-registered.

Vedanta Center

discovery.

According to Chakravarty, Paramananda came to share, not to proselytize. He found many in the area were drawn to the ancient philosophy of Vedanta that he taught.

When Swami Paramananda died, his disciple Srimata Gayatri Devi succeeded him. Srimata Devi, now 84, has an international ministry. The elevation of Srimata Devi demonstrates the message of equality between men and women that Paramananda preached. Srimata translates to Reverend Mother.

Paramananda also espoused racial and educational equality.

Vedanta is drawn from the Sanskrit words Veda (wisdom) and anta (end or goal). In studying Vedanta philosophy, one is looking for the supreme truth or understanding.

Vedanta has no human founder, Chakravarty explained. Rather it should be understood as the revelation of the fundamental principles of the universe.

One of those fundamental principles is that it encompasses all the moral and spiritual truths uncovered by varying cultures and religions.

"An Infinite Being must have infinite paths leading to Him," explained Swami Paramananda. In Vedanta, it is assumed that everyone has a need to find his or her way to the Infinite Being. It is a basic tenet that the main goal of human life is to realize or be conscious of the divine presence which is within oneself, Chakravarty said.

"We must cut through the layers hiding the divine spark," she continued.

Swami Paramananda taught that people find their way to the truth by the means they are best suited to. He said there are four main ways that individuals approach spiritual discovery: Karma Yoga, Raja Yoga, Jnana Yoga and Bhakti Yoga.

The names may seem intimidating, but Chakravarty explained them simply and concretely.

Karma Yoga is the path of work or unselfish activity. A true adherent of this path would perform the work for the sheer love of it and not be attached or concerned about the praise or censure that might flow from the results.

Chakravarty said it is very difficult to reach the level of working without any ulterior motive or need.

"It is a lifelong endeavor," she explained.

Raja Yoga is the path of self-control and self-discipline.

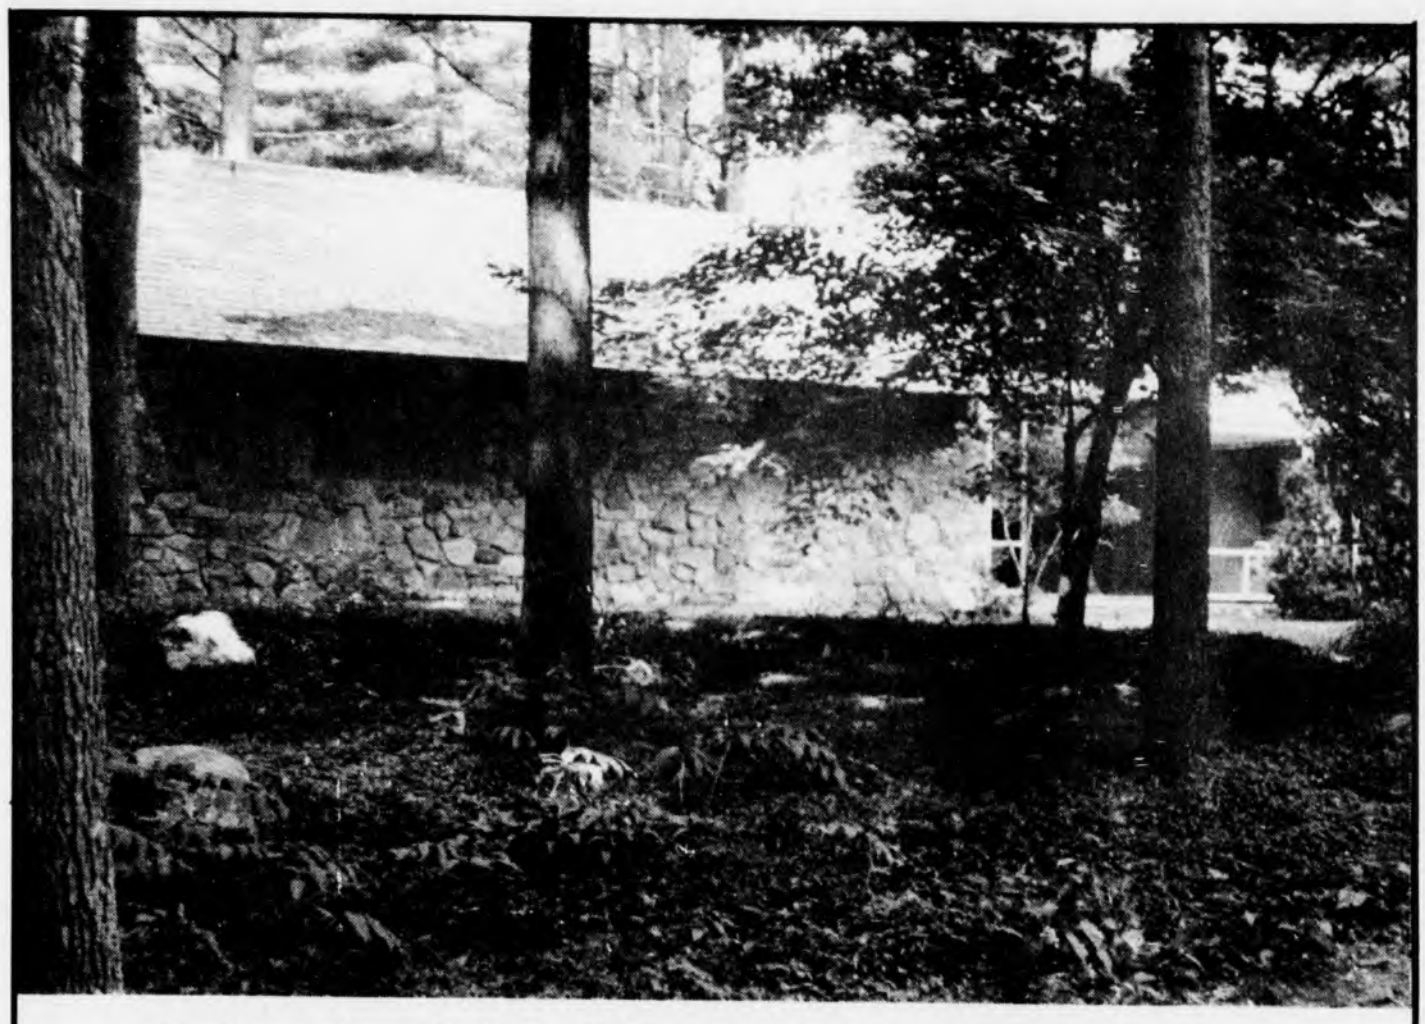
"It is not repression, but becoming the owner of your own being," Chakravarty said. The goal is to avoid being ruled by instincts, passions or prejudice.

The first steps along this path involve control over the physical being. There is a focus on healthy living and mastery of prescribed postures and methods of breathing.

Jnana Yoga (pronounced gyana) is the path of knowledge.

Chakravarty hastened to explain that this should not be misconstrued as intellectual materialism, but knowledge that will help one become more aware of the divine and more compassionate and respectful of all life.

"Intellectual superiority is a delusion," she said.



A traveler along this path would strive to become an instrument of compassion and service.

Bhakti Yoga (pronounced Paktee) is the path of unconditional caring. Although Swami Paramananda taught that it is perhaps the most natural path to follow because all people have love in their hearts, Bhakti requires that one accepts a human being, warts and all, and does not allow one to depend upon the other person's approval, cooperation or goodwill.

Although searchers for the truth will find one path most natural, it is impossible to follow one path without some help and guidance from the other methods of discovery.

And all the paths lead to the same goal.

Chakravarty focused on the journey, saying that at the wellspring of religion are the mystics, the lovers of truth.

The house of worship in the Vedanta Center's Beechwood Street retreat.

"Their soul hungers for truth," she said. "For them, God is the lover, not the judge, executioner or Santa Claus. They are a soul on fire, seeking union with God."

According to Swami Paramananda's writings, Vedanta holds that all human beings are subject to the law of Karma, the natural law of cause and effect. Since an individual must reap what he has sown, the cause and effect can extend through various lifetimes until he has learned that what he has made, he can unmake.

Reincarnation, Paramananda explained, offers the opportunity to overcome the sum total of all the unkind and selfish thoughts that separates the individual from God.

It is the immortality of the soul that permits an individual to pass through reincarnations until he attains a state of grace. Paramananda saw this as a natural extension of the laws of evolution.

The center in Cohasset exists to provide a place for those who hunger to find a path. The temple contains representations of all the major religions of the world to symbolize the essential unity of truth.

Visitors are welcomed at the public services. There is an evening service Thursdays at 8 p.m. The service begins with a meditation and then a study class on some aspect of spiritual life is held. The services are following by a fellowship period.

Sunday services start at 11 a.m. and feature spiritual music, talk and fellowship.

Residents and members of the Vedanta community also have Saturday services. Those services consist of three periods of prayer, joint readings, music and meditation.

Music plays an integral role in the religious observances.

"The focus is not entertainment, but spiritual focus," Chakravarty said. "Spiritual music is very inspiring. It is a way to get more centered and more aware of the divine."

Although the center does not proselytize or advertise its existence, it has grown over the years.

"The people who come are meant to," Chakravarty said. "Many come, many go. A few remain."

She believes that everyone who comes takes something of value away with them. Truly, she explained, every journey begins with a single step.

Peace prayers offered in Norwell church

Until American soldiers are back in America, and Iraqi soldiers are home in Iraq, the people of Church Hill Church on River Street in Norwell invite everyone to join them in prayer for peace.

Each Friday, 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., the church will be open for an informal service of prayer and singing. Rev. Steve Harvester, pastor of Church Hill, will lead the congregation in guided meditation.

Rev. Harvester also invites the community to "put their body into their prayer" by setting Fridays aside as a day of fasting. "The military has called up the reserves," Rev. Harvester noted. "It's time for believers to call up their spiritual reserves, only prayer and fasting can prevent the outbreak of a horrible war."

Food vouchers available at Red Cross

The South Area American Red Cross has an emergency food assistance voucher program available to qualified individuals.

With a referral from the welfare department or other Social Service agency, an individual may make an appointment for an intake assessment at the South Area office in Weymouth. The voucher value varies depending on the size of the family unit, and can be redeemed at a local grocer.

Our screening process ensures that only those truly in need will receive assistance. Clients must meet income guidelines and have all their information verified. The program is dependent on funding sources.

In keeping with the Red Cross humanitarian focus, our food program helps people prevent and copy with emergencies. If you feel you qualify for emergency food assistance, please call Roz Becovsky at 331-6999.

Adult classes at CCC

The following courses for adults are offered at the Cohasset Community Center:

Low Impact Aerobics classes with Mary Dougherty are on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 9-10 a.m. Babysitting is available at $2 per hour. Coed Aerobics classes with Normandie Nigh are held Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 8 p.m. and Saturday from 8:30 to 10 a.m. Aerobics classes start the first week in September.

Tennis lessons are offered to Beginner and Intermediate players on Monday and Wednesday from 1-3 p.m. for four weeks starting Sept. 10.

Tai Chi is available for Beginner and Intermediate students on Wednesday evenings for 10 weeks starting Sept. 26.

Hatha Yoga classes will be held on Monday from 7:30 to 9 p.m. for eight weeks starting Sept. 10.

A CPR workshop will be held on Wednesday, Sept. 19 from 7 to 11 p.m. Pediatric CPR will be given Oct. 3 and 4 from 7 to 11 p.m. An American Heart Association Certificate is awarded upon successful completion of both courses.

Sports center plans clinics

The South Shore Sports Center and the Cohasset Recreation Department are planning sports for boys and girls ages 7-12 on Thursday, Sept. 20. Seven teams of eight will play in a Round Robin tournament including basketball, street hockey, and indoor soccer at the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham. The group will be transported by bus from the Deer Hill School at 1 p.m. and will return there around 6:30 p.m. The cost of the program is $15. payable to the "Town of Cohasset." Registration needed by Monday, Sept. 17.

Youth soccer clinics for grades K through 2, girls' and boys' will be held at the Barnes Little League Field, off North Main Street, beginning Saturday, Sept. 22.

Clinics will concentrate on the skills of the game: Passing, heading, control, dribbling, shooting, etc. While the clinics for this age group are predominantly "teaching" clinics, children will also have the opportunity to put skills into practice, via scrimmages and games during the clinic.

Clinics will meet for the following grades, at the following times, beginning on Saturday, Sept. 22, and continue for six weeks: Kindergarten, 8:45 to 9:45 a.m.; first grade, 9:50 to 10:50 a.m.; second grade, 10:55 to noon.

Each child should bring their own soccer ball to the clinic.

Tara Hettstrom accepts a gymnastics awards recently after stringent competition.

North River Players present 'boy meets girl' story

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

If you're a sucker for a love story then you shouldn't miss the North River Community Players production of "Crossing Delancey" continuing this weekend and next at the NRCP playhouse on River Street in Norwell.

The actors in this beautifully cast romantic comedy, written by Susan Sandler, mesh so well, that this reporter — who had not seen the movie of the same name starring Amy Irving — made it a point to rent the video the very next day.

PLAY REVIEW

"Crossing Delancey" is — a girl meets boy; girl rejects boy; but girl discovers before it's too late that he's really a great guy — story.

It all ends happily of course. The NRCP actors had the audience so enthralled Saturday night that if Isabelle and Sam (two 30ish Jewish sweethearts) hadn't gotten together in the last scene, the audience would surely have pelted the stage in protest with some of that free, gourmet popcorn that the NRCP house crew has made famous.

INSPIRED PERFORMANCES

Although we've all heard variations of love triangles before (this one throws in an arrogant, sexist author whom Isabelle has been making eyes at for months as the third part of the trio), the sensitive script and inspired performances by local actors make this tried and true tale truly special.

Spicing up the story is Isabelle's grandmother, Bubbie, portrayed by NRCP veteran actress Dorris Pizzotti of Norwell. Dorris is an inspiration in the role. Her timing is flawless and her lines and humor, delivered with a Yiddish accent, frequently garner spontaneous applause.

Bubbie works with Jewish matchmaker Hannah (portrayed by Scituate's Martha Sawyer) to engineer ways to get Sam, a quiet, hardworking Jewish guy, and Isabelle together.

Hannah is delightfully obnoxious. Her brightly colored bandannas and matching outfits, and passion for food, add a dimension to the character and lift her out of a stereotypical mode.

Isabelle is portrayed by Carol Laing, whose bio states she is a veteran actress known for her performances in The Company Theatre productions of the "King and I" and "Annie". Her experience shows. Carol delivers more than dialog; she is adept at giving away her thoughts and emotions via facial expressions and body language even without speaking.

SECRET LOOKS

And that's what sets this love story apart. It's often what's not said but the secret looks and quiet hints that lead the hearts of the audience along. By the way, Carol is every bit as pretty as Amy Irving.

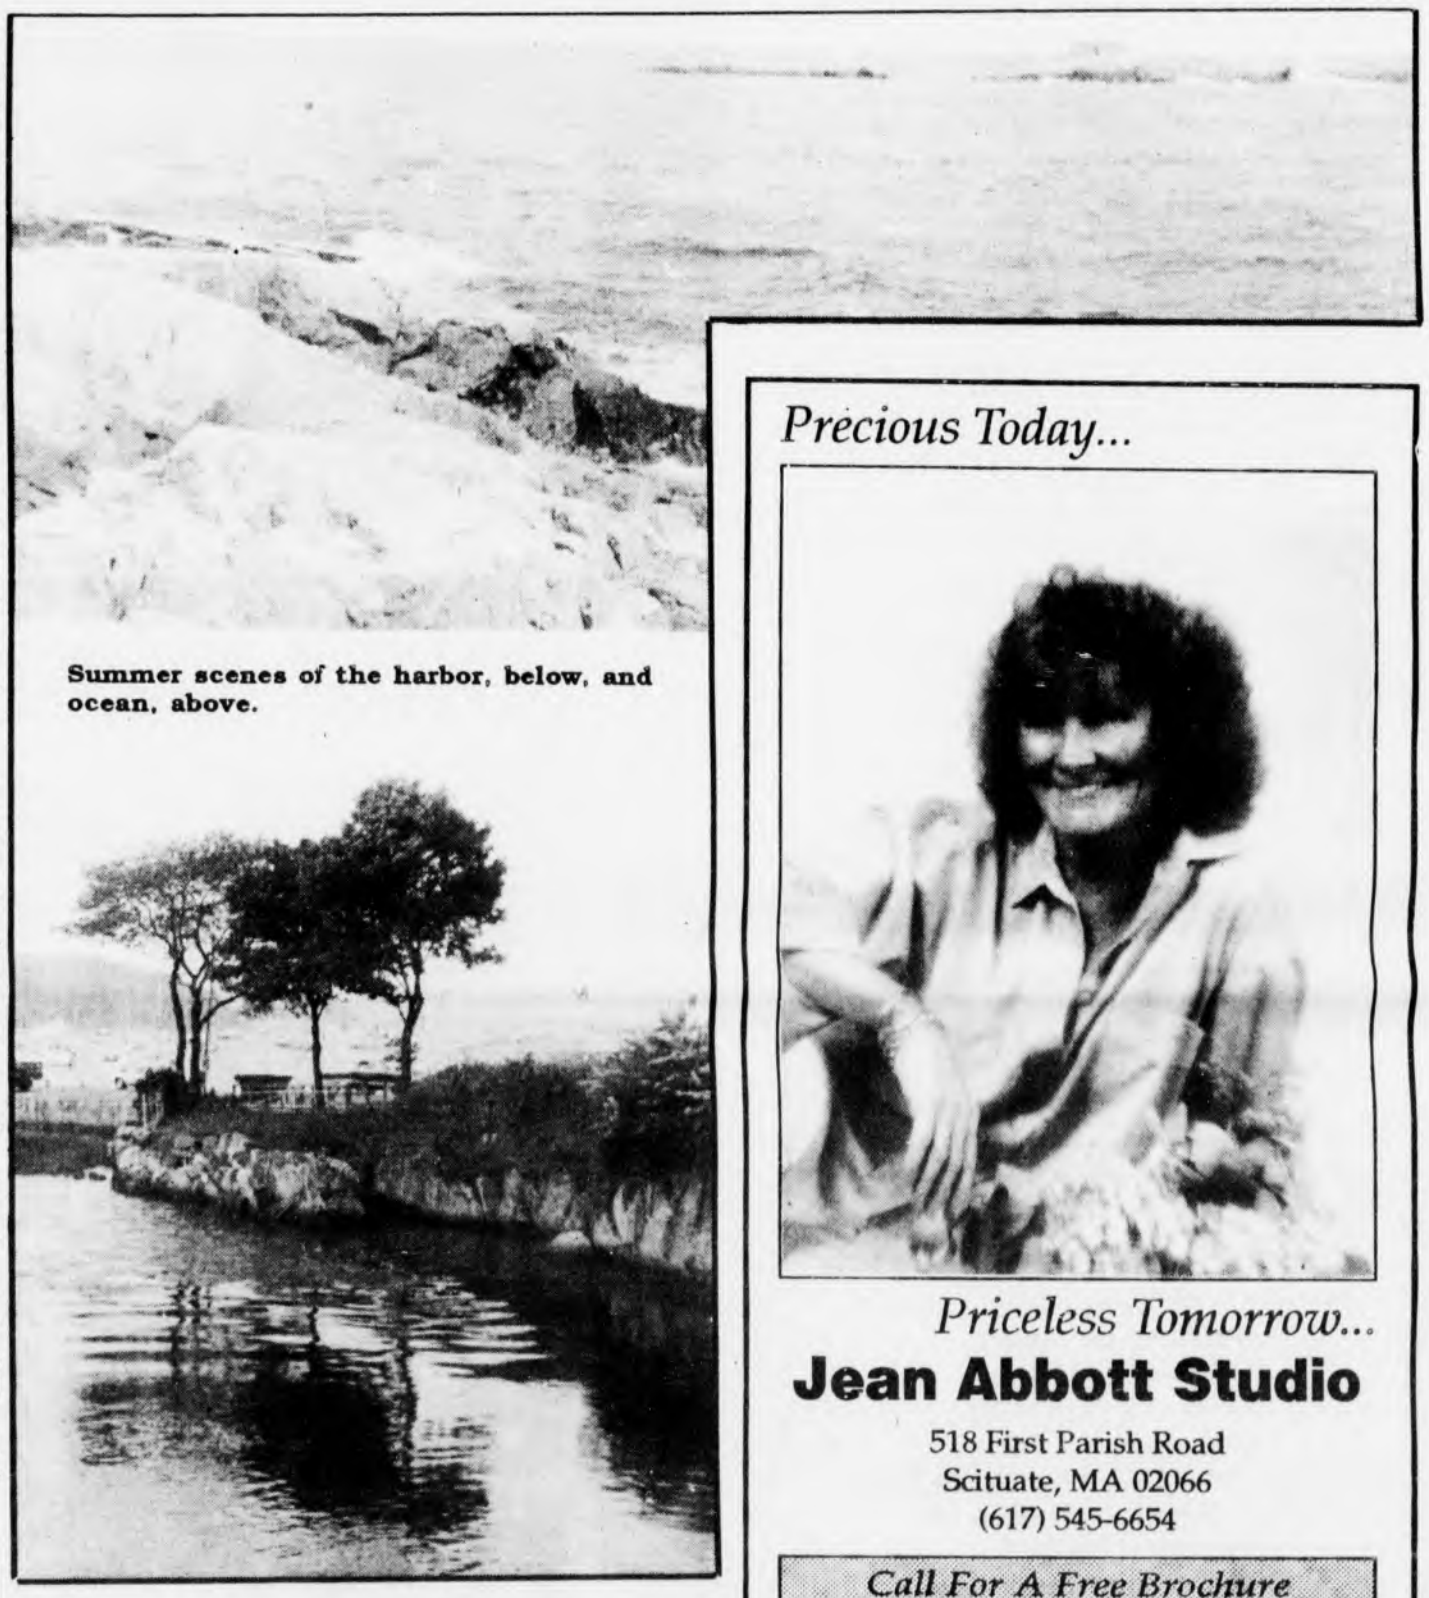
Andrew Lee Wayne of Weymouth plays Tyler, the author who has had Isabelle's eye for some time. Isabelle works in an uptown bookstore "miles away from the Lower East Side" and the gentile Tyler (not known for the kind of hard work that Bubbie talks about) represents more to Isabelle than she will admit.

But when she finally does get his attention — Tyler, who can hardly remember Isabelle's name — turns out to be both sexist and sex hungry.

The patiently steadfast Sam, who makes the best pickles in New York, finally wins Isabelle. But Sam, portrayed by Barry Holmes, doesn't stand a chance until he takes Bubbie's advice.

"If you want to catch a wild monkey you have to climb up the tree," Bubbie tells him.

SEALED WITH A KISS



Sam, who is handsome enough to make the hearts of the female members of the audience skip a beat, changes his stripes enough to make Isabelle take notice. And at the end, all is sealed with a kiss.

The setting is Bubbie's warm, busy kitchen; the bookstore where Isabelle works, and the park. Smaller scenes also take place in a New York restaurant and the shower (you'll have to go to find out more).

Hats off to the NRCP stage manager David Madden and stage crew, Bob Pietrzak and Bill Brandt for making the transitions between scenes runs so smoothly.

The show is produced by Ralph and Marion Barnes of Hanover with direction and set design by Sherry Campbell, whose efforts give the audience a night of frolic-some and fun entertainment.

"Crossing Delancey" continues at 8 p.m., Sept. 14 and 15, 21 and 22. Tickets are $9 and may be reserved by calling 826-4878.

Susan Weld campaigns with local Republicans

Susan Weld, wife of candidate for governor William Weld (R) and great granddaughter of President Theodore Roosevelt who established the federal park system and who is referred to as father of conservation, toured South Shore landfills Saturday with local conservationists Polly Logan and educator Thomas Nash of Cohasset.

Weld, former board member of the water watchdog group, Charles River Watershed, recalled that her favorite aunt who was sister of President Roosevelt, Ethel Roosevelt Derby, had a clothesline in her kitchen in order to hang to dry the plastic bags that she had washed for recycling.

Weld was accompanied by four of her five children as she said we must teach all ages to conserve and to recycle as all communities are concerned with the soaring costs of trash disposal and recycling can cut expenses 30 to 40 percent.

A practicing attorney, Weld, a graduate of Harvard University, Harvard Law School and recent recipient of her PhD in Chinese History, said her main function today is driving a taxi for her five children who actively participate in school sports.

Polly Logan of Cohasset appears on the campaign trail with Susan Weld, wife of the Republican candidate, and Thomas Nash of Cohasset.

Playful Puppies get a reprieve

Andrew Spalt and Jasmin got a reprieve from selectmen this week. Jasmin is one of Spalt's two Labrador-mix dogs living under threat of exile.

Spalt gets to keep his pooch if he can keep her cooped up. One mistake, selectmen said, and Jasmin will be history in the town of Cohasset.

A grateful Spalt promised to have his yard completely fenced-in within 24 hours.

Jasmin and her companion, Amos, both around eight months of age, had been sentenced to permanent confinement on their own property after repeatedly breaking away and terrifying Brewster Road resident Marsha Ritcey's two-year-old grandson by jumping on him, knocking him down, breaking his toys and taking food out of his hand.

The situation was made more severe by the fact that the child has undergone nine kidney operations.

"I have a strong feeling about children," Spalt told the selectmen. "I couldn't live with myself if anything happened to that child."

Spalt said he had attempted to deal with the situation by sending Amos to live – permanently – with his sister in Barnstable. He believes Jasmin is more subdued, more of a homebody who was led astray by the male dog.

Animal Control Officer William Quigley recommended that Jasmin be removed from town, but selectmen were moved by Spalt's efforts to deal with the situation and his promises to erect the fence in short order.

Before he left Spalt said, "I've done the dog an injustice by not training the dog. . . I apologize for taking up your time and the town's time. I appreciate what you've done for me."

Primary cablecast for local audience

South Shore, including Cohasset Town Hall, Norwell Town Hall, and the campaign headquarters of the candidates for state representative and state senate. In addition, WBZ-TV 4 will be providing live updates from the headquarters of the major candidates. Those segments can only be seen on Continental Channel 53 from 8 to 10 pm.

The local coverage will be anchored by Bill McColgan and Christine McDonald, while Newsbeat reporters and field photographers are providing local reports.

"This is certainly the most ambitious project we've undertaken in the two years since Newsbeat began production," said McColgan. "Several talented volunteers and staff members will be involved, at the studio and in the field. Of course, the fact that WBZ is also providing the benefits of their news resources really gives a boost to our effort."

McColgan also noted that the support of Continental's technical staff has been invaluable. "We've presented live exchanges between the studio and a remote location before, during the Hingham town election. But this time the studio will be in contact with multiple sites, and that is a real technical challenge."

Newsbeat 53's Primary Election coverage will begin on Tuesday evening, September 18 at 8 pm, in the towns of Cohasset, Hanover, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate. Newsbeat 53 is normally seen on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening at 7:30 pm.

Ambler tries cable ads

"Experience and a proven record". That is the recurring theme in a 15-minute informational video produced by the Ambler for state senate campaign to be aired on cable television beginning this week. The video was shot on location in various places throughout the seven-town senatorial district and contains guest appearances by several local residents.

"If you have a positive message you must use every vehicle possible to get it out," Ambler said. "I wanted to have an opportunity to let the voters see Bob Ambler the person as well as Bob Ambler the candidate," he said. Ambler stressed that he has used all of the conventional campaign strategies including several mass mailings, phone banks, door knocking and coffee parties, and the response has been very positive.

Rep. Ambler, a veteran legislator, has stressed his legislative record and long list of accomplishments throughout his 18 month campaign for the senate seat. "I am the one that can be most productive for the South Shore. Now is not the time in Massachusetts to have your senators serving apprenticeships. We need experienced legislators," Ambler said.

The Ambler video will air on Thursday, Sept. 13 at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 47 in Weymouth, Channel 53 in Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate, as well as Channel 28 in Marshfield and Duxbury.

Hedlund names director

Republican state Senate candidate Robert Hedlund recently named Michael Cunningham as his campaign director. Cunningham, 38, is a former Democratic State Committeeman from the 5th Middlesex Senate District.

Cunningham has served as Governor Edward J. King's Field Coordinator for Middlesex County in 1982 before moving to the South Shore.

Mihos wins labor support

Christy Mihos, the Republican senate candidate from Cohasset, got his first labor endorsement last week as the controversial Hotel Workers Union Local 25 of Boston came out in favor of his business judgement.

Domenic Bozzotto, president of the hotel workers, travelled to Hingham where he gave Mihos a flaming red T-shirt and a copy of a union newsletter endorsing a Republican for the first time in the union's history. Actually Bozzotto and his union have endorsed three Republicans this year — Mihos, Treasurer candidate Joe Malone and a district candidate from Boston Christopher Lane.

Bozzotto said the endorsement was on the basis of issues. He said his group sought prochoice candidates who were ready to deal with the state's fiscal chaos.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray

"It's time for new ideas," Bozzotto said. He said he was aware Rep. Bob Ambler, D-Weymouth, has most of the union endorsements but said he did not think Ambler would have new ideas to deal with the state budget.

While Mihos and Bozzotto talked, Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray looked on, lending her support. Murray has no opposition.

Meanwhile the other candidates for the senate seat being vacated by Bill Golden continue to work for last minute attention from the voters. There are four Democrats and three Republicans in the race — Democrats: Amber, Rep. Bill Flynn, D-Hanover, John Creed of Marshfield, a school committee member there, and Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald, and Republicans: Mihos, Bob Hedlund of Weymouth and Donald Hussey of Hingham.

McDonald is disappointed

Brian McDonald, Democratic candidate for the Norfolk and Plymouth state senate seat, expressed his disappointment at the legislature for recently enacting legislation that would provide cancer pensions for firefighters without providing the funding to pay for the additional costs.

McDonald said he supports the concept of the legislation and voted to support the bill when it was considered by the Weymouth Board of Selectmen, but that support was coupled with the call for the legislature to fund state mandated programs. According to McDonald, the estimates of the cost that will have to be born by the towns varies widely. It was been estimated that the new law will cost somewhere between $49 million and $294 million over the next 15 years.

Daly keeps campaigning

In letters to the major Boston-area television stations, Daly's campaign manager, Phil Pepe, Jr., said that the presence of the three candidates in a debate forum would "ensure the most thorough exchange of viewpoints on issues of importance to the voters of Massachusetts."

Pepe noted that Daly has been interested in a debate ever since winning the Republican endorsement and has been waiting for the appropriate forum, at a time close to the Primary.

Pepe said that the impact of the office of U.S. Senate on the well-being of the Commonwealth makes it important that the views of the three candidates be presented before a wide public audience.

"I believe that this request is consistent with your efforts to provide a high level of public awareness in the matter of important political contests and with recent broadcasts of gubernatorial debates," Pepe said.

Creed wins teachers votes

The Marshfield Teachers Association has endorsed John Creed, candidate for the Norfolk-Plymouth Senate seat currently held by William Golden.

"Your record of service on both the Saugus and Marshfield School Committees as well as your public record of setting education as your number one priority is well known," association President Marsha Johnson said in a letter to Creed.

Members believe that Creed's knowledge of government and sense of what needs to be done, will allow him to get to work immediately, she said.

Sandwich generation offered some help

Many women in midlife today find themselves struggling to care for their loved ones both younger and older. Their children need time and attention — but so do their aging parents. With a home to manage and often a job, today's caregivers are under constant pressure that can result in stress, depression, fatigue and guilt.

People over 65 now make up the country's largest population group, and more are living to age 85 and beyond. Most of the aged are healthy and independent, but many suffer from chronic disabling conditions which make them dependent on others for long-term care. Most of those who cannot remain independent are cared for by family members — usually their grown daughter or wife. More than half of all caregivers work outside their home.

Caring for a parent, grandparent or spouse affects some 7 million American households. In 11 percent of these cases, caregiving is constant and includes help with walking, dressing, bathing and feeding. To cope with these demands, many caregivers spend less time with their families, ignore their health and take fewer vacations.

A recent nationwide survey by the American Association of Retired Persons and The Travelers Companies Foundation found that caregivers often wait until a crisis occurs before they seek outside help. Many said they did not seek help sooner because they did not know about available services.

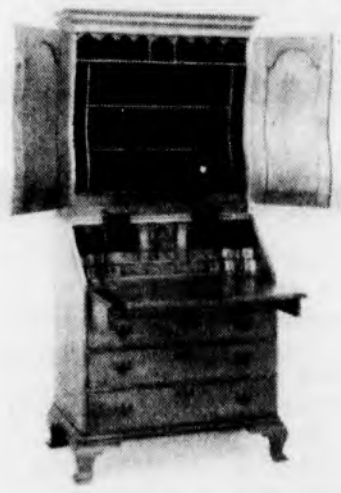
To help caregivers deal with these issues, the Social Service League of Cohasset will sponsor a workshop for "Women of the Sandwich Generation," Thursday, Sept. 20, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset.

The workshop, one of a series conducted by the league of women's health issues, will be led by Carolyn Housman, the league's social worker and geriatric counselor. Issues to be discussed include:

- The many roles of midlife women and the needs of their elderly parents.
- Some practical suggestions for the adult daughter who is "trying to do it all."
- Strategies that may be applied in all relationships of midlife women.
- How to determine what level of help aging parents need and how that need can be met.
- What factors contribute to caregiver's stress?
- Why is guilt such a common experience among families of aging parents?
- How helpful is the concept of "role reversal"?

The forum is open to all South Shore women, free of charge. As seating is limited, preregistration is required. To register or to obtain additional information call 383-0771.

Betsey Detwiler, owner of Buttonwood Books and Toys at Cushing Plaza, Cohasset, will provide books on caregiving for the forum.



School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss talks with teachers' union president Mary Babaian on Sept. 5 at the opening ceremonies for the school system's staff.

WHY DO DENTURES LOSE THEIR FIT?
In many cases, a long time denture wearer will actually experience bone shrinkage. When this occurs, the dentures seem to become loose and awkward even when adhesives are applied, much like the way clothes become baggy when one loses weight. With dental implants, bone loss as well as gum erosion is halted, and the question of fit is permanently answered. SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Keenan is new dept. head

Patricia Keenan of Rhode Island, who currently works at Brown University, was hired Sept. 5 by school committee to serve as head of the social studies department.

She will begin work before the end of the month. In the meantime, her classes will be taught by a substitute.

Keenan earned her bachelor's at Brown University. She earned a master's degree in education from Harvard and has written a curriculum guide.

Wunshel retains position

The vote was two-to-one when Patricia Wunschel was reappointed as high school yearbook advisor.

Another teacher, Florence Ely, was appointed as a second yearbook advisor. The vote was three-to-zero at the afternoon meeting on Sept. 5.

School committee members Barbara Bliss and Christopher Ford voted to accept the recommendation of school superintendent Stephen Hart.

Russell Reidy voted against the motion, pointing out that last year's graduating class has yet to receive their yearbooks.

Ford said Wunschel, who has been yearbook advisor for 24 years, has been reduced to half time.

"This is not an easy time for her," Ford said. "If the administration feels the situation is under control, I accept the recommendation," Ford said.

Two join cafeteria staff

Two school cafeteria workers were recently appointed. They are Robert McBride of Hull and Priscilla Brown of Cohasset.

Osgood seeks more space

The Joseph Osgood School is running out of space, according to School Superintendent Stephen Hart.

So the school committee will begin looking at the way the system is structured.

Hart suggested grade 3 might be sent to the Deer Hill School if the trend of growth in enrollment at the elementary level continues.

"Right now we have pretty much reached out limit at Osgood," Hart told the school committee Sept. 5.

He pointed out that two old classrooms were converted into three rooms for this year's expanding enrollment.

He said expansion at Osgood could continue only if the music and art space were taken over for classroom use.

Hart said he also wants school committee to take a look at moving grade 6 to the high school.

A 'Little Piece of Home'

The "Little Piece of Home" packages will be mailed to the members of the graduating class of 1990 in early October. We have received about 50 percent of the addresses of the members of the class. Please be sure to mail your graduate's address, either school, service or home to the chamber at P.O. Box 336 so that we can include everyone.

Our September meeting will be held at the South Shore Art Center on Tuesday, Sept. 18 and will feature Jeff Parker, Director of the Hull Water Transportation Authority. Mr. Parker will speak on commuter transportation from the South Shore with particular emphasis on the aspect of water transportation.

Coffee and snacks will be served at 6:30 p.m. The formal meeting opens at 7 p.m. and is open to the public.

The October meeting will be held at the art center on Wednesday, Oct. 17 and will feature the Cohasset school committee and the superintendent of schools.

This year our guest will bring us an update of the current status of the schools, the effects of the budget cuts, an analysis of the future and will answer questions proposed by the audience. Again coffee and snacks at 6:30 p.m. followed at 7 p.m. by the general meeting and, of course, the public is welcome.

Calling all Cub Scouts

Cub scout pack 38 and boy scout troop 28 are accepting new members. Tiger cubs are in grade 1. Registration for tiger cubs is $11.50. Cub scouts are in grades 2-5 and registration costs $20. Boy scouts are in grades 6-12 and registration is also $20.

Call Linda Farrag at 383-9519 or Arthur Lehr at 383-0388 or Earle Bestick at 383-1410 to register.

Kid's playgroups offered

"Parent and Tot Playgroup" meets on Wednesday from 1 to 2:30 p.m. for 10 weeks starting Sept. 19. Kids ages 24-36 months enjoy crafts, free play, music, stories and making new friends. Cost is $65.

"For Kids Only Playgroup" will meet on Monday and Friday 12:20 to 3 p.m. for 11 weeks starting Sept. 17. This program is for children ages 2 1/2-4 years who can function comfortably in a playgroup without a parent. Follows a loosely structured pre-school format. Cost is $235 for two days per week.

"Special Needs Playgroup" for children ages 1-3 with special needs will meet at Cohasset Community Center on Wednesday from 1:45 to 2:45 p.m. for eight weeks starting Oct. 3. Time for friends, fun, individualized therapy if desired, a support group for parents. Cost is $40.

"Pre-School Science and Nature" for kids ages 3-5 meets on Wednesday and Thursday from 10 to 11 a.m. for 10 weeks starting Sept. 19. Kids enjoy nature walks, crafts and projects. Cost is $48.

"Tiny Tot Chef" for kids ages 3-5 meets on Wednesday and Thursday from 9 to 10 a.m. for 10 weeks starting Sept. 19. Kids prepare simple recipes and learn kitchen safety. Cost is $48.

"International Cooking for Kids" meets at Cohasset Community Center on Thursday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for 10 weeks starting Sept. 20. Kids ages 7-12 prepare gourmet international dishes. Cost is $70.

"Crafts for Kids" meets on Tuesday from 4 to 5 p.m. for 10 weeks starting Sept. 18. Kids ages 7-12 learn a variety of craft techniques. Cost is $50.

"Sewing for Kids" meets at Cohasset High School on Wednesday from 4 to 5 p.m. for 10 weeks starting Oct. 3. Kids in grades 4-6 learn how to use a sewing machine and how to read.

Booklet eyes safety tips

Representative Mary Jeanette Murray makes available "Children's Booklet on Sports Eye Safety" at Libraries in her district (Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull).

"The Booklets are about sports eye safety, produced by the New England Ophthalmological Society," stated Representative Murray. "Ophthalmologists throughout New England use the booklets, stories, puzzles and drawings to educate youngsters, age 4 and up, about the need for eye safety wear in sports and play.

Through illustrations and interviews with a nationally-known ophthalmologist and former New England Patriot football star, the booklet explains that youngsters (and adults!) should wear safety glasses when playing such sport as baseball, tennis, racquetball, soccer and basketball, lacrosse and hockey", Mary Jeanette continued. "The four-page booklet also provides tips on what to do if your child suffers an eye injury. The booklets, called "The Look Book: Eye Safety for Kids and Their Parents" are also being used in the library's story hour." Representative Murray concluded.

Abbadessa moves up as Barrow retires

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When Police Sergeant Richard P. Barrow retires October 9, selectmen will fill his shoes with Richard J. Abbadessa. Although the selectmen don't want to appear as if they are hurrying Barrow out the door, they felt it would improve the transition to name his successor now.

Abbadessa was appointed in a 4-1 vote, with Selectman Martha Gjesteby casting the only negative vote. He becomes Sgt. Abbadessa October 10.

Abbadessa has been a member of the Cohasset police force for 18 years. His only competition for the sergeant's position came from Lawrence Ainslie, a police officer in Cohasset for eight years.

Last week selectmen interviewed the two patrolmen. Both officers said they were seeking promotion to sergeant because it was the natural step to take.

"It's a goal I've been interested in since I began in law enforcement," Ainslie told the selectmen. "After seven or eight years in this kind of job, it's nice to rekindle the flame with a new goal."

Abbadessa pointed to his years of service and said, "I feel I've gained enough knowledge and experience to do a good job."

Selectman Diana Kornet asked both officers if they believed in uniform administration of the law, referring to an incident when a resident was given a break by an officer.

Ainslie and Abbadessa said police have a lot of discretionary power or authority. Within the limits of that discretionary power, officers have the right to decide whether to issue a warning or a citation depending on the particular circumstances, they said.

"If the end result is a good result, you don't have to be a hardnose all the time," Abbadessa said.

Ainslie also said he believes sometimes a good scare is a good tactic, especially for first offenses involving juveniles.

"If I sat here and said I would never give anyone a break, I would be a liar," he said. He also added that officers also have to know where to draw the line.

"Too many breaks is not the answer," Ainslie said.

Abbadessa also tackled the subject of difficult calls.

"Some times it is difficult being a police officer in a small town," Abbadessa said. "Some times you have to do things that offend your neighbors and friends."

Both officers said police were mandated to take action in situations involving drunk driving.

Regarding an incident where it was alleged that police "erased" an arrest from the books, Ainslie and Abbadessa were adamant.

"Once you arrest a person, you cannot unarrest that person," Abbadessa said. "Leave it to the courts. That's why you have the courts."

Both officers were asked if they believed the police budget was adequate and if they would change any of the budget priorities.

Ainslie singled out equipment replacement and updating as a need, specifically mentioning radar and weapons as areas of concern. Enclosing the front desk area is essential for the protection of the officers and would boost morale, he said.

Safety barriers are part of the police-fire station renovation plans.

If Abbadessa had his 'druthers, he would increase the force and dedicate a cruiser to the problem areas in town. He told selectmen the force had one more officer 18 years ago than it does today.

"Actually we're two men down as far as patrolling the streets," he added. He said one detective position was created at the expense of the regular ranks.

Both men saw room for improvements in the way the department conducts business and responds to problems in the community. Ainslie said he would like to see problem spots like the beaches patrolled more intensively. He also favors the D.A.R.E. program that places a police officer in the schools to work with youngsters and provide drug and alcohol education.

"The officer on the street can just scratch the surface," Ainslie said.

Abbadessa told the selectmen he would prefer to structure his job so he would spend half of his time out on the road dealing with situations and issues first hand rather than being strictly a "desk sergeant." He saw it as a way of promoting accountability.

Both officers said physical fitness was essential in their line of work. They agreed mandatory physical fitness programs and a station-based gym aren't feasible, but would support an incentive program to encourage officers to join a gym or fitness center.

Clearly physically fit, Abbadessa injected some levity into his interview with the selectmen by noting, "I try to stay in halfway decent shape. Sometimes gravity takes over."

Living Life

Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset is a beautiful town. I remember my first visit very vividly - Cohasset Village of "Witches of Eastwick" fame, Cohasset Harbor, Government Island, riding along Jerusalem Road. What a wonderful place to live, I thought to myself, as my host, Jack Roche of Humarock was driving me along. This is a place where one could get very close to God and nature, the ocean, the rocks, the sail boats in the harbor, the trees, the birds singing in their blowing branches. What a place to meditate and live life! What a place to seek refuge from the wild and wicked world of consumerism and greed! I wonder if the residents of Cohasset realize how truly blest they are, I recall thinking to myself. That was over two years ago. Now I am living here myself, a registered voter, a resident of one of the most beautiful places I ever visited - a dream come true!

Old Pasture Road reminds me of the neighborhood where I grew up in Philadelphia - not the houses but the neighbors. They are so friendly, caring, loving and genuinely real. They bake cakes, they exchange recipes, they have little wine and cheese get togethers - they are a community - a community of friends and lovers. I felt so accepted and loved from the first moment I moved into my new home. It brought back memories of my own childhood where all the neighbors did the same thing. Tears came to my eyes - I thought of my Mom.

My Mom was almost eighty years old when she died from cancer in 1979. She hardly had a gray hair in her head. I was so proud of her - she looked so young for her age. She had weathered a lot of storms in her life. An exile from Ireland before World War I, she worked for the wealthy class on the Main Line. "They were so good to me, Sunny," she used to say. "And they loved your Father - he used to sing Irish songs for them..." And she would go on with her stories.

My Dad was a handsome red faced Irishman from a fishing town off the West Coast of Ireland. He had immigrated to America a few years before Mom, working in the coal mines in Carbondale Pennsylvania. He used to hop the freight trains from Scranton to visit my Mother and sing songs for the wealthy class on the Main Line. He died prematurely from a heart attack in 1952 - Mom's heart was broken, but she was a valiant woman and carried on. My sister Bonnie, was only 13, and I was just 21.

I came home for Christmas in 1978 because Mom was complaining about a pain in her back. I was working as the Asian Program Director for Meals for Millions Foundation and had my headquarters in Seoul, Korea. I put Mom into the hospital for all kinds of tests - she was there almost two weeks - but they couldn't find anything wrong. They discharged her in mid-January. The Doctor told me: "Your Mom is going to be around for a long, long time. I don't know when I ever saw a 79-year-old woman in such good shape." As I think back, I felt very pleased and felt complacent with the news the doctors gave me. She just had the usual arthritis that everyone that age has. Everything was going to be all right. That's all I needed to hear. I exhorted Mom to be tough like she always was. She could handle a bit of arthritis. I went back to Korea in late January.

Mom's pain in the back continued to get worse. My brother Jack called me on March 13 and said Mom had to be operated on immediately for an aneurysm. That was 2 p.m. I arrived in Philadelphia at Germantown Hospital the next morning at 8 a.m. Mom's operation was on St. Patrick's Day – they discovered a large cancerous growth. They gave her three weeks to live. I took care of her for the next nine months and helped birth her into eternity as she had cared for me the first nine months of my life.

What does this story have to do with my moving to Cohasset? Well, my dream world of living in Cohasset has now become a reality. When we move from the dream world of always having our mothers with us to the real world of living life on life's terms rather than on our terms, sometimes our dreams are shattered. Living life in Cohasset, in the real Cohasset has taught me that Cohasset is not really a dream world - that with all its beautiful seascapes and landscapes, its Village and its Harbor, its trees and its birds, its beautiful people and its children, Cohasset is like so many other towns and villages across the United States. There is a cancer laying dormant in its veins, in its life veins and although all the resident doctors take a look and say there is nothing wrong, "your mother is going to be around for a long time to come...", and all the residents would like to believe it, it's just not true.

Living life is just not that way! Living live means living life on life's terms, my life's terms, your life's terms, not someone else's. Living life means dealing with the cards we have been dealt in the game of life. Sometimes we get four aces, sometimes a pair of two's, but no matter what we get, if we are in the game to win, then we learn to choose the best of what we have. Living life means we have choices – difficult choices, happy choices, subtraction choices and addition choices, reality choices. Ah, there is the rub - reality. Do we know when to add and subtract to get the equation of reality. Living life means dealing with reality.

I think that we residents of Cohasset, young and old alike, need to brush up on our addition and subtraction tables. We need to start living a life of subtraction rather than addition. We are but a microcosm of the United States and our Western civilization. The abuse of drugs and alcohol here is but a symptom of a deeper spiritual paralysis that plagues us and our societies. We must treat that symptom first as the primary disease, or that cancer will slowly destroy us. What? Here in Cohasset? Alcohol abuse? Drug abuse? "You've gotta be kidding!" Yes, there are some who say that.

We have a primary disease in our veins! Where do we go for treatment? How do we begin? There is no need to go beyond the walls of our homes; its not at the beach or the harbor where everyone says the kids are drinking and drugging. We have to begin in the depths of our hearts. Each of us as individuals must stop pointing the finger at others and start examining our own attitudes and values about the gift of life that we receive each day, and how we go about living it. And then we come to grips with the denial that surrounds most of our life in general, and the facets of our life in particular. We play the game of life with a marked deck and end up cheating ourselves. I have never met anyone who has successfully cheated at LIVING LIFE!

(Dr. McFadden is the Director of Pastoral Care for Hospice Community Services of VNA, Dedham. He is a marriage and family therapist, a certified addictions counselor and a member of the Cohasset Alcohol and Drug Committee.)

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT Norfolk Division

Docket No. 90P2113E1

Estate of
JOHN K. BARLOW
late of
COHASSET
In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that CHARLES F. BARLOW of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executor named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on October 3, 1990.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the twenty-eighth day of August, one thousand nine hundred and ninety.

Hearing set on redesign of dangerous intersection

Residents fed up with the dangerous intersection of King and Beechwood Streets may see some changes made.

authorized the sewer expansion program, costs have gone up. Additionally, the sewer line was to have followed the Old Colony right of way being sought by the MBTA for the Greenbush line.

"That will impact on the cost," Doyon said.

Although Doyon would like to see the town move on the loan as soon as possible, he said the project could not be ready for inclusion on the special town meeting warrant scheduled for October 22.

"There are too many unanswered question about the loan and we don't have the figures," Doyon said. Doyon doesn't want to wait for the regular town meeting in April, though. He anticipates a second special town meeting called between October and April.

Mihos wins town, loses the race

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

On primary day, Tuesday, 2,819 voters went to the polls at town hall, following a statewide trend away from the history of Democratic leadership.

The split between Democrats and Republicans was just about 50/50 with 1,403 Democrats voting and 1,416 Republicans voting in the election.

Cohasset's voters followed the path that puts William Weld and John Silber in line for the governorship.

Town Clerk Frances Marks pulled together voting statistics showing that 57.3 percent of the 4,925 registered voters turned out for the primary.

She said results would have been easier to tabulate if people hadn't chosen to write in candidates for the opposite party on their ballots.

"The write-ins slow the count," she said.

There were some people who decided to vote for both a Republican and a Democrat — despite the fact they had to choose a party ballot. Those votes were totally discounted.

While local voters seemed to reflect the larger statewide patterns, there were some notable exceptions.

Christy Mihos of Cohasset trounced his political opponents in his hometown, taking 73 percent of the vote. He earned 944 ballots. Weymouth's Robert Hedlund, who seems to have won the nomination, polled 147 votes and Hingham's Donald Hussey polled 198 votes.

A recount is expected in that race for the Republican nomination.

(See page 7)

Voters Tuesday had to make their way past a gauntlet of last-minute campaigners to get to the polling booths at town hall.

Special TM warrant closes at 16

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When the deadline for submitting warrant articles for the Oct. 22 special town meeting closed, selectmen found 16 articles on their plate. At their meeting Monday night they reduced the number the town will chew on to 15.

The town got a big boost to help them deal with their money problems with the certification of $505,420 in free cash that can be applied to the bills. Free cash is the term applied to unexpended money from the budgets of prior years and reimbursements and payments received after the close of the fiscal year they were due in.

The free cash account is larger than usual because of the one-time infusion of 18 months worth of receipts. Also boosting the account was $30,000 more in new growth property taxes than anticipated by the board of assessors. Assessors estimated new growth at $60,000. Actual receipts were $96,073.

The town also has $58,000 in the stabilization fund.

The first article asks voters to appropriate $64,000, presumably from free cash, to deal with a shortfall in the town budget, primarily due to a loss in local aid.

Another article adds an additional $8,151.36 to the Norfolk County Retirement Fund. The town's contribution was based on an estimate that fell short.

Selectmen are seeking additional documentation on the five unpaid bills covered by the third article. The total amount to be covered is $335.35. The Historic District Commission is seeking $170, the cultural exchange commission needs $90.12 and a bill for legal services in the amount of $75.23 is also outstanding.

Article 4 would appropriate $46,405 to cover the costs of paving Elm Street. The costs will be reim-

Government contractor asks to pollute James Brook

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

A private company wants to remove one million gallons of contaminated water from an abandoned NIKE silo site along Route 3A and discharge it into James Brook.

A representative from Jet-Line Services of Stoughton, one of two companies that have placed bids with the Army Corps of Engineers, met with the conservation commission last week to discuss plans for removing water from the three silos.

Engineer Jim Smith outlined a proposal to run the "slightly polluted water" from the Crocker Ln. site, through a carbon filter, and into either James Brook, the Cohasset sewer plant on the Brook, or a privately-owned pond at the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

Neither of the owners has given permission to the company to dump the waste on their property.

Initial testing of water from the three missile silos indicate that the main pollutant is a high level of sodium.

High counts of the flammable liquid acetone and the chemical butanone were also found during volatile organic testing done by the New England Division Environmental Laboratory.

A trace metal test in March from the same source indicated that there are also traces of potassium, magnesium, iron, antimony, barium and calcium.

In a letter to Jet-Line dated Aug. 31, commission member Merle Brown expressed concern over the proposed use of James Brook.

Brown explained that there are three town drinking water wells along the brook; two off Sohier St., and one off Cushing Rd.

He also questioned the project's impact on the dam at Sanctuary Pond, the brook's headwaters.

COHASSET'S WEEK

PASS grants available

The Cohasset Arts Lottery Council announces that the deadline for the next distribution cycle for funding from the Massachusetts Cultural Council is October 1.

Applications for Arts Lottery and PASS grants are available at the Selectperson's office at Cohasset Town Hall. Completed applications should be returned to the Selectperson's office, or to Jim Contis, 5 Windsor Rd., Cohasset, MA 02025.

Arts Lottery funds support individuals or organizations dedicated to the arts and humanities. Funds may also be awarded to non-profit, tax-exempt organizations or public agencies whole purpose does not include the arts if they embark on an arts activity. Applications from public agencies, such as a public school, library or municipality, must demonstrate a new need, be a one-time expenditure, and be matched by other funds one-to-one. Projects must demonstrate benefit to the local community.

Funding is also distributed under the PASS (Performing Arts Student Series) program. The purpose of this program is to fund tickets to performing arts events for public school children at the regular ticket price, or $5, whichever is less. Schools may buy tickets from participating arts organizations and then apply to the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council for reimbursement. PASS rosters are available in each of the three schools, or contact Council member Penny Redfield, 383-9286.

For further information or questions call Jim Contis, 383-1805; or Karin Bartow, 383-0572.

Sewer contract extended

Sewer commissioners extended the temporary contract for operating the wastewater treatment plant for another month. Professional Services Group will continue to operate the plant through Oct. 30.

According to committee Chairman Edward Guild, the sewer commission was forced to hire temporary management for the plant when the state changed the process for putting contracts out to bid close to the time Cohasset's contract with Metcalf and Eddy was running out. The new process is more complicated and time consuming than the old system.

The temporary contract was expected to last no longer than three months, but a glitch in advertising will cause a gap between the time the original temporary contract expires and the start date of a permanent management contract. Bids for the new contract won't be opened Sept. 20 — the temporary contract was slated to end Sept. 30.

Chart House field day set

Chart House employees from Cohasset, Boston and Newport, R.I. will be demonstrating their prowess on the track and in the field in a mini-olympics.

Selectmen gave the restaurant chain permission to use Milliken Field Sunday Sept. 30 for the field day and barbecue. A spokesman for the restaurant emphasized no alcoholic beverages would served at the picnic.

Two of Christy Mihos workers smile as they work at the polls on election day. A recount is expected in the race as Mihos lost by three votes.

Selectmen approve vo-tech loan

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen approved South Shore Vocational Technical School's request to authorize the school to borrow $300,000 to complete the planning process on a $5 million dollar addition at the Hanover campus. According to representatives from the regional school, the maximum annual cost to Cohasset from fiscal year 1991 to 1994 is $306 based upon the current capital assessment formula.

Approval of each of the eight member communities is necessary in order to move forward with the project. The other towns are Abington, Hanover, Hanson, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Whitman.

According to Vo-tech Superintendent Clifford Easton, a change in state regulations is forcing the school to complete the planning process before it qualifies for the priority ranking necessary for submission to the state department of education for approval.

If approved, the project will qualify for 75 percent reimbursement from the state's school building assistance bureau. Easton told selectmen the project meets two of the three criteria for priority status.

First, the project is necessary for safety considerations, since the Abington building it will replace is not in compliance with state safety regulations for vocational schools.

Secondly, it will relieve the overcrowding that would otherwise ensue when the Vo-tech moves all classes to the Hanover campus. The school is under orders from the state to move out of the Abington building when the current lease expires in June 1992.

The only criteria the project does not meet concerns racial imbalance which is not considered an issue for the regional school.

Easton assumes the project will get approval at the 75 percent reimbursement level.

Passage of the initiative petition by the Citizen's for Limited Taxation that would require the state to rollback taxes and fees to the level they were at in 1988 could affect the availability of funds for reimbursement, Easton said.

"If the CLT petition passes, we will have to take a second look at the project," Easton said. "It will devastate us."

In the worst case scenario, the Vo-tech would be forced to abandon the project because of the unavailability of state reimbursement funds. In that instance, the school would lose the $300,000.

Easton promised to delay borrowing as long as possible to reduce the risks.

In other business, selectmen

• Appointed Mary Jane McArthur, Terry Atherton, Robert Moody, Bob Dennis and John Green to the committee to study the feasibility of a department of public works.

• Appointed Wigmore Pierson to the Cohasset historic commission.

• Approved payment of $8,000 in architect's fees to Strekalovsky and Hoit, Inc. for work on the police/fire station renovation project.

• Authorized Assistant Town Accountant Nancy Cook to sign warrants from Oct. 4 to Oct. 14 while Town Account Mary Gallagher is on vacation.

Elm Street paving

Selectmen signed an agreement with the state department of public works that puts the Elm Street paving project back in the works.

The state has promised to reimburse the town for the cost of the project, estimated at $46,405. Selectmen included an article to appropriate the up front money in the warrant for the Oct. 22 special town meeting.

Plans to pave the street were scrapped earlier when the state slashed the funding program in a cost-cutting move. Although the program has been reinstated, monies are no longer available on a direct grant basis.

Special TM seeks balanced budget

bursed by the state under Chapter 90 funds at a later date.

Voters will be asked to authorize transferring $12,650.30 to the short term borrowing interest account. Another 45,000 in appropriations is necessary to make necessary repairs to the septic system at Deer Hill School.

Article 7, authorizing the South Shore Vocational Technical School to borrow $300,000 to complete the required planning process for the $5 million addition authorized previously, was withdrawn. Selectmen authorized the school to go forward at their Sept. 17 meeting, making a town meeting vote unnecessary.

The total dollar amount to cover the eighth article hasn't been calculated yet. It calls on the town to transfer sufficient monies into the police salaries account to pay accrued sick leave benefits to a retiring police officer.

Town voters will also be asked to appropriate $4,232.80 to pay the salary of the Council of Aging outreach worker from Jan. 1 to June 30, 1991. Funds for the part-time worker were cut by the state in a cost-saving drive.

The tenth and twelfth articles are changes to the personnel bylaws. The first asks voters to approve an increase in the number of hours worked by the clerk of the water department from 20 to 25 and increase the salary from pay grade B to pay grade D. The minimum hourly salary at grade B is $6.58 and at D is $7.69.

Article 12 would change the title of the landfill supervisor to recycling transfer facility manager with an increase in pay grade from G to I, retroactive to July 1, 1990. The minimum hourly rate at G is $9.58 and at I is $11.16.

Article 11 asks the town to authorize $13,929 for field investigation and engineering costs related to the closure of the Cedar Street landfill. The work is required under the terms of the consent decree signed by the town and the Department of Environmental Protection.

The cemetery committee would be impowered to re-purchase unused cemetery lots from the current owners if Article 13 passes. Funds for the re-purchase would come from the Sale of Lots account.

The town may have difficulty coming up with would-be sellers if they can pay no more than the original purchase price. According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, the cemetery committee may be so restrained because of state laws prohibiting speculation in grave plots.

Removing asbestos from the police-fire station is the topic of Article 14. The station renovation committee has a firm figure of $9,000 for removal of the carcinogenic material that must be removed under state building codes.

Article 15 may be deleted before town meeting, according to Henderson. The article deals with acceptance of a gift of a parcel of land from D.J. Buckley Company. The small parcel of land was left over after a subdivision was created. The land, located off Forest Avenue, may cost the town more to survey and record than it is worth.

The town previously passed a bylaw forbidding the town to accept gifts if it costs the town money to do so. Henderson said the town and the owner may have other options to transfer the land at no cost to taxpayers.

The last article asks voters to abate the taxes, interest fees and interest on a gift of land accepted by the town at the annual town meeting. According to Henderson, the town does not seek taxes on gifts of land in the year they are donated.

Run for the American Cancer Society

Next on the agenda of public spirited South Shore residents working in the fight against cancer is next Sunday's Terry Fox "Run" (Sept. 23) a five-mile circuit of the Charles River Basin that enlists not only road racers and joggers, but walkers, cyclists, roller skaters and even skateboarders in a different sort of benefit for the American Cancer Society.

"This is a particularly appealing event for groups such as Senior Citizens, as well as individuals who have successfully battled cancer, because it is non-competitive and participants need only go as far as they wish," Barbara Sullivan, president of the South Shore Unit states. "Last year we had many such groups in an event that raised $165,000 to support the programs of education, information and service that the American Cancer Society offers."

The event starts and ends at the Four Seasons Hotel across from the Public Garden in Boston. Registration, a cancer information fair, and an aerobic exercise warm-up begin at 9:30 a.m. and the run starts at noon.

WHY MULTI-PURE?

WHY MULTI-PURE
and not NSA, Clearbrook or bottled water?

There are important facts you should know before buying or selling a drinking water system.

The time has come when a household needs to be assured of a constant supply of pure water. Even if the public water system fails (similar to that in the Town of Carver) you can be in control and provide pure water for your family.

One of the important decisions you make is the water you drink. Don't make this choice until you see for yourself. You will be astonished at the claims verses reality. See why MULTI-PURE, the in-home filtration system is the most effective in the industry.

MAPC maps out the future

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Knowing where you're going and how to get there from here is a good idea for communities as well as travelers. The Metropolitan Area Planning Council is helping the South Shore map out their route into the twentieth century.

Last week the selectmen got a taste of the future and an overview of the plan developed by the independent public council.

The council consists of 101 communities stretching from Duxbury to Cape Ann and from the coastline to I-495. Those communities represent one-third of the state's land area, one-half of its population and approximately 70 percent of its taxable wealth.

The council projects the region will experience a stable population, increased growth in employment despite the current tough times, workers forced to move farther and farther from the workplace in order to find affordable housing and ensuing traffic jams on the highways and byways unless the communities plan for positive change.

To understand how serious the consequences of unchecked growth can be, Soule pointed to charts showing a 46 percent increase in traffic and a 316 percent increase in delay. For the Boston-bound motorist, that translates to absolute gridlock.

The council's projections extend into the year 2010.

Under the council's scheme, communities can determine where growth should be, where it can be accommodated and where it must be discouraged.

According to Soule, the council recommends encouraging employment and housing growth in the areas where it can be accommodated by the existing infrastructure.

Targeting growth will become increasingly important. Council projections show local government paying as much as 42 percent of the cost of expanding, improving and renovating highways, transit systems, water and wastewater treatment systems in the near future. Currently, the state and federal government pick up the lion's share of such projects.

In MetroPlan 2000, growth centers are projected along the beltway where the transit system is already in place. That puts the focus of growth on the South Shore in the Quincy-Braintree area.

"Sprawl is bad," Soule said. "Concentrated development is good."

Marshfield and Pembroke have objected to that portion of the plan. The two communities want to see more growth in their communities. The council will take up their objections at the October meeting.

Another controversial issue is the restoration of the Old Colony rail system. Soule said it makes sense because it provides mass transit within and between beltway communities. Some communities would rather live without rail service. That is on the October agenda as well.

"It is up to the members to make the decision," Soule said.

It's time to celebrate Rosh Hashanah

All over the world Jews have been preparing for a holiday period so important that it is called the High Holy Days or the Days of Awe.

The period began at sundown Wednesday, Sept. 19, with Rosh Hashanah.

It ends 10 days later with Yom Kippur.

Most commonly referred to as the Jewish New Year, Rosh Hashanah is the anniversary of the creation of the world. A time of new beginnings, it finds Jews wishing each other a long and sweet life.

But unlike the secular New Year, it is not a time for cutting loose and whooping it up.

Rabbi Stephen Karol of Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in Hingham characterizes the holiday as "a good time to look into our lives and evaluate what we have done or left undone."

Referring to a prayer that begins "Now is the time for turning," Rabbi Karol finds it fitting that a holiday celebrating creation comes in the fall of the year rather than in the spring.

"We see all these changes in nature. So now is a good time for us to think about changes we ought to make in our lives."

One of the traditions of Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur requires Jews to ask those they have wronged to forgive them.

Another tradition teaches that if a person honestly seeks forgiveness, it must be given.

Otherwise, it is said, the world would be filled with hate and all would die.

"It's most important to realize that a lot of things happen that are within out control," said the rabbi.

"This holiday gives us time to reflect on that and what we can do about those things."

Chiropractic Concepts
"The Function of Pain"

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom). But rather to find the causes and correct them.

Workshops help pre-retirement planning

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Is retirement in your future? If so, a little planning now could make those years truly golden.

If you are 55 or older, the South Shore SHINE Consortium in conjunction with the Cohasset and Marshfield Councils on Aging has put together all the information you'll need. From Oct. 4 through Nov. 1, they'll be sharing it with residents from Braintree, Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

The series of workshops on pre-retirement planning is entitled "Controlling Your Future." Topics covered in the five-week program include financial planning, estate planning, health insurance options, housing options and active lifestyles and leisure activities.

The topics will be presented by experts in the field, according to organizer Pat Ryan.

Financial and estate planning are covered by Michael McNamara of McNamara Financial Services. McNamara is well known for his ability to turn financial and investment jargon into real language for real people.

In the financial planning presentation, McNamara will cover information on pensions, Social Security, investments and IRAs. Participants will learn how to overcome the obstacles of inflation and high taxes that are blocking their way to a comfortable retirement.

Estate planning covers the mysteries of probate and how to make sure you, your spouse and your heirs get to keep what is rightfully yours now and forever.

Ryan said the presentations are appropriate for people of all income ranges and backgrounds.

Understanding health insurance may be one of the most confusing and most important subjects for retirees. Kathleen Glenzel, health policy analyst from the state Executive Office of Elder Affairs, will take people on guided tour of medicare, medicaid, medigap and health maintenance organization.

Glenzel also is an expert on long term care insurance, one of the most controversial forms of insurance. She will help participants find out if they will be able to collect on what they are paying for.

Representatives from SHINE (Serving the Health Needs of Elders) will also be available to answer questions.

There are many options between staying in your home and life in a nursing home. Henry Stowers, a housing specialist from South Shore Elder Services will discuss programs from those that help elders maintain and improve their home to senior housing programs, home share and congregate living facilities.

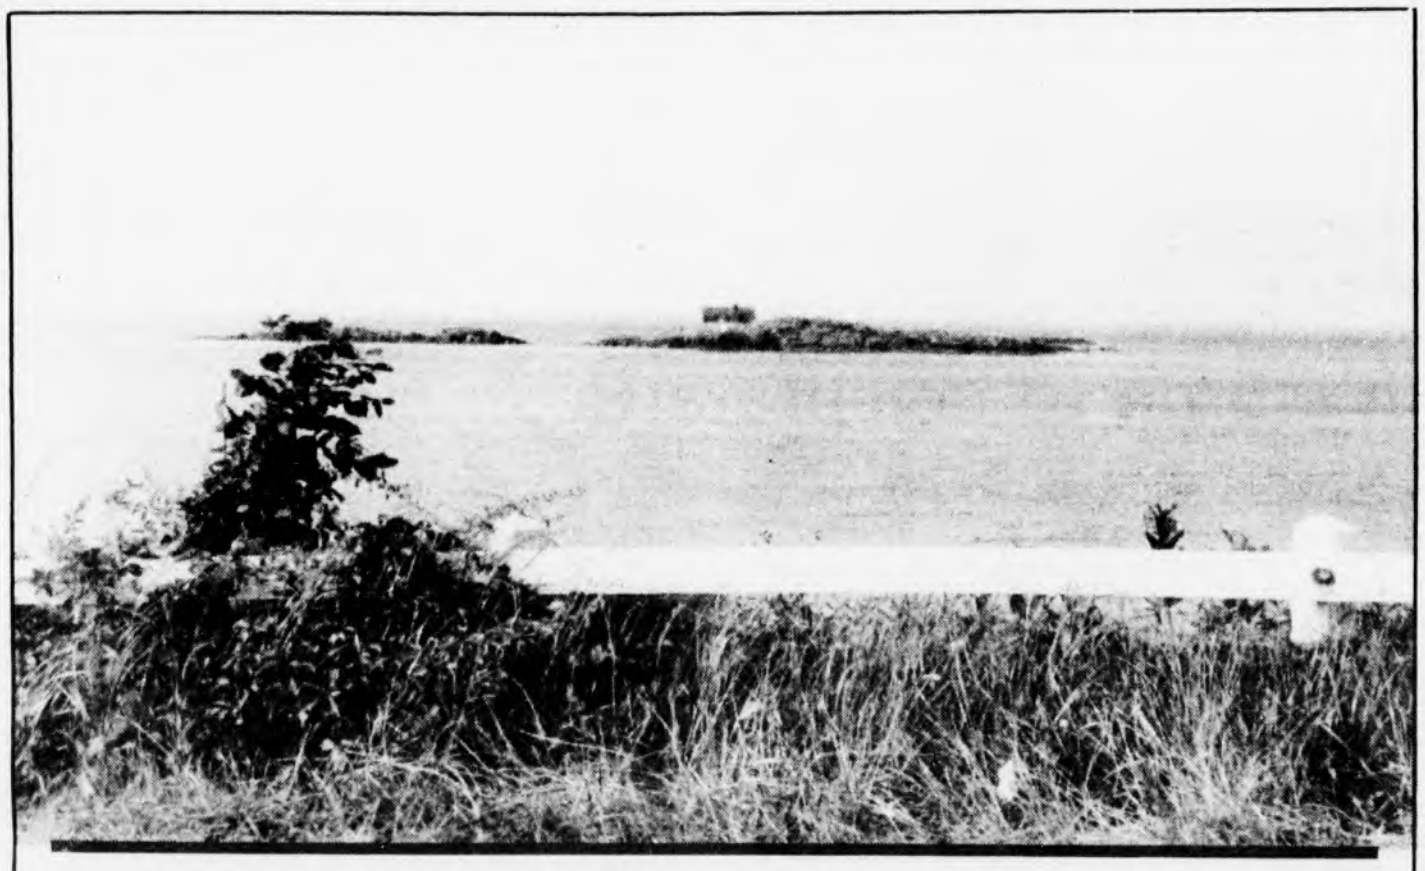
Beat back boredom and discover the exciting world of leisure time, learning and volunteer opportunities for active retirees.

Carolyn Housman from the Cohasset Social Service League and a panel of representatives will present the options waiting for you.

There are clubs and organizations catering to every interest and taste. Many retirees find volunteer work a rewarding way to spend their time. Others have discovered the joys of lifelong learning.

Your local senior center is one place where seniors can sample a wide variety of activities and opportunities, Ryan said. From social activities to educational opportunities to information, referral and advocacy services, it's all happening at the senior center.

The programs are held Thursday nights from 7 to 9 p.m. at the First Congregational Church parish hall, 381 Country Way in Scituate. Parking is ample at the church. Several senior centers are planning car and van pools.



Attend just one session or all of them. There is no fee, but the councils will accept donations to defray the cost of the series. The suggested donation for the series is $15 for an individual or $20 per couple. Suggested donation for an individual session is $3.

Contaminated water sits in old silo

The dam has been under engineering evaluation for "its safety to preclude it breaking/overtopping and flooding the downtown village area," adding that "the pond and dam, are owned by a private group, the Trustees of Reservations, and not the town," he wrote.

"In addition the very small town sewer plant (72,000 gallons-per-day permitted flow) is already under State DWPC imposed sewer ban. It has already, on average, been exceeding its permitted flows and is under an agreement for judgement, all of which would probably preclude putting a million gallons trough it."

Brown requested that the company supply "any and all test results of the constituents of the NIKE water, (eg. salt levels, organic and inorganic constituents)."

Jet-Line also presented a back-up plan to discharge the water into a retention pond at the Cohasset Heights Landfill.

The landfill's owner Paul Barry, was present at the meeting to register his objection to the proposal.

"No way is that coming into our pond," he told the commission.

Barry has filed a lawsuit against the state over the abandoned silo site's impact on his property.

He charged that salt from land used by the Department of Public Works has contaminated the landfill's groundwater.

He said that a board of health order requires him to pump leachate and contaminated groundwater to the Hull wastewater plant on a daily basis.

Barry said he attended the meeting to keep tabs on the clean-up.

"I was there to protect my own interests," he said. "I just want to see it done right. You can not just dump 60,000 gallons anywhere."

The commission requested that Jet-Line discuss its plans with the board of health and the wetlands division of the State Department of Environmental Protection.

The Army Corps of Engineers is in charge of cleaning up the Nike silo sites which have not been used for decades.

After the polluted water is removed, the silos will be sealed with concrete.

The conservation commission cannot make a decision on any silo proposal until a notice of intent is filed by the corps.

Election results. . .

Whoever wins the nomination in the end will face Robert Ambler, D-Weymouth. Ambler did not win Cohasset. In the four-way race for the Democratic nomination, Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald received 449 votes; Ambler received 300 votes; William Flynn who moved from Hanover to Weymouth for the election got 248 votes, Marshfield school committeeman received 144 votes.

The top vote getter on both ballots was Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, who garnered 1,177 votes. She was followed by Republican candidate Joe Malone who was running unopposed for state treasurer. Malone earned 1,152 votes.

Silber defeated Democrat Frank Bellotti 870 to 451. William Golden, the current state senator from this district, outpolled Marjorie Claprood 804 to 423 in town. Claprood did not depend on the Cohasset vote to defeat Golden's bid for lieutenant governor.

Republican Jon Bryan did better in pulling votes than incumbent US Rep. Gerry Studds. Bryan who was unopposed earned 1,044 votes with 372 blanks showing. Studds took 972 votes and there were 431 blanks.

Hingham's Daniel Daly defeated Republican Jim Rappaport in Cohasset, 708 to 539. Rappaport will face John Kerry in the November election.

COHASSET HOUSING AUTHORITY

The Cohasset Housing Authority has a grant from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Executive Office of Communities and Development to purchase a site in the Town of Cohasset for the purpose of constructing state funded public housing. Parcels with at least 60,000 square feet of buildable land on sewer line, otherwise 90,000 square feet of buildable land, that meet the requirements of the Request for Proposals (RFP) will be considered. Proposals will be received until 1:00 p.m. on October 16th, 1990, at which time they will be publicly opened and read aloud at the Cohasset Housing Authority.

Proposers may obtain a copy of the RFP which describes the site specifications and the submission requirements and the proposal form from the address indicated below. Proposals should be sent to and questions or requests for assistance should be directed to:

AROUND TOWN

❑As busy as she is in local town affairs, Sharon Becker manages to find time for outstanding service to the South Shore Unite of the American Cancer Society. Fresh from a highly successful volunteer recruiting luncheon at the South Shore Country Club for the Unit's Public Education Committee of which she is co-chair, Sharon is now working to enlist participants in next Sunday's (September 23) Terry Fox Run in Boston. This is not just another road race, but a five-mile circuit of the Charles River beginning and ending at the Four Seasons Hotel across from the Public Garden inviting walkers, roller skaters, bicyclists and even skateboarders to take part, with proceeds from their sponsors going to the unit that includes their town. In this case, contributions from Cohasset participants go toward the South Shore Unit. Preliminaries at the hotel start at 9:30 a.m., with the event itself beginning at noon. For further information, call 1-800-952-7664.

❑Registration is now being taken for Cohasset High School Cheering Clinic. The Cheerleading Clinic is offered to girls in grades 3-8. Learn cheers, chants, jumps, leaps pyramids, all taught by the 1990 Cheerleading Squad. Go to have fun or use is as a practice to become a cheerleader some day. Each participant will receive a novelty cheering pin and there will be a drawing and two girls will receive a pair of pom poms. The clinic meets at the High School's Sullivan Gym, on Monday, October 1, from 3:15 to 5:15 p.m. The cost for the clinic is $10. Profits from this clinic go to the cheerleading fund for various uniforms and supplies during the season. For more information, contact cheerleading coach Ruthann Sargent at 545-3058.

❑We salute Gregory Knowles this week as he leaves for Parris Island for 10 weeks of basic training. Good luck to you Greg, and let us know where you will be so that you may receive cards and letters from your friends.

Emily, Ellen and Stephen Simmons head for the Osgood School.

❑Happy birthday greetings go to Brendan McCarthy this week. Brendan will be 17 on the 17th, and we sure hope that it is the best one yet!

❑The 1990-1991 Cohasset School Calendars are available now! Published each year by the PSO (Parent School Organization) as a community service and a fund raiser, this year's calendar has been mailed to school families already, but anyone in the community who would like one should call Beth Christoffel at 383-6929 or Helen Thornton at 383-2341. The calendars are enhanced by the use of line drawings by Doris Golden. The drawings, one of each school, are also reproduced on tiles sold through several local merchants. The PSO is very grateful to Doris for making the originals available to them! The Calendar Committee worked hard through the summer so that the calendar was available early this year, so lend your support to them!

❑Hats off to our own Health Agent, Joseph Godzik, who was elected president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association at the group's 70th annual meeting last week. The group is part of the National Lung Association, the oldest voluntary health organization in the country. It still issues Christmas Seals, runs better-breathing clubs, develops anti-smoking programs, and indoor and outdoor pollution through education and promoting legislation. Congratulations for your newest office Joe, we are proud of you and your efforts!

❑Many of you remember the Karle family, one of the finest around. They moved to Newport, Rhode Island a few years ago, and are missed! Anyway, Susan Karle was married there on September 9, at Hammersmith Farm, in a 6 p.m. ceremony, one of the prettiest we have seen in a long time. Many of their local friends and relatives were there, and Susan's sister Priscilla flew from Europe to be in the wedding party. Everything about the evening was memorable, the site was lovely, the food spectacular, the guests all had a grand time and looked wonderful. It was rather like a trip back to "Camelot"...

❑ Sara Rutherford Tague, the daughter of Peter and Sara Tague of Atlantic Avenue, Cohasset, has earned honors for the spring semester at Skidmore College, a coeducational, liberal arts institution with an enrollment of approximately 2,150 students.

❑That's the news from here, be sure to get yours in to me! Be it a birthday, a party, whatever, we all love to read about what goes on in your house!

Chiropractic for Health

THE RIGID SPINE

Unlike most other forms of arthritis, ankylosing spondylitis is more apt to attack men than women. Also known simply as "spinal arthritis", ankylosing spondylitis affects some two-and-a-half million Americans, mostly men between the ages of 16 and 35. Its early symptoms include constant hip and lower back pain and long lasting stiffness. The condition is the result of an inflammation of the spine which causes vertebrae to fuse. A peculiar feature of this inflammatory process is that it occurs outside the joints, not inside. The inflammation causes a bony overgrowth which may cause bones to grow together not only in the spine, but in other joints as well. Although the condition seldom causes crippling, every effort must be made to promote proper posture and desirable movement. This helps to avoid spinal fusion in undesirable positions.

Chiropractic serves to help properly align the spinal column and provide the free flow of Mother Nature's natural healing instructions. For the benefit of your total body and your overall well-being, DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, urge you to call today for an appointment. By appointment. Workers' Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Ankylosing spondylitis may affect the shoulders and hips, as well as the spine.

An important note of introduction is in order for bugs, grasses, and fungus. The suffix "cide" means "killer". When we buy chemicals to do away with our problems, in this case bugs, grasses, and fungus, we are often creating a bigger problem for ourselves - hazardous waste. There are simple strategies I have learned over the years. I'll pass them along to you here.

1. Don't be embarrassed that you have been visited by an infestation. The Earth is absolutely miraculous at filling a need.

2. Be a detective. What infestation do I actually have? Why do I have it? How can I cure it without chemicals? What can I do to prevent this infestation from happening again?

3. Give yourself TIME. "Time heals all wounds". Remember that pithy saying? It's important here because you are going to need to give yourself a chance to figure out the problem (from my experience this usually takes less time than rushing out to buy a broad-base chemical); time to implement the procedure, and time for it to take effect.

4. Be willing to try new things with an open mind. When I found out that I wasn't going to need to dust our hens with an insecticidal powder when they had an infestation of lice, and paint the house with creosote, but instead, I would have to clean and vacuum the hen house and put out a box of wood ashes for them to dust themselves in, I sat down and laughed. It sounded like such a big joke; dusting with wood ashes. Yet, when I stepped back to look at the problem. I understood that they were not getting enough room to adequately dust themselves. We were breaking their cleaning cycle. Dusting for a hen is bathing for us, and ashes are their soap. Okay, I've overcome my complete humiliation at having an infestation of lice #1; I've understood what the problem is #2; Now I will finish the job by completing the recipe #3 & #4. Within a week, we had happy, healthy hens again, and our family had the courage to try other, perhaps obscure and peculiar sounding recipes.

PESTICIDES

Fleas & Ticks: feed 2 tsp. of brewer's yeast + 1 clove raw garlic in animal's food everyday.

Allow pets in one area of house (i.e. kitchen) and vacuum that area everyday. Make sure to clean out or remove vacuum bag or fleas will hop out.

Sprinkle fennel, rue, rosemary on carpets + bedding areas to repel fleas.

Flea collar: pennyroyal, eucalyptus ointment - put on collar. Re-apply if animal gets wet.

Roaches: traps, or baking soda + powdered sugar.

Keep countertops free of food; Fix leaky faucets; Mop up damp places.

Ants: Locate place of entry + sprinkle chili pepper or lemon juice, leave the lemon peel.

Moths: Keep clothes clean, dry + well aired (don't jam your closets)

House Flies: Hang sticky paper near light. Use fly swatter.

HERBICIDES

Walkways: white vinegar sprayed directly onto walkway will kill unwanted foliage.

Lawns: Fertilize Spring and Fall; Mow when 3" tall; Water deeply once very week to ten days.

Hand weed unwanted grasses. While weeding, analyze soil fertility - unwanted grasses and weeds creep in when soil is weak.

Gardens: Make the commitment to not use chemicals. Buy an organic gardening pest encyclopedia or borrow some books from the library to see which works best for you. Why? Because every plant has its "pest" and every "pest" has its recipe.

Compost. Healthy soil breeds healthy vegetables.

FUNGICIDES

Lawns: Stop watering as often. Aerate soil; Let grass grow to 3" before mowing.

Bathrooms: Scrub mildew with borax. Find way of keeping area dry.

Transportation booklet

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray makes available at libraries in her district a folder - "Alternate Routes to Keep Boston Moving".

Rep. Murray stated, "It is in every ones interest to keep Boston moving. This is Mayor Flynn's campaign to get people out of their cars and use alternate means of transportation.

Like most cities in our nation, Boston's roads and highways were simply not designed to handle the tremendous number of vehicles that now use them.

But we are working to change that. Over the next decade, by making major renovations that will dramatically improve access into and around the City of Boston.

"In the meantime, however, we need your help. I urge you to consider using alternate means of transportation such as the "T", commuter rail, the Water Shuttle, carpools, vanpools, taxis and limos." she said.

"Boston has so many options, you can get almost anywhere without a car. You'll be doing your part to reduce traffic.

If you are one of the millions who commute into Boston each day, this brochure will make it easier for you to get around.

I hope you will pick up one of these folders at your library and join efforts to ease Boston's traffic problems. After all, it's up to all of us to Keep Boston Moving." Murray concluded.

Cable coverage

Cable's community television took flight this week with its first-ever live election coverage.

Channel 53, the community access channel for this area, broadcast a live news show beginning at 7:30 p.m. and continuing on until after the results of the primary election were tabulated and announced.

For those of us accustomed to standing around town halls for hours while officials tabulated election results, the chance to sit at home and watch the cable reporters do the work was a thrill. Of course, not all of us got to sit home throughout the entire evening. There were numbers to copy and people to see beyond what was available on the television.

If newspapers only repeated television news, they wouldn't survive for very long.

And for the thousands of others who were historically unable to get results of the balloting until the next after when the local daily would appear on the stands, the live coverage was a step into the 20th Century.

The staff of Continental Cablevision deserve high praise for the effort.

Keep it in mind that this piece of work was not the brain-child of some executive higher up in the corporate structure.

Bill McColgan, program manager for Hull, and Bob Belliveau, program manager for Scituate, co-produced the evening.

A live (and exclusive) hook-up between the local cable coverage and WBZ's Channel 4 added something special to the show. At 8 p.m., viewers had the opportunity to learn that William Weld was the Republican choice for the governor's race.

About that same time McColgan, who anchored the show with Christine McDonald, was telling his viewers that Bob Ambler looked like the winner of the Democratic nomination in the Senate race.

McDonald gave her opinion on the Republican race, saying she thought Christy Mihos looked strong.

There were some technical troubles here and there during the coverage. Fuzz on the screen was common during the Channel 4 hook-ups. And there were a few audio problems when roving camera crews were plugged into the action.

The technical problems were minor compared with the excitement of live local election coverage.

The program was developed by McColgan and Belliveau, who are on Continental's staff. But it never could have happened without all the commitment and energy of the cable volunteers — reporters, camera crews, etc.

This show is what people hoped could happen when cable television came to town.

It was a huge step in the right direction.

Broadcasting from Scituate, the cable volunteers kept three camera crews on the road — moving from town halls to political campaign headquarters. Getting the results and interviewing local political experts.

Listening to McColgan and McDonald talk about the issues and the races was fascinating.

This election set a precedent that will give new authority to the words community television.

We want to thank everyone responsible.

Public hearing on malathion spraying set

To the Editor:

Some of us have not forgotten the late August nightmare of malathion spraying in Cohasset and numerous other nearby towns. John Bradford, state representative from Rochester has requested public hearings on this. Hopefully they will take place in October or November. In Mr. Bradford's own words, the purpose of the hearings is to examine the following issues:

1. Did the state utilize the full scope of the decision making process before deciding to spray?
2. Could better substances and methods of combatting encephalitis have been used?
3. Could the State have responded to the threat of encephalitis earlier in the year? If so, then why wasn't it done?
4. What can be done to improve the process and means by which the state can address the problem of encephalitis?
5. Establish a plan to combat encephalitis before the 1991 mosquito season.

You can help this effort by sending me your name and address and your experience of the spraying. Please put your signature after your comments. It is useful to state such things as when you were sprayed, how many times (Yes, some folks got it twice!), what happened to your body or your children or pets (nausea, sore throat, headache, etc.), what did you observe in your yard that afternoon in the following days? Were numbers of birds, bees, dragon flies, crickets or other creatures diminished or ailing? Did you film the spraying?

Please mail your remarks and signature to Ginny Ansbergs, 1 Grace Drive, Cohasset 02025, or you can sign the sheet at Nuthin' More Natural, 5 Brook Street. I will forward these to Rep. Bradford. Please do it as soon as possible. Thank you.

Mariner seeks a school sports reporter

To the Editor:
Cohasset Mariner

Re: Coverage of High School Sporting Events

Gentlemen:

Supporters and boosters of Cohasset High School sports request the Cohasset Mariner to provide weekly coverage of both the boys' and girls' soccer and girls' field hockey teams. We felt the coverage provided last year (fall, 1989) was inadequate considering the current popularity of the sport as well as the high achievement of the teams.

Enclosed please note a petition signed by many of your Cohasset readers in support of the additional coverage.

Over 500 Cohasset kids participate in both fall and spring soccer leagues within the town. Many parents play active roles as coaches, referees and administrators. Hundreds of volunteer hours are donated each year by Cohasset residents. The culmination of their efforts hopefully results in a position on the High School team for their child.

The soccer club can provide game reports and photographs to the Mariner. Please call the undersigned at 383-6634 if this information would be helpful.

Sincerely,
Stephen C. Endris
President and about 75 others

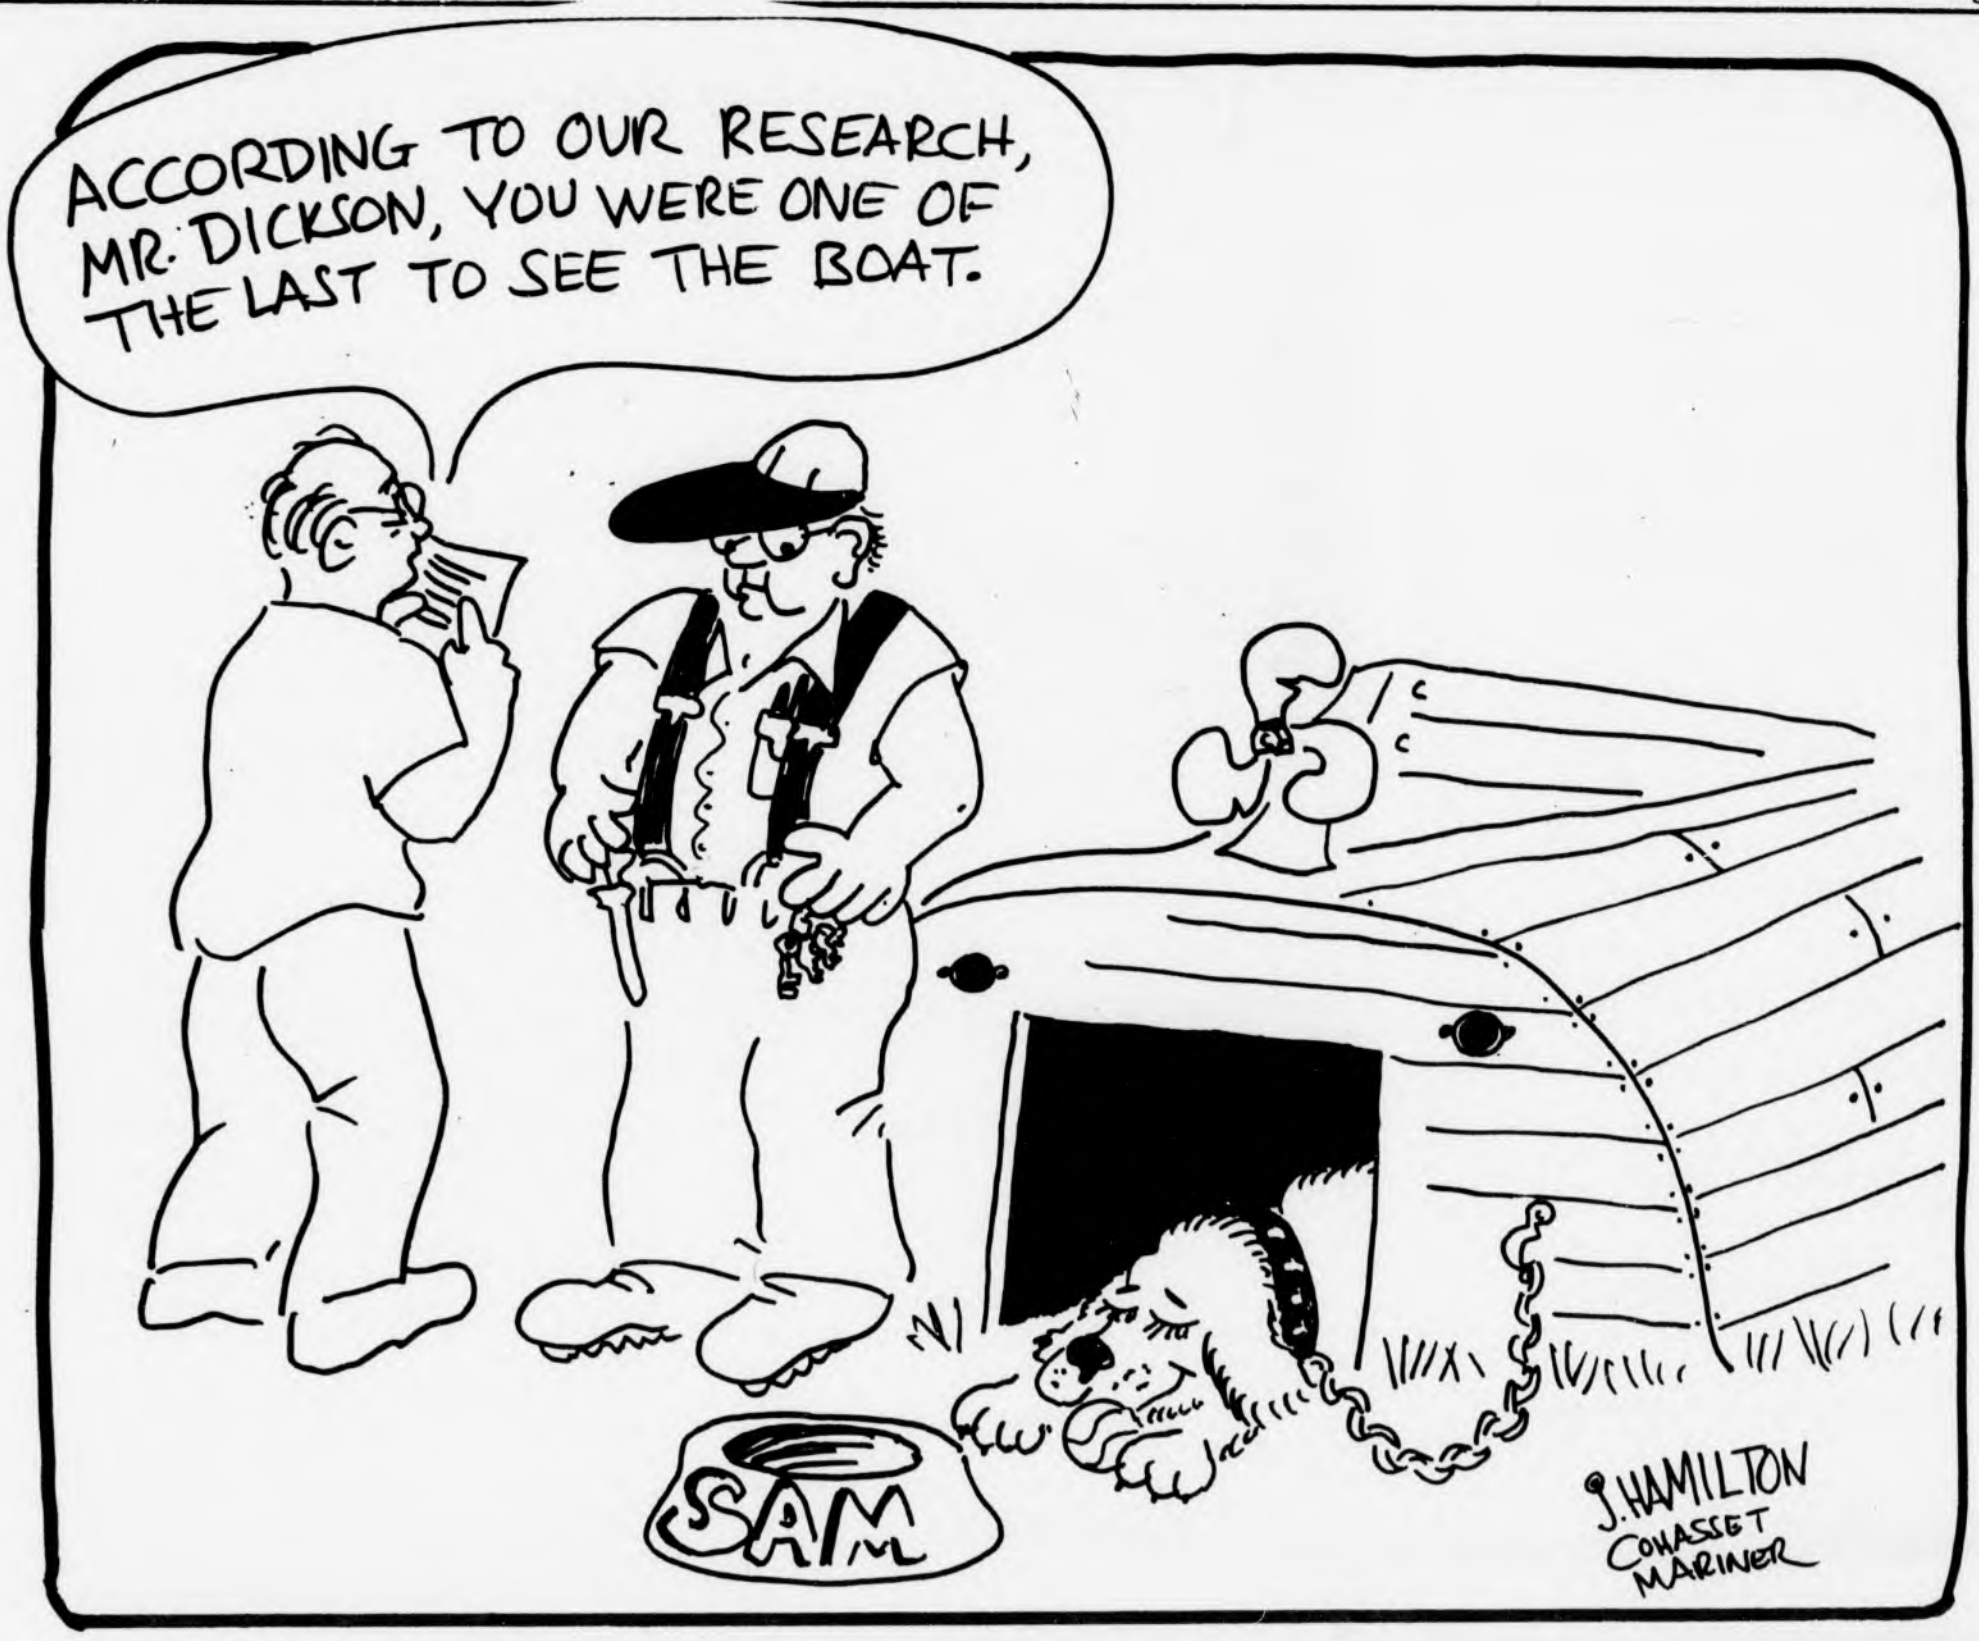
(Editor's note: the editor of the Mariner is not a gentleman. She is looking for a sports reporter for high school sports. Volunteers should call 1-800-649-6661 and ask for Pat Desmond.)

Reader illustrates dangers of speeding

To the Editor:

One week ago, we moved to Cohasset. We knew North Main Street was a busy road. We actually thought that the public obeyed the 35 mph speed limit.



Jack was our best friend. He loved to cuddle up next to us. He was always loving. He always had a lot of little kisses to give out, even to a new face. His happy purring could be heard throughout the house.

Today we buried Jack. Our loss is great. The sadness is very real. The lack of compassion is what hurts the most. If the person who hit our Jack had taken the time to stop, to knock on a door, Jack's life may have been saved.

People are always in such a hurry. Right now, it is early morning. I see all the children waiting for their school buses. I have an intense fear. The traffic is faster now, people are in a hurry to get to work.

Our Jack was a cat, our loss will pass. A child is as unpredictable as an animal. We will say a small prayer every day that the public will obey the speed limit and hope that the next victim is not a child. A child is a loss that cannot be replaced.

Name withheld
upon request

For the past five years, a New York man has been searching for a classic wooden runabout that was last seen in 1960 at Carter Raymond's Route 3A boat shop. Carter is now retired and living in Florida, but Cliff Dickson might know something about the missing speed boat because he replaced her original Fairchild aircraft engine with an Oldsmobile Rocket 98 engine.

Commentary

What do Fenway Park and teddy bear weddings have in common? Not a lot, you say? Then let me explain.

This summer has been a blur. Between covering two towns for the Mariner; entertaining visiting royalty (family); and with two kids that wake up every morning and ask, 'What's the plan?', it's no wonder the other day when I was driving through Norwell, I couldn't remember where I was going.

And that's where teddy bear weddings come in. Last week I had a note from my editor saying, 'Possible feature: wedding play at the Norwell Public Library.'

I wasn't overly enthusiastic. But frankly, my enthusiasm has been at a low ebb lately. (Summers with no sun tend to do that to people.)

But when I arrived at the library, I was greeted by a lovely lady, Betty Duquet. Betty volunteers around town and writes a monthly feature or two for the Norwell and Hanover Mariners during the school year.

Recently Betty turned her special writing talent and attention to detail to the wedding of Shelley Barrett and Robert Browning, two poetic polar bears (stuffed). I put stuffed in parentheses because for about an hour Thursday, Shelley and Robert were very much alive.

About two dozen Norwell youngsters and a smattering of adults, like me, were treated to a whimsical trip into fantasy land. Clad in an ivory satin gown (the exact shade of polar bear fur) with a lace petticoat and veil, and wearing a double strand of Barbara-Bush pearls, Shelley looked beautiful as she hid on a special trolley cart out of view.

Robert, the nervous groom, in a tuxedo with cummerbund and bow tie, waited at the altar. A serious-looking polar bear justice-of-the-peace conducted the proceedings.

The kids, donning boutonnieres and corsages (all made by Betty), eagerly portrayed the wedding-party roles like mother-of-the-bride, ring bearer and best man. Things didn't go off without a hitch...the wrong march was played when the ushers rolled Shelley down the aisle. But what wedding is perfect?

Maybe it was the ginger-ale champagne, or the kids throwing bird seed confetti at the happy couple, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barrett Browning, as they left through the back door of the library, that stayed with me.

So over the weekend when my boys asked if they could made a cake for their eight-year-old visiting cousin's birthday, I said okay. (The memory of the newly-wedded bears was still fresh in my mind and forced out any thoughts of chocolate-coated kitchen disaster.)

Five boxes of chocolate-fudge cake mix; ten tubs of vanilla frosting; and two bottles of green food coloring later, we had 'Fenway Park cake,' complete with green monster, Hershey-Kiss flags, and players in the infield. (The green monster alone took a sheet cake and had to be propped up with an encyclopedia.)

And when it was over — about the only thing that could be said of 'Fenway Park cake' is that it was a creation.

But in this world of rush, rush; taxes, and war in the Middle East; isn't it nice to know that teddy bears still get married and kids still make creations?

Hazardous waste day a success

To the editor:

Scores of Cohasset basements are cleaner and less toxic after last Saturday's Household Hazardous Waste Day. The collection area quickly filled with hundreds of oil-based paints, pesticides, and bottles of strong-smelling "don't know what this is."

The board of health apologizes, however, to those turned away, as the budget for the collection was expended well before closing time. After observing the event, I am determined to purchase less toxins and use the alternatives given in last week's CARE article by Alix White. (The list is available in the board of health office.) Also, the Hancock paint stores are to be commended for their new program of recycling paints.

Firefighters thanked by recreation

Dear Chief Brock,

On behalf of the Cohasset Recreation Commission and the Summer Playground Program, I would like to extend our most sincere gratitude to you and your fire fighters for your assistance this summer.

As you know, Captain James Gurry and fire fighter James Fiori gave our staff and children a workshop on fire safety. Fire fighters Paul McGaffigan and Thomas Hernan along with Mrs. Linda Farrag, R.N., offered First Aid instruction for our summer program participants and staff as well. Both of these programs were well received and extremely important to make available to the children as a learning experience.

Further, we would like to thank Captain Robert Silvia and fire fighters Thomas Hernan and James Runey for their work making "foam day" a big success again this year. The 240 children who participate in the summer program couldn't thank you enough for such a fun day.

Once again, our many thanks for your cooperation and interest in our program and especially your concern for the children of this town.

Hingham numbers alter senate race

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Hingham Town Clerk Thomas Hall was still working on the election ballots Wednesday morning — but the overall results were a Republican's delight.

Maybe not a delight to the Republicans in the hotly contested state senate race. But the voters who showed up at Hingham's polls for the Tuesday primary left large scale blanks on the Democratic ballot and for the most part indicated their lack of support for incumbents.

Hingham voters went to the polls in unexpectedly large numbers — like voters elsewhere in the state. The town vote differed from the rest of the region in several races.

Donald A. Hussey of Hingham, Republican candidate for state senate, took the vote here. However, he came in third in the seven-town district as Christy Mihos of Cohasset and Robert Hedlund of Weymouth finished in a race still too close to call.

The first set of figures released at town hall after midnight gave Mihos a one-vote lead in the seven-town district. Hingham's tally added into the total to give Mihos 5,963 to Hedlund's 5,962.

But Hall continued to go over figures after releasing the unofficial results.

He changed the numbers before morning to give Hedlund a three-vote lead.

Wednesday morning he said he was still working on 25 handcounted ballots which might change the figures again.

Hall said his work on the mutilated ballots could change what was then the still-unofficial outcome of Republican primary. He explained that some ballots were bent by the ballot box and could not be counted in the machine.

"That's the only race it could really effect," Hall said, referring to the senate nomination. A recount is expected either way.

Senate results for the seven-town district

What a difference a vote makes.

In the aftermath of Tuesday's state primary, Republican state Senate hopefuls Christy Mihos of Cohasset and Robert Hedlund of Weymouth were still locked in mortal combat in a race separated by only three votes.

As in past elections, Hingham posed the problem.

Initial figures released after midnight showed Hedlund with 850 votes, leaving him one vote short of Mihos in the seven-town district.

But a recheck showed Hedlund with 854, putting him three votes ahead of Mihos.

And Wednesday's figures showed 856, which would have given Hedlund a five-vote lead if Mihos had not also picked up two votes in the meantime.

Final figures showed Hedlund with 5,969 votes district-wide to Mihos' 5,966.

A recount is expected.

On the Democratic side, veteran state Rep. Robert Ambler beat the anti-incumbent tide at the ballot box to defeat three opponents for the Democratic senate nomination.

Ambler proved unbeatable in Weymouth, as expected, but also took Hingham and came in second in Marshfield against hometown candidate John Creed.

Ambler totalled 10,532 votes district-wide, followed by Weymouth Selectman Brian McDonald with 9,254.

BULLETIN BOARD

County tab may increase

Selectman Jane Goedecke wants to put the town on notice to expect to pay a bigger share of the county's expenses.

According to Goedecke, when the state reneged on their obligation to pay for their share of county expenses in a cost-cutting move, it softened the blow by authorizing the counties to increase their assessments to the cities and towns.

"We can certainly expect an increase in our assessment this year," Goedecke said.

Tag sale set for Sept. 29

A tag sale will be held Saturday, Sept. 29 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Cohasset Common. In the event of rain, the sale will move inside the Cohasset Community Center.

The tag sale is a fundraiser for the Community Center.

Open houses scheduled

Open houses for the public schools have been scheduled.

The open house for Deer Hill School is Sept. 27 at 7:30 p.m.

The open house for the Joseph Osgood School is Oct. 3.

The open house for the junior/senior high is Oct. 4

'Something smells fishy'

Currently on exhibit at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library is a show of multimedia sculpture of fish, by the "Something Smells Fishy School". The exhibit was organized by Colleen Lucas, art teacher at Cohasset High School, and a colleague in New York City, Ellen Alt. Inspired by a visit to an Alexander Calder show, Lucas and Alt brought together various groups of people in different locations during the summer. Artists and non-artists of all ages, from kids to grandmothers, got together in Boston, New York City, Israel, and Buffalo, N.Y., with a purpose: to create fish. From wire and scrap materials, a diverse assortment of colorful and exotic creatures came to life to form the "Class of 1990" of the "Something Smells Fishy School".

The exhibit has already been shown in Buffalo, and will be at the Paul Pratt Library through the first week in October, when it will travel to Israel. There will be an artists' reception at the library on Sept. 24 form 7 to 8 p.m. The public is cordially invited.

Holding election day signs by Cohasset Common are Selectman Martha Gjesteby and her husband, Arne.

SENIOR CORNER

By Kathy Bryanton
Special to the Mariner

There are many people today caring for spouses, mothers, fathers, older family members or friends. They are called "care-givers." The Council on Aging is pleased to announce that this fall, October 2, 9, 16, 23 and 30 we will be hosting a five-week seminar called "Caring for Elders at Home." Each session will offer information and discussion based on questions you have asked in the past. Time 7 to 9 p.m.

- Physical changes in older people
- Where can I receive help when I need it?
- Legal and financial issues
- Availability/utilization of cmty. resources
- Personal care skill

The two-hour long discussion will provide an eye-opening overview of the many issues and options involved with caring for elders at home today. Outreach worker, Susan Connolly, welcomes input to this program that will be held at the South Shore Art Center in October. All are welcome to join us. If you need further information, please call Sue at 383-9112 on Wednesday, 10-2 p.m.

CCOA cordially invites you to attend the celebration of "Senior Sampler Day" on September 25 at 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. The Senior Center, 3 No. Main St. A buffet will be served at noon. Some of the days events: Cholesterol screening, Hingham V.N.A., 10 a.m. to noon for $6. Call for an appointment, 383-9112; taking care of your eyes, eye health screening, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.; Cohasset Social Service League blood pressure clinic, 10 a.m. to noon. All clinics will be held at 23 North Main Street. Walking Club sign-up with the leader, 10 a.m. Get ready, get set, let's go! To the governor's cup '90 on Sunday, October 14 in Boston. Come to the center on 9/25 and learn more about this year's road race.

Exercise classes, bowling, dance classes, first aid classes—Let's get healthy! If you have stayed away because you are not sure you can do a new project, come to our "Sampler Day" and meet the instructors. You can ask your questions about the following classes: arts & crafts, bridge, beginners and intermediate painting classes, knitting, quilting, gourmet club, men's breakfast club. We are always open to your suggestions for new classes, especially if you know of an instructor, just let us know! Other opportunities: be a volunteer, sign up with one of our board members to: teach a class, drive the van, answer the phone at the center, be a Shine volunteer or be a friend to a friend.

If you were born in September come to lunch, 23 No. Main St., Tuesday noon and celebrate with friends and share the birthday cake. A bake table with lots of goodies from the gourmet cooking club will also be available at 23 No. Main Street.

FISH

Fish is a group of townspeople organized to help their neighbors in time of need. We provide drivers for people unable to get to appointments (mostly medical) by the usual means. Most of our clients are elderly or cannot drive, and have no other service available to them. Our volunteers give one day a month, and often extra time if other drivers are needed. We make two or three calls a day, including trips to Boston and other area hospitals.

The service operates Monday through Friday. We request clients to call our answering service (545-7073) at least two days in advance if at all possible. This enables the driver to get an emergency driver if conflicts arise. Calls for Monday appointments should be made by the preceding Friday noon, as it is very difficult to contact people on weekends. We request that people with Cohasset appointments use the Senior Shuttle whenever possible.

Fish services are free. We are happy to accept donations to help cover our expenses. Clients pay any parking charges, and may make arrangements on gas with the driver if it is a particularly long run.

We are always glad to sign up new recruits, especially for emergency drivers. If you can drive occasionally when the regular driver is already booked, please call Doris McNulty (383-1886).

INTRODUCTION WORKSHOP ON FIRST AID—BY LINDA

Offered for the Council on Aging, September 26, 10 a.m. to noon, Cohasset Community Center, $5 (no certification given), sign up by September 21, 383-9112.

If you are a volunteer working with the elderly, this program is designed to teach basic first aid skills.

Take me out to the ball game! The Red Sox will be in town on September 30, playing the Toronto Blue Jays. Cost $15 for the bus (coach) and ticket. The bus leaves at 11 a.m. from the Senior Center. Starting time for the game is 1:05 p.m. Parking in the town parking lot. For reservations, please call 383-9112.

The fall foliage should be at its best in this part of Massachusetts as we drive out to the Brookfields in our air-conditioned luxury motorcoach for a pleasant day in the country. Luncheon at the Salem Cross Inn. Pre-holiday browsing or shopping at the Oakwood Farm Christmas Barn. A Crafts Workshop designed especially for our group. An enjoyable day spent with friends, old and new.

The tour will leave from the Super Stop & Shop on Route 3A in Cohasset at 9 a.m. Friday, Oct. 12 and will return at approximately 5 p.m. Cost for the day, all-inclusive, $33 per person, payable when making reservations. Reservations must be received by Thursday, October 4 to guarantee your place.

For reservations call: 383-9112 and ask for Margo.

DO YOU HAVE A PROBLEM?

Almost anyone can develop a drinking or medication misuse problem, even people who who have never had a drink or taken more than an aspirin before becoming a misuser. Both over-the-counter and prescription drugs can be trouble, especially sleeping pills, tranquilizers and pain pills. Later life can be a time of great losses as the people we love die, we retire, we have new money worries and some of us face bad health. Also, as we age, our bodies change so that drinking or misusing medications can affect us more strongly than when we were younger. Drinking or misusing drugs can seem to help at first, but in the end just makes new problems.

One man who had never gotten drunk when he was younger says, "One day I returned early and discovered my friends having drinks in the recreation room (or a retirement center)...Late that afternoon I found myself accepting my first relaxing drink...Later I was to reason that the afternoon drink was made to order to perk me up, to combat nerves, to whet a fragile appetite, to aid digestion...I spent my 67th birthday in the drunk tank, arrested for drunken driving." (Reprinted with permission of Alcoholics Anonymous from Time To Start Living, pp. 15-17)

DO YOU NEED HELP?

As many as one in ten older adults living at home and one in five in nursing homes has a drinking problem. To decide if you need help, Alcoholics Anonymous suggests that you ask yourself what drinking or misusing drugs has done to you. If they have hurt your marriage, your work, your ability to enjoy life and do the things you like to do, then you have a problem. You might be in trouble if you:

- Still take prescription sleeping pills or tranquilizers that were only supposed to be used for a short time
- "Borrow" other people's medications because the doctor won't refill your prescription
- Feel a need to take over-the-counter sleeping pills, tranquilizers or a drink every day
- Plan the day around drinking or spend time thinking about when you can drink

DO YOU MIX DRINKS AND MEDICATION?

Someone who has never had a drinking or medication misuse problem in the past can easily start one by drinking while taking prescribed or over-the-counter medications.

Drinking strengthens the effects of some medications which can be especially dangerous with sleeping pills and tranquilizers. Drinking can also make other medications less effective.

Older people who drink and misuse medications may suffer from:

- confusion and memory loss
- falls
- bad health from lack of nutrition, because drinking keeps your body from using some vitamins
- high blood pressure and stroke
- liver cirrhosis, sometimes from as little as one or two drinks a day

If you drink at all, ask your doctor what effects drinking and taking your prescription or over-the-counter medications might have.

BULLETIN BOARD

Coastsweep '90

As part of COASTSWEEP '90, volunteers are needed to participate in Cohasset's cleanup of beaches on Saturday, Sept. 29, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Last year, 28 bags were collected, with over 400 pounds of plastic, glass, paper, wood and metal.

Volunteers are needed for Sandy and Rocky Beach as well as Bassing Beach. Please call Sharon Becker, 383-1971 to help.

Flea market planned

Members of the Weymouth Chapter of Friends of The New England Home for Little Wanderers will man a table at the Flea Market sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center to be held on Cohasset Common on Saturday, September 29, from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Proceeds from their table of various flea market items will benefit The New England Home for Little Wanderers, which serves over one thousand boys and girls who have suffered from broken families, drugs, alcohol, poverty, physical and sexual abuse, and have become emotionally abandoned and disturbed.

In case of rain the Flea Market will take place indoors at the Cohasset Community Center, 3 North Main Street, Cohasset.

The Friend of The New England Home for Little Wanderers, a volunteer organization, develops community resources for public awareness/education, advocacy and fundraising...to give kids a chance. The New England Home for Little Wanderers is a non-profit, non-sectarian, private child welfare agency founded in 1865 as an orphanage. The Home today provides a range of residential, day and community-based programs for children and families. Private contributions help underwrite its programs.

Information about the Friends organization may be obtained at the Friends' table at the Flea Market on September 29, from the Weymouth Chapter President at 337-2207 or from The New England Home directly (232-8600).

Dog training offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings, at the GAR Hall, Scituate, starting Wednesday evening, Oct. 3.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., both on Wednesday. The fee for the eight week program will be $30.

Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class. Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

The purpose of beginner classes will be to teach novice pet owners basic obedience and responsible pet ownership. Subjects to be covered are proper use of voice corrections, stay commands, getting the dog to come, heel, etc. Helpful hints on ownership and responsibility will also be included. The training will include those exercises beneficial to the pet owner as well as those thinking about eventually showing their dogs in obedience. The intermediate/advanced class is designed for dogs that have completed the Recreation Department Beginner class.

For the above classes owners are required to have their dogs equipped with a humane choke chain. The proper size of the chain is determined by measuring the dog's neck and adding four inches. Absolutely no spike collars allowed! It is also strongly suggested that the handlers wear comfortable shoes and clothes for this session. For all classes: the fee is $30 per dog for the eight week, one hour per week program.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791, classes are limited in size, non-residents will be accepted on a space available basis.

Artist selected for registry

Cohasset artist Claffy Williams has been selected for membership in the Slide Registry, based in Columbia, Maryland.

Williams is an award-winning painter who has 15 one woman shows to her credit and who has exhibited extensively in Boston and New York. Her work is in private and corporate collections throughout the United States. She is on the Board of Advisors of the South Shore Art Center where she also teaches.

The Registry is a comprehensive resource center of art for architects, designers, collectors, gallery owners and publishers.

Blood mobile on Sept. 25

The next Cohasset Community Tri-annual Red Cross Bloodmobile will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 25, from 2 to 7 p.m. at the Unitarian First Parish House, 23 North Main St., across from the Common.

Groups that will participate, as in the past, and their Donor Promoters are Unitarian First Parish (Susan Grant), St. Anthonys (Carol Riley), Second Congregational (Vi Tuthill), St. Stephens (Karen Gammon), Independents (Mary Brennock), Seavey Engineering (Gayle Seavey), Webb-Norfolk (Pat Faletra and Bill Handrahan), Rotary (Wayne Robbins), Masons (Don Harrold), Legion (Steve Wigmore), Schoolteachers (Carol Riley), Beechwood Congregational, Glastonbury and donors who donate for personal groups.

Any other groups becoming an active participant in this Life-Giving Community Service are more than welcome. Please contact Chairman Al Odermatt 383-1283 or 878-3954, or Corinne Cahill, Coordinator, 383-9265.

All persons in good health, age 17 or older, weighing more than 110 pounds should take advantage of this opportunity to give their blood so save the life of others. Or give to replace the blood given to a friend or relative in the past or will be needed in the future.

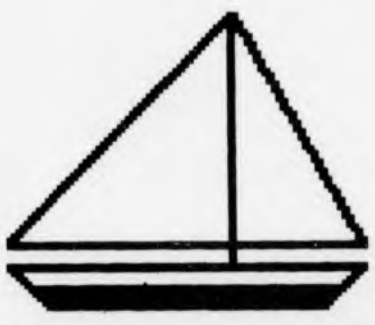
Baby-sitting and transportation will be available.

Donors without appointments will be welcome after 4 p.m.

Get in step with aerobics

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering fall sessions of low-impact aerobic exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m., town hall auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight week cycles, costing $40, for two weekly classes, for an eight week period, i.e.: 16 classes is $40. However, you may join at any time, at any class, and the fee will be prorated based upon the number of classes per week you would like to take, and the number of weeks left in the session. Checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset, and sessions continue on a year round basis. Classes are structured in order that all levels of proficiency may participate comfortably.



Watson is an exercise instructor, and has taught for the recreation department for the past decade. The program is open to both residents and non-residents of all ages, men and women, however, early registration is advised; due to the popularity of the program, classes tend to fill quickly.

You may register at any class. Next session begins Tuesday evening, Oct. 2, however, drop-in classes, prior to the eight week session registration, will be held on Thursday evening, Sept. 20, Tuesday, Sept. 25, and Thursday, Sept. 27.

Shop plans fundraisers

On behalf of the Social Service League of Cohasset, the employees of the Cohasset Super Stop & Shop have planned three fund-raisers.

- Bake Sale, Sept. 22, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the front entrance of the store.
- Bake Sale, Sept. 29, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., at the front entrance of the store.
- Car Wash, Oct. 6, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the rear of the store.

"Mr. and Mrs. Fish," marine educators Jeff and Deb Sandler of Portland, Maine, performed Tuesday for pupils at the Osgood School. The Parent-School Organization brought the Sandlers in to present their lively and entertaining lessons about ocean life.

Tommy Anderson listens attentively to the show

Second, third, and fourth graders enjoyed the humorous show.

Youngsters from the kindergarten and first grade learned about living things along the shoreline and had lots of laughs during Tuesday's presentation.

Reading club writings

"Mrs. Murphy's Summer Reading Club"

Mrs. Murphy's reading club is where kids go every Monday and Tuesday night from 7 to 8 p.m. It's where kids go to read books and do mysteries, if you figure out the mystery you win a prize. I think that this was a great idea to start a reading club. Mrs. Terry who works at the library helps Mrs. Murphy every week.

This years reading club was great! Mrs. Murphy was a good teacher too! Working on the puzzle was fun because we worked together. The food that most of the kids brought was generous.

Adam Sheerin

Mrs. Murphy put together a summer reading program. We read books and we put together puzzles. Mrs. Terry helps Mrs. Murphy with the class. Mrs. Murphy and Mrs. Terry are real nice to put this together.

Thank you for putting this together.

Thank you.

Paul Sheerin

This year's summer's reading program I think was a great way to improve many readers. Mrs. Murphy bought a mystery package that came with a mystery puzzle and story. Mrs. Murphy made copies of the story and all the kids read the story, put together the puzzle and solved the mystery.

Another thing that we did was read books and wrote books down that we read.

Junior Investigators

Junior Investigators is a club for sixth graders. The club consists of Mrs. Murphy, Bobby Meehan, Ryan McWilliams, Matt O'Connor, Holly Brennock, Justin Buckley, Paul and Adam Sheerin, Burke Davis, Sean Norris, Matt Rossi, Robby Buckley, and Joey Magner. The club solves mysteries and has fun doing it. To solve the mysteries the club puts together a puzzle and reads a mystery.

Throughout our nation's history libraries have been recognized as an invaluable educational tool. Whether located in community buildings, schools or other academic institutions, libraries are an ideal way to share both the collected wisdom of the ages and recently acquired technical and scientific knowledge. Repositories of literature, information and ideas, libraries serve as centers of culture and learning in every community.

At their local library, children as well as adults can find books and materials to meet their special needs and interests. Whether reading for pleasure or studying for a particular purpose, a young scholar can discover a wealth of information — and hours of enjoyment — at the library. Libraries also provide book suitable for parents to share with little ones who are still unable to read by themselves. In fact, reading together holds rewards for the entire family.

Parents should introduce their children to their local library and encourage them to visit it often. They should ensure that their children sign up for a library card, and they should set a positive example by using their own.

If knowledge can be considered the greatest of all riches, then a library card is a key to a lasting treasure.

In recognition of our nation's libraries and the importance of owning and using a library card, the Congress, by House Joint Resolution 231, has designated September as "National Library Card Signup Month" and has authorized and requested the President to issue a proclamation in observance of this month.

The resolution states:

Whereas American libraries of all kinds (public libraries, school library media centers, academic and research libraries and special libraries) are essential to national literacy, lifelong learning, and a productive economy.

Whereas the United States National Commission on Libraries and Information Science and the American Library Association have launched a national campaign to ensure that every school-age child in the nation will have, and will be encouraged to use, a library card;

Whereas a library card cannot be outgrown and is good for a lifetime of learning and enjoyment;

Whereas parents and schools are important partners in the effort to give the wonderful gift of a library card to every child in the nation, and

Whereas a library card is an essential resource for every child's education, and September is the month during which children return to school,

Now, therefore, be it resolved that September is designated as "Library Card Signup Month."

Arts preschool offered

Research in the field of education shows that there is a definite correlation between arts-like experiences at the preschool level and academic readiness. The South Shore Conservatory Preschool, an accredited program licensed by the Commonwealth, operates within the Hingham branch of the school, off 19 Fort Hill Street. The children have the unique advantage of a regular preschool program conducted in a conservatory of the performing arts. This allows them exposure to the many artistic resources of the school.

Each week a specialist in early childhood music training works with the preschool, and members of the Conservatory faculty visit throughout the year to demonstrate for the children. Visits might include: music teachers playing their instruments for the class and answering their questions; playing theater games with the Creative Dramatics teacher, or having a special romp with the school's dance director.

Carol Scheig is the director and head teacher of the program. She and her assistants stress the building of sound socialization skills, self esteem and independence. These skills are taught through music, dramatic play activities, art projects, manipulative structures, cooking activities, block building, water/sand play, woodworking, language arts, and physical education. They encourage creative and educational exploration through hands-on involvement by the children, guided by the teachers.

The Conservatory Preschool offers a two- or three-day program.

In addition, the First Time Playschool is a one day program for children three and over, who have not yet been to nursery school. Children spend a weekly two hours at the Conservatory; one hour with the Preschool teachers, and one with the Joy of Music teacher. This is a good way to make the transition from home to school.

There are still a few openings in the fall programs. For further information contact the Conservatory office. The preschool program begins on September 17.

Legality of MBTA land transfer questioned

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

The chairman of the Hingham Historical Commission is questioning the legality of a state agency's land transfer to the MBTA for the Greenbush Line portion of the Old Colony Railroad restoration.

On Sept. 25, selectmen will read a notice of intent that the Division of Capital Planning and Operations intends to transfer an easement of railroad right of way from the Executive Office of Transportation and Construction to the MBTA.

In his letter, John Carlson Jr., the deputy commissioner of the Division of Capital Planning, told selectmen that the easement, declared surplus, contains land in Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset, Brockton, West Bridgewater, East Bridgewater, Bridgewater, Middleborough and Lakeville.

Selectmen forwarded the letter to Historical Commission Chairman Alexander Macmillan, a key player in the fight against the Greenbush line restoration, and he, in turn, responded to Associate Deputy Commissioner John Bradshaw.

"Your office tells me that the legal transfer is scheduled to take place on Jan. 3, 1991, the last day in office for the incumbent administration," Macmillan wrote. "I question whether such a transfer would be legal."

Macmillan pointed out that Chapter 7, Section 401 of the Massachusetts General Laws requires that before the transfer of any "real property by the commonwealth on behalf of state agencies" there must be written notice to each town where the property is located.

"Your letter notifying the Hingham board of selectmen was dated Sept. 4, but postmarked on Friday, Sept.7, and the date stamped as received by the board of selectmen on Tuesday, Sept. 11," Macmillan wrote.

"I doubt whether the Hingham Board of Selectmen will consent to a shortening of the 120-day period, or whether the deputy commissioner will be able to certify, under law, that an 'emergency' exists to require the transfer prior to Jan. 9. At that time, of course, we will have a new governor, who may not approve of the transfer."

Macmillan also cited a law that requires a public meeting to be held in the towns where the land is located at least 60 days prior to any transfer.

"Please notify the Hingham Historical Commission, in addition to the Hingham board of selectmen, of the time and place for this hearing," he wrote.

"I question whether it is appropriate or necessary at this time for the MBTA to be acquiring portions of the abandoned Greenbush line which it does not currently own, and which are held by another state agency.

"Under state and federal enactments governing their conduct, the MBTA, and the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, are supposed to be considering, in good faith, a number of alternatives to the Greenbush line that will cause less damage to protected resources.

"It violates the spirit, and perhaps the letter, of applicable regulations for the MBTA to be charging ahead, acquiring land for its 'preferred alternative' at this time.

"The division of capital planning and operations should not be party to any effort to circumvent state law, or state and federal regulations, by making a premature transfer of the abandoned Greenbush line to the MBTA."

Election workers sit through the long primary day vote.

Living Life

By Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner

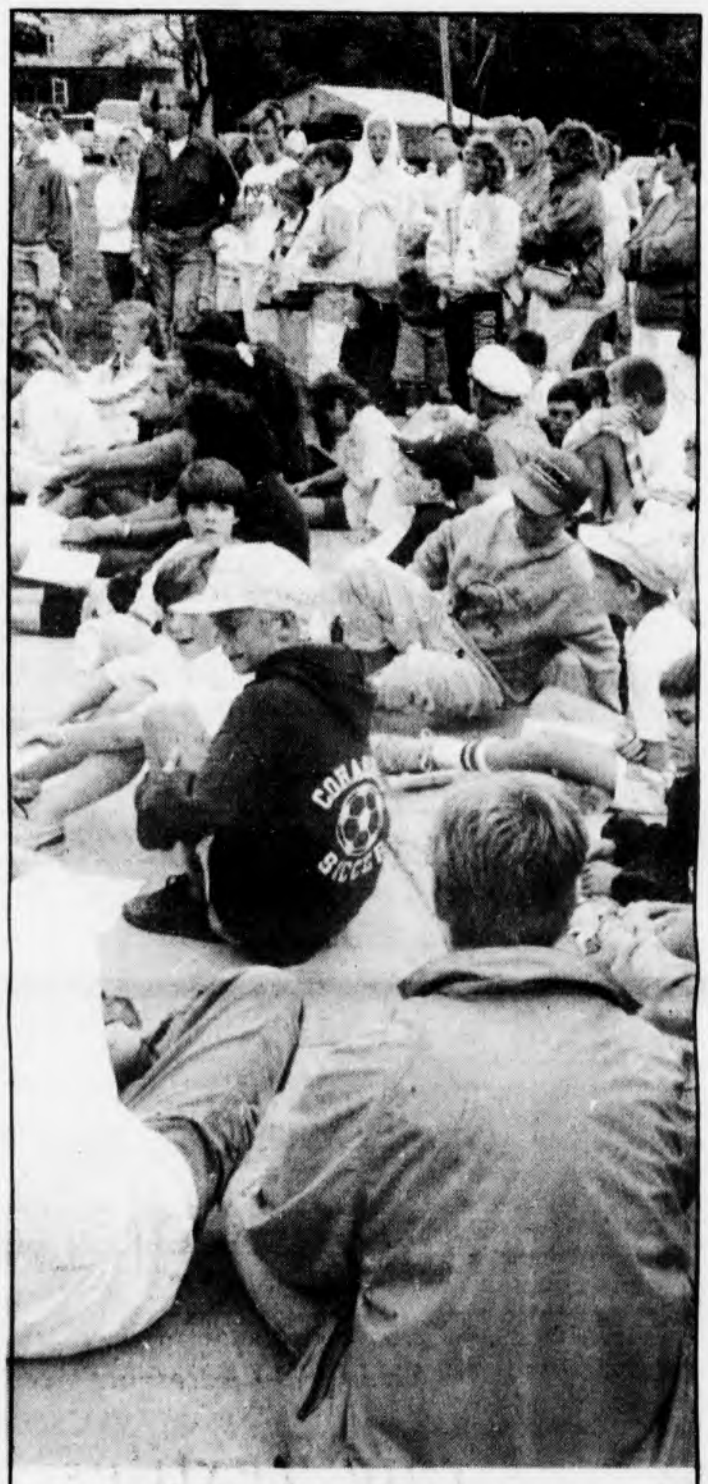
Last week, my adopted son, Kwan, and his family called me from Edmonton, Alberta. They are great fans of the Edmonton Oilers. I told them that the Boston Bruins were my team now since I was living in Massachusetts. I introduced Kwan to his wife Martha and they now have two children, Michael and Dolly. When I visited them in 1984, Michael was ten and Dolly was just eight. They kept calling me 'grandpop', a term I did not take to, so now, it is just Uncle Mike. Hopefully, Michael and Dolly will visit us here in Cohasset next summer.

I first met their Father, Kwan Il Lee, in 1959 when he was an orphan in Choon Chun, South Korea. Kwan had been a victim of war, had seen his father brutally murdered before his eyes and his mother taken away by the North Koreans. He was such a gentle child I fell in love with him immediately. He still has a tenderness and warmth about him that the Korean Community in Edmonton call him the "pyunghwa ri" a term reserved for a gentle person. He wanted so much to go to school and I saw that he did. He was eventually drafted into the Korean Army. This was during the time of President Syghman Rhee, who was later exiled to Hawaii and died a broken man. Lee Ki Poong was the Speaker of the House and was slain along with the other members of his family in a patricide/suicide pact when he fell from power. Choi in Kyou was the Minister of Home Affairs. He was later hanged for crimes against the People and the Nation.

Living life in those days in Korea was not easy. Political power and corruption was a way of life. People were intimidated and afraid. There was no freedom of the press, and if you spoke other than the party line, you were thrown into prison. "How far can they go with this?" I used to ask myself. "When will the patience of the people break?" There were few who wanted to talk about it at all. Most chose to bury their heads in the sand. Kwan and I used to talk about it all the time. We still do!

I remember well the day I walked into the Bando Hotel across from the American Embassy to order a 4x4 wheel drive vehicle. I needed it for the bad mountain roads in Kangwan Province. It was the 19th of April, 1961. Korea was in total unrest. Hundreds of black uniformed high school students with their pancaked hats had amassed outside the American Embassy to protest their Government's oppression. Somehow, the kids trusted Uncle Sam and his image of freedom and democracy. I had just elighted from the fourth floor where I had ordered my Land Rover into the Lobby of the Hotel. Crash, bang, whizz — we all fell to the floor. Bullets were flying all around. In my head I felt that my underwear had turned brown and my heart was in my mouth. My stomach was one mass of butterflies. I feared to look up, and when I did a few minutes later, I heard the screams and saw the young children falling to the ground in pools of blood. I never felt so useless or powerless! I never felt so angry or so helpless. I never felt so frightened and afraid. I never felt to numb and so overwhelmed. Somehow, I felt cowardly!

The Youth of Korea were crying out in desperation: "Listen to me, listen to us! Listen to our bleeding souls which have been held in bondage and in chains. Listen to what we are saying and what we are feeling, you older citizens of Korea. You may chain our bodies, but you can not imprison our spirits. Stop oppressing us with your power and greed. Stop trying to control us with your ambition and your money and your pretense! Stop! Stop! Stop!" they cried out, and no one listened. They responded only with bullets and their dead Youth lie on the ground in pools of blood. It is too late. They are gone! They buried their dead Youth, immortalized their memory with a Holiday and a few years later continued on with their lie, a denial of what caused it all.



Wow! the memory of it makes me shiver yet as I face up to my golden years. "My children, what have we done to you?" I say to myself when I hear of another teenager attempting suicide, overdosing on drugs or drinking themselves drunk! These are all attempts at suicide!. And yet, we go on with our lie, and point the finger to others as to why it happens. "It wasn't like that when I was young . . . Why my father and mother would . . . Back in the good old days . . . the kids need to know their place . . ." And so we blame it all on the kids. The politicians come out with a funded program, and there's federal money and State money, and they preach a message of "Say No to Drugs" and live the lie of an Iran/contra affair; they launder drug money and buy weapons for desperados who are allegedly fighting the communists. And they expect the Youth of America to "say no to drugs" when they are getting high, and drugging themselves with power and ambition, control and money, sex and greed!

All of this filters down into every home in America. The poor are getting poorer, the rich are getting richer. Middle America is preoccupied with money and power at any cost to morals and values so that they can move to something bigger and better and eventually retire in some wealthy senior community away from the youth they have long ago abandoned to grow up by themselves. Our Youth have no role models to teach them how to deal with the spiritual realities of life so they create a false reality of their own!

We live in colossal denial of life and the rules for living life in America. We live in colossal denial of the same here in Cohasset! And we expect the Youth at the beach to "say no to drugs" when we the adults have not yet learned how to say YES to life!

We are a "People of the Lie" to quote the title of one of M. Scott Peck's works. We live so much on the surface of life, afraid to scratch beneath for fear of the scars we left behind, but never really healed. We want the statistics for our journals, not the feelings, not the pain, the heartache, the joys and the sorrows that caused them. We want to deal with propositions and theories. We want to live in our heads where we see no pain, feel no pain, believe no pain. We deny the life that is all around us. We deny the life that is within us. We deny the life that comes forth from us — our children. We deny their pain, their feelings, their hurts, their fears, their insecurities, their sorrows. We try to fix their pain or even take it away, not realizing that their pain is a gift, and that by going through it, they will learn the rules for living life. We put expectations on them that they can't fulfill. We adults have forgotten how to feel, except to be angry when our children haven't owned up to the goals we have set or made the grades that we have expected. We have been so busy "giving our children everything that we didn't have," we have been so involved in living their lives for them, and through them abating our own frustrations, that we have forgotten to teach the necessary ingredients for living life. We haven't taught them how to feel and experience pain and how to grow from it. We have taught them how to run from it, because they have seen us do the same. The abuse of alcohol and drugs is not a problem of our youth. It is a problem of people who have never grown up — the thirty, forty, fifty, sixty and yes, seventy year olds who have not yet matured nor come of age.

Choi In Kyou gave the order to fire on the youthful demonstrators in 1961 because he was too involved with himself, and his power and his greed and could not listen to the children, nor pay attention to their hearts. He was hanged in shame from the gibbet of justice because he killed the youth and they were no more. We may hang our heads in shame for our selfishness and denial of life. But our children are still alive! They have much to teach us, and we them, if only we stop denying our reality and theirs, learn how to listen to their hearts and to our own. Living Life is painful, but full of fun!

Cohasset Sailing Club students had their day in the sun, despite the gray weather, at season's end.

Drains Run Slow?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again! The secret? Clean drains don't run slow.

Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are SIGNALS that a thick layer of GOOK is choking your pipes. Grease, hair, and other waste stick to your pipes, with every use. This gook deposits along the entire length of the pipe. It chokes your pipes gradually, as it gets thicker and thicker.

Conventional drain openers can't fix slow drains. They react chemically on the surface of the gook. To be effective, they must remain in contact with the waste. Even a small tunnel through the gook lets them flow out to the sewer, leaving the gook behind.

In the past, the only way to remove this build-up was to rooter your pipes. An expensive, temporary measure.

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That is what allows it to liquefy even years of build-up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, we stand behind Plumb Clean with a money-back guarantee!

Saves Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, it would take over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safe Too. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course, all plumbing.

So, if your drains are giving you a SIGNAL, act now. Get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today!

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to review grade level curriculum and to prepare for accreditation.

AFS sponsors info night

"Walk together, talk together, all ye people's of the earth: then and only then shall ye have peace" was the American Field Service's motto, as translated from Sandkrit, when the first intercultural program was launched in 1947. The theme remains the same, but whereas 47 students participated the first year, in 1990 more than 8,000 students travel to 8,000 homes in more than 60 countries on every major continent in the world. In addition, more than 100,000 volunteers and their local communities provide a support network that is unmatched across the world.

The AFS Club in Cohasset is sponsoring an information session on Monday (Sept. 24) at 7:30 p.m. in the Audio Visual Room at Cohasset High School.

Anyone interested in learning more about becoming involved in the AFS program, whether as a student or as a host person or family, is invited. Additional information also is available by contacting Judy Dwyer, 383-1654, or Penny Redfield, 383-9286, co-chairpersons of the AFS Cohasset chapter.

Upcoming school events

On Friday, September 21, there will be a dance for grades 7 - 9 at the high school. It will be sponsored by the 11th grade and will last from 7:30 to 10 p.m.

All are invited to come and hear Derek Sanderson speak at Cohasset High School. He will be here on September 20, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the auditorium,.

Cohasset High School's 7th and 8th graders are starting their annual magazine drive. It will last from September 21 through October 1. Good luck to all involved!

AFS families welcome back four world travellers

By Beth Christoffel
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset's AFS family and friends gathered this week to welcome Patricia Soares from Portugal, and to celebrate the return of four Cohasset high school students who traveled across the world this summer as part of the AFS program. The four are Rebecca Jordan, Doug Moe, Sophie Redfield and Andrew Ross.

During an assembly at the high school Thursday, as well as at a pot luck dinner held at the Cohasset Sailing Club Sunday evening, the four Cohasset residents shared some of their life changing experiences. "Awesome", "incredible", it changed my life forever" and "I now have friends, not only in my host country, but also from all across the United States" are some of their comments.

AFS, which stands for American Field Service, is an intercultural program designed to be educational in the broadest sense, primarily for the benefit of high school age students who go abroad. The education takes place not only in the classrooms, but in living rooms, on playing fields, in market places, in concert halls, on buses or trolley cars — in diverse cultures around the globe.

Students live with host families in countries. Those who participate in the year and semester programs attend school, often with their new 'brothers' or 'sisters'. Each participant gets involved in family life and everything it naturally encompasses, from chores and excursions to dinner-table discussions in their new language. Shorter term AFS programs can encompass Outward Bound experiences, archaeological digs and sports programs.

Patricia, who is living with Sue and Jack McNamara's family on Fair Oaks Lane this semester, speaks fluent English — a subject she has studied for five years in her schools. She became involved in AFS to learn firsthand about other cultures and to improve her English. "Everyone in AFS loves it — not only those who come to the U.S., but also those who go to other countries," she says. Her family in Portugal hosted a girl from Austria and knew a family with four children who had all come to America. "They thought that this was the best, so I decided that I would do it, too."

When she returns home, Tika, as Patricia is known to her friends, will have to complete the equivalent of our secondary school education before she moves on to the university. "I have to take more Portuguese literature before I earn my degree," she says. At the university, she plans to study international affairs and use her AFS experiences to launch a career in travel.

For seven weeks this summer, Rebecca Jordan lived in Setubal, Portugal, a town not far from Tika's family and about 20 miles from Lisbon. However, the two didn't meet until Tika came to Cohasset. Rebecca lived with the Lopes family for 7 weeks. The rest of the time she was away from Cohasset she was involved in meetings with AFS volunteers — both in this country and in Portugal. Rebecca's AFS family included 16-year-old Anna and 14-year-old Antonio.

At first, the time and meal changes were adjustments Rebecca found the hardest. "Everyone I met was great, but at first the time switch and two huge meals a day with heavy foods were more than I was used to," she said. "It all worked out great though and I've lost the weight I gained!"

New friends, including her AFS family, are the most important components of the AFS experience to Rebecca. "I'll never forget the new friends I made " not only those I met in Portugal, but also those with AFS from throughout the U.S. I've been in contact with many of them and we're making plans for a gathering here in Cohasset next summer."

Doug Moe spent the summer in Vienna, Austria, with the Stohrs. His AFS family included two brothers, Stefan, 16, and Frederick, 4, and two sisters, Bettina, 11 and Katharina, 2. His most vivid memories of Vienna itself are walking around the city late at night — with the street musicians playing, lights and their shadows created by trees and leaves and the closed shops awaiting a new day.

However, Doug, too, is committed to the many friends he made this summer. "My family was great, as were the people I met through AFS — students from Florida, California, Colorado, Utah and Wisconsin. Good relationships that I will always remember," he says.

To any one considering the AFS program, Doug says, "I absolutely urge them to get out there and do it! They'll never regret it! It's a tremendous experience."

San Cristobal, Venezuela, was home to Sophie Redfield this summer. She was hosted by the Mendoza Cruz family. Although she attended school only part of the time she was there, the fact that she was surrounded only by the Spanish language has enabled her to go from Spanish I last year to Spanish AP at Cohasset High School this year. "The area I was in wasn't touristy at all. No one spoke any English, not my host family nor my new friends, so I had to learn it," she recounts. "I did it step by step. First, I learned to answer the phone, then buy things at the store, then take the buses around town. Each one was cause for a new celebration," Sophie says.

"It was like I couldn't close my eyes each day," Sophie continued. "there was always something new to see, to hear, to experience, and I didn't want to miss any of it. At first, it was kind of hard, the Venezuelan people are so much more affectionate and open than Americans. I wasn't sure how to handle it. But they accepted me right away and I had a wonderful time. I really didn't think I would get so close to my AFS family in such a short time, but it really happened." Sophie has talked to her AFS family, including siblings — 18-year old Alexandra, 15-year-old Gilmer and 10-year-old Moises David, since returning to Cohasset.

"We had a great AFS leader and the AFS support in my city was great. They were right there to answer any questions or concerns and help me when needed," she continued.

At first, it felt like the hardest thing Sophie had ever done — to go off totally on her own to a new country and new people. "But it was so worthwhile. I started from scratch, including the language barrier, and built my own relationships and life away from everything I had known. I found out I can do it! You really get to know yourself well in the process."

Andrew Ross had one advantage during his AFS program this summer — he could speak the language, but his accent was different. Andrew spend close to 9 weeks in Australia. In a new AFS program, he combined a homestay with an Outdoor Education segment. His AFS family the Borwick's, live outside of Perth in Stoneville. They included 17-year-old Lisa and 8-year-old Laura. Because the school year in Australia runs from February to December (January is their summer time) he attended school while he was there.

In school, he found that their study of American History was a great deal more detailed than ours! Also, schools there are built in building clusters where classes of the same subject are in one building, much like many universities in this country.

Rock climbing was "incredible" and ranks highest in the list of favorite activities in which he was involved during the Outdoor Education portion of his visit. He also camped, hiked and rode horses during his close to 3 weeks involvement. Under the guidance of AFWS, he found this experience to be very much like the Outward Bound program in this country.

But, Andrew, too, says that meeting and getting to know people from halfway around the world, as well as other students from across our country was an unbelievable experience. It's challenging and a bit scary. "When you visit another country as a tourist, you get a really different perspective than you do staying with a family," he says.

"I'll never again look at the world like I did four months ago."

Another Cohasset high school student, Melissa Christoffel, is currently in Donetsk, Ukraine, Soviet Union, as part of the AFS program. She is living with a Soviet family as one of 49 American students involved in AFS's first Soviet homestay program.

Old Colony chugs along

The state came another step closer to transferring state-owned land along the Old Colony right of way to the MBTA.

Selectmen read an official announcement from the Executive Office of Capital Planning and Operations outlining plans to turn over surplus land along the railroad's route to the MBTA. According to Selectman Martha Gjesteby, nearly 99 percent of the right of way is owned by the town, the remainder is privately held or state-owned. The announcement only covers the state-owned land.

Community Center events

Cohasset Community Center children's programs include:

A Special Family Puppet Show with Pat Boylan will give "Cinderella" the royal treatment at Cohasset Community Center on Sunday, Sept. 23 at 1 and 3 p.m. Tickets will be $4 at the door. Information call 383-0088.

The Duxbury Dance Shoppe offers classes in Creative Movement, Ballet and Tap and Tap and Jazz to children ages 3 and up. Classes are ongoing and cost $15 (Creative Movement) and $20 (Ballet, Tap, Jazz) per month. A year-end recital is held at the South Shore Music Circus.

Gymnastics classes are given to children ages 3-18. Kids receive group and individualized instruction in floor exercise, aerobic dance, balance beam, uneven bars, vaulting, and conditioning. Cost is $60 per 12-week session.

Kodaly Music classes offer exciting musical experiences plus fun and games to kids ages 12-18 months, 18-24 months and 2-3 1/2 years. Classes are held on Tuesday and Friday mornings for 10 weeks starting Sept. 17. Cost is $45.

"Gym Dandy" classes are given for children ages 3-12 months, 1-2 years and 2-3 years. Kids have fun exploring creative equipment. Classes are held on Wednesday and Thursday for eight weeks starting Sept. 19. Cost is $44.

'Glades' tour planned

The Cohasset Historical Society will offer a tour of the fabled "Glades" summer estate on Strawberry Point, Minot, on Sunday afternoon, Sept. 23. This unique private summer residential estate on the Scituate side of Cohasset Harbor's entrance long has held a fascination for those who have wondered what it is like close up. Built originally as a hotel some 140 years ago the Glades for over a century has been the summer residence of generations of prominent Boston families. Those attending the Historical Society's tour will have the opportunity to view the grounds and learn the history of this unusual oceanside site.

For the Society's tour of the Glades, reservations will be $10 for Society members, $12 for non-members. Reservations, with check in payment, may be sent to the Cohasset Historical Society, 14 Summer St., Cohasset MA 02025. Deadline for reservations will be Wednesday, Sept. 19, and payment secures the reservation. Because of limited access to the Glades parking will be at the Scituate municipal parking lot, Bailey Causeway in Minot. Shuttle buses will run from the parking lot to the Glades each hour at 1, 2, and 3 p.m. Those reserving are asked to specify which of the hours they wish to choose; we will try to accommodate. Light refreshments will be served at the main building of the Glades complex.

For further information please call the Historical Society at 383-6930.

Santa Claus is coming

The annual Village Fair — and Santa — comes to town Saturday, Dec. 1.

Selectmen approved use of the town hall auditorium and the common beginning Nov. 29 for the group to set up.

The holiday fair is sponsored by local churches.

AARP to meet Sept. 27

The next meeting of the South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will be on Thursday, September 27 at 1:30 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A, Hingham.

Beth Loomis of the Hospice of the South Shore will speak about the services that the hospice program offers to patients and their families.

Any member of the National AARP or NETA may join a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Housing authority breaks new ground

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

After four years of planning, the Cohasset Housing Authority broke ground on a house for the mentally impaired.

According to Housing Authority Director Barbara Clain the new center which will house up to eight clients, will be operational early next year.

The $365,000 cost of the home was absorbed by the State Office of Communities and Development(OCD).

Clain said she was pleased the total cost of the project was so reasonable, and thinks its fairly low cost, combined with the need for such a home, helped the proposal gain approval.

She described the planned house as "two-ranch houses connected together."

The single-story structure will have eight bedrooms, a community living room and kitchen area, and an office for staff members.

There will be one staff member for every two clients, and it will be staffed around the clock.

Clain said the building was designed to be completely accessible for the handicapped.

Close to thirty people attended the groundbreaking ceremony last Thursday.

Featured guests included Russell Tremain of Tremain Associates in Milton, the architect who designed the home and three representatives from the Office of Communities and Development: Dorothy Altman, William Turville and Christina Webster.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby and former selectman Burt Pratt also attended.

Members of the Cohasset Housing Authority were also on hand for the ceremony; wearing hard hats and wielding shovels.

Busting sod for the new home were Chairman John Muncey, Vice Chairman Ralph Perroncello, Stephen Wigmore and Frederick R. Koed.

Member Joanne Young-Nawn was not present at the ceremony, but was thanked for her part in the project.

The house, which will sit on the lot vacated by what was 72 Elm St. was sold to the town by Jane Trettis.

Clain said the idea for the project dates back to 1986.

In February of 1988 an architect was retained and an application was sent to the OCD.

The grant was recently approved and now construction is underway.

Clients are now being screened, and should be ready to move into the home on opening day.

Derek Sanderson talks on substance abuse

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Derek Sanderson, former Bruins star and sports commentator, brought his message about drugs to Cohasset high school Sept. 20 at the request of the PSO.

Cohasset schools have a health curriculum from Kindergarten to grade 12 that deals with drug abuse and alcohol.

As school superintendent Stephen Hart said in his introductory remarks, the goal is to provide useful information that will lead students to feeling of self esteem and confidence.

"Alcohol and drug abuse is epidemic," Sanderson told the multi-generational audience.

He showed a quick videotape about his hockey career — a career he said would have lasted longer if it hadn't been for his own substance abuse.

The tape pointed out that he was traded quite a bit in the years he played ice hockey. He had a problem getting along. He said one of the first signs of alcoholism is "unreasonable resentments."

In the course of his story, he described alcohol more than once as "a poison, an anesthetic, a sedative and a drug."

He told about his own mood swings.

"Alcohol affects everybody who uses it," Sanderson said, describing three types of drinkers — the social drinkers, the problem drinkers and the alcoholics. His way of defining a problem drinker was simply to say that it was an alcoholic "waiting for time to happen."

He talked about his cocaine use and his use of prescription drugs. You had to be there to understand the impact of his story.

"Through the grace of God I'm sober today," Sanderson told the crowd.

Today he walks with a limp having had hip transplants as a result of a side effect of one of the drugs prescribed for him in years past. He works for a consulting firm in Boston known as Tucker An-

Michael Sharpe's rappers ready to succeed with 'Peace of Mind'

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Michael Sharpe's career is climbing the charts. The Cohasset resident manages a Boston-based rap group that is poised for national success.

Top Choice Clique, a street rap group, already has a 12 inch single that is receiving wide play on local radio stations WILD, WERS, WHRB, WRBB, WMBR, WMFO and WNFX. Another single is ready to go soon.

According to Sharpe, calls are coming in from around the country asking for copies of the record and several major record labels are interested. Sharpe doesn't see any reason why the three rap artists and their two dancers can't crack MTV.

Sharpe describes their rap as positive. They take a strong stand against drugs and violence.

"They don't think anything can be solved through violence," Sharpe said.

One of the raps, "Peace of Mind," is a tough, uncompromising look at the consequences of war and peace in the community as well as the world at large.

Sharpe said the core members of TCC, MC-DJ Force, Scratchmaster Gemeni and John P. consider themselves poets and artists. The message is definitely their medium.

"The type of sound we're going for is straight from our heart," MC-DJ Force said in the group's bio. "We feel as though we don't have to sell out or become commercial to be known."

Apparently their peers and the music business agrees. They have garnered two nominations for Boston Music Awards and seven Massachusetts Rap Awards.

Sharpe got involved with them a year-and-a-half ago when one of the members of the group called up. Sharpe gets countless calls from wannabe musicians who get his name from the Yellow Pages. A indefinable something told him this group was different.

"They brought over a cassette," Sharpe remembers. "It showed good, raw talent."

Sharpe found a company willing to produce the cassette and "The Powers in the Words" took them to the first Boston Music Awards nomination.

Although the group was "jumpy" to get into the musics scene, Sharpe convinced them that it takes a little time to do things right. When the second rap, "Peace of Mind," was ready, Sharpe lined up Skippy White to make his own record label and take a chance on the group.

When the second Boston Music Awards nomination came in, the group got a chance to show their stuff on Channel 4's "People Are Talking."

Following that, the record was released and was

COHASSET'S WEEK

Republicans recounting

October 1 is the deadline for the seven towns in the Norfolk and Plymouth senate district to complete the recount in the Republican primary but as of Wednesday the plans were up in the air.

What is certain is: there will be a recount of the 16,755 Republican ballots. Christy Mihos of Cohasset, who lost the race by three votes to Robert Hedlund of Weymouth, called for the recount last Friday just before the deadline.

Osgood open house Oct. 10

The Joseph Osgood School open house has been changed from Oct. 3 to Oct. 10.

The doors open at 7:15 p.m. At 7:30 p.m. kindergarten and Grade 1 teachers will make a presentation, Grade 2 and 3 presentations follow at 8 p.m.

Refreshments will be served.

The State Historic Preservation Office is conducting its annual historic preservation fund grant application for the National Park Service and is seeking comments in formulating program priorities.

The following are MHC's proposed activities: administration of the National Register program in Massachusetts; surveying for properties significant in history, archaeology and architecture; reviewing federal projects for their effect on cultural resources; solicing and selecting survey and planning grants; monitoring expenditures of grant-in-aid for surveying and planning; maintaining the certified local government program and providing public informaion, education and assistance in preservation matters.

The comment period is open until Oct. 10, and written comments may be submitted to executive director, State Historic Preservation Officer, Massachusetts Historical Commission, 80 Boylston St., Boston 02116.

Two semifinalists selected

Michael Cisneros and Caleb Slotnick, seniors at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School, have been selected as Semifinalists in the 1991 Merit Scholarship Competition.

These academically talented high school seniors represent about half of one percent of each state's graduating class. Semifinalists have an opportunity to continue in the competition for some 6,000 Merit Scholarships, worth approximately $25 million, to be awarded next spring. In addition, by announcing their names, National Merit Scholarship Corporation (NMSC) hopes to broaden the educational opportunities of these students and to increase public interest in academic excellence.

More than one million students in over 19,000 U.S. high schools entered the 1991 Merit Program as juniors by taking the 1989 Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test/National Merit Scholarship Qualifying Test (PSAT/NMSQT), which served as an initial screen of the large volume of entrants. Those designated Semifinalists in each state are the top scorers who must now advance to the Finalist level of the competition in order to be considered for Merit Scholarships. To qualify as a Finalist, a Semifinalist must have an outstanding academic record, must be endorsed and recommended by the school principal, must confirm PSAT/NMSQT performance on the SAT, and must complete a detailed scholarship application that includes a self-description and information about scholastic accomplishments, school and community activities, and educational plans and goals.

Two students commended

Principal, Mary Ellen Gallagher of Cohasset Jr./Sr. High School, announced today that Melissa Christoffel and Tara P. Volungis have been named Commended Students in the National Merit Scholarship Program. A Letter of Commendation from the school and National Merit Scholarship Corporation, which conducts the program, will be presented to these outstanding seniors.

About 35,000 Commended Students nationwide are being honored for their outstanding performance on the 1989 PSAT/NMSQT, which places them in the top five percent of more than one million students who entered the 1991 Merit Program by taking the qualifying test.

Coastsweep is Saturday

Those who enjoyed the shore over the summer now have an opportunity to protect this environmental treasure and make it safer for wildlife and ourselves.

Saturday, Sept. 29, is Cohasset's beach cleanup from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Volunteers will be supplied with bags, gloves, data cards and pencils in order to participate in Coastal Zone Management's Coastsweep '90. Information gathered will become part of a national marine debris database in Washington, DC. During last year's effort, volunteers reported finding sixty-five animals that had ingested or were entangled in coastal debris.

To volunteer, call Sharon Becker, 383-1971, or check-in on Saturday at either Sandy or Rocky Beach.

Library book sale

The Friends of the Cohasset Library will hold a book sale at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library on South Main St. on Thursday and Friday, September 28 and 29. Hours of the sale are 9 to 5 each day. Books will be given away free in unlimited quantities on Sunday, September 30, from 2 to 5 p.m.

Thousands of books for adults and children have been donated to the Friends of the Library book sale, including fiction, mysteries, and nonfiction books on many subjects.

Proceeds of the book sale will be used entirely to support library services.

Call the Library, 383-1348, for more information.

thony Cares.

"I'm no longer a superstar," Sanderson said. "In working with young people there are greater rewards."

He talked about our society as too permissive.

He said people believe they have the right to the pursuit of happiness but that what they really should be pursuing is peace of mind.

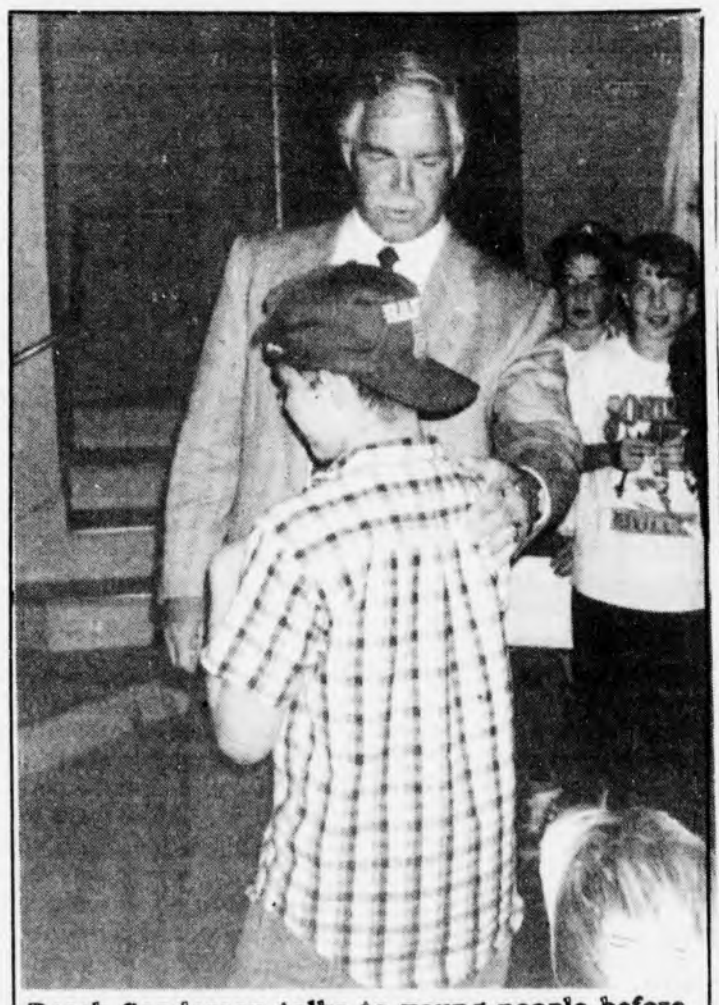
He went on at length about the alcohol commercials aimed at the young. By the time a child born today turns 18, the child will have seen 200,000 alcohol commercials, Sanderson said.

He talked about how he had his first drink at seven when one of his uncles slipped him a beer and told him he was old enough. Sanderson got a spanking from his father because of his condition.

"But I didn't feel it," he said.

His father threw the uncle out of the house that night and Sanderson stopped drinking until he was 12. At 12, he turned to beer after feeling rejected by a girl.

He described himself as ugly and a bully at 12 — he described himself as a boy who didn't know how to get along with people.



He talked about how the beer he drank took away his emotional pain. He talked about his need for instant gratification. He urged the young people in the audience to talk with their parents instead of trying to escape their feelings of pain.

Sanderson said they should dismantle the Army and give the money saved to teachers. He said schools need support and children need rules.

"The one right kids have is the right to safety," Sanderson said.

He said only one out of 37 alcoholics recover.

"The other 36 die an early death, go insane or go to jail," he said. "Nip it in the bud."

Suzanne Terry promotes library services

By Jane O'Brien
Special to the Mariner

"People don't miss the water until the well runs dry," said librarian Suzanne Terry when asked how the CLT passing would affect the Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset. "Services and hours would be cut, and we provide many services here at the library. As it is now, we are the only library open on Sunday, because of the last budget cuts."

"We have new ideas and the fun begins down here in the children's section," said Terry, a graduate of Simmons College. Pre-school story hours for children ages 3-1/2 to 5 years old are held in three sessions throughout the year. Preregistration is required and there is already a waiting list for the October 11 session. "Our story hour is usually the child's first reading experience out of the home, and we do our best to make it a pleasant adventure for both the child and the mother. The mothers get a chance to read or browse upstairs while the children enjoy the story hour."

A federal grant purchased a whole section for early childhood caretaking. Primary caregivers may borrow tapes, books and toys to help children with creative expression and play activities. The Parent School Organization, PTO, donated a family resource section. Here you'll find books on child development, discipline and parenting. All free to borrow.

Jimmy Buffet has a tape/book out called the "Jolly Mon," while Meryl Streep reads Beatrice Potter. The new Ninja Turtle tape/book caught one young readers' attention at the check out desk. Little films for children, along with all the projection equipment may be borrowed at the downstairs section.

The library works closely with all the three schools in town – Osgood, Deer Hill and the high school. A "School Deposit Program" has been set up to cooperate with the whole language teaching bearing implemented in the school system. "We're trying to get the student to read, read, read."

When teachers have a class project they call the library and books are pulled from the library's collection and a reference table is set up for the whole class to use. Mr. Becker's science class is currently working on a project about trees. Sixth grade student Josephine Hurley came in with a small branch covered with green leaves. Terry and the student went to the reference table and chose the exact book to properly identify the tree type. "They are very serious about their projects," Terry said. "When the science fair comes around we set up a more varied reference table in order to help the student design and create their projects. The Deer Hill School librarian no longer has an assistant due to recent budget cuts. It will be difficult to give the help to students if there are more layoffs of staff and less hours to help them at the library." Terry went on to explain that a picture book in the '90s costs an average of $15, while the middle grade reference books cost much more. So far our budget has been able to afford us new books, but we are concerned about the replenishing of them if the CLT passes."

"Our students are very respectful of the library," said Terry. "They are taught how to use the library by the Deer Hill Librarian.

"The adults ask more questions on how to use the card catalog than the kids." Cohasset has just gone "on line" with the Old Colony Network, a computerized system set up between 23 libraries in the South Shore area. "The kids are very computer oriented but we want the adults to know the system is "user friendly." Susan Watrous, reference librarian, loves the new system. "We can get a book with inter library borrowing in a day or two with this new system. It's fast and accurate. All our books will be bar coded like the super markets. The new library cards will be plastic and look like credit cards. No more date stamping."

The Friends of the Library offer a museum pass to the patrons of the library. It may be reserved in advance and can save a family of four a lot of money at the museums. Showing until the first week in October at the library is an inter-state art show of varied "Fish Creations."

The book sale will be held the weekend of September 28 and 29.

"Librarians are expected to know all the answers or where to find them. We guide our patrons from the pre-schoolers to a businessman looking for a highly technical research project. The Pratt Library may be an old building but it is filled with life and new ideas." Terry said, "We hope there will be no more reductions in the staff or with the hours in which we have to serve the community."

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF DENTAL IMPLANTS?

There are many benefits, both physical and emotional. Dental implants eliminate the pain and discomfort of dentures, greatly increase chewing ability, therefore improving digestion, and allow for more normal participation in activities such as swimming or jogging. Emotionally, the relief from embarrassment and worry caused by dentures can restore a healthier, more positive self-image. For more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617- 826-8395.

Chiropractic for Health.

TAKING IT SITTING DOWN

Mostly everyone who works in an office environment subjects themselves to the awkward position known as sitting. When one takes into account the fact that people who sit for lengthy periods suffer from weak lower back (lumbar) muscles, it is no wonder that primitive people opted for the more natural squatting position. Sitting can set off a chain reaction that bodes poorly for posture. For it is the muscles of the lower back, along with the stomach muscles, that are responsible for holding the pelvis in its proper position. If these muscles are allowed to grow weak, the pelvis tilts forward. This causes the lower back to arch and the stomach to protrude. A body with this shape and posture invites ill health. A chiropractic program for improved posture, stronger muscles and added vitality may be in order.

Whatever your work or play style chiropractic can help address current problems as well as serve to prevent unwanted situations from developing. Call DR. DEBRA M. Computer wizard scores national success

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Oronde Allie, Cohasset high school junior and future engineer, is just back from Washington, D.C., this week where he took part in a national contest for computer wizards.

He and the other members of the team sent by the Metrowest' Chapter of the Black Data Processing Association of Digital Employees came in third in the question and answer portion of the computer contest. The second portion was a timed programming event and his group's scores weren't released.

While the team didn't win the national, they did gain some valuable experience.

Allie said they want to try again next year.

"It was terrific," he said when reached at Cohasset High School this week.

Allie has been writing his own programs for some time now. His own personal computer is an Amiga, made by Commodore.

Ask him about it and he'll show you the sort of 3-D graphics that the computer can generate.

He wants an indepth programming manual for the electronic tool.

"I have a friend who does amazing things on his," Allie said. "You can overlay graphics on a video. You can synchronize the music. My computer helps me make videos."

He uses videos to show part of himself. The last video he produced centered around a race.

"I never lost a race before. But the other guy was the winner. It was about what was on his mind, what he was thinking about during the race."

Videos and computer programming are only a few of this young man's interests.

As a member of Mass PEP, he's been studying

science for six years at Wentworth and Bentley colleges. Last year he taught a course for the program and he hopes to teach again this winter.

After finishing up his regular daily work at the high school, Allie heads back to Boston where he lives. He takes evening courses at Harvard Extension School where he can learn calculus. He couldn't move into calculus at Cohasset high due to school requirements on prerequisites.

He works as a cashier at Star Market.

In his spare time, he's writing a book with a friend. The book is a science fiction piece about an alternative universe.

The story line is filled with moral advice and super-heroes. There is chaos and apocalypse. The most important part is that Allie knows the resolution.

His novel's ending is the logical conclusion — but it is sure to surprise people who think along ordinary lines.

Allie is someone who knows where he's going and how to get there.

He already knows he wants to go to M.I.T. or North Carolina A.&T. After that he plans to be an electrical engineer and computer scientist.

Elections are hectic for town clerk

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Life in the town clerk's office is hectic these days. It promises to get even more hectic in the next six weeks as the staff grapples with the primary election recount, deals with the special town meeting set for Oct. 22 and gears up for the Nov. 6 election.

The recount for the Republican state senate candidate could be a logistical nightmare.

"It is supposed to be complete by Oct. 1, but we haven't gotten the go-ahead yet," Town Clerk Frances Marks said Monday.

The recount process involves a lot of planning and a lot of paper work.

According to Marks, the registrars and the town clerk sit as judges over the recount. There also will be six tables with two people at each table hand tally the ballots in blocks of 50 ballots.

One person at each table reads off the ballot while the other person records the results. The candidates or their representatives can oversee the process and challenge any ballot they wish.

If a ballot is challenged, the counting stops and the ballot is presented to the judges. Together with attorneys for the candidates and town counsel they try to resolve the matter. If they fail, the ballot is put in an envelope and sent to the state.

Before the recount ends, 1,417 ballots will have been poured over. Marks would like to say that she doesn't expect any problems with the Cohasset ballots. Although there were no torn or defaced ballots election night,with only three votes separating the candidates every ballot is critical.

She expects the lights will be burning late and the coffee pot will do double time.

It won't be Marks' first recount experience. She became town clerk in 1984, the year Doris Golden and Mary Jane McArthur tied for selectman.

Marks describes that recount as long and tedious. In the end, the election dispute went to court for resolution.

"We had to have a new election," she recollected.

Marks described the primary election as basically uneventful — until the news reports the following morning.

Despite an incredibly high turnout of voters, the voting machines process everything quickly. The hand tally went equally quickly because there were only a handful of write-in votes. Marks estimates it was less than 10 write-ins.

"It was the least worrisome thing on our ballot," she said.

Marks wasn't terribly surprised by the turnout. She said a high request for absentee ballots generally means a big election day turnout. Almost 100 people asked for absentee ballots.

Primary day found the polls jam-packed. While 1988's primary only saw 300 or so voters go through the booths, 2,822 people lined up on Sept. 18. Marks thinks November will also be big.

Cohasset finished counting the ballots and locked the doors by 10:30 p.m.

One of the most time-consuming things that can happen during an election is when a person appears to vote who has been deleted from the voters' list. By state law, if they have been registered in the town within the past three years and say they have not voted in any other town, they have the right to vote.

But the town clerk's office must verify that the would-be voters have been registered within the past three years, and that takes time.

Marks said the problem generally crops up when parents remove college students from the annual census form sent out each January. Although the town sends a form in June to each voter slated to be removed from the voters' list, few bother to respond. Of 200 forms sent this year, maybe five responded, Marks said.

Although many deleted voters show up during state or presidential elections, primaries tend to be slower.

"This time was not as bad," Marks said. "Maybe there were 20 or so."

Getting ready for the next election also takes time.

The board of registrars of voters need to be in session three times between now and Nov. 6, plus a registration session for the special town meeting. When registration is completed, the voter lists must be prepared and posted.

Then the ballots and voting literature start pouring into the office.

One week before the election the voting machines must be testing out. A sample of 50 ballots is tallied by hand and then fed through the machines for each precinct.

Town Clerk Frances Marks

The town also needs a cadre of election workers. Marks said Cohasset was fortunate because most of the workers have been doing it for a good many years. The few newcomers get a quick training.

"It probably isn't everybody's cup of tea," she said. Those who do it seem to be hooked on the job.

If you haven't registered to vote yet or you want to change your party affiliation, the board of registrars of voters will be in session on the following days:

For the state election:

Saturday, Sept. 29	9 a.m. to 5 p.m.
Tuesday, Oct. 2	7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m.
Tuesday, Oct. 9	8:30 a.m. to 10 p.m.

Oct. 9 is the last day to register for the state election.

For the special town meeting:

Friday, Oct. 12	8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m.

For more information about registering to vote, call the town clerk's office at 383-2210.

Michael Sharpe, local producer, hopes to move a black rap group onto the charts.

Behind the scene

on WILD in less than an hour.

One of the WILD deejays told Sharpe, "I've heard a lot of Boston artists, but none got my attention like they did."

Recently BET — or Black Entertainment Television — confirmed that the video for "Peace of Mind" will appear on their program, "Rap City." The group also will appear on Channel 4's "Rap Around" and Channel 7's "Ready To Go."

Whether Top Choice Clique makes it all the way to the top or not, Sharpe and his Cohasset-based Mass Bay Music is here to stay.

In addition to managing the rap group, Sharpe has a thriving business as a deejay for high school and college dances, weddings and clubs.

This weekend he presides over a wedding and a dance at Boston College High School.

"I used to book bands, but the cost involved got to be too high," he said. The t.v. generation seems to prefer deejays any way.

"They play the originals, the music is non-stop and the price is much lower," Sharpe explained.

According to Sharpe, a live band for a wedding carries a price tag of $1,500 to $2,000 compared with $300 to $400 for a deejay.

Sharpe has been at the business for 12 years. He said the fact that his musical tastes are so eclectic helps. It's not unusual for him to be listening to George Benson early in the evening and then move on to the hard core, heavy metal group L.A. Guns.

Sharpe loves it all: street rap, jazz, metal . . .

"Boston is the best place for music," he said.

Top Choice Clique's records are currently available at Skippy White's, Mattapan Music, Spin City and Nubian Nation. Sharpe expects Tower Records and Strawberries will carry them soon.

AROUND TOWN

❑ Barbara and Edward Dillon are the proud grandparents of their first grandchild, Ryan Edward Dillon, born on July 23. Ryan's parents are Doug and Lee Dillon of Boxford. Enjoy Ryan everyone, we sure have never had more fun at our house since the arrival of Kelsie! It's grand!

❑ Speaking of birthdays, the next time you see our favorite dentist, Barry Tufts, be sure to wish him a belated happy day! His birthday was on the 21st, and he even got to wear a button telling all that he "was the boss," thanks to the nifty card given him by his youngsters. Here's to many more, Barry!

❑ October 1st marks a big year for Leo Fiori and Leo's Exxon. That is the date that will mark their being open for 25 years. That really is a great record in this business world! Not only that, Leo Jr. has been there for the same amount of time. He used to go to school, work at Hassan's (which was located next door) then go to Leo's Exxon after that. Be sure to congratulate them when you are in the station, and take the opportunity to thank them for all that they have done for our town. Any time that anything is needed they are there!

❑ A lot of people have been inquiring as to when Burt Pratt goes to the hospital for his knee surgery, so here is the agenda to date. Burt will enter Mass General on September 25, and have the fist knee operation on Sept. 26. The second knee will be operated on a week later. His rehabilitation will be approximately six to eight weeks. We sure wish you a speedy recovery, Burt.

❑ Congratulations go to Michael and Christine D. Murphy of 38 Cedar Acres Lane, who had a baby boy on Aug. 31. What a wonderful time of year to have a baby, you can bet we'll see a baby carriage around town now!

❑ Yeah Rocco!! In last week's Annual Jimmy Fund Tournament, Rocco Laugelle won the closest to the pin trophy! You had better believe that he is proud of that!

❑ Cohasset artist Claffy Williams has been selected for membership in the Slide Registry, based in Columbus, Maryland. Williams is an award-winning painter who has 15 one woman shows to her credit and who has exhibited extensively in Boston and New York. Her work is in both corporate and private collections throughout the United States. She is on the Board of Advisors of the South Shore Art Center, and she also teaches at the Center. The Registry is a comprehensive resource center of art for architects, designers, collectors, gallery owners and publishers.

❑ Kelsie received a "Feliz Cumpleanos" greeting card from her cousin, Holly Pompeo last week. As most know Holly is enjoying a semester in Spain, and she is very happy there. If only she could bring Bowdoin to Spain she would really be in her glory!

Donald Bates, presidents of Cohasset Savings Bank congratulates Peter Cook of Marshfield, who was recently elected as one of the bank's directors.

❑ Speaking of Bowdoin, congratulations go to Dave Shultz and Todd Fitzpatrick, both of whom made the varsity soccer team this year. Watch for their "ink," sure to come, they are great soccer players. Just ask anyone who was lucky enough to watch them in their years at CHS!

❑ We want to wish Michael Mahoney well as he begins his college life at Harvard! As you know, Mike was in the service for many years and is now starting his college career. We all know that you will do a super job Mike, good luck to you. Everyone sure is proud of you!

❑ Nora Leary was spotted "around town" recently, and she looks great. Nora lives in California now, and really seems to like it. She is looking forward to seeing Lynn Pompeo and Annie O'Leary out there, they are planning a cross-country trip in the near future.

❑ The next time you are in Cohasset Plaza, be sure to visit the new King's Jewelry store, they all love their new location, and the store is really beautiful. They are a terrific family. Be sure to stop in and take a peak.

❑ Lastly, don't forget that the yard sale to benefit the Cohasset Community Center is going to be held on the Common this Saturday from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. If it rains it will be inside the Community Center.

❑ That's the news from here, please call me (eves) with your latest happening.

Resolution to dangerous intersection inches near

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset is inching closer to correcting the treacherous intersection of King and Beechwood Streets. Following a public hearing held Sept. 24, selectmen expressed a belief that one more engineering drawing incorporating some citizen suggestions would turn the trick.

The intersection has seen more than its share of accidents and near accidents caused by speeding and impaired drivers. Many cars hurtling down King Street are using it as a shortcut from Route 3A, residents contend.

"These are people who are thinking 3A speed limits while driving on King Street," William Ketchum of Beechwood Street said.

Norfolk County Engineer Al Downs provided a proposed final plan for the intersection. Key features include maintenance of the curved intersection that permits traffic from King Street to ease its way onto Beechwood Street, elimination of the proposed stacking lane and a traffic island to control the lines of traffic.

King Street will be considerably narrowed to permit only one lane of traffic in each direction. Residents hope this will force cars to slow down. It will also make it easier for pedestrians, primarily children, to cross the street safely.

The present crosswalk is 80 feet wide because it crosses the intersection at an oblique angle. It also crosses the street before the stop sign.

Residents complained about the lack of speed limit signs on the winding country roads. Adding the signs and vigorous police enforcement would go far in correcting the speeding problem, they suggested.

Recently a child was struck on King Street by a car travelling in excess of 40 miles per hour on the 30 mile per hour street.

Residents didn't agree with the engineer's recommendations about removal of trees, bushes and fences to improve visibility.

Ingber said one of the trees Downs wanted to remove at 247 King Street provided a visual and physical buffer to traffic for the house, but was so far back from the intersection that it did not interfere with visibility.

He defended the open rail fence at 254 Beechwood as well. Fence-owner Dan Walsh said he put the fence up to discourage motorists from using his front lawn as a shortcut.

Ingber conceded that Downs had a point concerning some of the other trees on the "hit" list.

"I do have to agree, in candor, that those trees do impair visibility to some extent," Ingber said. But he asked selectmen to save the trees as a way of preserving the greenery that is the essence of Cohasset.

Ingber and fellow residents also said that removing the trees and fences might be counterproductive. If motorist had a clear view and a straightaway, they might be more inclined to speed, they said.

Selectmen agreed that saving the trees was a priority.

"We want to do what is right," Chairman Rocco Laugelle said, "but we would like to do this without hurting the vegetation."

Selectman Diana Kornet agreed.

"I see no need for the trees or the fence to be removed," she told the residents.

Ingber offered to meet with Downs to see if a final plan that was acceptable to all parties could be drafted.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon reminded everyone that money would be an obstacle. Only $3,000 was authorized at town meeting for the project, Doyon said, "which is obviously not a lot of money." Since the special town warrant is closed, the town must wait for the annual town meeting if additional funds must be appropriated.

Ketchum also raised the possibility of closing King Street at Route 3A to incoming traffic. He stressed that he was not suggesting that the street be completely blocked off to all traffic or made one-way.

According to Selectman Jane Goedecke, that decision would have to be made by town meeting. Goedecke warned Ketchum that a similar proposal had been defeated.

Melissa

We see her face everywhere.

Melissa Benoit, 13, 5 ft. 3 ins., 125 pounds, is missing. She has brown, shoulder-length hair, and she is a shy, timid girl, we're told.

Her bright eyes -- full of future dreams -- stare out at us from the doors of local restaurants, post offices and stores. She waves to us from a video on the 6 o'clock news.

And we are again reminded how vulnerable our children are.

Melissa Benoit was found dead on Wednesday.

Today, we still don't know what may have happened to Melissa. Did she run away? Is she being held captive or worse? We dare not think, while at the same time, we see our own children and we are quietly thankful that they are here, that they are with us.

We are again reminded to tell our children about strangers. We write our phone numbers at work -- mom's number, dad's number, a neighbor's number. Do you know the area code, we ask? Do you know which towns you have to dial '1' first to reach? We try not to frighten them, our children.

For we know as adults that childhood is too fleeting a time. That childhood is a time when kids should be able to be kids. They shouldn't have to worry. They shouldn't have to look over their shoulder. They shouldn't have to listen for a strange noise or rustle in the grass or in the trees when they walk home from a friend's house, the bus stop, or school.

We choose to live in a town like Cohasset because it is quiet and beautiful and it seems far away from problems. But then down the road in Kingston, something bad happens and we are abruptly shaken from our relaxed attitude.

Sure there were creeps in our day too. Our mothers warned us not to talk to strangers. But our mothers were home. And then we are reminded that our kids spend too much time alone.

We tell our kids when they are small about strangers. We hold their hands when we go shopping. We remember Adam Walsh and we keep them close beside us.

But suddenly our kids are 'middle-aged'; they're 13 or 14 years old, and it's been a while since we've warned them about strangers.

Run, we say. Scream, we say. There are bad people in the world. You shouldn't have to worry, we say. These things are rare. But be careful, we tell them.

And then when they go out the door we take a deep breath; we watch them go; and we say a silent prayer -- a prayer for Melissa -- a prayer that all children come home safe again.

Benoit's friends laud help

To the Editor:

The friends and family of Melissa Benoit wish to thank Ralph Poland of Coastal Copy in Pembroke; Doug Brown of Brown Printing in Pembroke; and Postal Instant Press of Norwell for the flyers they donated.

Also, a very special thank you to Mariner Newspapers for inserting the flyers.

Maybe they can't vote, but Malcom Stansell and Danny Mercurio know how to campaign. Danny's mother photographed the two boys playing by the duck pond in back of town hall during last week's primary.

Contractor critizes town officials

Letters

To the Editor:

The following correspondence between Prime Mechanical and the Cohasset Town Hall are what I feel to be a reflection of the mismanagement of our local tax dollars by town officials. It is no wonder the towns of Massachusetts don't have the money to provide essential services we once took for granted.

Sincerely,
Prime Mechanical Contracting, Inc.
Joseph Ardagna
General Manager

Mr. Joseph Ardagna, General Manager
Prime Mechanical Contracting, Inc.
Quincy, Mass.

Dear Mr. Ardagna:

Please be advised that the following bids were received for preventive and emergency maintenance of the Town Hall heating, ventilation, and air conditioning system:

Cardinal Air Conditioning, Inc.
Quincy, Mass.	$2,312.00
Harbor Mechanical Contractors, Inc.
Cohasset, Mass.	2,200.00
Prime Mechanical, Inc.	1,192.00

The bid was awarded to Harbor Mechanical Contractors, Inc., as the lowest bidder meeting the specifications.

Thank you for submitting a proposal.

Very truly yours,
Gregory J. Doyon,
Executive Secretary

Greg Doyon, Executive Secretary
Cohasset Town Hall

Dear Mr. Doyon:

In response to your awarding the preventive maintenance contract for the Town Hall to Harbor Mechanical Contractors, Inc. of Cohasset, MA as the lowest bidder meeting the specifications, I would like to dispute results of your finding.

Prime Mechanical Contracting clearly submitted the lowest bid for the work as it was specified. The fact that we did not adjust our price to include an additional heat pump should not have effected the eligibility of our quote. Our intention was to hold the line on our initial bid and to include the heat pump at no extra charge.

A simple ten cent phone call to our office could have saved the tax payers of Cohasset $1008 (reference your letter dated 9/13/90), the difference between the two bids. You would think that Prime Mechanical having been the servicing contractor for the past year without a single complaint would be afforded the common courtesy of a phone call.

During these trying times of state and local budget deficits I find your decision not to award this contract to Prime Mechanical fiscally irresponsible. I congratulate Harbor Mechanical of Cohasset on being awarded this lucrative contract at the expense of the local taxpayer.

Prime Mechanical Contracting, mc.
Quincy, MA	$1,192.00
Harbor Mechanical Contractors, Inc.
Cohasset, MA	2,200.00
Cardinal Air Conditioning, Inc.
Quincy, MA	2,312.00

These numbers do not add up in favor of Harbor Mechanical of Cohasset. Some one, Mr. Doyon, has missed the boat with regards to this bid.

Very truly yours,
Prime Mechanical Contracting, Inc.
Joseph Ardagna
General Manager

Daly thanks supporters

To the Editor:

I want to extend my sincere appreciation to everyone who worked so hard in support of my candidacy for the United States Senate.

We would have preferred victory, but feel our message was well received by all those who met us: Republicans, Independents and, yes' Democrats across the state.

Your loyalty and effort in our behalf will long be remembered. My sincere thanks to each of you. You haven't heard the last of Dan Daly, and I look forward to working with all of you soon.

Dan Daly

BULLETIN BOARD

A new year at art center

The beginning of the school year also marks the beginning of a new year at the South Shore Art Center. The annual all member Blue Ribbon Exhibition leads the exciting line-up of upcoming exhibits throughout the 1990-1991 season. SSAC members may submit one piece of artwork in any medium to be on display at the Art Center from October 18 through November 10. Ribbons will be awarded in the appropriate categories. Membership traditionally entitles members two opportunities during the year to exhibit their work: The Blue Ribbon Exhibition in the fall and the Members' Exhibition during Festival, a three day outdoor art exhibition in June. For the Blue Ribbon Exhibition, members may drop-off their work on Friday, oct. 12 from noon to 4 p.m. or on Saturday, Oct. 13 from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The public is cordially invited to the opening reception on Thursday, Oct. 18 from 5 to 7 p.m. and to attend the SSAC annual meeting at 7 p.m.

Artists who wish to apply for the special membership category of Gallery Artist may apply on Oct. 5, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Artists should submit five original works of art and a resume.

Photographers must submit 10 matted photographs and a resume. Additionally, artists may submit up to 20 slides.

A Gallery Artist Membership entitles an artist to exhibit a new piece of work each month in the Dillon Gallery. The South Shore Art Center's mission is to promote knowledge and interest in the visual arts on the South Shore. We accomplish that goal, in part by providing Gallery Artists exhibition, learning and networking opportunities throughout the year. For more information regarding any of the programs or exhibitions at the SSAC, please call during regular Gallery and Gift Shop Hours: Tuesday to Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. 383-9548 or stop in.

Channel 53 schedule

CABLE CHANNEL 53

Thursday, Sept. 27 — 5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads three newly published books, Julius, the Baby of the World, Nanny Goat and the Seven Little Kids and I Like to be Little.

Tuesday, Oct. 2 — 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: "The School Accreditation Process." Pamela Gray - Bennett Assoc. Director of the Commission on Public Secondary Schools of the N.E. Assoc. of Schools and Colleges, Inc., discusses how accreditation standards are set for different schools; who determines how these standards are being met, how standards are revised responding to a community's changing needs; how often schools are accredited, etc. This is a program for all who are involved in one way or another with our educational process.

Extra story hour added

An additional afternoon session has been added to the fall schedule of pre-school story hours at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. Sessions are offered on Thursday and Friday mornings at 10 a.m. for 3 1/4 - 5 year-olds, and an additional one on Friday afternoon at 1 p.m., for older pre-schoolers aged 4 - 5. Sessions begin on October 11, and registrations are currently being accepted at the library.

Parker addresses CCC

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce featured Jeff Parker, the general manager of Nantransit as the guest speaker at the Sept. 18 meeting which was held at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road.

Nantransit will operate a commuter boat to Boston starting sometime in mid-October. This will be a 149 passenger boat and will operate on a schedule of three morning runs and three evening runs. Nantasket Pier will be the base of operations for this new endeavor.

Parker outlined the birth of this addition to the options available to commuters.

The Chamber will offer our October meeting to the Cohasset School Committee and the superintendent of schools as an opportunity to update the Cohasset electorate as to the status of the Cohasset school system.

The meeting will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 17, at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road at 7 p.m.. Coffee and sweets will be served at 6:30 p.m.

Last year the School Committee and the superintendent appeared at our September meeting and responded to an array of questions which were proposed by the townspeople in reply to the Chamber's solicitation of questions in Mariner articles.

This year the panelists will make their presentation as to the ongoing problems which they face, their long range goals and the results of changes implemented to date.

Since the school budget is such a large part of the total town budget you are encouraged to join us so that you will be well informed and so that you may propose your questions to those in command.

An apple for the teacher

In their tradition of community service, the Stop & Shop and the Bradlees stores are generously running their campaign on Apples for the students.

Last year's participation from the entire community was wonderful. Cohasset was number two; second only to Fall River in the drive. We received 19 computers, 9 disc drives and $50,000 worth of software.

This year we'd like to make it another great year. All you have to do is save your blue register tapes from the Stop & Shop and the white register tape if shopping at Bradlees. Remember, it will be money you've already spent; now, you can make it work twice.

There are stores throughout Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island and in Poughkeepsie, New York.

Pat Baird (383-6997) with Elaine Smoot (383-1195) will be chairing what promises to be another successful drive. If you feel like volunteering, give them a call. The collection boxes will be appearing around town shortly.

The campaign this year will run from Sept. 30 through Dec. 29, 1990.

Studds & Bryan to debate

A political debate featuring U.S. Representative Gerry Studds and his Republican opponent Jon Bryan will take place at Barnes Auditorium in Hingham Town Hall on Thursday, Oct. 4 at 7:30 p.m.

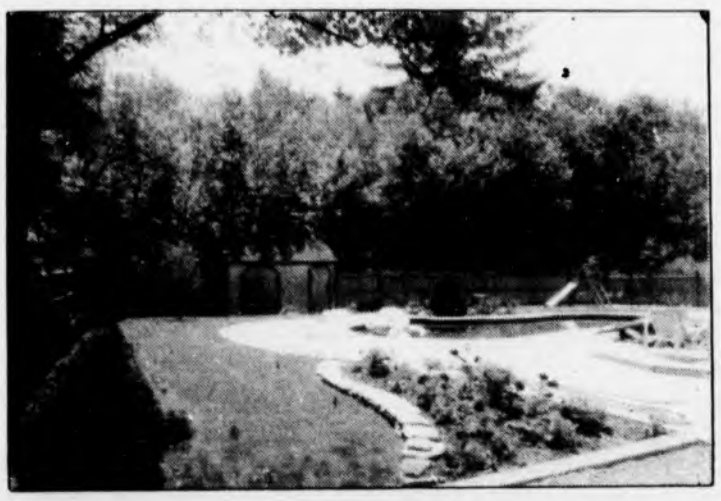
With Pat Facey, former vice-president of the LWV Massachusetts acting as moderator, the Studds/Bryan segment will start the evening. Audience members will have an opportunity to ask questions.

The second half of the program will highlight the state senatorial and representative races. Rep. Robert Ambler will face off against either Robert Hedlund or Christy Mihos, depending on the outcome of this week's recount. Just three votes separated the two Republican candidates in the primary.

Candidates for State Rep. include an uncontested Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray in the 3rd District and the Democrat Frank M. Hynes facing Republican Ronald Wheatley in the 4th District.

For more information, call 749-4061 or 545-3680.

Turnabout race scheduled



Project Turnabout, Inc. will be holding their second annual Road Race and Fun Run/Walk on Sunday, October 21, in Hingham, to raise funds to support its drug treatment program. The 5 mile Road Race and 2 mile Fun Run/Walk will start at the Hingham High School, 41 Pleasant Street, go into Wompatuck State Park and back to the high school.

The 5 mile Road Race will start at 11:30 a.m.; the entry fee is $7 if postmarked by October 15; otherwise the fee is $8. The 2 mile Fun Run/Walk will start at 10:30 a.m.; the entry fee is $5 if postmarked by October 16; or $6 if paid late.

Registration will start at 9:30 a.m. and runners may register for either event on the day of the race.

Chowder Day Races close out yacht club season

By JoAnne Chittick
Special to the Mariner

With a bright sky and a brisk wind, sailors of the Cohasset Yacht Club closed the season with the annual Chowder Day races on September 9. Junior sailors who won the day's races were Colin Pyfrom (Rookies), Sam Goedecke (crew - Eric Hanian, Sprites), Dave Nothnagle (Lasers), and Johanna Horn and Ali Kililea (420's). At the awards ceremony following the races, Commodore Robert Jordan announced the following cups and trophies that were won by junior sailors during the summer: Commodore's Cup - Sprite: Matt Larson, Rookie: Matt Verrochi; Vice Commodore's Cup - Sprite: Richard Chute; Rookie: Matt Verrochi, Junior Memorial Cup - Sprite: Richard Chute, Rookie: Matt Verrochi; Race Committee Cup - Sprite: Tobey Horn, Rookie: Matt Verrochi; Exchange Cup - Sprite: Matt Larson.

The Moustache Cup, for excellence in seamanship, was won by Sam Goedecke; the Alfred Elliot Memorial, for spirit and endeavor, was awarded to Tobey Horn.

Special awards were also given: Neatest Boat - Sprite: Ian Simons, Rookie: Erica Dean; Most Races Sailed - Sprite: Matt Larson, Rookie: Matt Verrochi; Most Sailing Outside of Class - Martha McLoughlin and James McLoughlin; Best Crew - Wiley Wakeman and Neely Wakeman; Most Improved Sailors - Megan McNamara and Colton Ralston; Most Enthusiastic Sailors - Ben Manning and Johanna Horn

There were 63 sailors in the Junior Activities Program this summer. Martha Evans was the Head Instructor; Senior Instructors were Juliana Chittick, Jonathan Ostrom and Colin Studds; Junior Instructors were John Murphy and Kate Welch. The following sailors were awarded flags for each level of achievement and training:

White Flag - Ashley Brister, Doug Cameron, Charlie Dean, Erica Dean, Eric Hanian, Lindy Holway, Andrew McAuliffe, Brett Leahy, Cara McKenney, Jamie Simons, Nathaniel Wadsworth, Neely Wakeman, Wiley Wakeman. Partial flags were achieved by Billy Good, Adam Leahy, Stefan Vanderweil, and Katy Brister.

Blue Flag - Torrey Androski, Jessie Hurley, Megan McNamara, Ian Simons. Partial flag, Chip Moore.

Captain's Flag - Chloe Chittick, Sam Goedecke, Liz Good, Matt Larson, Ben Manning, Ryan Staszko. Partial flags, Thomas Greco, Marisa Verrochi.

Admiral's Flag - Richard Chute, Cilla Goff, Tobey Horn.

Advanced sailors who participated in the 420 racing program received "420" T-shirts: Will Adams, Ben Chittick, Hillary Chute, Johanna Horn, Ali Kililea, Richard Knapp, Dave Nothnagle, Sarah Thompson, Tyler Studds, Bill Jordan and David Zadel.

Winners of the July Racing Series were:

Sprites: 1st - Matt Larson; 2nd - Cilla Goff; 3d - Ben Manning.

Winning the August Series were: Rookies: 1st - Matt Verrochi; 2nd - Wiley Wakeman; 3d - Maggie Goedecke.

Sprites: 1st - Richard Chute; 2nd - Ben Manning; 3d - Matt Larson.

After the awards ceremony, Colin Pyfrom, winner of the Rookie Bell trophy, rang the bell to summon sailors and observers to bowls of steaming chowder.

RECREATION NOTES

SSSC has indoor sports

The South Shore Sports Center in connection with the Cohasset Recreation Department invites 56 boys and girls ages 7-12 for two full days of high-spirited indoor sports.

Registrations for both, Columbus Day, Monday, Oct. 8 and Friday, Oct. 19 are now being accepted. The boys and girls will be broken down into seven teams of eight and will play in a round robin tournament including basketball, street hockey, and indoor soccer. The group will be transported by bus from the Joseph Osgood School at 8:30 a.m. and will return there at 5:30 p.m. Children should bring lunch.

The cost of the program will be $20 a day. If you sign up for both in advance there will be a $5 discount. Registration is needed by Friday, Oct. 5 for the Columbus Day program. Call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 to reserve a spot.

Furniture repair offered

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registration for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday mornings, 9 to 11 a.m., at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for the 10 hour program is $50 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture, that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class, other supplies will be provided. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class. Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for enrollment upon a space available basis, and the first session is scheduled to begin during mid-October.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for Beginner and Intermediate Dog Training Classes to be taught by Mrs. Laurie Cleveland. Classes will be held Wednesday evenings, at the GAR Hall, Scituate, starting Wednesday evening, Oct.3.

Beginner classes will be from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m., and the intermediate/advanced class will be from 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., both on Wednesday evenings. The fee for the eight week program will be $30. Checks, made payable to the Town of Cohasset, may be brought to the first class.

Participating dogs should be a minimum of three months of age.

To register, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

AEROBIC EXERCISE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering fall sessions of Low-Impact, Aerobic Exercise classes, taught by Margret Watson, on Tuesday and Thursday evenings, from 6:16 to 7:15 p.m., Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight week cycles, costing $40 for two weekly classes, for an eight week period, i.e.: 16 classes are $40. However, you may join at any time, at any class, and the fee will be prorated based upon the number of classes per week you would like to take, and the number of weeks left in the session. Checks should be made payable to: Town of Cohasset, and sessions continue on a year 'round basis. Classes are structured in order that all levels of proficiency may participate comfortably.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Bats. Goodness, I had forgotten about this remarkable, winged mammal until recently. I was lucky enough to know bats when I was three or four years old — before I knew fear. They would fly down from the attic at dusk when we would forget to close the attic entrance. I remember two things from that time: how beautifully they flew, and how loudly the babysitters would scream that the bats would nest in their hair. That was the era of the mile high beehive hairdo. I remember going to sleep thinking a beehive hairdo might be a great place for a nest if only the babysitter would stop screaming.

We have many misconceptions about bats. I have my own store of them to be sure, but I am leaning to overcome them as I learn how beneficial bats are. They do not nest in our hair, but live in caves or hollowed out trees. They also live in attics or belfries. The intent of the expression "You've got bats in your belfry" used negatively is another misconception. Bats should be high on our list of "must have around" as they eat to many insects. They also do not suck our blood. The Vampire bat of South America feeds on blood and is the only one out of 1,500 species.

The bats that frequent New England feed on insects. Each one eats thousands of them a night. They especially love mosquitoes. They are called the little brown bat (Myotis lucifugus) and the big brown bat (Eptesicus fiscus). The little brown bat is only about 2 1/2 inches long without measuring the tail, weighs 1/4 ounce, and lives in colonies. The big brown bat has a wingspread of approximately 12 inches and weighs about 3/4 ounce.

Bats are considered viably economic because they eat mosquitoes. With the spraying of malathion against mosquitoes barely a memory, this is a good time to consider buying or building a bat house. Building a house would be a great Boy or Girl Scout project, for example. If you have a mosquito problem at your home, you probably live near water. A pond, marsh, river, or boggy, swampy area would be a gourmet dining area for either brown bat species.

A bat house should be considered a permanent addition to your home. It should not be painted or stained in any way as this could either cause harm to the animal or could discourage the bats from ever entering. The house should have inner partitions to be used as crevices by the bat and should have a hole at the bottom so the bats can enter and exit. Birds will be discouraged from nesting in a bat house because of the positioning of the entrance. These houses are also maintenance free because the guano, bat droppings, fall through this hole.

A bat house's location is also important to its success. If you live near a permanent source of water such as a marsh, lake, or river, you will be most likely to attract bats. They should be hung 12 to 15 feet high above the ground, sheltered from the wind as well as unobstructed by vegetation or utility wires so that the bats have easy access to their home. In order to attract nursery colonies, the bat house needs maximum sun and warmth, especially in the early morning. The South East corner of the house is ideal for wind protection and for warmth. You can put tar paper or dark shingles on the roof to create more warmth. The best times to hang the house is during the fall, winter, or early spring. To test if your bat house is being used, simply lay down a piece of cloth or plastic sheet and see if any guano accumulate.

The other economically viable aspect of the bat is its guano or bat droppings. In the Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico, for example, there are approximately nine million bats that live in the caves. It takes about twenty minutes at dusk for them to exit in a massive plume as they go off to feed. The guano was harvested here as well as coastal islands of the Southern Pacific west of the Andes. The nitrogen is from 1 to 10 percent and the phosphorous could go as high as 25 percent. In the beginning of bagged fertilizers, this was the most prized among gardeners and some farmers. It is little harvested today; however, you could collect it and try it in your garden. An important consideration is to harvest it before a rain because guano's nutrients are easily leached out with water.

If you are interested in more information or purchasing a bat house you can call Norfolk County Conservation District at 668-0995.

Repeated violations lead to the exiling of Spalt's dog

After repeated violations of their explicit orders, selectmen ordered Andrew Spalt's footloose dog exiled from town.

Although Spalt was not at the selectman's meeting, a notice exiling the dog has been sent to Spalt, according to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon. Spalt has 10 days following receipt of the notice to appeal the order to Quincy District Court.

According to Animal Control Officer William Quigley, Jasmin has been running loose with another dog on several occasions. Quigley is trying to determine who owns the other dog.

Quigley also said that the fence Spalt promised to erect had not been put up.

Spalt and his dogs, Amos and Jasmin, first came to the attention of the selectmen on Aug. 20. The dogs had been running loose. The dogs were repeatedly crossing Route 3A and entering the Brewster Street yard of Marsha Ritcey and jumping on her two-year-old grandson.

At the first hearing, the selectmen ordered Spalt and his housemates to keep the dogs restrained at all times and to build a fence.

On Sept. 10, Spalt was back before the selectmen. He was given a second chance when he told the selectmen he had voluntarily sent Amos to live out of town and would build the fence immediately.

Old Colony debate takes to the airwaves

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

The battle over the restoration of the Old Colony railroad took to the airwaves last week as proponents and detractors squared-off on a televised debate.

Five panelists exchanged a volley of points and counterpoints during a two-hour edition of Continental Cablevision's "Pierson to Person" talk show.

Presenting views on the restoration were: Stephen Polechronis, project manager for the restoration of all three Old Colony lines; Mary Kerr, the Cohasset founder of Citizens Organized for Sensible Transportation (COST); Cohasset selectman and Greenbush supporter Martha Gjesteby; Hingham Historical Society Chairman Alexander Macmillan and Allan Ryan, a co-founder of the pro-rail Back on Track.

The show's audience was equally polarized; Greenbush proponents flanked one side, while the opposition, in "Forget the Rail, Ride the Boat" sweatshirts glared back from across the aisle.

When members of the Hingham Village Association, a group of Greenbush opponents, hung their trademark, flags emblazoned with a red "X" through a locomotive engine, hecklers from across the aisle grew testy.

After one member asked if anyone had a pin, a heckler sarcastically asked where he wanted to stick it. "Back on Track's" Allan Ryan protested that the flags were strategically placed behind him and host Wigmore Pierson. One of the flags was eventually removed.

Railroad opponents took the next serve, lambasting the show's producers for having an "unbalanced" (three on two) panel.

The show had the panelists to respond to inquiries from both the studio audience, and home callers.

THE IMPACT OF THE CLT PETITION

Pierson started the show by asking Polechronis about the impact of the Citizens for Limited Taxation tax and fee rollback that will be put to voters on November's ballot.

"Isn't this gnashing of teeth an academic exercise if CLT...is approved by voters?" Pierson asked.

Polechronis denied that the rollback would sound the rail's death knell.

"CLT will not kill Old Colony," he said.

"The state is going to have to re-evaluate its priorities," he said, admitting that it will have a "significant impact" on the MBTA's "ability to offer services."

Polechronis further championed the project's financial feasibility by defending the estimated cost per new rider.

He took issue with the $67,000 figure that is usually quoted and dropped it to a mere $15.

Polechronis explained the $67,000 cost per new rider estimate was determined by dividing the cost of the line by the number of riders.

He said there is more that goes into the equation.

"What that assumes is that you build the line, open it Thursday morning, let everybody drive in, and then not let anybody use it anymore," he said.

"This system is in place, the rails have a life of 50 years, and the coaches 25 years. When you annualize this out and add the maintenance allowance, which is how the federal government looks at every rail system across the country, it is in the neighborhood of $15 or $16.

GIVE THE PEOPLE WHAT THEY WANT

Both sides tried to claim support of the masses.

When asked if he would consider splitting the line, and treating Greenbush as a separate project, Polechronis said it was possible but not likely.

"It is conceivable (the lines would be separated), but there seems to be a strong sense that these communities need this service as much as anybody else," he said.

"The Greenbush communities are the toughest to get in and out of. We have a publicly owned right-of-way that is not being used. We have tax payer's dollars laying fallow. Commuter rail service is tried and true."

Macmillan said the railroad issue has "united the town of Hingham as little else has," but is not a "not in my backyard" issue.

He pointed to the failed bid for lieutenant governor by former senator Bill Golden, a Greenbush advocate, as proof of the will of the people.

"He carried Hingham," retorted Ryan.

Audience member Isabelle Leonard of Hingham, who lives along the right-of-way, said she has fond memories of the train.

"As one who lives along the track, I bought my house in the expectation that rail service would be returning," she said.

"I grew up as a small child, 500 feet from the Great Western Railroad. I fell asleep as a child hearing it hooting, and dreamed dreams of the places it was going."

Macmillan painted a less romantic picture of the rail as a grade crossing nightmare that will "wall-off" the town every time the train passes through.

FRIGHTENED OF FREIGHT

When asked by Pierson if it was possible freight would ever roll down the rail, Polechronis said it was unlikely, but he could not give any assurances.

"I cannot guarantee it," he said.

Sea 'N Cheese liquor transfer approved

Selectmen tentatively approved a request by Sea 'N Cheese to transfer their wine and malt beverages license from the present location to the new shop 50 yards away. Final approval hinges on resolving some questions about bankruptcy law.

Town Counsel Richard Henderson advised the conditional approval in order to resolve some legal issues involving the previous tenant, the bankrupt Cohasset Meat and Produce. He hopes to avoid getting embroiled in another lawsuit.

Neither the bankruptcy trustee nor his attorney appeared at the public hearing held Sept. 24.

Sea 'N Cheese is moving into a portion of the space previously occupied by Cohasset Meat and Produce. The former market also held a liquor license for the premises. Only one license can attach to the premises.

According to Town Counsel Richard Henderson, the trustee in the bankruptcy case contends the prior liquor license is an asset that must be protected. The attorney for the trustee has told Henderson she believes transferring the Sea 'N Cheese license would diminish the value of Cohasset Meat and Produce's asset.

It is a violation of federal bankruptcy law to interfere, diminish or otherwise reduce the value of assets held by a bankrupt business or individual. The attorney's position is that Sea 'N Cheese should buy Cohasset Meat and Produce's license.

However, the Cohasset Meat and Produce liquor license may no longer be a valid license since the business no longer has a lease at Cushing Plaza, Henderson said. According to a recent legal decision, a license holder must have a valid lease or own the property where the alcohol is sold.

The trustees did not renew the lease for the Cushing Plaza premises nor have they challenged the lease signed by Sea 'N Cheese for 4,000 square feet of the 10,000 occupied by the former tenant.

The attorney representing Cushing Plaza also reminded the selectmen that Cohasset had not reached its limit for the number of licenses the town could issue.

According to Attorney Christopher Pitt and Henderson, Cohasset Meat and Produce's license has no real value. Why, they asked, would someone buy Cohasset Meat and Produce's license when they could get one from the town for the filing fee alone?

Pitt suggested the attorney for the trustee was used to working in Boston where liquor licenses are valuable commodities.

Pitt and the attorney for Sea 'N Cheese will submit memoranda to Henderson buttressing their contention that the selectmen have legal authority to make the transfer. The final decision will be issued at the Oct. 1 selectmen's meeting.

Sea 'N Cheese hopes to move into their new quarters in two to three weeks.

"We need to expand and carry some more products," owner Richard Peters said. Then added, "We don't propose to have more wine and beer. We just want to bring our inventory there."

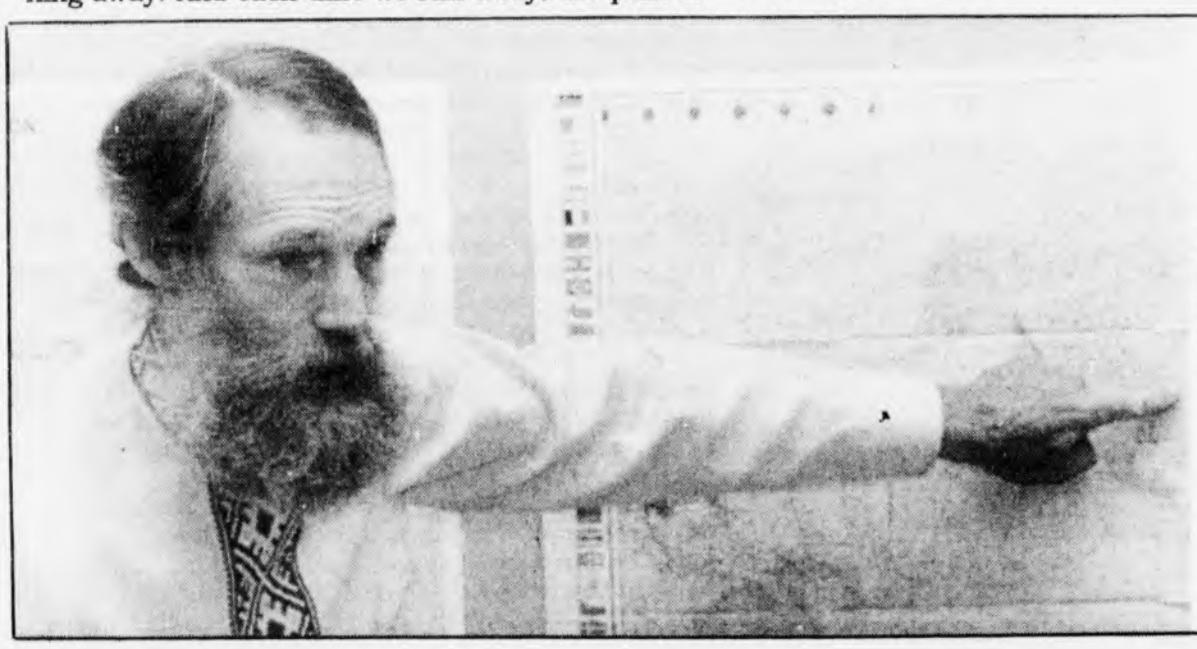
Living Life

By Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner



Each day I look forward to going to work! It seems to me that everyone looks forward to going to work! They speed along on the highway, cutting in and out, giving dirty looks and choice words to anyone who slows them down.. I often wonder what awaits them at the office that they are so anxious to get there. What awaits me and the wonderful people I work with is pain and suffering. " Pain and suffering? " you might ask. " Are you out of your mind? You mean you really look forward to ...really? Have you gone crazy! You just can't be normal."

No, I'm not crazy. I'm not a masochist. I consider myself to be pretty normal. Actually, I don't look forward to the pain and suffering, so much as I look forward to being with the dedicated professionals I work with. I work with hospice and the people that we work with are terminally ill. They and their families have all kinds of pain and suffering - physical, emotional, and spiritual. We in hospice know that 'Dying is no reason to stop living' and we are dedicated to helping them realize this and live life to its fulfillment. Arlene, our hospice coordinator is usually on the phone when I arrive using her calm, soothing, affirmative voice to quell the doubts and fears of a patient or family member from the night before. She does that for us too when we are overwhelmed with the pain and suffering out there facing us for the day, or when we call in to report. Trudy, our case manager also helps us with the bureaucratic pain of paperwork saying, " Remember, its only a task...". Joan, Kathy, Jeanette and Mary are amongst four of the most wonderful women nurses that I have ever met, and their sensitivity to the pain and suffering of our world is immeasurable. Ellen, our social worker works wonders in easing the pain of financial worries for our patients. Jane, our office manager, is our sergeant major, keeping everyone on their toes, with authority, but an obvious sense of humor. Helen, our clinical coordinator, will be giving birth to her second child in February. We are all excited about that. Helen is a born leader and her confident reassuring smile helps everyone to know that they are affirmed and understood. This is why I look forward to going to work each day. The people I work with are real and are dealing with real life problems. And each of us brings our own pain with us, but we learn to share our own pain and receive support from each other. We have our difficulties at times, but like any family that is open and honest with each other, things always work out.

Life becomes very real for us and our patients in hospice. We use drugs to deal with the physical pain; the emotional and spiritual is more difficult. There is no pill that will take it all away. There is no injection that acts as a palliative. The wounded hearts of the sufferer pierces the troubled hearts of family and friends. They learn to cry together - the pain of loss, the pain of saying goodbye, the pain of having to let go, the realization of powerlessness in the midst of life. They have to experience it all - they have to go through the pain somehow to get to acceptance.

Living life to the fullest has something to do with accepting the pain and suffering that is a part of every day living. That's what living life is all about. Pain and suffering appear to us like a fortressed wall that we'll never be able to scale. We come up to it, look around, and the task is so enormous that we keep running away. "The pain is too much. How can I ever deal with it," we say to ourselves. And we keep running away. And each time we run away, the pain of running away is worse that the original pain we had to face. And so it accumulates - more and more. And we keep running. Some of us become workaholics, shopaholics, foodaholics, alcoholics, drugaholics and what have you. Some people never face the wall of pain and suffering in their lives and keep cheating themselves from the joys and the pleasures of living life to the full. Whenever a crisis occurs, they are so fearful, they run away. They give in to their fears. An acronym for FEAR is "FORGET EVERYTHING AND RUN." But there comes a time in living life that the running is over. We at hospice see that every day.

Each day that I live, I have to face life as it unfolds before me. Sometimes, I find it very difficult, almost unbearable. But I have learned that if I want the happiness that I seek in life, I have to put one foot in front of the other and walk through whatever pain faces me that day. For too many years I ran away, not wanting to face the chores of living life. The alternative was total neurosis. And "neurosis," Carl Jung teaches, "is a substitute for legitimate suffering." All teen-agers are neurotic - that is a given - that is where they should be. But we adults? Our children will be able to deal with their neurosis, when we have learned to deal with ours. Living life is tough, but so worthwhile!

Norfolk Division
Docket No. 90P2185E1
Estate of
LOUIS G. WATSON
late of
COHASSET
In the County of
NORFOLK
NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that the last will and codicil of said decedent be proved and allowed and that HELEN M. WATSON of COHASSET in the County of NORFOLK be appointed executrix named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on October 10, 1990.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the fourth day of September, one thousand nine hundred and ninety.

Wedding

Karen Murphy weds A. Falcone

After a wedding trip to London and Greece, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew James Falcone are living in Indianapolis, Indiana.

Mrs. Falcone, the former Karen Margaret Murphy, is the daughter of John Murphy of Scituate and Margaret Murphy of Cohasset.

Mr. Falcone is the son of Bernard and Susan Falcone of Hampton, N.H.

The couple married June 16 in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset, at a ceremony officiated by the Rev. Keohane.

A reception followed at the Milton Hoosic Club.

The bride was given in marriage by her father. Katie Murphy of Cohasset, sister of the bride, was maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were: Lauren Tobin of Germany, another sister; Susan Murphy of Hartford, Ct., also sister of the bride; Maura Chapey of Hoboken, N.J. and Anne Weber of Watertown.

Peter Falcone of Hampton, N.H., was best man at his brother's wedding.

Ushers were: Chris Morrissey of Rockland; David Tobin of Germany, brother-in-law of the bride; Sean Corridon of Norwalk, Ct., and Ted McNamara of Waltham.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Providence College. She is employed at Indiana Business College.

Mr. Falcone is a graduate of St. Thomas Aquinas High School and Providence College. He is employed at Gould-Shawmut Inc. in Indiana.

CLT figures show $234,621 loss

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

If the initiative petition sponsored by Citizens for Limited Taxation passes in November, Cohasset could lose as much as $234,621 in state aid.

When added to the $107,221 the state has already cut, the total loss in state aid would be $341,842.

These estimates are found in a report recently released by the Division of Local services of the Massachusetts Department of Revenue on the impact of the tax and fee rollback to local municipalities.

According to the report, the rollback's impact to local finance is not as clear as the effect on state spending.

"The petition's only specific reference to local revenues is to include state laws setting local taxes, among those subject to the rollback, to August 2, 1989," the report reads. "Nonetheless, the CLT petition has significant implications for local government in Massachusetts because of the high degree to which cities, towns and local governments rely on state aid."

The report said that in FY90 communities on average received 27.4 percent of their budgets in Cherry Sheet aid.

Because local aid is a significant portion of the state's budget, it would probably undergo drastic cuts unless it is determined by the legislature to be a "fixed cost" exempt from cuts.

The department estimates a cut of $434.8 million in FY91 aid to cities and towns if the CLT petition passes, more than a 21 percent cut in discretionary aid.

The CLT cut is over three times greater than the initial $114.8 million dollar reduction in FY91 discretionary Cherry Sheet Aid from FY90 levels.

Coastsweep succeeded in gathering trash from the beaches last Saturday. Above Sharon Becker, center, Bob Gramarossa and Diane McMahon work at Sandy Beach.

The bag says Cohasset cares but the number of volunteers was low for Coastsweep.

Hedlund opposes Ambler

Republican candidate for state senate Christy Mihos officially threw in the towel Monday, after this weekend's recount gave rival Robert Hedlund of Weymouth an even greater lead.

Hedlund, who lives in Weymouth, is now the official Republican nominee.

Mihos called for the recount after losing the Sept. 18 primary by three votes.

He had indicated he might challenge the results of the recount in court, contesting 125 ballots, most from the town of Weymouth, where mechanical errors failed to completely punch out many ballots and caused them to be recorded as blanks.

In his formal withdrawal, Mihos maintained he had a basis to contest the ballots, but a challenge would weaken his party's chances of defeating Democratic candidate Robert Ambler in the general election.

"After long, thoughtful and considerate analysis, seeking advice from friends and supporters I have decided to accept the results of the recount and will not be contesting the election in court even though it is my right to do so," he said.

"I am informed the chances of ultimately prevailing in court are good, due to the nature of the closeness of the vote and the 125 disputed ballots; I chose not to embroil our towns, the Republican party or our district with the burden or the expense of defending the litigation.

"I believe I could win the fight in court yet lose the war to the Democratic challenger due to the time litigating and not campaigning effectively. Our district needs representation most, not litigation.

"It is with deep regret, yet with a clear conscience that I tried and took the necessary steps to ensure that the election was representative of the voters. Now it is the time to put my personal feelings and beliefs and hopes for representing our district behind to the greater good of a Republican victory in November."

The recount gave Hedlund a 39-vote lead over Mihos.

Mihos would have had to obtain a temporary restraining order and notify the Secretary of State's office by Tuesday morning in order to issue a temporary restraining order on the printing of the ballots.

A hearing would have been scheduled for either later this week or early next week.

Mihos said the protest could have kept the state senate race off the November ballot, and forced a

Safe Homes means supervision

Safe Homes Are Coming to Cohasset! In several areas of our town, and in the media I have seen this blurb recently. I trust that you, our readers, have also, and that it has whetted your appetite for more. SAFE HOME pledges are being mailed this week to all Cohasset parents with children in grades 6 through 12. We urge you all to read them thoroughly, and cooperate whole-heartedly.

Coincidently, a World Summit for Children is taking place this week at the United Nations in New York. The Associated Press tell us that more than 70 presidents, kings and prime ministers have assembled to plan a concerted campaign to fight the scourges of childhood. "This summit," to quote Yves Fortier of Canada in the Boston Globe, and one of the organizers of the summit, "is going to launch a consciousness by the public, by the international community, that it is time to put children at the top of their political agenda, both domestic and international." The effects of the summit will not be known immediately, like on Monday morning, but it "sends a message to the world. It serves as a catalyst to mobilize public opinion." Another goal of the summit, the Globe reports, is to get more signatures on an international agreement guaranteeing basic human rights for children, called the Convention on the Rights of the Child.

Here in Cohasset this week, we will be having our own summit and convention, so to speak, on the Rights of the Child. The SAFE HOMES PROGRAM, organized and distributed by the Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, sends a message to our Community: WE WANT OUR CHILDREN TO BE SAFE FROM DRUGS, SAFE FROM ALCOHOL, SAFE FOR TEENAGE PARTIES. We on the Drug and Alcohol Committee merely serve as a catalyst to mobilize public opinion in the Community. We need the help and cooperation of every citizen, every child in Co-

COHASSET'S WEEK

Victualer license granted

Selectmen Monday night granted a common victualer license to the manager of a new Dunkin' Donuts shop.

John Bellas, who will manage the shop at Cohasset Plaza on Route 3A, was unanimously granted the permit on the condition that he close one hour earlier than was proposed.

The doughnut shop, which is set to open Oct. 10 will be open for business from 5 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby requested the store close at 11 p.m. rather than the original plan to close at midnight, out of "deference to the neighborhood" citing the fact that a Super Stop & Shop in the plaza closes at 11 p.m.

Board recognizes union

Selectmen Monday night voted unanimously to recognize a union formed by library employees.

Seven members of the Paul Pratt Memorial library recently formed the union, named CLASS, which includes all employees excluding the chief trustees and head librarian.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon recommended the board recognize the union, telling members that if they didn't the state could split the library employees into as many as three separate unions, distinguishing between professional, clerical and custodian employees.

He also recommended the board petition the State Labor Relations Commission to hold an election for town employees so they can decide whether they want a union to represent them in collective bargaining.

Warrant article endorsed

A warrant article seeking $3,809 to fund an outreach worker for the council on aging gained the support of selectmen Monday night.

The board unanimously voted to endorse Article 8 at the Oct. 22 town meeting, which would give the council the money to keep an outreach worker for the second half of the fiscal year.

Council Chairman Gerard Keating said the town has a senior population of approximately 1,450; 200 more than the number of students enrolled in the school system.

Keating said very few seniors take advantage of the services offered to them, and the outreach worker is a vital link to informing the community of what is available to them.

He said the outreach worker is particularly effective in getting through to the frail elderly, many of whom have disenfranchised themselves from community life.

Keating said that the councils budget whittles down to a mere $5,000 for programs after other expenses are paid for, and a state aid freeze has left them even more strapped for funds than normal.

Selectman Jane Goedecke questioned what the council would do "if the money frozen by Governor Dukakis does not see a thaw situation occur."

Keating said he was uncertain what would happen.

What's open, closed on Columbus Day

Banks, schools and government offices will be closed next Monday, Oct. 8, when Columbus Day is observed.

According to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce:

- federal, state, county, and municipal offices are closed
- schools and libraries are closed
- manufacturing plants are closed
- banks are closed
- retail stores and supermarkets are open
- liquor stores, taverns and bars will be open
- stock markets will be open
- Post Offices are closed, and there will be no mail delivery.

Chiropractic for Health

UPRIGHT SUPPORTS

Many observers have glibly pointed to man's evolutionary conversion from a quadruped to a biped as the source of his back problems. However, any veterinarian can attest to the fact that even our four-footed friends are not immune to back troubles. Not only do dogs experience back pain, but they can lose the movement of their hind legs as a result. The cause of such problems is often disc prolapse ("slipped disc"). As for humans, our upright posture does indeed make us vulnerable to compressive and shearing forces. Yet, as delicate and balanced as the human spinal structure is, back problems are not inevitable. If the back is treated correctly and strengthened through exercise, there is a good chance that very few problems will arise. Neglected muscles create imbalance and invite trauma.

Our body is a wonderful and complex house. To enjoy living in it we must keep our "household" in good shape. DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, offer the chiropractic applications and guidelines that will help you achieve and maintain such goals. Call us today and let us help you put your "house" in order. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Weak muscles fail to hold the spine in proper position, thereby increasing the possibility of backache.

TREAT THE PROBLEM NOT THE PAIN

Pain is only the tip of the iceberg. Chiropractic concerns itself with the body's nervous system. Regardless of a person's age it is the nervous system that helps maintain health and integrity of body organs, muscles, bone structure and related tissue. All too often pain, fatigue, or sickness in any area of the body can be traced to the impaired nervous system that governs that body area.

Donation helps Fire Dept.

A local woman's generosity will allow the fire department to purchase a computer that will handle handle ambulance billing.

Selectmen Monday night unanimously approved Chief Daniel Brock's request to accept a $2,000 donation by Phyllis Leslie of Buttonwood Lane.

Brock said that Leslie wanted to do whatever she could to keep the ambulance in the fire department.

Chairman Rocco Laugelle told Brock that he did not think the computer was a necessity for the department and the money could be better spent. He did agree, however, that the town should follow Leslie's wishes and purchase a computer with the money.

Brock was reprimanded by selectmen in July for his failure to process ambulance billings in a timely manner. Brock blamed the late billings on his department's lack of a computer.

If the billing is transferred to an outside agency or another department, the computer would remain with the fire department.

Committee members set

Selectmen Monday night voted unanimously to approve three appointments recommended by board member Diana Kornet.

Richard Daniels and John Mulligan were appointed to the computer study committee; Elizabeth Bates was named to the common historic district commission.

The board also agreed to request the advisory committee for a transfer of $1,000 to cover retaining the services of a custodian to cover the absence of the regular custodian.

Dredging bid awarded

Selectmen have awarded the dredging engineer contract to Nucci Vine Associates, the low bidder for the project.

The $21,800 contract is just for engineering, attending meetings, and gathering permits; it does not include the actual dredging.

Executive secretary Greg Doyon said the proposal was of the same quality as the high bidder.

Donyon said the company would charge the town extra for meetings required for permitting, but he anticipates the process would only take two meetings and a few hours at most.

aid cut of...$794 million. It is likely the actual FY92 impact would be higher than this, since many communities would end FY 91 with revenue deficits resulting from the CLT cuts that would have to be raised in FY92."

New trash plan endorsed

Cohasset became one of the first three towns to endorse a regional trash-disposal program.

At Monday night's meeting of the board of selectmen, the project recommended by the 10-member South Shore Coalition's solid waste task force was unanimously approved.

The endorsement does not commit the town, it only states support for the plan.

Selectmen voted to endorse the work that has been done in the first phase of the project and to support the second phase, which is the completion of a model plan.

The proposal calls for the construction of a regional recycling facility to decrease the volume buried in local landfills.

The project will also promote solid waste composting and local recycling efforts.

Cohasset joins Hanover and Marshfield in supporting the plan.

The coalition member towns of Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Rockland, Scituate and Weymouth will deal with the plan at future meetings of their respective boards of selectmen.

What Michael Dukakis did to the state, Gerry Studds is doing to the nation

Gerry Studds claims he represents your interests.He's hoping you won't investigate his record and find out the facts. Just look at how he voted on these important issues compared with Jon Bryan's stand:

	Studds	Bryan
S&L SCANDAL (H.Res. 244) Vote to authorize an investigation of alleged wrongdoing by former House Banking Chairman St. Germain.	NO	YES
PAY RAISE (H.R. 3660) Vote to increase Congressional salaries and pensions by as much as 41%.	YES	NO
TAXES (H.Res. 106) Vote to increase taxes by $23 billion.	YES	NO
DRUGS (H.R. 5210) Amendment to allow the death penalty for individuals convicted of drug-related murders.	NO	YES
CRIME (H.Res. 341) Vote to continue the release of 850 criminals from jail who had been convicted of rape, attempted murder, and child molestation. (More than 100 of these criminals were arrested for similar crimes within one month of their release.)	YES	NO
CUT SPENDING: This summer Gerry Studds had 22 chances to reduce the federal deficit, and 22 times he voted against cutting spending.	NO	YES

It's time for a change!

Like Dukakis and the political "leadership" in Massachusetts, Studds and the Congressional bosses in Washington just don't get it. State and federal spending have gone way up in the last two decades, but our problems seem to get worse.

Jon Bryan — airline captain, college professor, successful businessman — is the solution. He'll make your concerns, his concerns.

What Michael Dukakis did to the state, Gerry Studds is doing to the nation

Gerry Studds claims he represents your interests.He's hoping you won't investigate his record and find out the facts. Just look at how he voted on these important issues compared with Jon Bryan's stand:

	Studds	Bryan
S&L SCANDAL (H.Res. 244) Vote to authorize an investigation of alleged wrongdoing by former House Banking Chairman St. Germain.	NO	YES
PAY RAISE (H.R. 3660) Vote to increase Congressional salaries and pensions by as much as 41%.	YES	NO
TAXES (H.Res. 106) Vote to increase taxes by $23 billion.	YES	NO
DRUGS (H.R. 5210) Amendment to allow the death penalty for individuals convicted of drug-related murders.	NO	YES
CRIME (H.Res. 341) Vote to continue the release of 850 criminals from jail who had been convicted of rape, attempted murder, and child molestation. (More than 100 of these criminals were arrested for similar crimes within one month of their release.)	YES	NO
CUT SPENDING: This summer Gerry Studds had 22 chances to reduce the federal deficit, and 22 times he voted against cutting spending.	NO	YES

It's time for a change!

Like Dukakis and the political "leadership" in Massachusetts, Studds and the Congressional bosses in Washington just don't get it. State and federal spending have gone way up in the last two decades, but our problems seem to get worse.

Jon Bryan — airline captain, college professor, successful businessman — is the solution. He'll make your concerns, his concerns.

Hedlund vs. Ambler

special election in December.

He estimated the cost of a special election in his hometown of Cohasset at $6,000. Weymouth Town Clerk Franklin Fryer said the cost for a December election in his town could cost as much as $10,000.

Mihos said it would not make sense to force financially strapped cities and towns to pay for a special election and it would only hurt his party.

The inspection of the ballots gave all three Republican candidates new votes, most coming from the town of Weymouth where computers misread many of the ballots and recorded them as blanks.

Weymouth's recount added 66 votes to Hedlund's total. Mihos picked up 25; third place finisher Donald Hussey of Hingham increased his total by 23.

Hingham's totals also increased following the recount.

Hedlund gained 17 votes, while runners-up Mihos and Hussey added 14 and 25 respectively.

Hingham had problems with the count on the night of the primary.

Mihos was originally declared the winner of the election by one vote. Later in the night Town Clerk Thomas Hall adjusted his count giving Hedlund a three-vote victory.

Most towns had only marginal changes in their results; Marshfield's primary results stayed the same.

Recount totals for all towns combined brought Hedlund's total up to 6,058 votes; 89 more than had been originally reported and 39 more than Mihos.

Mihos added 53 votes for a total of 6,019.

Hussey still placed third despite picking up 55 votes. His revised total was 4,873.

Upon winning the recount Hedlund praised Mihos for running a "clean, competitive race" and called for his support in the general election.

He called for the topsy-turvy primary to be put behind them.

"To bring about the real, substantive change that's needed we must have a unified Republican party," he said.

Hedlund, Hussey and Mihos met Tuesday night with the Hingham Republican Town Committee in an attempt to unify the party for the upcoming election.

Mihos has not yet formally endorsed Hedlund, saying only that he "received the only endorsement that counts."

Mihos filed for the district recount on Sept. 24 based on the flip-flopping results of the primary and the narrow margin of Hedlund's victory.

Robert Hedlund and Donald Hussey watched the recount go ahead last weekend.

Building permit fee waived for housing authority

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Selectmen have waived the $1,800 building permit fee for a home for the mentally impaired the Cohasset Housing Authority (CHA) is building on Elm Street.

Barbara Clain, the director of the housing authority asked the board to waive the fee for her non-profit organization.

Chairman Rocco Laugelle criticized the CHA for assuming the waiver would be granted.

He said the board has been trying to be more fiscally responsible with the waivers, which were commonly given out to non-profit organizations in the past.

"It seems as if it was just taken for granted we were going to give you a waiver. Why did the housing authority come to us after the fact?" he asked. "The town is in a crunch and it's getting worse, any monies we can pick up we have to look into.

The housing authority's state appointee Fred Koed told the board the such waivers are a sign of support from the town and that Hingham, Braintree and Rockland have all recently agreed to similar situations.

Selectman Jane Goedecke supported the waiver.

"This is really for the general good and to fill a need the town has as a whole," she said.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts pushed for the board to approve the waiver based on the fact that the project was entirely state funded and that the waiver was the least the town could do for the cause.

The board eventually voted unanimously to approve the waiver.

The proposed home will house eight mentally impaired residents and will be staffed around the clock.

Clain said she expects the home to be operational by early next year.

Selectmen also voted unanimously to reaffirm their support of the housing authority's plan to build a home for the frail and elderly.

The proposed home would use the former Trettis house, which sits in front of the home for the mentally impaired on Elm Street.

The authority is in the process of applying for a grant for the project.

School officials discuss dangers of passing CLT

By Jane O'Brien
Special to the Mariner

"We're going to be accused of sensationalizing, but even the association of banks is against CLT," said school superintendent Stephen Hart.

"Look at what it will mean, not only to the school system, but private industry. We must get the message out in a reasonable manner, so that people can understand what will really happen if CLT passes."

School committee member Ralph Kidder said, "We cannot help but sensationalize this. We may have to close down schools. This is very serious." Hart and Kidder were referring to the analysis of the effects of the CLT passing done by the Mass. Dept. of Revenue.

Hart said, "Of course we must all recognize that these are assumptions but it is important to keep in mind the factor of the 1991 fiscal year. CLT would mean a $1.3 billion cut in state revenues."

"This whole report is based on a set of assumptions. According to this report, Cohasset would lose $234,000 in local aid, but could this change?" asked Kidder.

Hart said, "This is probably the lowest it would be. If there were a change it would most likely be higher. If we have to make these cuts in December, clearly, the results will be devastating."

The school committee agreed that because of the event of CLT passing, the committee should start determining where the cuts would actually take place.

School committee member Nancy Sandell said, "People deserve to know where we intend to make these cuts. We are faced with a potential crisis."

Kidder said, "I want to be on record as being against the CLT petition. This bill could undermine our entire education system."

Kidder would like to have a public forum to help the community understand the impact of the petition.

"I would like to see the voter educated in order to make a clear judgment before voting day. Proponents, as well, must understand what the petition entails. I would like to see both sides of the issue debated publicly," Kidder said.

The committee agreed that a public forum should be set up to educate the voter.

Jane Meinholz may be named accomplice

By Linda Veracka and Jane Lane
Mariner staff

Jane Meinholz, wife of the man charged with the murder of his next door neighbor in Kingston, may be named an accomplice in the case, according to information from an important source.

Mrs. Meinholz, a psychiatric nurse at Pembroke Hospital, is the wife of Henry Meinholz of Kingston, the man charged by police on Sept. 26 with the murder of 13-year-old Melissa Benoit.

First Asst. Dist. Atty. Joseph Gaughan, who is expected to prosecute the Meinholz case, said Mrs. Meinholz "is not a suspect at this time," but would say no more about it.

He said evidence removed from the Meinholz home, as well as evidence from the autopsy of Melissa Benoit, has only just been sent to the FBI laboratories, and no results are expected immediately.

Evidence collected last week by state and local police from the Meinholz' home may implicate the wife of Henry Meinholz, according to the source.

That evidence, including samples of blood, body fluids and clothing taken from the Meinholz garage and home, has been sent to the FBI laboratories in Washington, D.C. Results of the analysis may not be ready for several weeks.

According to the source, Mrs. Meinholz told police several days after the investigation began that her husband admitted he may have committed the murder.

In an affadavit filed with the Plymouth County District Court a state police investigator reported, "We met with Jane Meinholz who told us that her husband had told her that he 'couldn't be sure if he had done anything to Melissa, but if he did,' he showed her several places where a body might be."

Kingston police, along with FBI and state police investigators do not believe Mrs. Meinholz took part in the murder. Instead, they believe she removed evidence that would incriminate her husband of 27 years. If there is enough evidence to substantiate this theory, the source said, Mrs. Meinholz will be charged with being an accomplice after the fact.

According to the source, on Sept. 26, Mrs. Meinholz gave police written permission to search her home for the body of the missing teenager. In the note to police, she alledgely suggested they "bring a shovel."

And according to the court affadavit, Mrs. Meinholz also gave police investigators verbal consent to enter her home. "On September 26, 1990, at approximately 2 p.m., Agent Jim Lavin telephoned Mrs. Jane Meinholz at her residence and she was asked for her consent to search her home. She agreed and stated, "I would like you to search the house. I suggest you bring a shovel. I will show you some spots where I think you should look.' "

Melissa's partially-clad body was found by police investigators Sept. 26 in a makeshift grave in the home's dirt-floored basement.

Despite rumors to the contrary, Mrs. Meinholz did not call police to her home last week, suspecting her husband of the crime. After several days of questioning by police, "she may have felt a great deal of guilt," the source said, and finally agreed to let police into the home without a search warrant.

In the search of the Meinholz home last Wednesday, police found Melissa's body in the dirt-floor basement. Wrapped in plastic, it was buried beneath three-inches of dirt which was covered with a pile of wood and coal. Police believe this was simply a makeshift grave and Meinholz intended to move the body at some point. Because investigators were closely watching the suspect, he would have had little opportunity to move the body without being noticed, the source said.

In a brief press conference she called last week, Mrs. Meinholz expressed her sadness at the community's loss of trust. With tears in her eyes, she stated, "Until Melissa was found, I thought I was living in the safest neighborhood possible. I believe a lot of people felt the same way."

According to the source, the FBI had questioned Mr. Meinholz, along with members of the Benoit family and other Kingston neighbors soon after their investigation began. A lie detector test was administered to many friends and acquaintances, including Mr. Meinholz. Based on the "unusual" results of those tests, Mr. Meinholz became the prime suspect just days after Melissa's disappearance, the source said.

The stumbling block to the investigation was a lack of probable cause in order to search the Meinholz home, the source said.

It wasn't until police questioned Mrs. Meinholz, who admitted her husband previously told her, 'I think I may have killed Melissa,' that she broke down and allowed police to search her home, the source said.

Police say it was unlikely the wife knew the exact location of the body, since she would have little reason to go down into the dirt-floor cellar and crawl space. It was Mrs. Meinholz who suggested that investigators have the septic tank pumped when they began the search of the Main Street backyard last Thursday.

Investigators spent the day excavating the back yard in search of more bodies. Several neighbors, including the Benoit's, told police they recently saw Mr. Meinholz digging in the yard. No bodies were found in that search.

When Mrs. Meinholz finally allowed investigators to enter her property, they found the floor of the garage had been newly-painted and sand had been strewn over the surface. With jackhammers, investigators broke pieces of the cement flooring, uncovering a large amount of blood believed to be from the wound in Melissa's head.

Investigators are not sure at this time if the girl had been sexually assaulted since all forensic tests have not been completed. They are sure that the wound to her head would not have been sufficient to kill her.

Since there were no marks to indicate she was strangled, police believe her death was caused by suffocation.

Democrats plan brunch

The Weymouth Democratic Town Committee and the other members of Co-op Six of the South Shore have invited Democratic candidates for constitutional offices to a brunch on Sunday, Oct. 14.

Voke teachers take action after contract rejection

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The Regional School Committee's surprise rejection of a negotiated contract left Henry Robinson, a mediator with the Mass. Federation of Teachers at no loss for words.

"I've been bargaining since 1969 and I'm a former president of the Boston Teachers Union and I've never seen anything like this," Robinson said Monday.

The South Shore Regional Vocational School Committee rejected the teachers' contract Thursday, Sept. 27.

The rejection came after ten months of negotiation between a three-member sub-committee made up of members of the Regional School Committee and representatives from the VoTech teachers' union.

"The school committee came back with three pages of proposals that we had agreed on already; and they introduced a couple of new proposals," said Mike Walsh, teachers' union president, after a teachers' meeting Monday during which the subcommittee presented the union with the new proposals.

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES

"We have informed the school committee that we plan to file a charge of unfair labor practices," he noted. "The subcommittee negotiated a contract and came to an agreement with us.

"Then one (subcommittee member) voted against the contract and two abstained in an open meeting," Walsh said. "That has lead us to believe that they were not bargaining in good faith."

When reached by telephone, subcommittee chairman Robert Molla of Norwell, said he had "no comment" when asked why he voted 'present' when the contract was before the school committee for ratification Thursday.

He also said that Walter Easttey of Abington was replacing Lou Crescenzi of Hanover on the subcommittee because "Lou does not wish to be on the subcommittee any longer," he said.

Crescenzi also voted 'present' when the contract was up before the school committee Thursday. The third member of the subcommittee, Laurence Mitchell of Cohasset voted against accepting the contract.

Robinson of the Mass. Federation of Teachers said the charge of unfair labor practices would be filed with the State Dept. of Arbitration and Conciliation.

"They will determine whether or not the school committee bargained in bad faith," he said.

"We are making a charge, they will decide is there is enough evidence to issue a complaint."

A BLACK EYE

Robinson said the school committee could get a black eye from the public exposure the charge could create.

"While they cannot be forced to come to an agreement, it would be public knowledge that they bargained in bad faith," he said.

Robinson said he also intended to file legislation to require that the regional school committee be elected and not appointed.

"I intend to file legislation by Dec. 1," he said. "We have lobbyists in the State House."

Currently, regional school committee members are appointed by the boards of selectmen in their various towns.

Robinson said the teachers' current contract is automatically extended until the matter is resolved.

Some of the new issues raised by the subcommittee are: changing the teachers' health coverage; dropping the 2 percent salary increases for teachers at the top step; and eliminating the position of metals dept. head, Robinson said. There were about a dozen new proposals in all, he said.

Union president Walsh said the school committee in fact "reneged in the whole contract."

"The subcommittee should have recommended that the entire school committee ratify our contract," he said. "Now they've reopened the whole thing."

The teachers' union ratified the contract during their meeting Sept. 19, Walsh said.

"And we expected (Sept. 21) for Mr. Molla to recommend to the school committee to accept the contract," said Walsh.

Instead the school committee tabled it, he said.

At the time the consensus of the school committee was that they did not have enough time to review the proposed contract.

The previous contract expired Sept. 30.

SHOW OF SOLIDARITY

Walsh said the teachers would "work as usual," but they planned to meet as a group yesterday morning and enter the school "exactly on time at 7:45 a.m." as a show of solidarity.

Walsh said the teachers would be reporting to work exactly on time for the foreseeable future. He said that teachers have usually arrived at school 45 minutes ahead of time.

"This may not be the only step, but it is the first step at this time," said Russell DeCoste, union treasurer.

DeCoste added that the teachers "would not hinder the education of the kids" in any way.

Walsh said that the union was "led to believe" that there was money in the budget (which was ratified by all the member towns) for teacher raises.

About 40 teachers attended the teachers meeting Monday.

Robinson reiterated, "I couldn't believe it.

"When they (subcommittee) made an offer and then not getting the full support of the school committee is not bargaining in good faith," he said.

The eight member towns in the regional school district are Norwell, Hanover, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Rockland, Abington, and Whitman.

AROUND TOWN

A large and boisterous cheering section encouraged the Cohasset soccer team.

❑ Cohasset Red Cross Blood Chairman Al Odermatt wishes to thank the 109 donors who produced 105 productive pints of blood at this, his last Blood Drive as Chairman. The Blood Drive was held on Tuesday, Sept. 25, at the First Parish House, 23 North Main Street. Al also wishes to thank Corinne Cahill, R.N. coordinator on the day of the Bloodmobile, and the 25 other volunteers who assisted her, as well as the donor promoters, the news media, the First Parish House, and the Red Cross Staff. Al reports it was good to have the new chairpersons Jack and Shirley Cibelli participate in the promotion and conduct of the blood drive. He is very pleased that these two people have volunteered to conduct this Community Program in the future, and will continue to give them his full support. We cannot believe that Al won't be at "the helm" anymore, he has been instrumental in giving of his time and energy to get the bloodmobile where it is, the whole town is grateful to you Al, and from the bottom of our hearts we all thank you!

❑ Herman Fichtner was spotted "around town" this week, and he looked super. Keep up the good work Herm, just do as Jo says and you'll be fine!

❑ It's that time again, time to wish Sue Fone a happy birthday that is! We sure hope that it is a happy one, and that you continue to find each day better than the last. Have a wonderful celebration!

❑ We hope that Ron Beal is home and feeling ever so much better as he reads this! Everyone misses your smiling face around town, get well soon.

❑ To all of you parents at the Osgood School, please don't forget that the open house has been changed form Oct. 3 (as was on the calendar) to Oct. 10. The open house begins at 7:15 p.m. At 7:30 the kindergarten and first grade teachers will make a presentation, followed by grades two and three at 8.

❑ All of New England is cheering for the Red Sox, but our town must surely be cheering loudest of all, since we have the pleasure of Dennis Lamp living here! He certainly is making the news these days, with all of the pitching that he has been doing. Congratulations Dennis, and here's hoping that you bring the pennant home!

❑ It sure sounded as though the Chart House employees were having a lot of fun Sunday, when they had a track and field contest at Milliken Field! We understand that the day was a grand success.

❑ We hope that George Orr is feeling better as he reads this!

❑ Why not give me a call with your newsworthy event? We'd all love it!

Derby Academy news

On Monday, September 10, Hingham's Derby Academy opened doors for its 207th academic year, and a grade 9 which looks forward to being the 200th graduating class when the Academy holds commencement exercises on Derby Day, 1991. School began on Monday with traditional First Chapel Exercises in Sarah Derby Hall for Upper Schoolers, trustees, faculty, parents, and alumni. Headmaster John A. Pistel welcomed the assembly, with special greetings to the many new students and their families.

Three new teachers have joined the faculty.

Susan Lackmann of Franklin will teach grade 2 and serve as head of the Lower School.

Deborah Linehan is also new to the Lower School, where she is an assistant in grade 1. Linehan holds a B.S. in Elementary Education from Fitchburg State College, has been a bilingual tutor in Fitchburg schools and taught creative arts.

Cleida Buckley of Cohasset is new to Derby's Preprimary Department, where she is assisting in the four-year-old Prekindergarten class. Buckley, who has taught in Weymouth and Cohasset schools and at the South Shore Collaborative, earned a B.S. in Elementary Education and Psychology from Emmanuel College.

Following First Chapel, the opening meeting of the 1990-91 Parents' Association was called to order in the George S. Terry Library by President Molly Barbee of Scituate. New business included plans for the Association's major fundraiser, an auction scheduled for November 3, and co-chaired by Marion Curtis of Hingham, Karel Henry of Pembroke, and Charlene Riley of Cohasset. Proceeds from the auction and other association fundraising activities provide a variety of equipment and programs for all Derby students, including a visiting author/artist program, and professional development grants for Derby faculty.

Whatever cuts are made to local budgets will have an even greater impact because they can only be attached to non-fixed spending. Fixed costs, such as debt service pensions and employee benefits, must be paid regardless of CLT.

The rollback would cut 2.5 percent of Cohasset's non-fixed spending, leaving a total cut of 3.6 percent. Because the petition would be enacted in January, and only one half of a communities budgeted funds are still available at that point in the year, the true impact would be twice as great than if it had occurred at the beginning of the year. Cohasset would face a half year cut of roughly 6 percent.

The report indicates that some communities will fare better than others.

"Clearly the impact of the CLT cut varies widely by community. Factors that affect the impact on individual communities are the community's degree of reliance on Cherry Sheet aid as a component of its total budget, and the proportion of its total Cherry Sheet aid that is discretionary. The higher the proportion of discretionary aid, the greater the amount of revenue loss that is projected as a result.

The report said that Fiscal Year 1992 would be the first full year the CLT petition would apply.

"It is estimated that the revenue loss resulting from the petition will rise in FY92 to $2.483 billion, 83 percent higher than the FY91 impact of $1.355 billion. Holding to the assumption that this cut would be passed on proportionally to discretionary Cherry Sheet Aid yields, an estimated FY92 local

Support needed

The leaders of the Village Renaissance want to broaden the base of support for the idea of revitalizing Cohasset Village.

The three people who have been doing the lion's share of the work this year are: Jackie Dormitzer, Ann Whelan and Beth Christoffel.

None of the three own businesses in the quaint and laidback Village. None of the three want to make the project into their life's work.

There are many others with a financial stake in the idea of revitalizing the area.

The three workers in the Renaissance are beacons of light in a gloomy environment. So far the Renaissance project has pulled art students from the high school down to the Village to paint a garden on a brick wall. It has created the momentum to develop plans for the construction of a working pump at the intersection of South Main and Elm streets. Thousands of dollars worth of services have already been donated to the town pump project. Some money has been set aside for the project. Other people have made commitments.

Construction of the new intersection and pump will get underway in May, according to the latest plans.

Designs created by Jim Sandell are ready to go.

The highway department has projects scheduled for the fall but promises to get to the work in the spring, Dormitzer told her committee this week.

She asked the group to think about new leadership, saying her commitment is for this calendar year.

No one fought for the job.

But after some discussion, the group decided to talk with officials of the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce about working together in some way.

Most of the merchants with anything to say on the topic complained about the economy.

"People aren't spending money," one merchant said this week.

It's true. There's a morale problem that's hurting the economy.

Who can turn it all around?

We haven't seen any miracle workers lately. But we do think the way to turn the economic tide is through a positive attitude.

It's time for Cohasset's leading merchants to demonstrate their faith in their own Village. It's time for them to plant the financial seeds they hope to harvest.

Dormitzer, Whelan and Christoffel deserve loud applause and heaps of credit for their work.

It's time for the merchants to either join hands with the Chamber of Commerce or come up with a candidate with enough time, energy and organization to keep the Renaissance alive.

Kimball's new brightly lit sign at the corner of Route 3A and Sohier Street has aroused a few concerns from the neighbors.

It's time to think about flu shots

To the Editor:

Contrary to popular belief, influenza — the flu — is not harmless but a serious respiratory disease. Recent statistics reveal that influenza causes 312 million restricted work days and 174 million sickbed days each year, and it is responsible for $10.4 billion in economic losses. Each year, flue and its most serious complication, pneumococcal pneumonia, can claim approximately 70,000 lives. Together they rank as the sixth leading cause of death in the U.S.

There is good news, however; flue need not be an inevitable companion to winter. Immunization with a simple vaccine can prevent flue and its consequences. The Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association (R) urges individuals at high risk — those with lowered immunities — such as the elderly, adults and children with chronic diseases or conditions, residents of nursing homes, and health care providers to defend themselves against the onslaught of the flu virus.

While a pneumococcal pneumonia vaccine is a once-in-a-lifetime shot, flu shots should be repeated yearly. The preferred time for flu vaccination is between October 15 and November 15 to allow the body sufficient time to produce antibodies to the virus. This year's vaccine will protect more people against three strains of flu: A) Shanghai 16:89-like (H3N2), B) Yamagata 16:88-like, and A) Taiwan 1:86-like (HINI).

We hope that you will support our urgent message on flu and pneumonia. We thank you for supporting the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association's efforts to conquer lung disease and promote lung health.

Sincerely,
Joseph Godzik
President
Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association

Legion leader explains beach clam bake

To the Editor:

Replying to your editorial of Aug. 30, 1990, RE: The Christine Burke Scholarship Fund Clam Bake at Sandy Beach.

This was the fourth annual clam bake put on by the George H. Mealy Post, American Legion, Cohasset. This year as every other year we had permission of the Sandy Beach Association to hold the bake sale. This year as every other year we had a police detail. This year as in past years there were no so-called incidents.

The clam bake was held for one reason only: the Christine Burke Scholarship Fund. This year we raised $5,000 towards that end. Last year we gave $8,000 in scholarships to deserving Cohasset students. We hope to increase that amount in the future. The clam bake is our main source of funding for these scholarships.

Thank you for allowing us to respond.

Very truly yours,
John F. Greene, Adjutant
George H. Mealy Post 118

Rep. William Flynn thanks all the voters

To the Editor:

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr. said, "I would like to thank the Mariner Newspapers for their high professionalism and fairness that you accorded me in my bid to be the Democratic nominee in the Norfolk/Plymouth senatorial district."

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr. continued, "I would also like to take the opportunity to thank all the voters in the towns of Cohasset, Marshfield, Hingham and Scituate who voted for me on Tuesday, Sept. 18.

Rep. Flynn concluded, "It was a great honor and privilege for me to present my education, my experience and my agenda to the voters of the Norfolk/Plymouth district. I appreciate all the support I received in Cohasset, Marshfield, Hingham and Scituate."

Rep. William J. Flynn, Jr.

Kehoe family featured on national radio

To the Editor:

I thought you'd be interested to know that the Kehoe Family of Cohasset was interviewed by Scott Simon for National Public Radio, Weekend Edition, about the way their lives have changed raising a grandson at an age when they should be looking ahead to retirement.

The show will be aired Saturday, Oct. 6, at 8 a.m. on WBUR-FM-90.9 and WGBH-FM-89.7, National Public Radio, Weekend Edition.

CCC tag sale a success

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Community Center would like to thank the individuals who supported the third annual Tag Sale to benefit the Center.

We would like to give special thanks to the Selectman for the use of the Common, the volunteers who organized the event, those who donated items for the sale, and the neighbors who share the Common.

The Community Center, now in its 48th year, is a non-profit organization serving residents of Cohasset and the South Shore.

Fund raising events, such as the Tag Sale, aid in keeping the cost of the programs as low as possible.

It is the individuals and organizations that have supported the Center that allow it to be a valuable resource in the community.

We appreciate your continued support.

Clerk thankful for help

To the Editor:

The Town Clerk would like to thank the many departments and individuals for their assistance in preparing for the State Primary on Sept. 18. Because of the tight budget cuts I appreciate the volunteer work from the Tree and Park Department for setting up and taking down the voting booths, the Wire Department for the electrical work, the office staff for preparing the sandwiches, Connie Jones for her donation of clam chowder, my daughter Arlene Fiori for her donation of dessert and a special thank you to my husband David Marks for his support and assistance.

Once again many thanks to Bob Pape for his generous donation. His donation enables us to feed the election workers!

Last but not least, many thanks to all the election workers for a great job.

Again, thank you all.

Frances L. Marks
Town Clerk

BULLETIN BOARD

Holiday postal schedule

All post offices will be closed and there will be no regular mail delivery on Monday, October 8, in observance of Columbus Day.

In keeping with postal policy, Special Delivery and Express Mail will be delivered on the holiday. Mailboxes will be picked up according to holiday collection schedules.

For postal information during non-business hours, customers should call the Postal Answer Line at 451-9922.

Candidates debate tonight

Now that the final results are known for the Republican primary for state senate, the League of Women Voters is ready for the great debate.

The candidates debate happens tonight (Thursday) beginning at 7:30 in Barnes Auditorium at the town office building.

Obviously, Christy Mihos won't be listed in the candidates section.

The League's plans call for US Rep. Gerry Studds and Jon Bryan to kick off the evening.

Rep. Robert Ambler, D-Weymouth, will then square off and face the remaining challenger in the Norfolk and Plymouth senate race — Robert Hedlund, another Weymouth resident and the Republican winner.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset, unopposed candidate for re-election is scheduled to attend the event.

Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, will debate his Republican challenger, Ronald Wheatley.

Pat Facey of the League will serve as moderator during the evening.

Church Hill yard sale

Church Hill Methodist Church will hold a Columbus Day Yard Sale on Saturday, Oct. 6, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Youth Group will hold a car wash during the sale in the adjacent parking lot on the corner of River and Church Streets.

Come and browse through the assortment of items on sale. Remember, "One man's junk, is another man's treasure."

Haunted House coming

The second annual Haunted House, put on by the Norwell Visiting Nurse Association, will be held on Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 27 and 28 from 6 to 9 p.m. in the Norwell Town Hall.

This year promises to be bigger, better, and scarier than last year's highly successful production. New features include an Arachnophobia scene and a gory Prime Cuts corner, among the many other surprises around the corners in the maze.

A donation of $2 per person will benefit the Norwell VNA. Repeat walk-throughs (of which there were many last year) will be $1.

Babysitting will be available for children too young to appreciate the various scenes created by this years team, headed by Jean Valicenti and Jeanne Garside of the Norwell VNA Board.

Marathon training program

The South Shore YMCA will be offering a Boston Marathon Training Program beginning Oct. 17.

This is a six-month instructional training program. Our goal is to educate, motivate, and train runners of all levels properly for completing the '91 Boston Marathon. Educational seminars will be given, along with a weekly group run.

Also included is a before and after health fitness evaluation. Interested participants should attend the orientation session on Oct. 17 at 7:30 p.m. For further information please call the South Shore YMCA at 479-8500, ext. 142.

Give art for the holidays

The South Shore Art Center located at 119 Ripley Road in Cohasset invites you to their "Holiday Special" designed to enhance the Art of Giving by giving a Gift of Art. The sale of original art by gallery artists and invited artisans will take place on Friday, Nov. 2 from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, Nov. 3, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Our regular gift shop selection will be expanded for these two special sale days so that numerous choices will be available.

Gallery artists have agreed to submit their works reasonably priced at under $100. In turn, the Art Center will lower its commission rate so that all concerned will benefit — the artist, the Center, and you, the consumer.

To give you ample time to browse, a children's activity area is planned. Admission to this festive start to the holidays is free.

Workshop opens season

The fall session of the successful Drama Workshop for children and youth, co-sponsored by the Cohasset Dramatic Club and Cohasset Recreation Department, is scheduled to begin Saturday, Oct. 20, meeting for eight weeks, culminating with a performance on Saturday, Dec. 15.

Registrations for the fall session are currently being accepted by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at: 383-6791. The fee for this program is $55 ;per participant. Classes will be organized as follows: ages 6 through 10 meet from 10 a.m. to noon, ages 11 through 17 meet from 2 to 4 p.m. at the New Study - CHS.

Teachers for the session are Darcy Pratt and Peggy Corrigan; both are Cohasset Dramatic Club board members. Darcy is from Scituate, is a BU graduate in Communications, and most recently directed children's productions of Oliver, Harvey, Sound of Music, South Pacific, and The Little Mermaid at a summer camp in New York State. Peggy, a lawyer turned mom, can be seen in the November 16-18 CDC production of "Silent Night, Lonely Night" by

Goals of the CDC workshop are to encourage playwriting,k dramatic creativity and self-confidence,and to provide children with an all-around basis in the dramatic arts. the Winter Drama Workshop will be more advanced, depending on continued registration, but both workshops will give attention to makeup, costumes, set and lighting design, acting and playwriting. For information, call Pratt 545-2429 or Corrigan 383-0296.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday morning 9 to 11 a.m. at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for the 10 hour program is $50 per person.

Participants should select a piece of furniture, that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

CCC classes are underway

The classes for children and adults are underway at the Cohasset Community Center. Dance classes with the Duxbury Dance Shoppe have openings in the Ballet and Tap, and the Tap and Jazz program. Pre-School programs include a Kodaly Music class, a new Gym Dandy Toddlers and Tumblers class has been added on Wednesday at noon, and several enchanting puppet shows with Pat Boylan. Adult offerings include CPR through the American Heart Association, Ballroom Dancing for beginners and intermediates, and ongoing Aerobics for health and fitness. To register, or for further information call 383-0088.

LIVING LIFE

Safe Homes

hasset to make this program work for us.

The SAFE HOMES PROGRAM is sponsored by the Cohasset Board of Selectmen, the police department, the public schools, the clergy and the PSO. The SAFE HOMES brochure/pledge explains the concerns expressed by many parents, enumerates the benefits of participation as well as outlining who should be involved and why. It lists some legal implications which could lead to arrest and the civil liability of adults allowing children under 21 years of age to use alcohol. It suggests some family guidelines, party guidelines and even lists some weekend curfew possibilities as well as reasonable hours. This program can, and will make a difference if the citizenry rally behind it.

The SAFE HOMES Program will help our children and our parents to live life more productively, effectively and happily. We want our children and our parents to become "disciples" of LIVING LIFE well. For anyone to become a "disciple," there is "discipline" that must not only be endured, but even sought after. The two words have the same root. The dictionary offers two definitions for discipline: 1. training that corrects, molds or perfects. 2. Punishment. Unfortunately in our Western society, we have too often come to understand discipline as the second meaning - punishment. There is an old Spanish proverb that says "the parent who spoils his/her child fattens a serpent." No one would like that to be said of their parenting style, and yet, unbeknownst, it often happens. To understand discipline fully, I think we need to connect it with a companion word - responsibility.

Responsibility is a process of making choices, as well as accepting the consequences of those choices. Every child needs to learn this to become a mature adult. Too many children have been rescued from accepting the consequences of their choices by overly zealous parents or grandparents. As a result, we have many chronologically fifty-year-olds in our society who stopped growing emotionally at ten or 15. Accepting the consequences of our choices is not the same as punishment, although many children will look upon it that way.

Here are some differences: Logical consequences are demonstrations of what logically follows from misbehavior; punishment is an arbitrary retaliation for misbehavior. Logical consequences are intended to show children how to behave responsibly; punishment is intended to impose the parents' will on children. Logical consequences are administered in a firm and friendly manner without anger or hostility; punishment is too often delivered in an atmosphere of anger and resentment.

For some, SAFE HOMES may seem like a punishment; in reality, it is teaching responsibility and discipline to help us understand and LIVE LIFE well! Cohassetans! let's rally behind it!

(Dr. McFadden is the Director of Pastoral Care for Hospice Community Services of VNA, Dedham. He is a marriage and family therapist, a certified addictions counselor and a member of the Cohasset Alcohol and Drug Committee.)

Joseph Godzik accepts congratulations as he is installed as president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

Alvarez gets soccer team off on its winning ways

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

The fall soccer season is underway, and with a record of 5-1-1, the team's new coach, Alvaro Alvarez, is pleased. Three-time All-American and former New England Athlete of the Year, Alvaro is an experienced soccer player from Salem State College, and has brought to Cohasset a new strategy that has proved itself successful in the field.

The season opened at home against Carver, the team earning its first victory with a score of 2-0. In this game, Linc Marsac proved himself as an offensive force, scoring both Cohasset goals. He was assisted by sophomore Will Adams and classmate Travis Coley.

In the next two games, played away at Abington and East Bridgewater, Cohasset won twice more, defeating the opposing teams 3-1 and 1-0, respectively. Players Chris Brown, Josh Stevenson, and Travis Coley each exhibited their goal-scoring potential as they were able to penetrate the other teams' defense, while Ryan Cibelli helped set the goals up, scoring an assist in each of the two games.

The next game, played at home against Hanover, blemished the Skippers' 3-0 record with the team's first loss. In the first half, Cohasset started strong, senior Travis Coley scoring unassisted on a hooking corner kick. Next, Will Adams increased the lead to 2-0 on an assist from Ryan Cibelli. However, in the second half, Hanover came back strong, rallying to tie it up, and in the end, much to the disappointment of the Skippers, winning by a score of 4-2.

On Sept. 25, Cohasset played Hull, and won 7-0. During this game, coach Alvarez brought up players from the J.V. squad including Bill Jordan, Mac Campbell and Dan DeMichelle.

In the following game against Norwell, Cohasset went down 2-0 in the first half. During the second half, however, the team came back to tie it up 2-2 with goals by Dan DeMichele and Linc Marsac. The Skippers showed much intensity during this half, playing at a pace too fast for the Hanover players to match.

Finally, on Monday, Oct. 1, Cohasset met Norton, the only team to beat them in the regular season last year. Despite the absence of key defender Bill Baird due to a back injury, and the loss of midfielder Josh Stevenson in the first half to a knee injury, the Skippers prevailed by a score of 1-0. The goal was scored by Linc Marsac and was assisted by Travis Coley.

Although the team misses its star seniors of last year such as the Reidy brothers, the new players who have assumed the roles of former players are doing extraordinarily well. Ollie Nouveau, for instance, the team's rookie goalie, already has 34 saves and four shut-outs to his credit. Without doubt, this team possesses the intensity and talent required to succeed in the upcoming season.

On Sept. 25, the field hockey team played Norwell in the season opener and won by a score of 2-0. Sarah Deveney scored and was assisted by freshman Cilla Goff. Maureen Long scored second and was assisted by Barbara Lagroterria. The defense was strong and was led by Karyn Murray.

In the second game against Hanover played under the lights, no team scored, the final outcome a 0-0 tie. However, this was a positive game for Cohasset in that Hanover in past years has dominated the Skippers in field hockey. Cohasset, on the offensive, controlled the flow of the game. Merrie Hansen, goalie, contributed also, making a critical save at the end of the second half that saved the game.

The next three games against Scituate, East Bridgewater, and Carver all followed the same pattern, ending in ties. During these games, Bridget Corkery played a strong midfield, while Barbara Lagroterria led the offensive.

Coach Debby Boswick is satisfied with the strength of the defense and is optimistic about the team's offensive potential. Thus far in the season Cohasset field hockey has a 1-0-4 record and is tied for third with Scituate.

On Oct. 1, the J.V. squad celebrated its first victory over Hull. Nicole Haefner and Sarah Douglas each scored in this game.

Cohasset's Jen Reidy, #6, gets gets a shot away just ahead of a Hanover defender. The shot was stopped by the goaltender as Cohasset fell short, 3-2.

Swim team goes varsity

The swim team was recognized as a school varsity team. The team will receive no financial support from the school system but the new status allows the swim team to compete in other meets. The committee passed the request and the team will participate in the Jan. 4 meet with North Quincy.

Sports center field trip set

The Cohasset Recreation Department is still taking applications for its day-long field trip to the South Shore Sports Center in Hingham. The trip will take place Columbus Day, Monday, October 8. Boys and girls will be broken down into teams and play in a Round Robin tournament including basketball, street hockey, and indoor soccer. Registrations will be accepted until this Friday, October 5. Please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791.

Girls' soccer plays some great matches

This season's girls' varsity soccer team has shown surprising success with a record of 6-1-1 as of October 1. Despite a difficult preseason including the loss of three starters, Cohasset has adapted and managed to fill these positions. For instance, Jen Knowles, after trying out several positions, has emerged as a strong sweeper, and Kara Manion has terrorized opponents from the forward position. Jen Reidy has led the team in goal scoring, and continues to perform well under pressure.

SPORTS

In the first game against Westwood at home, Cohasset won 3-2 when Sophie Redfield, late in the second half, scored the game-winning goal. A week later at Abington, the Skippers were down 3-1 and with 12 minutes remaining, came back fighting to tie it up 3-3. A close game was played against Norwell, but Cohasset came out on top through Jen Reidy's successful penalty kick. Against an inexperienced Norton, Cohasset earned an easy 6-0 victory.

Coach Kenna Starzell feels that the defense is the strongest he's seen in four years, despite the fact that all five of his defenders are rookies. He still changes the lineup to find successful combinations, but the team has found a stability that has allowed a winning start to the season.

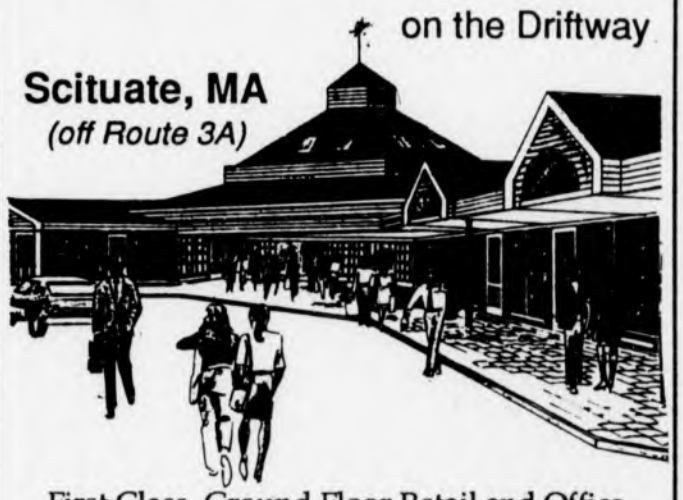
Friends of Cohasset Lacrosse to sponsor clinic

Cohasset will hold its first-ever fall lacrosse clinic on Saturday, Oct 13, from 2 until 4 in the afternoon. The clinic, free of charge, will be open to all boys in grades 5, 6, 7 and 8. Refreshments, pizza and soft drinks, will also be served free of charge. Demonstration sticks will be available courtesy of Brine. Boys who own their own sticks are urged to bring them. No other equipment will be necessary.

The clinic will take place on the athletic field behind the Deer Hill School on Sohier Street.

The clinic, sponsored in part by the Friends of Cohasset Lacrosse, and by The Good Sport, Inc., will give beginning players the change to learn basic lacrosse skills, and to participate in throwing and shooting contests. The clinic will be run by Cohasset High School lacrosse head coach Ken Ekberg, and players from the Cohasset varsity team. Clinic participants will also be eligible for equipment discounts at The Good Sport.



In August, the Cohasset School Committee voted to grant lacrosse full varsity status as a sport, after it had spent two years as a club. "This is in part a celebration of that commitment," says coach Ekberg. "We want to expose as many students as possible to the game." Cohasset seventh and eighth graders are eligible to play junior varsity lacrosse, Ekberg notes. In 1989, Cohasset finished with a 4-3-1 varsity record, tying Boston College High, 9-9, in four overtimes in the final game of the season, and a 2-2 junior varsity record.

"Last year, nearly 50 boys participated in our program" says Ekberg. "We try to play as many as possible in our games, and to keep enthusiasm high."

Caring for elders at home

People, who care for their older relatives are special, because they care so deeply and because they experience extraordinary demands on their talents, resources and time. The Cohasset Council on Aging is sponsoring a series, caring for elders at home, this program will provide an opportunity to understand the physical and psycho-social changes associated with aging; to know the financial and legal issues; to learn personal care; programs and benefits; and to seek support to cope with caregiving. The sessions will be held at the South Shore Arts Center, 119 Ripley Road, Cohasset from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays through October 30. For more information contact Susan Connolly at the Council on Aging Office 383-9112. All sessions are open to all persons interested in learning more about the aging person. Program fee: $20 for five sessions or $5 per session. Fee will be waived for anyone on limited income.

Sessions 2—October 9. Objective: Increasing your understanding of the psychological aspects of aging. Elders frequently face major changes in employment, lifestyle, health, social life, etc. Their ability to adjust and adapt will be influenced by personality type, life experiences, and the number and seriousness of the losses faced. Physical and cognitive impairments may make the elder more dependent upon younger family members causing a shift in family roles and relationships.

Speaker: Carolyn Housman, LICSW; Geriatric Counseling Social Worker with Cohasset Social Service League. Facilitate, Scituate Alzheimer's Disease Group.

Session 3—October 16. Objective: To better understand the financial need of an older person.

We will look at the management of assets for others. Joint ownership, durable power of attorney, conservatorship, guardianship, living will and trusts will be discussed.

Speaker: Wayne Thayer, Esquire.

Partner: O'Sullivan, Thayer & Gizzarelli, P.C.

Consultant: South Shore Elder Services, Old Colony, Somerville Elder Services, Cambridge Elder Services.

Session 4—October 23. Availability and utilization of community resources.

Objective: There is a network of services available to older persons. This session will provide information regarding services to the elderly and their caregivers. Respite daycare centers, home care services, support groups, insurance matters and nursing home accessing will be addressed. Also, information on housing options will be provided.

Speaker: Mary Centrola, Intake and Referral Specialist, South Shore Elder Services, Inc.

Session 5—October 30.

Objective: To provide suggested techniques for improving personal care assistance. This session will focus on aspects of assisting a person with personal care, improving safety in the home and walking and adaptive equipment.

Speakers from the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association.

Manager defends Nike silo cleanup

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

The manager for a company contracted to drain water out of abandoned NIKE silo sites along Route 3A has claimed the company's initial proposal was misunderstood.

Ron Pompeo of Rudy V. Pompeo Inc. in South Weymouth said a recent request to the conservation commission to dump the "slightly polluted" water into James Brook was misinterpreted and there was never any intention to act on the suggestion.

Pompeo's company was awarded the clean-up bid by the Army Corps of Engineers and has hired Jet-Line Services of Stoughton to remove the water.

Pompeo said specific water sources were named to get feedback on where the conservation commission wanted the water to go.

"You ask questions," he said. "Can we go here? Can we go there? The only way you can get the answer is to ask the question."

Pompeo said the conservation commission has refused to recommend where they would like the water disposed. Left without specific recommendations, he said he has to toss out suggestions and get feedback.

He said he will obey the commissions wishes during the project.

"The job will be done following 100 percent of all federal, state and local requirements," he said. "I will do whatever is reasonable and justified."

He said he would be willing to truck the water to a treatment plant in Hull if it was desirable to the commission.

Pompeo said the description of the water as "polluted" is misleading.

He said the only substantial pollutant is sodium; and the water is no more dangerous than ocean water.

If there was a catch basin or a brook that would carry the water from the site into the ocean, there would be no environmental impact, he said.

Pompeo said it was once suggested, although spuriously, that he should drive his truck up to the town pier and dump the water directly into the ocean.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White

Newcomers:

Welcome to Cohasset! This lovely seacoast town has many charms and traditions; we also have a waste disposal crisis. Frankly, most of the Northeast does. In 1988 at our annual town meeting, we unanimously passed mandatory recycling. It is possible to recycle 80 percent of your common household waste at the Recycling/Transfer Facility, and many citizens do.

The key strategy to a healthy home recycling program is to understand that everyone in the household is part of the program because everyone generates trash. It has been my experience that the younger the participant (a baby is not too young for example) the better the recycler. We started our family program at the dinner table when everyone was present. The grown-ups brought up what had to be recycled and then the family members brainstormed ideas on where to put the containers.

Strategy #2 is learning Recycling's three R's: REDUCE, RE-USE, RECYCLE. REDUCE what you buy. Watch for overly packaged products. Buy glass over plastic containers because the glass is recyclable at the RTF.

REUSE what you buy. Cloth diapers instead of plastic throwaway ones is the best example.

RECYCLE the rest! The following is the list of items currently accepted at the RTF.

If you have any questions, please call the board of health at 383-9900.

October 1990 Recycling Guideline Update

BATTERIES: Auto and boat battery disposal. Please place on skid/pallet next to office building

CORRUGATED CARDBOARD: We have a separate bin for corrugated cardboard. ONLY ALL WAXED OR SMOOTH CARDBOARD SUCH AS FRUIT, CEREAL AND SHOE BOXES go in with your normal trash. No styrofoam products or other packing material, please.

Alzheimer's disease

Clergy of all denominations in 28 South Shore communities recently received information on Alzheimer's Disease from the Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. (ADSGSS). Through this community outreach project, funded by a federal Title IIIB grant through South Shore Elder Services, Inc., clergy will be better able to counsel families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease.

Included in the ADSGSS mailing to 375 area clergy was a 24-page booklet entitled "Helping Families Face Alzeheimer's: A Guide for Clergy." The guide describes symptoms of the disease and explains how the entire family is affected, especially the caregiver who is often the "hidden" victim. The guide, which is published by the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association, explains how families may be helped through proper diagnosis, financial planning, and community resources.

Jo Ann Mitchell of Hingham, ADSGSS president, said "ADSGSS is proud to continue its work in making the community aware of the plight of those coping with Alzheimer's Disease."

Last year ADSGSS sponsored a similar outreach program, also funded by a federal grant through South Shore Elder Services, to alert police and fire personnel in 22 South Shore towns to the problems of Alzheimer's Disease.

Clergy in the following South Shore communities are included in the ADSGSS outreach program: Abington, Braintree, Brockton, Canton, Carver, Cohasset, Dedham, Duxbury, Halifax, Hanover, Hanson, Hingham, Holbrook, Hull, Kingston, Marshfield, Milton, Norwell, Norwood, Pembroke, Quincy, Randolph, Rockland, Scituate, Sharon, Stoughton, Weymouth, and Whitman.

ADSGSS is a volunteer nonprofit organization dedicated to providing information and support to families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease. The group meets monthly in Hingham from September to June, and meetings are free. ADSGSS is funded by individual contributions and by a Title IIIB grant from South Shore Elder Services, Inc. For further information or to receive a free brochure listing Alzheimer's support groups on the South Shore, call 749-5417.

Obituary

Carrie L. Lothrop

Carrie L. (Nash) Lothrop, 99, formerly of Greenfield and Cohasset, died August 16 in the Hillside Nursing Home in South Deerfield.

She was born in Greenfield, March 20, 1891, the daughter of Jonathan E. and Lita A. (Gardner) Nash.

She was raised on the former Nash Farm in the Greenfield meadows. She attended local schools and graduated from Boston College School of Nursing.. In 1918, she and a female companion were the first women to hike the Presidential Range of the White Mountains. She married Caleb Lothrop in 1915 and moved to Cohasset. They lived in the Lothrop House, which is now the Cohasset Historical Society. She moved back to Greenfield in 1960.

Survivors include two cousins, Donald and Leo Vigneault, both of Greenfield.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Septic funding on warrant

Money for the new septic system at the Deer Hill School will be requested at the Oct. 23 special town meeting.

The cost estimate is $45,000. Health agent Joseph Godzik made a mini perc test, and Bob Booth did a $1,200 design. The town meeting on the 23rd of October must approve the project. There will be bids out for the work the Highway Dept. cannot handle.

'Apples for students'

Stop and Shop has once again started the "Apples for Students" program. the money raised will be used to buy a lazer printer and a Mac SE.

Village revival in motion

The committee working on the Village Renaissance project met Tuesday to go over ongoing plans.

One of the concerns of the group is the chance that the post office could move from its present location on Ripley Road to one of the two shopping plazas on Route 3A.

Both shopping plazas have been talking with postal officials about the possibility. Meanwhile lease negotiations are underway between the owners of the Ripley Road location and the real estate department of the Postal Service.

Members of the Renaisssance are sending letters to the local postmaster expressing the hope that the post office will remain in the village.

BULLETIN BOARD

Community center courses

Babysitting Course: This program stresses a better understanding of young children, their care and safety, plus first aid procedure. Class is given to students ages 10 and over on Wednesday, from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. for four weeks starting November 7. The cost is $28.

Computer for the Novice: A hands on, individualized course to learn the skills necessary to operate a computer. Discover the applications an uses of computers in everyday life. Learn how to edit, write letters, and use lotus. The class will meet on Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m. for ten weeks starting October 4. The cost is $125.

For women only: Taking Financial Control: This course offers women a thorough overview of money management and financial planning. Topics include professional portfolio management, investment philosophies, tax strategies and estate planning principles. Sandra Manzella is a certified financial planner with Paine Webber. The class will meet Thursday from 7 to 8:30 p.m. for two weeks starting November 8. The cost is $20.

Contract Bridge: A leading tournament player and Life Master teaches this stimulating game of skill to beginners, intermediates, and those who wish to brush up on their skills. There is a required text for $5.95. The class for beginners and intermediates will meet on Monday from 8 to 10 p.m. for eight weeks starting October 1. The cost for this class is $90.

YOUTHS AND TEENS

Introduction to Modeling: Have you dreamed about being a model or do you just want to learn their secrets? A professional model and a team of experts will teach you the basics of modeling. Learn make-up application, hairstyling, walking and poise, and a photographer and video artist will prepare you to meet the camera. Have all your questions answered by a professional model. This class is for girls ages 12 to 18 and will meet on Wednesday from 4 to 5:30 p.m. for the first five weeks and from 4 to 6 p.m. for the last five weeks. The course cost is $125.

Other courses at the Community Center are already underway. Some space is available.

Cable TV schedule

CHANNEL 53

October 4—Thursday, 5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads two Dr. Seuss favorites, Horton Hatches the Egg and The Lorax. These books are not only entertaining but each contains a special message to adults and children alike.

October 9, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: "New England Wildlife Center," Hingham, Mass. Kay Ruiter and Nick Popovitch, Director of Education, talk abut how this unique organization serves the South Shore by providing clinical services to sick and injured wildlife. When well, these animals are returned to their natural habitat.

October 11, Thursday, 5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads more of Dr. Seuss Green Eggs and Ham, Cat in the Hat and Sneetches.

October 16, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwilers Journal: "South Shore Conservatory, Instrument for Change." Director, Jim Simpson describes the new dual mission of the Conservatory. It will continue to provide traditional instruction and performing opportunities for 2,000 families using the facility while also attempting to influence neighboring community schools of the educational advantages inherent in the so-called "Arts Based Curriculum

This is a 220-year-old New England antique. Only better.

OXBOW CHEST
Massachusetts, circa 1770

Over fifty Eldred Wheeler craftsmen continue to construct antique furniture. At their workshop in Hingham, Massachusetts they design, build, and finish pieces using the same methods New England cabinetmakers did over 200 years ago.

Some of the forms crafted include beds, chests, secretary desks, lowboys, tables, chairs, and highboys. Because each piece is made by hand, most people reserve them in advance. However, many items at our showrooms are available to take home.

The appreciating value of Eldred Wheeler Furniture has been demonstrated at local auction houses. Discover the affordability of these handmade pieces with Eldred Wheeler's new Preferred Collector Program.

The fall is a great time to explore New England. Plan to visit one of our showrooms.

Oct. 22 special TM articles discussed

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Selectmen made their recommendations on 12 of the 14 articles in the special town meeting warrant Tuesday night.

The special town meeting begins at 7:30 Monday, Oct. 22, at Cohasset High School.

Two articles not yet dealt with by selectmen involve an attempt to upgrade the classification of a clerk in the water department and a request for $9,000 to remove asbestos in the police station.

Selectmen are waiting for the water commissioners and personnel board to make a decision on the water department clerk's position before taking their own vote.

The advisory committee has already voted against adoption of the change.

While the warrant reads that the article was inserted at the request of the water commissioners, it turns out it was placed on the special town meeting warrant at the request of water superintendent Joseph Hamilton (not to be confused with Jim Hamilton, Mariner cartoonist.)

Hamilton told selectmen the water commissioners just haven't been in the same room at the same time. He said the personnel board would take the matter up Oct. 10.

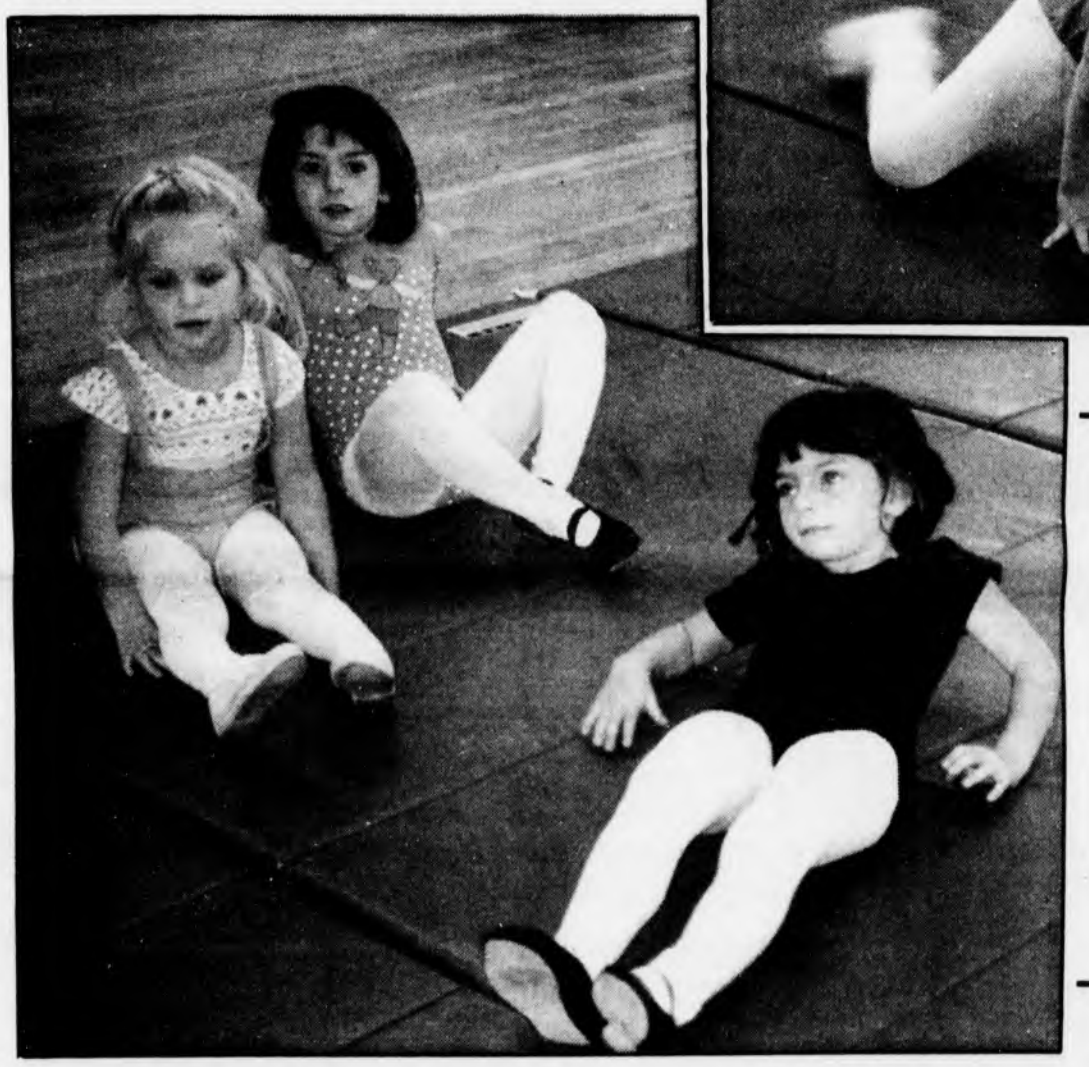
Greg Doyon, executive secretary, was told by the board not to bring up other reclassification questions until after the personnel board considers them.

The change would amount to $900 to $1,000 more a year for the part-time clerk who would earn 87 cents more an hour. (See page 4)

Sgt. Barrow roasted by his friends

By Tanna Kasperowicz
Special to the Mariner

If Dicky Barrow had really done everything he was blamed for at his surprise retirement/birthday party last Saturday, he would have had to be 16 people.



Barrow officially retired from the Cohasset Police Department this past Tuesday, when he reached the mandatory retirement age of 65 years old.

His family sponsored the party, which was attended by 70 friends, hunters, and town officials. Jack Worley, director of the recreation commission, served as master of ceremonies.

"We are here to celebrate three milestones tonight, Dicky's 65th birthday, over 40 years of service to the police department, and two decades of service to the recreation commission," Worley said.

"Dicky has always known the law. He can recite the Massachusetts General laws chapter, page and number. There are some attorneys around who would not like to go head on head with the law with him," Worley said, adding that had World War II not intervened, "we might be celebrating the confirmation of a new supreme court justice here tonight."

J. Volungis directs Community Center with energy

By Jane O'Brien
Special to the Mariner

In 1946 a group of young mothers from Cohasset needed a place to start a nursery school for the local children. A building was donated and the Cohasset Community Center was formed.

Funds were raised by giving house tours of the many lovely estates around Cohasset. The house tours were very popular in the 50s and 60s. Hostesses were assigned and teas and luncheons were served at various estates each year. In 1959 over 600 people attended the annual house tour. People came from other states and one year Peugot station wagons were donated to take the tourists out the narrow causeway to "Whitehead" an estate overlooking the entrance to Cohasset harbor.

The 70s brought changes and the Community Center was on the verge of going bankrupt. In a 1978 Ledger article the headlines read, "Community Center's Fate Debated." The final paragraph in the article read, "A final plea to come together was made by a member who said she was a relative newcomer to town." That newcomer was the present director at the Cohasset Community Center, Judy Volungis.

High energy would properly describe Volungis. She likes to fly, sail, and move fast. Judy and her family moved to Cohasset in 1977 and she immediately enrolled her daughter in the nursery school at the Community Center. "I really wasn't very impressed with the building, but the teaching program was excellent."

Volungis became a member of the board of directors and started to make changes. First she was a member of the ways and means committee, then started new programs in 1983 by becoming a non-paid program director. In 1985 Volungis was made present of the board of directors. Finally in 1986

CLT dominates Nov. 6 ballot

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

The Democratic hold on Beacon Hill may be facing its sternest challenge in two decades in the Nov. 6 election but in the next four weeks more eyes will probably be on Question 3 in the referendum section.

That is the petition, filed by Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT, which would roll back state taxes and fees to the level of June 30, 1988, or Aug. 2. 1989, and either destroy state government or reconstruct it along lines more favorable to the taxpayers.

It would force a cut of anywhere from $1.1 billion to $1.4 billion from the state's $13.4 billion budget for fiscal 1991. the current year, and up to $2.3 billion from state receipts for fiscal 1992, which starts next July 1.

The State Department of Revenue (DOR, using an across the board formula, figures passage of the CLT petition would cost Cohasset about a quarter of a million in local aid for fiscal 1991, assume that would have to be trimmed from the budget under which the town is currently operating.

On the surface, it appears that the rollback sum – whatever it is – would have to be deducted from the $13.4 billion state budget for fiscal 1991.

Actually, by the time that the rollback goes into effect on Jan. 1, the $13.4 billion budget will be half spent so the deduction actually will be made from

COHASSET'S WEEK

Selectmen oppose CLT

The five members of the Cohasset Board of Selectmen took a stand Tuesday night on the upcoming referendum to rollback state taxes.

They unanimously oppose the passage of Question 3, which is sponsored by the Citizens for Limited Taxation, CLT.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she understands the voter service arm of the PSO hopes to sponsor a forum on Questions 3 and 5. Question 5 deals with establishing set percentages for local aid.

On Question 3, Selectman Diana Kornet said she thinks it is irresponsible to propose making the state tax cuts without coming up with ways to implement it.

One-day liquor licenses

Selectmen granted two one-day liquor licenses to the Cohasset Community Center this week.

The first is for Oct. 20 from 7 p.m. to midnight for the South Shore Cultural Society of the Greek Church.

The second is for 7 p.m. to 1 a.m. Nov. 3 for a PSO Monte Carlo Night.

Closed session

The selectmen met in executive session on three separate issues after finishing regular business Tuesday night.

The board met with Noel Collins on matter currently in litigation between Collins and the town. Collins went before the board to ask for different terms on the agreement for the Independence Building.

The board also met with the Police Chief Joseph Kealey and Fire Chief Daniel Brock on labor negotiations.

And the agenda included a closed discussion of the Government Island duplex.

Sergeant's exam requested

Police Chief Joseph Kealey wants a new civil service exam for police sergeant.

Not that there is an opening. But the chief has asked selectmen to request a new list to be ready.

The last time Cohasset participated in a civil service test for police sergeant was in 1987, according to Greg Doyon, selectmen's executive secretary.

There is an existing civil service list — it has one name, that of Patrolman Lawrence Ainslie.

There were two names on the list which has been extended at the request of selectmen beyond its natural life of two years. Civil service regulations allow a town to keep a list beyond the historical two-year limit.

A month ago selectmen voted to promote Patrolman Richard Abbadessa, who was the other person on the 1987 list. He replaced Sergeant Richard Barrow who retired.

Selectman Chairman Rocco Laugelle said he thinks it would be unfair to Ainslie to call for a new list right after appointing the other candidate from the old list.

"If we can do it without making him take a new test," Laugelle said, "I'd be in favor of it."

The board tabled the request until more information can be obtained from civil service.

The sergeants exam will be given in June. If selectmen call for a new list, Cohasset applicants will be offered a chance at that time. There are seven other patrolmen who are backing the chief's request for a new list.

Hedlund & Ambler debate issues

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Putting a controversial primary recount behind him, Republican candidate for state Senate Robert L. Hedlund squared off against Democratic rival Robert B. Ambler last Thursday night at the first organized forum for the two nominees.

More than 100 people packed into Hingham Town Hall for the debate. co-sponsored by the Hingham and Scituate Leagues of Women Voters.

The usual suspects: Abortion, the Citizens for Limited Taxation tax rollback petition, and the Old Colony restoration, took center stage during the forum, which varied from restrained to venomous during the hour-long program.

Ambler stressed his image as a competent and successful candidate with legislative experience, telling the audience that he would be the first person since 1925 to go into the state Senate with such experience.

Hedlund came across as a brash newcomer, who wanted to sweep into office on a mandate for change. He extolled the virtue of being a candidate who was not dulled from a career in public service, and proposed he would bring a fresh approach to the office.

He accused Ambler of being a connected insider and pointed to his $200,000 primary campaign as proof.

He said the large campaign chest was the result of donations from "political action committees and lobbyists representing almost every special interest imaginable from the liquor industry to the big banks to the insurance companies, Clean Harbors and Boston Edison."

Ambler said he was unaware of special interest donations and denied any influence by them.

He took issue with Hedlund's aggressive approach.

"If this were a debate I could certainly take Bob apart on a number of issues," he said. "I am not the kind of guy who says read my lips and then does

Bryan says he would be person of reform

The planned debate between Republican Jon Bryan and U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds dwindled down to a party of one, as Studds opted to remain in Washington to vote on President Bush's five year deficit reduction plan.

Left on his own Bryan answered audience questions at a forum jointly sponsored by the Hingham and Scituate Leagues of Women Voters.

The possibility Of Studds having a conflict was known from the start, and Bryan didn't seem to mind having the spotlight all to himself.

Bryan respected Studds' need to remain in the capital, but commented that the budget should have been passed a long time ago.

He said that the reason congress was still in session is indicative of the need for change.

"It took three days to pass a $40,000 pay increase and yet it has taken 143 days and still the nation has no budget," he said.

Bryan said the state wide cry against incumbents is spreading to Washington, and if elected he would be a "person of reform."

He called the current budget plan the "wrong budget at the wrong time."

"It is wrong for the economy and it is wrong for the taxpayers."

Bryan said the plan is "regressive, hurts the poor and does not stimulate job growth.

He said that although he could work with the president, he would tell him when he is wrong.

"In this case he is very wrong," he said.

Bryan called the Gramm- Rudman-Hollings law a "gimmick."

"It is a quick fix. It is not structural reform."

He called for medicare reforms to protect services for the elderly and handicapped.

He proposed to cut bureaucracy and red tape as a means to protect the delivery of services.

"Instead of cutting benefits, we can deliver more services at less impact to the taxpayer," he said.

Moving off of fiscal matters. Bryan tackled the abortion issue.

He said he has no problem with abortion when a life is threatened or in a case of criminal rape.

He maintained his stand against abortion being used as an "alternative to birth control, gender selection or for economic convenience."

He stressed the importance of parents making sure their children are adequately informed and protected, not only of pregnancy, but of the spread of AIDS.

Studds was not completely absent from the forum.

His campaign director. Tom Lyons, read a letter from Studds that apologized for his absence and promised future debates with his opponent.

Special town meeting articles discussed

Hamilton said the work has changed since the job description was written.

On the police/fire station renovations, the board decided to postpone its vote until after a bid opening later in the week.

The advisory committee is recommending no action be taken on the article since the work is really part of the whole police/fire station renovation project.

Selectmen are recommending — as is the advisory committee — that the town transfer $64,000 from available funds to reduce the tax levy.

Selectmen are recommending — as is the advisory committee — that the town transfer $8,151.36 from available funds to the Norfolk County Retirement Budget Account.

Selectmen are recommending the town pay five unpaid bills from prior years amounting to $335.35 for the historic district commission and the cultural exchange commission plus a small legal expense. The advisory committee is recommending against the payments.

Selectmen plan to instruct committees to submit their bills in more timely fashion in the future.

Selectmen are recommending the town pay taxes on the Mitman gift. The advisory committee will make a recommendation at town meeting.

Selectmen and the advisory committee agree on recommending $46,405 for the paving of Elm Street.

Selectmen and the advisory committee agree on recommending $12,650 to be added to the short-term borrowing interest account.

Selectmen and advisory committee agree on recommending the town spend $45,000 to repair the septic system at the Deer Hill School.

Selectmen are recommending the town spend $17,097 to pay sick leave benefits for Richard Barrow, who retired recently as a police sergeant. The money is due him but Police Chief Joseph Kealey told selectmen that when he presented his budget last year there were private negotiations between Barrow and the town over how he would be paid.

The advisory committee will make its recommendation at town meeting.

Selectmen and the advisory committee are recommending the town spend $3,809.52 to supplement the outreach worker's salary account. State cutbacks have affected the position's funding.

Selectmen and the advisory committee are recommending the town spend $13,929 to cap the landfill.

Neither the selectmen nor the advisory committee are in favor of the passage of an article to reclassify the landfill supervisor. The money is not in the board of health budget.

Merchants talk about getting together

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The Village Renaissance merchants decided there is strength in numbers at their last meeting. They plan to link forces with the Chamber of Commerce and try to build a stronger business base for the town.

Renaissance leader Jackie Dormitzer finds the notion encouraging.

"Chances are they can stimulate business better by being part of the chamber," she said.

Dormitzer said there has been a schism between the two groups over a perception that the chamber was more heavily weighted in favor of the merchants on Route 3A.

"Some felt lost in the shuffle," she said. "I don't think [the perception] is necessarily true.

"They need to get together and communicate."

Dormitzer thinks one solution to the fear the Route 3A merchants dominate the chamber would be to structure the chamber into business district segments with each section having a strong voice in what goes on.

"They have a sense of being in competition — and they are — but [the village merchants] need to be a little more assertive," Dormitzer added.

Dormitzer and fellow coordinator Beth Christoffel think the Village Renaissance merchants are very creative, but could use the energy and experience of the chamber in translating those ideas into action.

The merchants also must build a broader base of support in order to survive the economic downtown.

Joint promotions and advertising have worked well for other towns, the two women said.

They hope the groups get together in time to create some interesting programs to promote Christmas shopping in Cohasset.

Getting Cohasset residents to shop in Cohasset would be one place to begin. Many merchants complain that their business tends to come from non-resident shoppers while Cohassetites head off to Boston.

Chamber founder Dan Leahy of Kimballs By the Sea said he has been aware of the perception of a schism, but countered that many village merchants have been active in the chamber.

Several village members sit on the board of directors he said, and the chamber routinely calls all the merchants in town on a yearly basis to encourage them to join.

"We've always had an open door policy," Leahy said.

Whether the village merchants choose to walk through the open door is up to them. So far Leahy said no one from the village district has contacted the chamber.

This is a 220-year-old New England antique. Only better.

OXBOW CHEST
Massachusetts, circa 1770
Over fifty Eldred Wheeler craftsmen continue to construct antique furniture. At their workshop in Hingham, Massachusetts they design, build, and finish pieces using the same methods New England cabinetmakers did over 200 years ago.
Some of the forms crafted include beds, chests, secretary desks, lowboys, tables, chairs, and highboys. Because each piece is made by hand, most people reserve them in advance. However, many items at our showrooms are available to take home.
The appreciating value of Eldred Wheeler Furniture has been demonstrated at local auction houses. Discover the affordability of these handmade pieces with Eldred Wheeler's new Preferred Collector Program.
The fall is a great time to explore New England. Plan to visit one of our showrooms.

Barrow parties ...

"I've known Dicky Barrow all my life," Joe "Skinny" Laugelle said. "The man is the biggest agitator in the town, and that's the truth. I talked to a man last week who said "That s ... o ... b pinched me when I had only had my license six days."

"When I was a special police officer, I rode with Dicky. That first day we rode around the package store about 12 times, and finally we caught some kids. Dicky put all the kids in the conference room at the police station and told me to call all their parents. The parents all arrived and started arguing with each other about whose kid had instigated this . . . and Dicky stood at the back of the room and told me to "Give it to them," Laugelle said.

Saying he had to say something good about Dickie, in front of all his friends, Laugelle added "Dicky really did keep the recreation department together . . . and he fought everybody to keep it together . . . so something good got done. He build the skating pond at Cushing Road, and I continue to wonder how he got 1,000 yards of material out of someone.

Dicky Barrow in 1943

"I wish you would stay on the recreation commission and I pray to God you never get a judgeship," Laugelle concluded.

Hunter Bobby Nash said of Dicky: "What a hunter, he hunts from a truck better than anybody I ever knew in my life. You can always tell where Dicky is from the truck fumes and the cigar smoke. Some people say Dicky is fat, but I say he's not fat, he just should be 6'9" for his size."

Poem for Dicky Barrow
By Skinny Laugelle

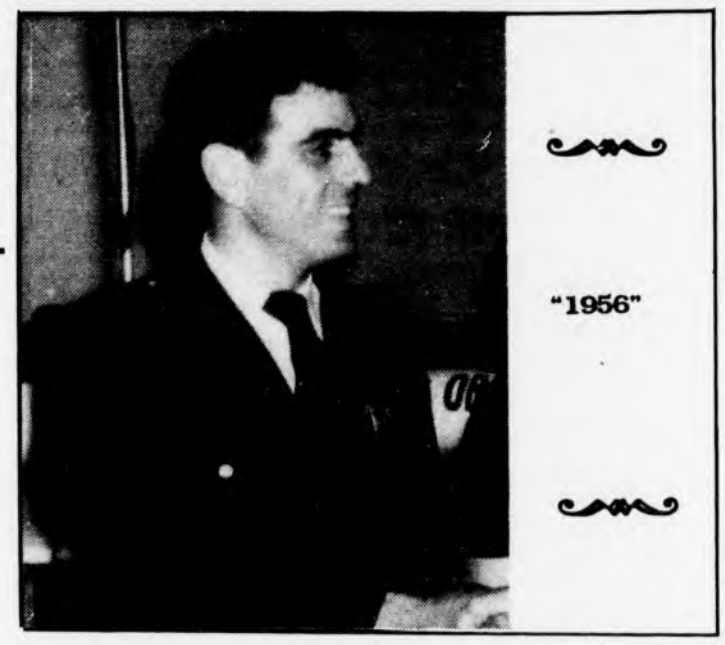
He rose through the ranks and at age 65
Decided to give up the ghost
Quit the force and take a real job
Doing what he likes most.

Recreation Commission — not a chance
Besides, he's done that already
He wants a job with more challenge to it
Something long-lasting and steady.

It's a pretty small town — peaceful and quiet
To some it seemed barely alive
Until some S.O.B. recommended upping from three
Our selectmen's number to five.

What to do now — he's retired you know
And won't do just any old thing
Hey, haddock, you know what this town needs —
Someone to run for King.

We had one once — he told us all
About how to run this and that
Up with the townies — down with the Yuppies
I think his name was . . .



At any rate Dick — the job is yours
You'd make one hell-of-a king.
Do the same as you've done since '51
You just sit and don't do anything.

I don't even know why I'm here tonight
I could be at the Red Sox game, you see
But the price of a ticket was out of sight
And I got in here for free.

Just one last thing before you retire
And I think this idea is sound
Do something you've never done before
Go to the bar and buy us a round!

Tanna Kasperowicz said "I've talked with Dicky for thousands of hours over 15 years and I can't remember what we said!"

Kasperowicz, who worked with Dicky to expand the Cohasset board of selectmen said: "It was a perfectly executed campaign. Remember how you, Tony (Fasciano) and I met Saturday mornings in my dining room for six months? Every week Ray (Tanna's husband) would tell us how we were wasting our time, that the town would never vote to multiply them. "Why would they ever want more!"

"1956"

Dicky's former campaign manager, Mary Deveney Repucci, said years ago when she first met Dicky he tried to stop her from jumping off the bridge at Government Island, which she was not trying to jump off of. "I was only taking a walk after work."

Many years later Repucci served as Dicky's campaign manager when he ran for selectman. "That was really interesting, being campaign manager for someone who wasn't allowed on the ballot. Our numbers were awful, but people who really knew you voted for you . . . and that was a lot of people."

Repucci said after she served as Dickys' campaign manager some people in town got the idea that she was responsible for him. "Somebody called me one day to tell me that Dicky had 12 dead deer hanging from the trees in his yard. When I called Dicky about it he said ". . . no, there are 16. The other four are around back."

Deirdre Deveney, a friend of Amy Barrow said "We sure appreciated all those double shifts Dicky worked weekends," saying there were a lot of great parties at the Barrow residence on King Street.

Dicky remembers breaking up one of Amy's parties while on duty. "I drove up to my house and some young guy asked me if I had a warrant to be there, and I said — no I don't have a warrant, this is my house!"

Patient's mom helps out his hospital

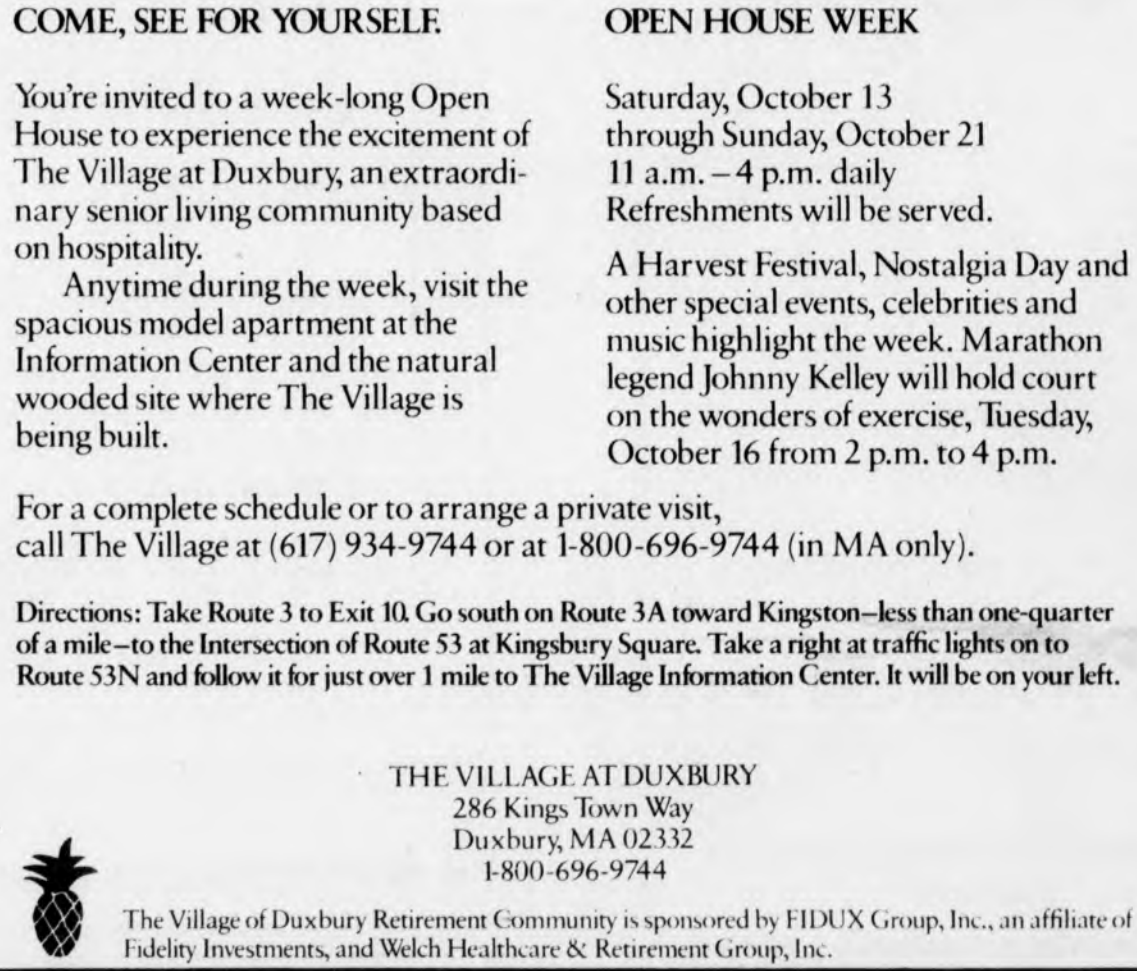
Joel and Marita Carpenter

Marita Carpenter of Cohasset knows what it's like to have a sick child. Her son Joel is being treated for cancer at the Floating Hospital for Infants and Children at New England Medical Center.

Carpenter recently helped make things easier for children who undergo painful procedures as part of their treatment. She secured 25 coupons for the Floating Hospital's "treasure chest," a goody box into which children reach when they have finished a difficult appointment.

When Carpenter went to pick up the coupons, she met Richard Lanza, Supervisor for Stop & Shop Video Centers, who donated three videos and asked Carpenter to call him if there was anything else he could do.

Carpenter also has worked on several fund raising events including "Fashion for Life," a fashion show featuring former patients of the Floating Hospital.



The Floating Hospital is the pediatric hospital of Boston's New England Medical Center, the primary teaching affiliate of Tufts University School of Medicine. The 480-bed Medical Center offers comprehensive acute inpatient and outpatient services to adults and children.

AROUND TOWN

❑ The 15th annual "Coastline College Night" will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 16, at Scituate High School from 7 to 9 p.m. in the gymnasium. The Coastline College night is conducted by the guidance departments of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, and Scituate. This year approximately two hundred and ten (210) colleges and universities will be in attendance and representatives will be present for the purpose of meeting with students and parents. This will be an excellent opportunity for parents and students of the four towns to meet with the college personnel and receive first hand information. The guidance departments encourage their juniors and seniors to attend.

❑ Everyone is hoping that Dorothy Bates is feeling so much better when she reads this this week! At press time she is a patient at South Shore Hospital, but we all know that she is a fighter . . . get well soon Mrs. Bates, your public misses you! (We'll bet that Mrs. Bates would love to receive some letters and cards from her former students, be sure to send one when you have a moment.)

❑ The good news that we can report is that Ron Beal is home and well on the road to recovery . . . keep up the good work!

❑ It hardly seems possible, but the Nutcracker tryouts for the Boston Ballet were held recently,and two local girls made it. Karla Kennedy (from our town of Cohasset) and Michelle Boyle (from Hingham) were both selected to play the part of angels (the highest part that is given to dancers at their age, which is 14). Both girls are in the cast from Dec. 14 through Dec. 30, so be sure to look for them when you attend.

❑ This is not the cover of Sports Illustrated, so we don't need to fear "jinxing" the soccer teams (boys and girls) or the field hockey team when we say that they have every shot of making the playoffs this fall. Hope that you have had an opportunity to see them in action, it's great fun and they are good.

❑ It seems as though there are a lot of get well wishes being sent out this week, and we want to include one more! Get well quickly, Al Livingston, you are missed "around town."

❑ Brooke Anderson, daughter of Mary Mulvey & Robert Anderson, 50 Pond St., Cohasset is enrolled as a freshman in the class of 1994 at Fairfield University in Fairfield, Conn. She is a graduate of Cohasset High School where she was a member of Peer Counseling. She was among almost 5,000 applicants for the 750 openings in the freshman class.

❑ Michael Jon Anderson, MD, internal medicine/hematology/oncology, recently joined the staff at South Shore Hospital. He received his MD degree from Yale University School of Medicine. He performed his internship and residency in internal medicine at the U.S. Naval Hospital in San Diego, where he also completed a fellowship in hematology/oncology. He lives in Cohasset.

❑ Happy birthday greetings go to Liz Cook this week, we hope your surprise birthday party went off without a hitch and that you had a wonderful evening.

❑ Happy belated anniversary greetings to Frank and Muriel Wheelwright. They celebrated their golden anniversary on Sept. 28, and there was a wonderful party held in their honor with all of their family and friends there to help them celebrate. Here's to many more, you are a wonderful couple and deserve the best.

❑ Hats off to Phyllis Leslie of Buttonwood Lane. She donated $2,000 so that there could be a computer for the fire department, in the hopes it will be a factor in keeping the ambulance. Such generosity should be remembered, and be sure to thank her when you see her!

❑ Mary Williams has left our fair town, and is off to Pittsburg to live with her son, Bruce. Bruce and Claire will certainly enjoy having you around, but we will miss you so please keep in touch and let us know what is going on in your new town.

❑ Hats off to Richard Daniels, John Mulligan and Elizabeth Bates, all of whom were appointed to committees in our town. All of those committees take time and energy and there is no money involved for the members. It truly takes a person that cares about our town to be on these various committees, and they are all to be commended for caring.

❑ That's the news from here for this week. Be sure to try to catch one of the games this week, either boys or girls soccer or field hockey. They would all love your support, and you'll be glad you went to see them play.

Senate debate ...

something else."

A ROLLBACK IN TIME

The two candidates took opposing sides when arguing the merits of the CLT initiative that would rollback taxes and fees to 1988 levels.

Ambler said the rollback goes too far and would "cripple" cities and towns by "drastically cutting local aid."

He argued that the rollback would have disastrous effects on bonding issues that would put people to work on public works projects such as road and bridge repair.

"The way we can get back on track is to get people back to work," he said.

Ambler proposed that rather than vote for the rollback, the public elect officials who will make the needed cuts wisely and with a critical eye.

"With my experience I can go to work immediately," he said, telling the audience he would prioritize needs and make cuts where needed.

"I know where we should be downsizing government and eliminating waste."

Hedlund, who said he collected signatures to get the initiative placed on the ballot, said he favored the rollback as the only way to trim state spending to a reasonable level. He blamed the fiscal debacle not on a lack of revenue, but on the incompetence of the incumbents.

"They had two years to sort out their situation," he said. "I feel as though the legislature, in complicity with Governor Dukakis, has brought us to the point we are at today."

He said the initiative would bring "fiscal sanity" back to the state, providing "it is coupled with change in the corner office."

"I don't buy the argument that public safety will be affected, if we make the cuts that should be made," Hedlund explained. "With the right people in the legislature the right cuts can be made."

REFORMS UNDER THE DOME

Both candidates expressed the need for reform in the Senate.

Ambler called for television cameras to be allowed into the chamber, as is done with the House of Representatives. He also called for committee chairmen to be elected by open ballot and not appointed by the Senate president as they now are.

"I think the Senate has become a graveyard of good legislation. Once you get something through the House it tends to linger and die there," he said.

Hedlund agreed with his opponent, also calling for television coverage and open voting for committee chairmen.

He said Senate President William Bulger uses appointments as "perks to buy loyalty."

He accused Ambler of "standing shoulder to shoulder with Tommy McGee" in voting down reform measures proposed by George Keverian.

Ambler countered by affirming his support of rules changes to end the system that has turned the Senate into an "exclusionary club".

OPPOSSED TO BUDGET BUSTERS

Both candidates declared their opposition to the Greenbush line of the proposed Old Colony Railroad restoration.

Hedlund based his objections on environmental impacts, the uncertainty of the necessary repair of the Neponset River bridge, and the financial feasibility of the $561 million project.

He said he disagreed with the MBTA's finance and ridership figures, and he did not want to see the implementation of this project hurt the chances of other transportation alternatives.

Ambler also criticized the proposal, saying the present administration "boondoggled" the plan.

"I think it is a terrible, terrible hoax on the people of the South Shore that honestly do believe there should be a restoration," he said.

He argued that the government has not committed any funds to the project, and the state's money continues to be eaten up by consultants' fees for a draft report that was supposed to be issued in the spring of 1988.

Ambler also took a stand against the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority, which, along with the MBTA, is an authority considered to be a so-called "budget buster."

Ambler said he voted against the creation of the authority, and later voted to give budgetary oversight to the advisory committee formed by the MWRA's participating cities and towns.

"Once you give an authority a blank check they are going to abuse it; I think the MWRA has abused it," he said.

Hedlund agreed with Ambler's position on the abuses of the MWRA.

He said the authority has been allowed to "run amok" and is considered a "patronage haven."

Hedlund questioned the credentials of the MWRA's head, Paul Levy. "He is no more than a political appointee from Governor Dukakis," he said.

He called for the authority to move out of its "expensive lease" in Charlestown and to relocate

CLT proposes large human service cuts

Voters of Cohasset and the rest of the state will have a unique opportunity on Election Day, Nov. 6, to decide, without going through their elected representatives, how much they want to pay in taxes.

They also have a chance to send Massachusetts into a state of fiscal chaos, at least temporarily until a largely new set of representatives can reorder its priorities.

It's a big responsibility, although the alternatives probably are not as drastic as its sponsor CLT (Citizens for Limited Taxation) and its rival TEAM (Tax Equity Alliance of Massachusetts) would have us believe.

We don't like to pay taxes and, as far as we can make out, neither does anyone else. If they did then voluntary contributions would be all that is needed to keep our government functioning.

But we pay taxes, usually with a minimum of protest, because we realize that taxes are necessary — a necessary evil, if you will — to pay for such basic things as police and fire protection, education, bridges, snow removal, etc.

Over the years, other necessities, most of them in the area of what is called "human services" have been added to the list and a large and sometimes corrupt bureaucracy has evolved to bring even the most basic services to the people.

There are those who feel that even the most basic services have become entangled in frills — that many of the added services go beyond the responsibilities of the government and that the large and sometimes corrupt bureaucracy is not needed to deliver the services.

That's where CLT's Question 3 on the Nov. 6 ballot comes in.

Basically, the passage of Question 3 would roll back fees charged by state agencies and authorities to what they were on June 30, 1988, and tax levels to those of Aug. 2, 1989 or Jan. 1, 1991, whichever is smaller.

In understandable numbers. The state income tax, now 5.95 percent, would be rolled back to 4.25 percent immediately, 4.625 percent on Jan. 2, 1992, and ultimately 5percent on Jan. 1, 1993. Boy, is that tempting.

And state gasoline taxes, now 17 cents a gallon and due to go up to 21 cents a gallon on Jan. 1, would retreat to 11 cents a gallon: all this in the face of a hike in gas taxes on the federal level and the soaring price of oil in the wake of the Persian Gulf conflict. That sounds tempting, too.

On the other hand, passage of Question 3 would deprive the state, which is already reeling from reduced tax receipts, of anywhere from $1.1 billion to $1.4 billion in revenue for the current fiscal year, 1991.

The trouble is no one knows for sure just what would happen if the $13.4 billion state budget for fiscal 1991 were to be slashed by $1.1 or $1.4 billion. The question itself offers no suggestions, so the cuts would be left up to the new governor and the new legislature which is to be elected Nov. 6, the same day the voters pass judgment on Question 3.

That puts a double responsibility on the voters.

And, surprise, we're not going to tell voters how to vote. We don't think anyone wants to be told how to vote.

We only caution you to tune out the hotheads on both sides of the issue and think before voting.

And we will add that we plan to vote "no" on Question 3. We don't like the taxes but this hatchet approach doesn't seem wise or fair.

Eastern Edison announces scholarships

Eastern Edison Co. has announced its call for entries in the tenth annual Thomas Edison/Max McGraw Scholarship program.

The Edison/McGraw Scholarship program is sponsored nationwide by the Max McGraw Foundation and is coordinated by the National Science Supervisors Association.

"Thomas Edison and Max McGraw were important pioneers in the electric industry of the United States," said John D. Carney, Eastern Edison president. "This program rewards today's young people for demonstrating that the inventive genius of Edison and the entrepreneurial acumen of McGraw continue to exist."

The McGraw/Edison Scholarship Program is open to public, private and parochial school students nationwide. Ten students - five each in grades 7-9 (junior division) and 10-12 (senior division) - will be named finalists.

There is no formal entry form. Entrants are to submit a proposal on a completed experiment or a projected idea which would have practical application in the fields of science and/or engineering, and a single letter of recommendation from a teacher or sponsor. Finalists and Grand Award Scholars receive their awards upon graduation from high school.

The top finalist in each division will receive a scholarship of $3,000 (junior) or $6,000 (senior) and an all-expenses-paid trip to the final judging. The four remaining students in the senior division will receive $1,500 scholarships each; those in the junior division will receive $750 scholarships.

Entries are judged on how the project best exemplifies the creativity and ingenuity demonstrated by the lives and work of Thomas Edison and Max McGraw.

"The purpose of this scholarship program is to encourage outstanding students who are interested in pursuing science or engineering careers and to recognize those who demonstrate the creativity and perseverance of Edison and McGraw," Carney said.

Students who wish to receive a complete copy of the entry requirements should contact Ruth E. Stetson at Eastern Edison Co. (508-580-1213). Entries must be mailed by Dec. 1, to: Dr. Kenneth R. Roy, National Science Supervisors Association, National Director, LISE, Suite 227, Copernicus Hall, Central Connecticut State University, New Britain, CT 06050.

Eastern Edison Co. provides electric service to more than 170,000 customers in the Brockton and Fall River areas. It is one of three retail electric utilities of Eastern Utilities Associates, an investor-owned holding company.

Coastsweep results in less beach trash

To the Editor:

Thanks for sending the photographer for the COASTSWEEP last Saturday.

Eight persons helped clean Sandy Beach, and Merle Brown's Troop 28 Boy Scouts did a fantastic job of cleaning Bassings Beach. Merle's truck was fully loaded for the RTF after the barging over from Bassings.

John Bryant rewarded the COASTSWEEPERS with a beautiful sail on the summer-like day.

Thanks again,
Sharon Becker

Bob Pape thanks his good friends

To the Editor:

Saturday, Sept. 1 was one of the most tremendous days of my life. These past nine months have been tough for me, dealing with cancer, hospitals, doctors, lawyers, etc. I've learned to take one day at a time and be thankful for it. But on this special Saturday, Sept. 1, my 67th birthday, there was a considerable amount of unusual activity out in the yard — the pitching of a tent, tables and chairs unfolding, grills smoking, an appetizing buffet materializing, a beautiful cake arriving — commotion all around. I soon figured out this was going to be a party for me. I dared to hope that at least a few might come. By the time the day was over, I had received hugs, kisses, smiles, greetings from over 300 people! (The cards are still coming in!) And best of all, those 300 people represented the best that humanity has to offer — from all walks of life, ages 3 to 93, breaking down all those walls that so often divide us. I'm so glad I was able to be present for the remarkable respects paid that day (sure beats a wake!).

Though I cannot personally thank all of you, I hope each of you will read this letter and take it personally: Thank you with every ounce of strength I have. An unspeakably warm feeling goes especially to those of you who helped make that wonderful day happen — the kind of medicine only God can provide through such incredible friends.

Each of you, through your cards, calls, letters and prayers has kept me alive and kicking well beyond those earliest predictions! It's been my pleasure being there as often as I could for my friends — and now, here you are for me. Each day is indeed a blessing, just like each of you — don't ever forget it!

With my deepest gratitude
Bob Pape

CLT referendum offers no clearcut figures

the $6.7 billion remaining for the second half of the fiscal year.

And about half of that is fixed expenses (debt service, pensions, group insurance, lottery distribution to cities and towns, some Medicaid accounts, etc.) that cannot be cut for any reason. This accounts for about half of the state budget.

So, according to some calculations, the loss of state receipts due to the CLT petition would be deducted from about $3 billion of discretionary spending remaining from the original $13.4 billion budget.

The reason for this lack of certainty is that Question 3 on the Nov. 6 ballot contains few figures and deals only with tax receipts and not the manner in which the money is spent.

That is up to the new governor, either William Weld or John Silber, who will take over in January, and the new legislature which will be installed on January.

No one 18 absolutely certain what actions the governor or the legislature will take and most predictions of the results of passage of the CLT petition are based on across the board cuts in all discretionary accounts.

Here, stripped of speculation from either side, is the official summary of Question 3 which was prepared by the state attorney general and will appear on the ballot:

Question 3 — Initiative Petition for a Law

Title of Question: Changing laws concerning state taxes and fees.

Do you approve of a law summarized below, on which no vote was taken by the Senate or the House of Representatives before May 2, 1990?

Summary of initiative petition

This proposed law would change the state income tax rate, affect language contained in certain tax provisions and regulate the setting of fees by state agencies and authorities.

The proposed law would set the state income tax rate on Part B taxable income (in general, earned income) at 4.25% for1991 and 4.625% for1992, except for income from unemployment compensation, alimony, Massachusetts bank interest, rental income, pension and annuity income, and IRA/Keogh deductions, which would be taxed at 5%.

The proposed law also provides that the fee imposed by any state agency or authority shall be no more than the fee that was in effect on or before June 30, 1988 . The state Secretary of Administration would determine the amount to be charged for any service, registration, regulations license, fee, permit or other public function, except for the rates of tuition or fees at state colleges and universities or any fees or charges related to the administration and operation of the state courts. Any increase or decrease in a fee, or the establishment of any new fee, would require the approval of the Legislature. Any increase in a fee would not apply to persons 65 years of age or older. No state agency or authority could collect any fee which exceeds the administrative costs directly incurred by the state agency or authority to produce and process the application for any license or permit. The Secretary of Administration must report information concerning fees to the Legislature on an annual basis.

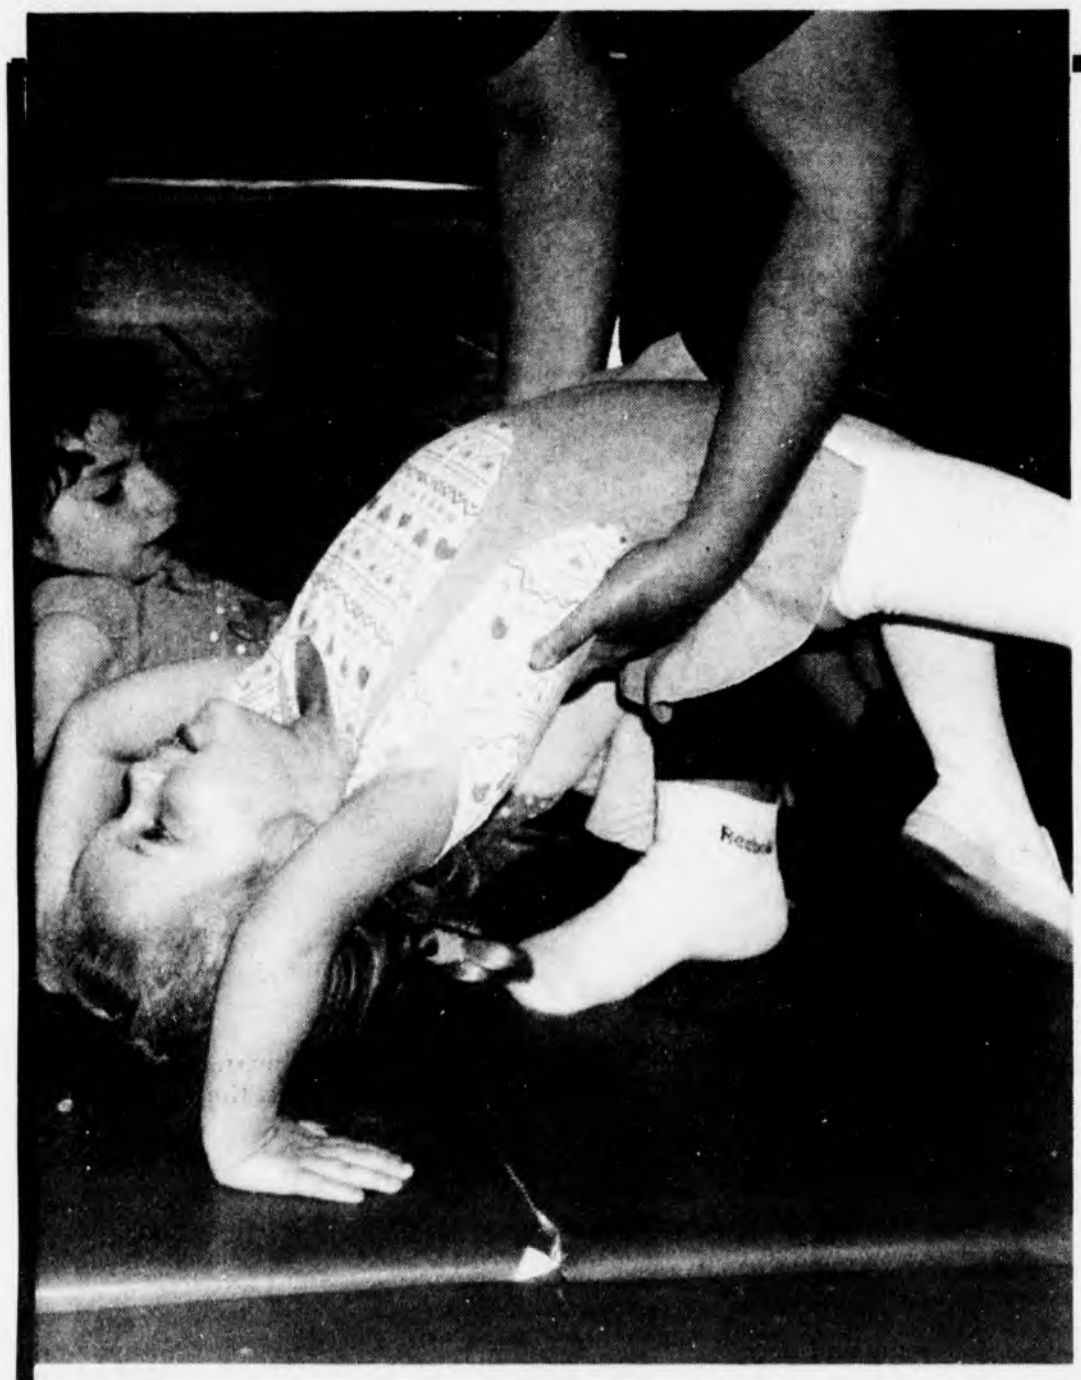
The proposed law provided that for tax periods commencing on or after January 1,1991, language in certain provisions of the Massachusetts General laws relating to taxes shall be the same as it was on August 2, 1989. or the effective date of the proposed law, whichever language yields less tax revenue.The tax provisions affected include sections relating to the surtax on business income, corporate excise taxes S corporation taxes, taxes on security corporations, taxes on Part A income (in general. unearned income), bank taxes, exise taxes on alcoholic beverages and cigarettes, excise taxes on deeds, estate taxes, payments to the Commonwealth relating to horse and dog racing, payments to the Commonwealth relating to boxing and sparring matches, taxes on utility companies, gasoline taxes, taxes on insurance companies, excise taxes on motor vehicles, taxes on urban redevelopment corporations, sales tax, use tax, room occupancy excise tax, property taxes, and taxes on proceeds from raffles and bazaars.

The proposed law also contains a provision that if any sections of the law are held to be invalid, all other sections of the law are to remain in effect.

A YES vote would make the proposed changes in laws concerning state taxes and fees.

A NO vote would not make the proposed changes in laws concerning state taxes and fees.

Best estimates of revenue losses for the state range from:



- $1.265 billion for fiscal 1991: $2.3 billion for fiscal 1991, by the Massachusetts Taxpayers Foundation.
- $1.4 billion in fiscal 1991: $2.09 billion in fiscal 1992. by the Department of Revenue.
- $1.1 billion for fiscal 1991: no estimate for fiscal 1992, by Citizens for Limited Taxation.

The state income tax, now 5.95%, up to 6.25% on Jan.1 and down to 5.95% on Jan.1,1992, would under CLT drop to 4.25%, rise to 4.625% on Jan. 1, 1992, and to 5% on Jan. 1,1993.

The state gasoline tax, now 17 cents a gallon and due to go up to 21 cents on Jan. 1. would under CLT drop to 11 cents.

The state capital gains tax, now 12%, would under CLT go down to 10%.

Volungis directs ...

Volungis was hired as director of the Cohasset Community Center.

Volungis graduated from the University of Massachusetts at Amherst. She went on to earn a masters in education. Volungis instructed teachers at the University of Missouri, and she sees the Community Center as similar to a university.

The people of Cohasset came together with determination and a lot of hard work and started to rebuild the financially ailing Community Center.

The Army Corps of Engineers came in on weekends and actually "gutted" the front room. It had been condemned by the town. The room is now used by the Seniors every morning Monday through Friday. A new kitchen was donated by a very generous but publicity shy benefactor. A $25,000 donation was available if the center could raise money to match the donation. The center met the challenge. In 1987 a new addition was put on the building. More than $100,000 has been paid back on a $300,000 mortgage. "Our goal in 1991 is to raise another $100,000 to reduce the debt owed the bank," said Volungis.

New programs were designed to meet the community's changing interests.

"I want the best here at the center. When I read or hear of a good instructor I simply call and ask them to come here. That's how I got Victor Sanborn."

Sanborn teaches speed reading.

"He had been asked by the Saudi government to come over and teach officials in their government how to speed read. I called and asked Mr. Sanborn if he would come to Cohasset and teach his course. He now drives from Andover to teach in Cohasset on Thursday nights.

"We have members who come all the way from Falmouth to take courses here. We now have a basic sailing course offered this winter. Of course we have no water or boats, but the Community Center is known as the 'Love Boat' because there are so many activities going on at once, and I'm the social director," she laughed.

"Our budget now is $400,000 per year," said Volungis. "We no longer give house tours, but we still need a lot of support." The nursery school averages out to cost about $10.70 per day for a child. Our courses are very reasonable and service our members from ages of one year old to over eighty years old."

Webster defines "Community" as; a group of people bound together by common beliefs, or interests. Cohasset's interests are well served by the Community Center on 3 North Main Street.

There are a few new programs this year at the center.

Boys Night Out Friday, Boys 5-9 yrs. old. Join in for pizza, videos, bowling, gym.

Special Needs Play Group, Group activity, exercises, socializing.

This Friday night Volungis is looking for chaperones for the Teen Dance. Please call her at 383-0088.

onto their property at the former Quincy shipyard.

"They should bring their marble ashtrays down to Quincy," he said.

WHAT IF ABORTION BECAME A STATES RIGHTS ISSUE?

Tempers flared when the two candidates were asked how they would vote in the event the Supreme Court turns the abortion issue back to the states.

Hedlund reiterated his pro-life stance, saying his "conscience would guide his legislative actions."

"It (his position) is based on principle and I am not going to be a weathervane." he said. "I will not flip-flop as Representative Ambler has after 20 years of pro-life."

Ambler, who has faced similar criticism in the past, lashed out at Hedlund, reminding him of an earlier promise to keep the campaign on a high level.

"I believe that Roe vs Wade is reasonable to give a woman that right of choice," he said.

"When I am sworn into office, and I swear to God I am going to uphold the Constitution, I have an obligation to do the right thing."

He said he was forced to rethink his personal views when he felt the majority of his constituents favored the amendment.

PRIORITIES UPON TAKING OFFICE

Ambler said his first priority on taking office would be to deal with the economy and to "get people back to work."

"I feel our biggest battle is the economy and to try to straighten it out, " he said.

"If people are not working, we have no revenues," he said. "We have to stimulate the revenues."

Ambler said he would also have to deal with the CLT petition's impact if it passed.

He said he would start right in on downsizing government and releasing funds that have been tied up in red tape. He explained that there is $100 million tied up in a highway trust fund that if released would get $400 million in federal money.

Hedlund also called the economy his top priority, but he called for a different approach to the situation.

He said as a private businessman he has felt the crunch of the collapsing Massachusetts miracle. He said his perspective as a private businessman would be far more valuable than that of an isolated legislator.

Each gave the specific cuts they would make to government spending.

Ambler said he would support a ballot question that calls for the elimination of outside consultants.

He said there is a need for some consultants and outside providers, but he was critical of the abundant duplication of services that has resulted.

Ambler championed consolidation of some state services including state colleges. He called for the elimination of the University of Massachusetts-Amherst board of regents, and for salary cuts for some of the 57-plus employees who earn over $100,000 a year.

Hedlund proposed that Medicare was ripe for reform, and that changing priority to home health care from nursing home care would save the state close to $300 million.

He said the powerful nursing home lobby has kept these reforms at bay.

He also called for smaller, symbolic cuts to be made such as the elimination of state house court officers. He accused Ambler of voting against the termination of these jobs he described as "doorholders."

BULLETIN BOARD

Notre Dame open house

Notre Dame Academy of Hingham, a Catholic college preparatory high school for young women, will hold an open house on Sunday, Oct. 28, 1 to 5 p.m. at the academy on Main Street, Hingham. All seventh and eighth grade girls and their parents are invited.

Prospective members of the Class of 1995 have an opportunity to meet NDA students, faculty and administrators. Guided tours of the facility will be given. All student activity groups will be present to give information and answer questions regarding student life at NDA. Prospective students and parents will also have an opportunity to register for the Archdiocesan Entrance Exam to be administered at NDA on Saturday, Dec. 8.

Students presently enrolled at NDA come from 35 cities and towns. Ninety-eight percent of NDA graduates attend four-year colleges. Transportation information will be available at Open House.

For further information or exam registration, please contact NDA admissions director Barbara Ratto at 749-5930 or 749-4727.

October 11, Thursday, 5:30 p.m.—Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads more of Dr. Seuss, Green Eggs and Ham, Cat in the Hat and Sneetches

October 16, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m.—Bob Detwiler's Journal: "South Shore Conservatory, Instrument for Change." Director, Jim Simpson describes the new dual mission of the Conservatory. It will continue to provide traditional instruction and performing opportunities for 2,000 families using the facility while also attempting to influence neighboring communities' schools of the educational advantages inherent in the so-called "Arts Based Curriculum." With cutbacks in what have become known as "fringe courses," art, music, drama etc. listen to Jim's provocative assessment of how damaging this might be to a student's reading, math or reading achievement scores.

October 18, Thursday, 5:30 p.m.—Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads The Great Kapok Tree a beautifully illustrated book about the great Amazon Rain Forest and Gone Fishin', the story of a boy's love for fishing and how he and his father seek out the biggest porgy in the bay.

October 23, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m.—Bob Detwiler's Journal: "The Importance of Arts in the Community." Designer Robyn Mather-Dahms, owner and operator of Ethereal Designs located in Cohasset Village and Scituate resident, writer and photographer Pamela Blevins discuss what they are doing to encourage the development and appreciation of arts in the community. They are joint sponsors of the Sunday afternoon "Leaves & Grass" program in Cohasset Village where they feature an opportunity for artists, musicians, poets, dancers, and photographers to meet and interact informally with members of the community.

Open auditions Oct. 14

Open auditions for That New Theatre's production of "Babes in Toyland" will be held Oct. 14-16 at First Trinitarian Congregational Church, Country Way, Scituate.

All performers should prepare one song and will be asked to read from a script. Children grades four and up: Oct. 14, 5 to 8 p.m. Adults: Oct. 15 and 16, 7 p.m.

Performance dates are Nov. 30 - Dec. 2 and Dec. 7 - 9 at Cushing Center, Norwell. For more information call 878-2127 or 826-7983.

Benefit fashion show

The annual fashion show and luncheon, sponsored by the Alumnae Association of Notre Dame Academy, Hingham, will take place at the Marriott Newton, on Saturday, Nov. 3, at 11:30 a.m. Admission is $30 and proceeds go towards the NDA scholarship fund.

Co-chairing the event are Patricia Beatty Delaney of Westwood and Kathleen Cleary of Arlington. Mary Jane Drinkwater of Milton will manage the gift table. Reservations are in the hands of Ann Grady Fleming and Mary Fleming, both of Medford. Geraldine Gavin Viano of Walpole heads the decorating committee and is assisted by Molly Comerford of Hingham.

Members of the Notre Dame Academy Alumnae Board are working on the various committees. For further details, call the NDA Alumnae Office at 749-5930.

Carriage House book fair

The Carriage House Nursery School will hold its annual Book Fair on Oct. 16, 17 and 18 at its 23 North Main Street location in Cohasset.

The books are from The Little Book Room in Milton, which was recently praised in the Boston Globe for its quality selection of literature for children. Hours for the book fair are 9 a.m. to 3:15 p.m. Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

A good selection of new publications plus many soft and hard cover versions of old favorites will be available for purchase. The holidays are just around the corner, so take advantage of this opportunity to purchase some good quality gifts for those special little ones.

Nutrition classes planned

Nutrition classes will be offered by the Council on Aging. Topics include: stop dieting (it doesn't work anyway); eat for satisfaction, not deprivation; enjoy favorite foods without guilt; prevent/control binges; make exercise a part of your life; increase your metabolism; eat for energy; enjoy eating out and lose weight; prepare low calorie food fast; cook for one and enjoy it; keep your bones healthy and strong.

Starting November 1, the course runs for 6 weeks. November 1, 8, 15, 29, Dec. 6 and 13, fee $18, 3 No.

As town ages, senior center reaches out

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset is going gray.

Currently, 1,450 of its residents are 60 years of age or older. That means a hefty 20 percent of the population qualifies as senior citizens — and a substantial number of them are in their 80s, 90s and older.

Susan Connolly spends her time keeping a watchful eye on the aging population of the town. As the council on aging's outreach worker, she wants to make sure that no one falls through the tattered human services safety net.

Within her limited work week, Connolly tries to target her efforts carefully to reach the seniors who may be isolated or frail.

"I'm a bridge between the seniors in the community and the services available to them," she said. One of her main goals is to keep the seniors of Cohasset active, independent and involved in community life.

In the past few years outreach work has become more of a challenge. Many of the state and federally funded programs the elderly relied on, like homemaker and home health services, have been cut back as a result of the economic downturn. That trend threatens to continue despite the ever-increasing elderly population.

Connolly said it is a challenge to keep abreast what is currently available, who is eligible and what needs the program can and can't fill.

"On any given day I could spend two hours just trying to keep on top of everything," she said. In addition to the hours she works in the office — and in the field — Connolly takes calls at home.

"I give out my home phone number and tell people to call if they need to," she said. "Many of them do."

Connolly gets the names of seniors who might need her services from a broad range of contacts. Sometimes the calls come from family and friends, other times it may come from the family physician, the police or fire department or the discharge planner at a local hospital.

The bottom line is a commitment to maintaining the close knit sense of community that has always characterized Cohasset. The council won't let the network of community relationships fray because of age or disability.

The telephone reassurance program is a key element in that network. The reassurance program worker, Mary Keating, spends one morning each week checking in on the seniors on her list to make sure they are well. She lets Connolly know if there are any problems.

Keating has also called Cohasset residents over 80 to let them know about the outreach program. Residents between 55 and 60 got calls, too, letting them know about the pre-retirement program the SHINE program is sponsoring during the fall.

Connolly makes a point of visiting people who may need a service rather than simply giving out a telephone number over the telephone.

"It's very seldom I go out and visit and just make the one referral," she said. While she may be told the person has one particular need, Connolly often finds "a home visit may reveal a variety of needs."

Connolly's apparent youth masks a wide range of experience. Her educational background is in psychology and gerontology, and she worked with South Shore Elder Services as a case manager and protective services worker. She also did undergraduate work in nursing at Villanova, something she plans to complete in the future.

Connolly doesn't skip a beat when asked what the biggest needs in the community are.

Transportation and information about health insurance coverage spring instantly from her lips. Luckily, those needs she can fill easily. Between the shuttle van and the volunteer transportation program known as FISH, Connolly resolves almost every transportation dilemma.

Transportation is an essential piece of elder services. The resources haven't always been in place. She remembers back to one case involving a man who needed to get to the hospital daily for cancer treatments.

"Transportation was a daily crisis," she said, remembering "not knowing if you could get to the daily radiation treatment."

Information and assistance with health insurance is also locked down with the establishment of SHINE, short for Serving the Health Information Needs of Elders. The SHINE program trains volunteers to handle any health insurance-related question or problem that comes their way.

One of programs Connolly and the council on aging wants to put in place is a support group for people who are caring for their elderly relatives or friends.

Many caretakers struggle with competing demands from their children, a spouse, jobs and the elderly person they are caring for. The council on aging wants to help them develop the knowledge and skills they need to be successful and link them with other caretakers so they don't feel they are the only person in the "sandwich" generation.

Each Tuesday throughout October the council sponsors a program on a different aspect of caring for elders at home.

The first two sessions dealt with the physical and psychological aspects of aging. Future programs will center on legal and financial issues, community resources and development of personal care skills.

Respite care is another program that is essential for people caring for elderly relatives, particularly those who have suffered strokes, have Alzheimer's disease or are bedridden from general frailty. South Shore Elder Services can help with respite needs and the job registry known as Services for Seniors maintained by the Social Service League is another source of help.

Unfortunately, day programs for frail elders who cannot be left alone while caretakers work or shop are few and far between. Connolly has referred people to programs in Braintree, Duxbury, Weymouth and Milton. There is nothing closer.

Another substantial number of referrals deal with emotional assistance and loneliness. It shouldn't come as a surprise that depression and other emotional disorders occur among the senior set. Dealing with the changes age brings, illness and the death of a spouse and friends is difficult.

Connolly has found the work as rewarding as it can be demanding.

"Seniors in Cohasset are among the most active, independent seniors I've ever come across," she said. At the same time there is a tremendous sense of community. She attributes that to the fact that many seniors trace their family connection to Cohasset back for generations.

"I know more about the history of Cohasset and individual families in Cohasset," she marvelled.

She and senior center director Kathy Bryanton would love to capture that sense of local history in "Cohasset Reminiscences" program. That is a project that keeps getting pushed to the back burner while the council on aging deals with the more pressing business of meeting critical needs with dwindling dollars.

Connolly worries that many of the seniors who carry the memories will be gone before the project can get underway. She regrets what will be lost.

"These people are the history of the town," Connolly said.

If Connolly could give senior citizens and seniors-to-be one piece of advice, it would be to take a chance and check out the senior center.

"Sometimes there is a misconception that the senior center is the place old ladies go to knit, eat or gossip," she said. But today's center is as active and vibrant as the average senior.

Programs in and sponsored by the center include classes and seminars on a wide range of topics, exercise clubs and program and trips to the theater, concert hall and Red Sox.

The menfolk have their own club, The Chanticleers. The 31 active members of the group led by Dr. Alwin Merrill have breakfasted their way around the South Shore. The Chanticleers is also in the process of developing splinter groups reflecting the recreational interests of the members. Possibilities include bowling, sailing, bridge, cross country skiing and lawn bowling.

Connolly touts the center as a central place where seniors can get the information and friendships they need to lead healthy, happy and productive years.

If you are caring for an elder now, or may be caring for someone in the coming years, the council on aging has the information you need. Programs on legal and financial issues, community resources and personal care skill development will be offered consecutive Tuesdays from 7 to 9 p.m. The programs are held at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Rd. Cost of each session is $5.

For more information call Sue Connolly at 383-9116.

Odermatt: thanks

Retiring Red Cross Blood Chairman Al Odermatt wishes to thank the 109 people who donated 105 pints of blood on Sept. 25 at the First Parish House, Cohasset.

Thanks are due to coordinator Corinne Cahill, R.N. and those who assisted her as receptionists, typists, canteen workers, high school escorts and girl scout babysitters.

Thanks are also due to the First Parish House, which has allowed the Red Cross the use of its premises over the last 25 years; and the Red Cross staff.

Groups participating in the Blood Drive were St. Anthony's (42 pints), Second Congregational (19 pints), First Parish (13 pints) Seavey (7 pints), Rotary (5 pints), St. Stephen's (4 pints) and others including Masons, Webb-Norfolk, teachers, Glastonbury, Beechwood Congregational and Independents (19). (94 were repeat donors and 15 were new.) Thanks to the group promoters and those who helped in publicizing this event for its success. Included in the donors were multiple donors Arne Gjesteby (14 plus gallons), Kathleen O'Leary (10 plus), Louis Eaton (12 plus) Bob Beggan (8 plus) Don Harrold (6 plus); and our young at heart donor, 82 years young, Lucille McLoughlin. (Today people over age 65 can be donors.)

Odermatt wishes to thank the many people who have been a part of the many blood drives he has conducted which have resulted in special recognition by the Red Cross Regional Board in the last three years.

He said he feels most fortunate that John and Shirley Cibelli of Cohasset have volunteered to be the new chairpersons of the future blood drive. Mr. Cibelli has served on the Red Cross Board of Directors, the Blood Services Executive Committee and as Chairman of blood drives in New Jersey.

Living Life

By Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner

Paul Lee was an extraordinary man. He was an outcast in his society, a pariah to all who came close. I will always remember the first time I met him.

He, along with his three little daughters had come to my home on the side of Pongisan mountain in a little community called So Yang Ro in the City of Choon Chun, South Korea. He was begging. His sallow skin betrayed the fact that he was a sick man. Above his sunken cheeks were two small slanted eyes, that looked down on a few grubby hairs that were his beard. He had a full head of dark black hair, and when he spoke, his high pitch voice sounded almost like a wail. The open cavity of his mouth betrayed three or four ugly teeth encased in gums that were sorely neglected. He had some open sores back towards his ears which seemed swollen and disfigured. He was poorly clad with unmatching clothes. His pants were cut off at the knees, and he had wrapped discarded old rags around and around his legs; his feet were shod with sundry socks that together with the rags on his legs made a mushy, mushy sound as he limped along with his home made wooden cane. He had a dreaded disease sophisticatedly called Hansen's Disease. In plain language, he was a leper.

Leprosy was common in South Korea in 1957. The world's largest leprosarium with over 5,000 patients was in Sorokto, an island off one of the southern provinces. We were told that we had brushed arms with leprosy every day if we had gone to the market place. Hysteria has been connected with leprosy from biblical times and is reminiscent of the hysteria connected with the AID's epidemic of today. Contrary to public opinion, neither leprosy nor aids is contagious. It is mildly infectious and if the proper precautions are taken, can not be contracted. The research for a cure for AIDS goes on. Thanks to a French nun in the late 30s a vaccine was discovered that could treat leprosy in a way similar to diabetes control. But in the Korea of my day, some did not want to be treated and preferred to be what we used to call "professional lepers." Feeling sorry for themselves, they would resort to drugs and alcohol. They would go from shop to shop in the market place begging and the shop owners would give them anything to be rid of them. They would be figuratively shouting "unclean, unclean," as in biblical times and that they were. They could not accept the events of their life. They chose to remain "unclean."

Such was Paul Lee. After our first encounter, I would often see Paul in the woods behind my home. I would go out and talk to him as he was melting down a codeine or other narcotic pill on a dirty teaspoon sucking it into an unsanitary hypodermic needle. I would tell him that I was not afraid of his disease, and would assist him if he wanted some help. He would make fun of me and of everyone around. "Can't you see I'm a leper — get away, let me alone . . .," and so the conversation would go month after month.

One morning around 4:30 a.m. over the melodious din of the local Buddhist monks at morning prayer, I heard distinct sobbing and crying outside my front door. I found Paul lying there appealing for help. I took him to the local Columban Sisters Clinic where I watched Sister Enda, a medical doctor from Westport, County Mayo, Ireland, cut off the dirty old rags from his legs and the crusty socks from his feet. She talked about recovery, and closing those oozing sores. She told him that he could be well, but that he had to make the choice. The decision was his.

Paul made the choice to recover. It was a long arduous process for him. The oozing sores began to close, the sunken cheeks filled out and the sallow appearance gave way to the true yellow of his skin. His eyes began to dance again, his few teeth were clean and a strong voice replaced the wailing sound of the past. Through some good friends I was able to help him get started raising chickens whereby he made a living, and supported his wife and their three children. I used to wonder if he would make it. But he did. He was an extraordinary man. We became good friends. In our conversation he would always tell me that the most difficult decision for him in living life was not the decision to recover, but the decision to accept that he had the disease of leprosy. Once he was able to accept that fact, once he was able to say "yes I am a leper. . .," recovery came. I have often thought of Paul and wonder if he is still alive. That was 32 years ago. But the example of his life is alive today and has always been a source of strength for me.

In my experience with living life, I have found that I am a maimed and handicapped human being, as are most of us. Each of us has our own leprosy to deal with. Each of us has been fragmented and broken in pieces. Once the initial denial of this is overcome, ACCEPTANCE is the glue that will bring together the broken pieces, and through that brokenness, a recognition that life is really worth living. Thank you, Paul, wherever you are!

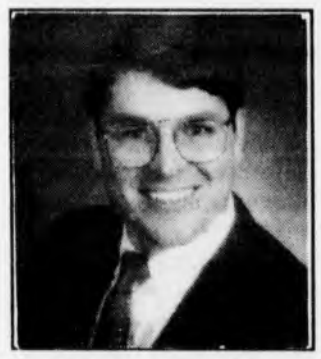
Dr. Walsh speaks

First Parish Nursery School of 24 River St., Norwell will sponsor an appearance at First Parish Church Hall by Dr. Brendan Walsh on Wednesday, Oct. 10 at 7 p.m. Dr. Walsh's topic will be "The Wonders of Reading Aloud." Public is invited to attend. Admission is free.



Dr. Walsh is in his fifth year as a lecturer on this topic to audiences representing all of New England. He is also the Director of the Chapter 1 Program in the Salem (Massachusetts) Public Schools and the father of two school-age children. He speaks of reading aloud from the perspective of both Parent and Educator. "The Wonders of Reading Aloud" is a workshop which informs, encourages and challenges parents and teachers to read aloud regularly with children.

Mildred Naun bikes along in any season

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Chances are you've passed her by a thousand times. Rain or shine, winter, summer, autumn and spring Mildred Naun is on that shiny red bike.

At an unbelievable 74, she thinks nothing of taking off over hill and dale. She rides from Atlantic Avenue out to Allerton Point and back or down to Scituate Harbor.

And she must have itchy feet because after a 15 minute rest she's ready to head back home.

Naun stays in shape for her bike rides by doing aerobic exercises every morning. She also dashes up and down the three flights of stairs to her apartment and doesn't walk when she could be running.

This lady is definitely a hot ticket.

When Naun is at home, she's tucked into a glorious attic apartment with nooks and crannies she's filled with the mementoes of a lifetime.

There isn't a boring spot in her cozy home. Even looking out the windows is a thrill — it's either views of the rushing waters of Little Harbor or starlight and birds.

It should come as no surprise that her wardrobe is as much fun as she is. The years she spent living in New Mexico are revealed in the denim and suede cowgirls duds. But she also loves the classy look of English riding habits and 1950s fur pieces.

She loves hats most of all and there are hats in wonderful old hat boxes and hanging on hooks. She doesn't have as many as Bartholomew Cubbins, but give her a chance.

Naun wasn't always a daredevil. As a child they tried to keep her quiet under the mistaken notion that she had a heart condition.

It just proved impossible.

Flying airplanes fascinated her as a child and she used to walk from her home in North Scituate to the airfield in Hingham near the Lincoln Plaza.

Her mother never knew about those walks — she thought Naun was at the library.

Libraries have a special place in her life. She learned to figure skate by reading books about it during the summertime. Sure enough, it worked.

Today she's fondest of books about foreign intrigue and suspense, particularly Robert Ludlum.

In her 50s she took up sky diving for fun and excitement. On her third jump she had a close call when her parachute failed to open until she was only 1,500 feet from earth.

That didn't deter her — she made lots of jumps after that.

She also tried glider planes and loves to go out sailing, too.

Naun may be a daredevil, but she's nobody's fool. She always wears a bike helmet and is cautious about the South Shore's crazy drivers.

She used to paint, but says she's too busy to do that any more.

If you ask Naun if there is anything she doesn't do, she'll laugh and say, "I don't knit and I don't play cards. I don't know what I'll do when I'm an old person."

The only secret wish she's never fulfilled is to ride in a locomotive in the engineer's seat.

If the Greenbush line is restored and you see a red head wearing an engineer's hat, watch out. It's bound to be Mildred.

Mildred Naun

Chiropractic for Health

Chiropractors

THE PELVIS, EXPRESSLY

The pelvis is comprised of three separate parts, the triangular sacrum flanked by two illia. Connected to each other by strong ligaments, they create a connecting structure between the spine and the hips. At this central point in the body, the pelvis acts as a large hinge. It must be balanced (level) if the vertebrae resting on it from above are to be balanced as well. This is why the chiropractor pays particular attention to the position of the pelvis. If it is thrust forward, the lumbar vertebrae directly above it will take on an unnatural curve. This improper positioning leaves the spine weak and vulnerable to injury by virtue of compression of the disc between the vertebrae. By returning the pelvis to a balanced position, the discs are relieved of pressure and the spine assumes its natural curve.

Your comfort and well-being may well "hinge" on a visit to DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. Enjoy the benefits of a chiropractic exam and discover a happy and pain-free lifestyle. We look forward to meeting you in this column in the weeks ahead with more healthful information. By appointment. Workers' Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. It is the five lumbar vertebrae directly above the pelvis which allow forward and backward bending.

CALENDAR OF UPCOMING EVENTS
Saturday, Oct. 13—Football, Abington, 10:30 a.m.

Two fish entertain Osgood

Mr. and Mrs. Fish and Baby Tuna performed for Grades K-3 at Osgood School on Tuesday, Sept. 18, under the sponsorship of PSO Curriculum Enrichment.

In the K-1 program, Mr. and Mrs. Fish taught about sea life in tide pools. Student volunteers were dressed up as a mussel, a barnacle, a sea urchin and seaweed as they learned the difference between clams and mussels and plant and animal sea life. They learned how each was adapted to safely cling to ocean rocks. "Dustin Mussel" held on by white threads; "Amanda Barnacle" was cemented on; "Doug Sea Urchin" held on with suction cups and "Rachael Kelp" with roots called holdfast. The Storm, played by Mr. Fish, could never get them to let go, much to the delight of the children.

The Grade 2-3 audience solved the problem of who made the round hole in the clam shell. Was it the crab, the seagull, the starfish or the moon snail? Mrs. Fish interviewed each sea animal to find that the moon snail had made the hole in the shell with acid from its body. The program was received with great enthusiasm as Mr. and Mrs. Fish taught sea lessons and told "bad jokes."

Mr. and Mrs. Fish are Jeff Sander and Deb Hall from Southern Maine Vocational Technical Institute in Portland, Maine. Both are teachers with extensive background in marine biology.

Cohasset Worship

Prayers for peace

A prayer service for peace in the world will be held every Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset. The service has as its focus the crisis in the Persian Gulf. Prayers of intercession will be offered. The service will last one half hour and meet in the church building. It will continue every Wednesday. All are welcome.

Mormons plan conference

The 160th Semi-Annual Conference of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints will take place this weekend. Conference sessions will be telecast live from the Tabernacle in Temple Square, Utah, and can be viewed both Saturday and Sunday at the Latter-day Saint chapel, 379 Gardner Street, Hingham from 12 to 2 and from 4 to 6. All are welcome. (No regular meetings are scheduled on Sunday.)

Drivers sought for ill

An urgent appeal for volunteer drivers to take South Shore cancer patients to hospitals for treatment, has been issued by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society.

This agency operates a free transportation service out of a "hot line" headquarters in the Hersey House, Hingham, serving patients in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

"We have had a noticeable increase in requests for transportation recently and our present volunteer drivers have been hard-pressed to respond ", Carolyn Housman, Hingham, chairman of the Service Committee of the Unit, said. "We don't want to turn down any requests because many of the patients are required to go to hospitals daily as an essential part of their 5-7 week treatment programs."

The requests have increased partly because publicly-funded agencies, such as elder services, have been cut back and are not able to share as much of the load.

Volunteers are asked to pledge one trip per month, are covered by blanket insurance and may be reimbursed on a mileage basis if necessary. In the year ended in June, 1990, some 39 drivers provided 339 rides for 45 patients.

For further information call the Hersey House office, 749-2535, or the Unit office, 341-4210.

"Our volunteer drivers find these simple missions of mercy very rewarding," Housman said. "The patients, many of whom have no other way to keep their appointments, shower them with thanks for the rides."

Benefit auction on Nov. 9

The South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society, embracing Quincy and eight South Shore towns, will stage its third annual "Harvest of Happiness" Auction on Friday, November 9, at the Sheraton Tara Hotel, Braintree. Viewing is at 7 p.m. followed by bidding at 7:30.

This event, which is scheduled as a major fundraising effort, will feature the offering of a wide range of donated articles, gift certificates to restaurants hair salons and other services, sports tickets, an autographed Celtics basketball, autographed pictures of Bobby Orr, tour of Channel 5 and meeting with Eileen Prose of the "Good Day Show" and many other attractive items.

All proceeds go to support the public and professional education programs and services to cancer patients in Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Barbara Sullivan, chair of the South Shore Unit, heads a committee recruited from the towns served, including Beth Ann Strenge, Angie Matterazzo, Tom Clarke and Ben Beres of Quincy; Mary Joyce and Denise Valentine of Braintree; Diane Mackie and Cindy Toomey of Weymouth; Candy Pugsley of Halifax; Claire Finstein of Randolph; Elaine Coughlan of Scituate; Ruth Sisson of Norwell; and Marty Paul of Brockton.

Committee members are contacting businesses, professionals, sports figures and other individuals in their respective communities for donations and are also selling tickets at $12.50 to the event which will also feature live entertainment and hors d'oeuvres in addition to the opportunity to bid on valuable merchandise and services.

Damon Reed speaks

The annual meeting of The Gulf Association, Inc. will be held at the Parish House of the Unitarian Church on Cohasset Common on Wednesday, Oct. 17. The meeting will convene at 7:30 p.m. and will adjourn no later than 9:30 p.m.

It will be open to attendance by members and non-members of the Association, alike. Refreshments will be served.

Featured at this meeting will be a presentation by Damon Reed, President of the North and South Rivers Watershed Association. Reed will describe the many challenges faced by our "Big Sister" association to the south of us and its extraordinary accomplishments in meeting them.

The meeting agenda will include brief reports by Gulf Association officers about current activities and plans for the Association. The election of officers and directors for the coming year will also take place.

Obituary

Elinor Cavanaugh

Funeral services were held at the Holy Sepulchre Cemetery in Chicago for Elinor (West) Cavanaugh, 82, who died Sept. 21 at South Shore Hospital after a short illness.

Mrs. Cavanaugh moved to Cohasset from Chicago to live with her son.

Wife of the late Leo J. Cavanaugh, she leaves three sons, Dr. Raymond R. Cavanaugh of Cohasset, Leo F. Cavanaugh of Hinsdale, Ill. and Kenneth R. Cavanaugh of Greendale, Wis.; six grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Donations may be made to St. Ann's Church (Elderly Services), Main St., Cohasset 02025.

Arrangements were made by the McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

ARE DENTAL IMPLANTS RECOMMENDED FOR PARTIAL TOOTH LOSS?

In most cases, yes. Even long time wearers of partials require periodic re-fits due to gum erosion and bone shrinkage, caused by the constant wearing away of tissue by the partial itself. Dental implants not only represent a solution to the problem of partial tooth loss, but the problems caused by partial plates as well. For more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617-826-8395.

McNabb joins new firm

John K. McNabb, Jr., of Cohasset, has formed McNabb Associates, Environmental Policy Consulting, which specializes in assisting environmental organizations, citizen groups, consulting firms, trade associations, and non-profit groups throughout Massachusetts to deal more effectively with decision-makers on Beacon Hill and in state government.

McNabb Associates focuses on the needs which organizations have to be aware of and have access to the environmental public policy process, and provides resources for organizations to be better informed about actions at the State House and to be prepared to fight for their interests.

John K. McNabb, Jr., President of McNabb Associates, currently represents the Massachusetts Health Officers Association and Walden Forever Wild, Inc. at the State House. He is a former Legislative Liaison Officer for the Massachusetts Department of Environmental Protection.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

On Sat., Oct. 6, Channel 56 aired its first issue of "Greenwatch," an environmental news magazine. The opening topic was illegal dumping. Their conclusion was that it was altogether too easy to dump in Mass. Cohasset's Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) was prominently featured. Actually, it led the show.

A truck from Channel 56 with a camera mounted to its bumper entered the RTF with 55 gallon drums marked "hazardous waste." They continued on past the RTF office to the appliance recycling area and off-loaded their cargo: three barrels of clearly marked hazardous waste. The barrels did not contain any hazardous waste.

This same procedure was tried in 32 towns. Only 10 towns stopped the truck. The other 22 towns all let the truck in to dump. In one town it dumped on a Wednesday, the day the facility was to be closed. The gate was shut; however, the padlock had not been closed. The Channel 56 crew drove right in and dumped. They found that other people had also dumped ahead of them.

In still another facility, the monitor saw that they had no sticker, questioned the driver, but let them in to dump anyway.

In order to dump legally in Cohasset, you must be a resident or business of the town and purchase an RTF sticker for the bumper of your car. More importantly, you must follow the RTF regulations, which are: There is no dumping of hazardous material; recycling is mandatory, and there is no dumping or recycling except during regular operating hours. The RTF is open Wednesday and Friday through Sunday from 7:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

If you see illegal dumping in Cohasset, there are simple procedures you should follow.

Michael Sullivan, chairman of the board of health, said "Speak directly to the RTF supervisor, Joe Laguelle. Let him know that someone is dumping without a sticker."

"Get the license plate number," says board member Bill Baird, "and report it to the board of health." This is particularly important if you see suspicious activity at either the RTF or Cohasset Heights Ltd., the commercial landfill off Rte. 3A.

"Remember, there are only two guys at the RTF," said Sullivan. "They are compacting trash, crushing glass, chipping plastic, and compacting newsprint. They have their hands full. We need a monitor as they have at Hingham. We need a third person."

"We could hire one or two people to share a part-time position to monitor the traffic at the gate," said Cohasset resident Ralph Kidder. "If there was any problem with the contents of the vehicle or lack of a sticker, the monitor would tell Joe Laugelle."

Michael Greenbaum, head of the Mass. Department of Environmental Protection, said on Greenwatch that trash management should be taken away from the towns.

Baird responded in a telephone interview after the show's airing saying "Small landfills scattered around the countryside don't work. They all leak and are hard to monitor. A few county-wide, state of the art landfills might work better. All landfills built today should be treated as if they were hazardous waste landfills. Recycling works best, however, when it's done at home and not separated out from the general trash at a landfill or waste-to-energy (i.e. SEMASS incinerator) facility."

Sullivan responding to Greenbaum's assertion said "The state is in no position to take on a problem of this magnitude. The siting and funding of a landfill are very expensive. I'd rather we did it ourselves."

Time to chip your brush

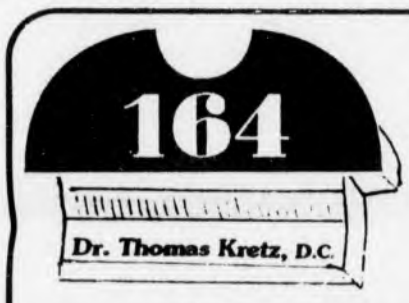
Brush will be chipped at the Cedar Street Recycling Transfer Facility on the following dates: Friday, October 19; Monday, October 22 and Monday, October 29.

Brush will be accepted at the RTF on those days only between the hours of 7:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. The program is exclusively for residential disposal.

No brush from contractors/landscapers will be accepted. With the new Tree and Park Department equipment, logs up to ten inches in diameter with no restriction in length can be chipped. Small hedge trimmings must be placed in the compost pile.

'All Night Strut' benefit

The Cohasset Historical Society will present an unusual musical event on Sunday, Oct. 14 at Castle Hill, the estate of J. Arnold Nickerson in Cohasset.



The time for a performance of music from the 1940s and '50s as performed by the acclaimed musical group "All Night Strut" is 4 p.m.

This is the third annual presentation of a musical program at "Castle Hill" for the benefit of the Historical Society. Since seating at the event is limited to 100, advance reservations are needed. Reservations are $50 per person for this unusual and unique event, may be sent to the Cohasset Historical Society, Mrs. Donald F. Steele, 344 South Main Street, Cohasset, MA 02025. Following the musical program there will be a wine buffet, an evening buffet with champagne or wine.

"All Night Strut," a nationally acclaimed group consisting of two couples, performs music popular in the '40s and '50s, with dance. They have performed in major theaters across the country, and offer a unique program popular with audiences of all ages.

For the Historical Society's special benefit performance at Castle Hill, parking will be available at St. Anthony's parking area, at the corner of South Main and Summer Streets.

Transportation will be provided from there to "Castle Hill." Further information about this outstanding musical event may be obtained by calling Mrs. Donald F. Steele, 383-1351.

CCC offers to takeover recreation

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

The Cohasset Community Center wants to expand its role providing programs for the townspeople — indeed, the directors of the center are talking about taking over all the town recreation programs.

Last week Dennis Dooley called the town's recreation director John M. Worley to open up the discussion.

"My board sees this as being like a hostile takeover," Worley said early this week.

His board, however, plans to talk about the concept. The next meeting of the recreation commission is scheduled for Nov. 1.

"They will look at it," Worley said. "The bottom line is: if it turns out to be good for the town, they would accept it."

Worley said he doesn't see it as being good for the town. He has no fears about his job. He said he was offered a chance to work for the Community Center.

"The programs could be absorbed," Worley said, pointing out that his department has other responsibilities besides the actual recreation programs.

On the other hand, Glenn Pratt, president of the Community Center's board of directors, sees the offers as a great opportunity for the town to save some money and continue present programs.

Pratt points out his organization has been providing recreational programs for the town for 48 years.

He did say some of the town programs could be dropped if they weren't well attended.

One of the conditions attached to the Community Center's offer is a request for free use of town facilities already involved in the town recreation programs.

The town's cost of running a recreation program is low because the town does not pay to rent its own field. The Community Center has no fields of its own.

Landfill owner builds offices

By Alison Cohen

Paul Barry knows it's the wrong economy for new office space, but he's putting up a two story, four-unit building on Route 3A anyway.

"It's the wrong time for it, but there are two ways to look at it," Barry said. "You can build a lot cheaper now."

Barry decided to build rather than holding off for several reasons. He said he was sensitive to residents' concerns about the lack of progress on the foundation that has been in place for sometime.

Additionally, his site plan approval was running out and soon he will need an extension to allow the unused septic system to remain on the property.

Barry had already been granted extensions on the project from various town boards and was hesitant to approach them again. Not, however, because he feared being turned down.

"They've been very cooperative," Barry said.

When he finishes construction, he thinks it will be the nicest building on Route 3A.

"It will be a first class job," Barry said.

The exterior will be all brick with white trim and copper gutters and downspouts, Barry said. Eventually he plans to add black shutters and a cupola.

The grounds will be landscaped. Barry also said he planned to work closely with the town in designing and erecting a sign on the premises.

Inside, the 7,200 square feet will be divided into four units, two on each floor. Barry will make variations to suit a tenant.

This is the first of three buildings that Barry holds permits for. The other two will remain on hold until the economy improves. In the meantime, Barry plans to maintain the site as an attractive natural woodland area.

He also bought the raggedy property on the far side of Cohasset Heights. He cleared out considerable amounts of brush and debris. Once the property is graded, he will maintain it as a meadow until a suitable buyer shows up.

"I take a certain amount of pride in my property," Barry said. He hopes townspeople appreciate his efforts to maintain the property in a way that reflects positively on the town.

Consolidation: watchword as DPW study begins

By Joseph Mont

The creation of a public works department might be in the offing as a new committee begins its charge to study the consolidation of town departments.

The DPW study committee, was created by selectmen on Oct. 6, and held its inaugural meeting on Oct. 11.

Its charge is to study the possible consolidation of at least two of six town departments to form one public works department.

The five-member committee will study the possible reorganization of the highway, sewer, wire, water, tree, park and cemetery departments and the recycling-transfer facility.

Financial implications, efficiency, effectiveness organizational structure, personnel requirements, legal framework, and a timetable for the reorganization will all be taken into consideration.

The committee expects to have a recommendation ready for selectmen by Jan. 14, with enough time to offer a proposal at town meeting in April.

At last week's meeting, members gave initial appraisals of what approach should be taken.

Committee member Mary Jane McArthur said she thought their charge did not demand sweeping changes, and did not require all departments to be reorganized.

"Our charge is to study two or more departments," she said. "It doesn't say we have to combine all six. We may find out that two is all we can do."

She said consolidating the highway and tree, park, and cemetery departments seemed to be the most feasible.

She cautioned that consolidation might not be the best course of action and there would be prob-

The warrant for the special town meeting is hot off the presses. Cohasset residents have the opportunity to vote on 14 different articles at the upcoming special town meeting.

The advisory committee hopes residents will reject four of the fourteen articles and refused to make a decision on a fifth because of insufficient information.

The advisory committee refused to recommend Article 3 which directs the town to pay off some old bills incurred by the Historic District Commission, the Cultural Exchange Commission and Legal Services. The total amount of the unpaid bills in $335.26.

According to advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby, the committee believes bills should be submitted and paid out of the budget for the year in which they were incurred. He said the committee felt it is unwise to pay off debts for committees unable or unwilling to process bills in a timely manner, as in the case of the Cultural Exchange Committee.

The bills submitted by the Historic District Commission were rejected because the commission has no budget. Gjesteby said the commission should have approached the advisory committee for a transfer at the time the bills were incurred rather than waiting for two or more years and then going to a special town meeting.

Articles 9 and 11 ask residents to approve a change in the personnel classification for employees in the water department and the landfill supervisor. The advisory committee will not recommend adoption of those articles because they contend it

No support for 3 articles

Selectmen declined to support warrant articles reclassifying employees in the water and health department and deferred action on the asbestos removal article.

Although the personnel committee approved both reclassification articles, selectmen said it would be inappropriate to take action during a special town meeting.

According to selectman Jane Goedecke, personnel changes and reclassifications are taken in conjunction with planning the town's overall personnel needs and expenses during the annual town meeting.

"The purpose of a special town meeting is to deal with emergencies," she said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby agreed with Goedecke.

"This is not a regular town meeting," she said. "It is poor policy to take up personnel changes outside regular town meeting."

Selectmen voted unanimously to "not recommend" warrant articles 9 and 11 at this time. The articles will be resurrected in the spring for action at town meeting.

Warrant article 13 would appropriate $9,000 for the removal of asbestos from the police-fire station in conjunction with the renovation work.

Selectmen deferred action on that item until Oct. 22 when the renovation committee will have examined the bids to determine if the asbestos removal can be funded out of the renovation budget.

No psych test for police

Selectmen rejected a proposal to require a psychological evaluation of all new police officers. Executive secretary Greg Doyon brought the proposal before selectmen who refused to even make a motion on the policy.

According to Doyon, the screening test would have been the last step in the selection process. Only those offered a job would have been required to take the test.

Doyon said the test cost would be $300 per candidate.

"I think it's well worth the $300," selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle said. Although Cohasset had experienced no problems in the past, Laugelle said psychological testing is an important part of the screening process.

Selectman Edwin Tebbets wanted proof of the validity of the testing and selectman Jane Goedecke worried that candidates rejected because of testing results would file grievances.

Tebbetts characterized the selectmen's action as meaning "we're relying on the good judgement of the chief."

Paving private ways

Residents of Virginia Lane, a private way off Pond Street, hoped to get the town to pave their narrow street. Selectmen rejected the request to pave the entire street but voted to leave decisions about paving potholes to highway surveyor Harold Litchfield.

If Litchfield has time and material after tending to town roads, he was authorized to give attention to the private ways in town. Selectmen said Litchfield was in the best position set priorities among the private ways competing for his time and tar.

In answer to residents' questions, the mysterious green powder appearing on the roads around town is a sealant. With the shortage of highway money, Litchfield is patching and sealing town roads in the hopes they'll hold out until better times.

Snow plowing out to bid

If you have a snowplow and love to spend your nights on the road, the town will be looking for quotation for your services this year. Because the snowplowing account exceeds $1,000 the town must seek the quotations under the state's uniform procurement act.

"This is one hell of a law," selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle complained. He fears outsiders will walk off with the job leaving town residents who know the streets — and shrubs — out in the cold.

Handicap commission tries to tally its #s

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If you have a handicapping condition or a disability, the Cohasset commission for the handicapped wants to hear from you.

The five-member commission is designing a questionnaire to identify program and service needs in the community. Filling out the questionnaire won't be a burdensome task.

Chairman Michele Buckley said the group will keep the questionnaire brief — about three or four questions that will take about five minutes to answer.

"We don't want to pry," she said, "but we want to be aware of how many people are needy."

The needs assessment survey is only the first of several goals the committee will tackle in their first year of existence.

Another major goal is identifying and gathering information about resources available in the community. They hope to place the resource data bank at town hall and find ways of sharing the information with the community.

They will also inventory the equipment available for handicapped individuals. That information will be part of the resource bank as well.

Making sure residents get the help they need is also on their list of things to do. The members plan to be advocates for the handicapped residents of Cohasset.

They also will work closely with other town groups. Members have already volunteered to work as liaisons with the fire department and police departments, school system and council of aging.

Finding out which private and public buildings serving the public are accessible is high on their list, too. And Buckley is Cohasset's official community access monitor.

People doing renovation work or building a new structure used by the public such as a store, restaurant or office building are required to make the building fully accessible to the handicapped.

"We're not going to hurt anybody," Buckley said. "We want to help. We will work with people, not against them."

Buckley has already been consulted on the police-fire renovation project. She expects this role to be a piece of cake since Cohasset's building inspector, Bob Egan, is so aware and active in enforcing accessibility regulations.

There are creative solutions to every access problem, she said. The commission members will share their knowledge with private individuals with disabilities as well as businesses and the town.

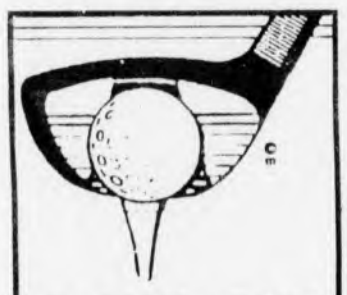
If you think you won't need that information, life could surprise you. Some disability groups call non-handicapped people "TABs" — for Temporarily Able-Bodied.

Illness, accident or the normal aging process can produce disabling conditions. Simple alterations can make a world of difference. For example, replacing traditional doorknobs with commercially available door handles allows people with severe arthritis to open and close doors easily and painlessly.

People facing a disability will find the commission a wealth of knowledge. Buckley is pleased about the variety of perspectives the group brings to the work of the group.

Some members are single, others are parents. There are young adults, middle-aged people and older adults.

Several members have disabilities, another has a disabled child. The group has a computer expert, an educator and librarian, two engineers, an occupational therapist and business people.



"We see great possibilities," Buckley said, "but we would like to hear from other people.

The commission meets the second Tuesday of every other month. The next meeting is set for Nov. 13. Meetings are held in town hall.

Residents can write to the group, in care of town hall, if they prefer.

Gardeners meet Oct. 24

The Junior Gardeners of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will hold a meeting on Oct. 24 at 3:30 p.m. at the First Unitarian Parish House. For information call Lee Androski at 383-1861.

Bob Pape holds many strong convictions

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When outsiders talk about Cohasset they make a big deal about the breathtaking ocean views, the magnificent homes and the quaint little village. But Cohasset's heart is in her people. They turn a piece of land and a bunch of buildings into a community.

One of the people who has helped to shape and guide Cohasset is native son Bob Pape. The Rev. Gary Ritts describes him as a big-hearted man who would do anything for you.

But make no mistake. This man is no spun-sugar angel or cream puff.

"Don't say too many flowery words about him or no one will know who you're talking about," his friends warn. He is, they say, a man of definite opinions and strong convictions.

He is also a man of many friends. Pape found out just how many friends he has when he was diagnosed with cancer 10 months ago.

His cancer is an inoperable tumor perilously close to his heart. When it was diagnosed, his doctors told him he only had 30 to 90 days to live.

The first months were so rough he sometimes prayed to die. Something saw him through — something and thousands and thousands of well-wishers.

They sent cards and letters, called him on the phone and visited him. Ten months later those calls, cards and visits are still coming strong.

In the living room of his doll-house-sized house are baskets overflowing with those cards and letters. They are talismans that see him through the hard days and nights that still come.

Sept. 1, those friends threw a surprise party to end all parties. He turned 67 that day.

Pape was given a throne of honor — otherwise known as a lawn chair — beneath a tent on his lawn. More than 300 people showed up to help him celebrate.

"I never took the time for a social life," he said in wonderment. "It's quite a thing to have friends after you do business with them."

Work was his whole life. When Pape wasn't tending to his business as contractor, he was working on the town's business. He served on the advisory board, the board of registrars and as a counter at town meeting.

"My whole life was work," he said.

There was time for other things though. Quietly and privately, Pape went about extending a helping hand to folks who needed it. He never expected anything in return, not even thanks.

The people he helped remembered the kindnesses though. They are among the many who are supporting him with their love and care.

Pape was born 67 years ago in a house on King Street.

"I was brought up in poverty in the depression," he remembers. "We were about the poorest people in town."

Pape started out as a dairy farmer. He took care of 60 Holsteins on The Oaks Farm. They produced, processed and delivered the milk.

Pape is not sentimental about the life of a dairy farmer. The work was back-breaking and left no time for anything else. Dairy cows, he said, have to be milked when they have to be milked.

In 1962 he started up a business as a small contractor. He discovered he had a real knack for business. It was that knack that made him a natural for the advisory committee.

"I can never remember a name, but I can always remember a number," he joked.

Taking care of the town was a natural extension of the way he took care of neighbors and friends. You did it because it was the right thing to do.

He misses his involvement with the town. This year he probably won't be able to make it to the special town meeting. After months of feeling good because of some experimental medication he was trying, Pape has been experiencing some really bad days.

If the good days come again, Pape has plans. He would like to go back to Disneyworld, but the other day what he most wanted to do is climb on the tractor and mow the grass.

His other big wish is to get up at town meeting and speak publicly. Pape has things he'd like to say. Some of what he's keeping close to his vest may be strong medicine, but he thinks town meeting needs a dose.

Afterall, Cohasset is his old home town. It's his job to help shape and guide her future.

Financial aid handbook now available

Prospective and current college students can find out how and when to apply for state, federal, and college-supported financial aid programs in the new "Handbook on Admissions and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts", published by the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts (AICUM). Publication of the "Handbook" occurs during Higher Education Awareness Month in Massachusetts, which takes place in October and involves programs and activities on college campuses, high schools, educational and social service centers throughout the State. Information about Higher Education Awareness Month is being coordinated by the Higher Education Information Center at the Boston Public Library in Boston.

The 24-page, AICUM "Handbook" tells prospective and current students and their families how to find out if they are eligible to receive financial aid, where to get the application forms they will need, when to apply, and where to get more information.

The "Handbook on Admissions and Financial Aid at Independent Colleges in Massachusetts" is available free by writing: AICUM, Suite 1224, 11 Beacon Street, Boston, MA 02108-3093.

Building inspector told: get tough

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen met with building inspector Robert Egan to assure him of their support for his efforts to enforce town zoning bylaws. The meeting was precipitated by an accusation in the planning board minutes that the selectmen would not enforce the bylaws for fear of lawsuits.

"We are making sure the public knows we intend to enforce the bylaws. We are not afraid of litigation," selectman Jane Goedecke said. "We require you to enforce the law . . . uniformly and vigorously."

Egan told selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle he had no problems or concerns with the board of selectmen.

Town counsel Richard Henderson told selectmen he had written a letter to the planning board protesting their allegation that the town was not pursuing bylaw violators. He recommended the board do the same.

Henderson also said the town had filed three criminal complaints against sign bylaw violators. One of the complaints, involving the"big yellow portable sign" at Mr. Roberts, was settled out of court Oct. 15.

According to Henderson, the owner of Mr. Roberts agreed to pay a $500 dollar fine and officially acknowledge he never had the right to display such a sign. In return, the town dropped the criminal charges.

Henderson said the remaining cases were well on their way to resolution. Additionally, he said the illegal neon signs were either being removed or the owners were filing for special permits and a zoning hearing is scheduled in the Cohasset Plaza sign complaint.

Henderson said the process has been slow because of the inherent delays in the hearing and court procedures.

"The days when you could just go out with a shotgun and blow signs away are gone," Henderson said.

Egan agreed with Henderson's assessment of the situation.

"I'd like to shoot [Mr. Roberts' portable sign] or put it in the back of my truck and drive it to the dump," Egan confessed, "but I can't touch it."

He believes he may have more success now that one business has been forced to pay a substantial fine.

"Now we have a precedent," Egan said.

Egan remarked that the sign problems seem to be centered in one particular place. He said he thought the merchants may be hanging up grand opening banners and flags in order to do whatever they can do to attract customers.

"It doesn't necessarily make them bad people," he added.

"I feel sorry for business people out there today," Laugelle said. "They're going down left and right. It's tough out there."

As sorry as he felt, Laugelle told Egan to continue to enforce the bylaws.

Other zoning complaints were discussed, including the proliferation of political signs, unregistered motor vehicles and lingering debris from a demolished boat.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby asked Egan what could be done about people posting campaign signs prior to two weeks before an election. Egan replied that he had a set of guidelines controlling political signs, but no bylaws on the matter.

According to Henderson, a property owner can maintain no more than two unregistered motor vehicles on his property unless they are stored in a garage. Egan said he tended to give a little leeway when an individual was making repairs to personal vehicles.

Debris from the destroyed boat is junk and is prohibited by bylaw, Egan said. He will pursue the matter.

Egan warned selectmen that if he gave a property owner or business a deadline that was not met, the next step was to begin court proceedings. The earliest court date would not occur until 30 days after the deadline expired.

He also said he was experiencing a fair number of zoning complaints arising from neighborhood disagreements. Egan said he responds to all inquiries and complaints.

AROUND TOWN

❑ I had a nice note from Ellery Clark last week, he reported as follows, "Hooray! Have been invited to compete in National Senior Olympics, 1991, at Syracuse. In 11th annual Maryland Senior Olympics, went 4 firsts, 1 second, 1 third. Beat previously undefeated 1,500 meters race champion, set new meet and track record in 400 meters dash, also winner in 800 and 200 meter dashes. Counting our four track wins at Quincy in May, now have 8 Consecutive Track victories in Senior Olympics, age 80 plus. Am also only senior Olympian to show improvement in each of my 21 performances every time in the last three years. I am a holdout against the old general truth "as you get older, you also get slower." Congratulations, we'll all be cheering you on!

❑ Let's all give Dick Streeter a standing ovation, he is one happy golfer these days! He got a hole in one at Round Hill Country Club in Sandwich last week. For all of you golfers he used a 4 1/2 wood. It was on the 15th hole, which is a par three, 179 yards. Now that he isn't spending all of his time behind a desk helping our students, Dick can play golf three times a week, walking all the way! It certainly is great to know that the Streeters are so happy in their new home, but we miss them!

❑ One Cohasset resident sure made the news this week, the National Enquirer in fact! The October 9 issue had a picture of Diane Convery on the cover as being the new girlfriend of Eddie Murphy. Diane used to be Donnie Wahlberg's girl (for those of you who don't know, he is a star of New Kids on the Block). Diane is a student at Los Angeles and is 20 years old. She sure should have some stories for us when she comes home for vacation!

❑ The flag is gone again, the one on the Common that is. This is the second time that it has happened. The last time was ten years ago when the men around town sold hats to purchase one. Whoever stole it just cut the ropes and took it! Never mind what it means symbolically, the flag costs $400! Come on guys, give it back!

❑ Lots of you will remember Bill and Joan Bell and their daughter, Cindy. Well, Cindy is in the hospital and not doing well at all...The thing that we can really do to cheer her up is send cards. Cindy is at the Mary Hitchcock Hospital in Hanover, New Hampshire. Cindy would love to hear from all.

Enjoying the last carillon concert of the season are two Cohasset toddlers. Both are a year-and-a-half. Left is Alyssa Campbell, daughter of Janet and Joe Campbell. Katherine Keough, daughter of Louise and John Keough, is on the right.

❑ Speaking of hospitals, Burt Pratt isn't feeling very well as this is being written. It seems he had a gallbladder problem to complicate his surgery on his knees, and is quite ill. Let us hope that he is well and able to read this by the time it comes out this week. Get well, Burt, everyone misses you

❑ The cheerleaders had such a fantastic turnout for their last clinic that they are planning another. It will be held on October 29 from 3:15 to 5:15 p.m. at the Sullivan gym at the high school. Registrations are now being taken, for more information call Ruth Ann Sargent at 545-3058. These cheerleaders are really working hard for their fundraisers, and the kiddos get to learn the cheers, jumps, pyramids, gymnastics and more. Call today.

❑ The PSO will be hosting its fifth annual Monte Carlo Night November 3 from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. This year it will be held at the Community Center and tickets will be $20 per person (which includes a start up stake of $5). Hors d'oeuvres and sweets will be catered by Arthur Roebuck of the British Relief in Hingham. The proceeds from the evening will be used to benefit the PSO Curriculum Enrichment Programs for all three schools. There will also be a cash bar with the proceeds benefitting the Community Center. Call Kathy Gray for tickets at 383-2718.

❑ Pat Baird and Elaine Smoot did some serious cookie baking for the Deer Hill School. They made cookies in the shapes of apples—enough for everyone— in an effort to remind students of the campaign "Apples for the Students." They are co-chairing this year's campaign. Again this year we are asking for the community's support in saving all your blue tapes from Stop and Shop and all of your white tapes from Bradlees. The campaign only runs through Dec. 29, so save them and turn them in to boxes around town or give them to trick or treaters when they come around.

❑ Recently exhibiting some of her outstanding work at the Interior Design Show in Boston was Ellen Morrissey, of the Design/Build firm E. McAuliffe Morrissey, Inc. Ellen lectured on the subject of "Building Your Dream House" with such informative insights as to new products and resources that she has been asked to participate in next year's Show Lecture Series.

That's the news from here, please call me with your latest happenings!!

lems to work out.

One immediate issue is the lack of a central location for a new department.

"We have our equipment spread all over town," she said.

Any new construction would cost the town money, and should be avoided, she advised.

Building a central facility has been suggested in the past, she said, but the cost and the failure to find a suitable site have kept the project from materializing.

Concerns were raised that the organizational structure of some departments would make a merger difficult.

The highway superintendent is elected. Selectmen appoint the tree, park, and cemetery department. Private contractors run the sewer plant under the control of an elected sewer commission. The water department is independent from the town but overseen by an elected commission and the recycling transfer station is overseen by the board of health.

Greene said the sewer department often works closely with the highway and water departments and they might be able to pool equipment.

The committee spent part of the meeting brainstorming on what could be done with several departments.

The need for a wiring department was debated.

The wire department handles most town and school electrical problems, including fire alarm and wiring inspections.

McArthur questioned if the department was needed and said many towns, such as Hingham, hire electrical inspectors for these jobs.

Greene defended the department and said Superintendent Steve Wigmore's duties are more extensive than what an outside contractor would provide.

He said Wigmore maintains fire alarms and acts as a town liaison with Boston Edison.

The department also handles street light maintenance and a host of other town needs.

Greene said he thought the department was small and well run and saw no need for changing how it is handled.

"For what are we paying, I don't think that it is a very expensive department," he said.

The sewer commission is elected and oversees a contract service not paid by the town.

The legal aspects of any change to the department would have to be reviewed.

The water department was discussed as one department that would be immune to change.

Greene said the water department is "starting to show a profit for the first time in 30 years."

McArthur expressed a laissez-faire attitude to the department.

"I don't like to say we should not look at the water department. I just think we should put it aside and concentrate on the others," she said. "My own personal feeling is if we cannot effect a change there is no point in changing," she said.

The committee will have to determine what employees are licensed before any personnel changes are considered.

"You cannot just pick somebody, they have to be licensed," Greene said.

Sewer department employees are all licensed. Tree and park workers have to be licensed in order to handle insecticides.

Chairman Terry Athertan suggested the committee look into the consolidation of administrative functions between the departments to save money.

Over the next few weeks the committee will meet with department heads for their input.

Don't give up yet

There's talk about doing away with the recreation commission.

People who want to make the change think the Cohasset Community Center could handle all the town's recreation needs.

The idea hasn't actually come up for public discussion as yet. We understand someone from the Community Center approached recreation director John Worley last week with the idea.

We believe the town should keep on doing what it does well. The recreation commission opeerates good programs at low cost.

Not that the Community Center doesn't offer good program too.

The difference between the programs often focuses around the type of space needed. Many of the recreation department's sports programs require the use of town fields. The price of the programs would be increased if the fields were rented for the time.

Does anyone in town want to pay more to get the same services? We doubt it.

The people talking about making the change say this will save the town money. Obviously anything that can save the town money is a good idea in these hard fiscal times.

But there's another way to go about cutting the recreation budget without tossing out the entire department. There is no reason the recreation department cannot become self-supporting. Fees for the simple programs offered – soccer, etc. – can be raised to cover their operating costs plus part of the overall cost of administering the recreation program.

Most of the programs now offered by recreation are already self-supporting.

We understand the recreation commission would rather keep the fees as low as possible to make the programs accessible to people in all income ranges.

We understand only four programs are operating now on a deficit budget. The four programs that the town subsidizes are: summer playground, soccer, basketball and youth tennis.

Somehow the idea of going to town meeting and proposing to abolish the expenditure for the youth sports programs sounds a bit far-fetched.

Who could stand up and be counted as opposed to the $15,000 expense?

But all that aside, it's unlikely that the elimination of the recreation programs would save the town anything.

Some of the recreation department work would still have to be accomplished – the department administers the beach sticker program as well as overseeing maintenance at Milliken and Beechwood fields. It could be that if the revenue-generating programs were dropped, the town might have to pump more money into the same tasks.

The bottom line for the town is that the recreation department is viable, efficient and a good buy.

If the Community Center has problems operating in a tough economy, we think they ought to look to the private sector for help. We wish the Community Center well. We hope it grows and flourishes.

Chamber votes to oppose CLT

Letters

To the Editor:

As you may know, the South Shore Chamber of Commerce Board of Directors has voted 20-7 to oppose the Citizens for Limited Taxation (C.L.T.) petition to roll back taxes and fees to their 1988 levels. For our chamber board, a leading advocate of cuts in state government, this vote was a difficult one and the result of many months of soul searching and debate.

The board vote was taken for a variety of reasons, but primarily because what seemed like a workable solution in the summer of 1989, would now spell financial disaster in the fall of 1990. This region's economy has taken a nose-dive the past six months and we believe the passage of the C.L.T. question will only exacerbate this free-fall.

State revenues from all sources are expected to barely rise over the next two fiscal years. Corporate revenues will be flat. Meanwhile, the state's fixed costs continue to rise at a pace far exceeding these expected revenues. For fiscal year 1991, which will end on June 30, 1991, the projected deficit from the most conservative estimates is $500 million. Setting aside the impact of the C.L.T. petition, (already some $700 million has been cut from this budget) at least $500 million more will have to be cut by June 30 of this year. Of course, we will continue to play a leading role in offering cuts and re-structuring packages over the next few months.

If the C.L.T. petition passes, $1.2 billion will have to be cut out of state government over six months in this fiscal year and over $2 billion in fiscal year 1992. If you add in the $500 million projected deficit for this year, $1.7 billion will have to be cut out of state government from January 1, 1991 to June 30, 1991. Where will these cuts come from! Of the $13.6 billion state budget, over $8 billion is considered non-discretionary funding. These dollars are tied up via contracts the Commonwealth has already signed, federally mandated programs or in the case of local aid, obligations the state has committed itself to. These funding areas include the payments due on the Commonwealth's debt service, pension payments, workers compensation payments, Medicaid payments and payments to aid for families with dependent children. These obligations account for just over 60 percent of the state budget. Of the remaining 40 percent, some $5.3 billion remains in discretionary funding. Of course, this figure must be halved, as only 6 months will remain in fiscal year 1991 when these cuts take effect. So out of $2.65 billion in discretionary funding will come $1.7 billion in state government cuts.

If there were a feasible way of slashing $1.7 billion over 6 months, we would be the first to tell you. Our previous cuts and re-structuring packages have been a beacon for anti-tax groups and legislators to look to. We continue to offer our solutions but not even ours can come close to what the C.L.T. petition will do to state government. Did we "draft" the C.L. T. petition? No, not really. Yes, we were involved in the first meeting, but we missed the second when it was decided to roll back the personal income tax increase to 4.25 percent, not the 5 percent as agreed upon in the first meeting.

Have we given up the fight against taxes? Of course not, we are one of 24 co-petitioners filing suit challenging the constitutionality of expanding the sales tax to 594 business services not previously taxed. We also continue to offer plans for cuts and for the re-structuring of state government.

One re-structuring alternative we would like to see is a centralization of the accounts receivable function of government, a move that could save taxpayers $60 million a year. We believe this and other changes are doable because a new administration will take office in January and, of the 160 House members, over 40 will be new to government, all of whom ran on an anti-tax platform. The time has never been better to change the direction of state government. The board believes that the C.L.T. petition has gone too far.

For those of you disappointed in the board vote, please, do not lose heart. We will continue to advocate for cuts and re-structuring in state government. We will follow through on our law suit regarding the constitutionality of the expansion of the sales tax, and we will continue to fight on your behalf on Beacon Hill on issues such as mandated health care, unemployment health insurance reform, workers compensation reform, and the myriad of issues that directly impact your bottom line.

Obituary

Mary C. DeRocha

Funeral services were held at St Anthony's Church Oct. 15 for Mary C. (Figueiredo) DeRocha, 75, who died at her home Oct. 11 after a brief illness.

Mrs. DeRocha was a lifelong resident of Cohasset.

Wife of the late John DeRocha, she leaves a sister, Julia Perry-Sylveria of Mattapoisset; and several nephews and nieces.

She was the sister of the late Louis Figueiredo, Emanual Figueiredo, John Figueiredo, Joseph Figueiredo and Lawrence Figueiredo.

Burial was at Woodside Cemetery.

Funeral arrangements were made by McNamara-Sparrell Funeral Home.

Donations may be made to the Hospice of the South Shore, 40 Franklin St., Braintree 02184.

Selectmen hope that whoever took the town common's American flag will return it with no questions asked. The board also suggested precautions to make it more difficult to steal the flag next time, such as coating the pole with white grease.

School computer need explained

By Susan McFadd
Special to the Mariner

For those of you who may question why the library at Cohasset Junior/Senior High School needs a Mac SE computer as a vital component of an integrated work station, I'd like to give you a few reasons (and also how we hope to fund it).

Apple Computer and Stop and Shop, as you may know, are sponsoring another "Apples For Students" program which will run from Sept. 30 to Dec. 29, 1990.

We are asking everyone to save their Stop and Shop receipts and drop them off in the designated boxes in the three schools because we believe this workstation (of which the Mac would be a vital component) is a tool which will benefit all three schools.

By now you are probably wondering how on earth a computer housed in the Junior/Senior High School could possibly benefit Osgood and Deer Hill Schools.

In the past the two elementary schools have availed themselves of materials from the Junior/Senior High School library. We have traditionally worked with individual teachers and students to provide these resources.

The workstation would enable students and faculty in all three schools to access such technology as Compton's Multi-media Encyclopedia and/or World Book's Information Finder, not to mention the following video discs in various fields hopes to acquire.

1.) "The National Gallery of Art" — a magnificent collection of 1645 paintings, sculptures, and prints from the National Gallery of Art in Washington.

2.) "Salamandre-Chateaux of the Loire" — available in both English and French.

3.) "For All Mankind" — chronicles the history of man in space...

Church women thanked

To the Editor:

On Oct. 8 we celebrated Native American Day, Columbus Day and in a far less spectacular way it is also the tenth anniversary of a service group in Hingham who have opened their hearts and arms to some elders on the South Shore. The above group have embraced about 50 Elders from various towns on the South Shore — Duxbury, Scituate, Cohasset, Hingham, Rockland, and others. This is perhaps better called a missionary endeavor given by marvelous younger women to elders who might be their mothers or others in that age category.

The base for these marvelous women is the South Shore Baptist Church on Main Street in Hingham.

One day a month they serve what is called an old fashioned name — The Friendship Circle. In my much younger days this serving group would have perhaps been called still another old fashioned name — The Willing Workers!

They have for these 10 years put on a delicious noontime dinner with decorations fit for royalty or a beloved mother. No effort is spared either in the preparation of the food or the serving. Every month at our "place" we find little tokens of special attention — little meaningful favors — and this month the tables were decorated with old fashioned straw hats — and at our places we found little name cards of former or ill members who can no longer — at least — for now make it. Mine was a card with a little hat — and the name "Marcie Winslow." Marcie is a Native American descendant from Cape Cod ancestry. So this month also calls attention in her lifetime of this special recognition of her heritage.

Each of us has been asked to join for a special personal reason — for friendship especially. From this we get a sense of bonding, an appreciation of what service is and how it can be obviously connected with caring love.

Amongst these women are those we would not have met otherwise; a doctor with foreign missions; two lovely ladies from Long Island who have a little cottage in Cohasset which is a reminder — to me at least — of the depth of a Maine heritage; some special ladies from Rockland; and for me a great lady from my own church who sensed that I was in need of just such a group. I brought a guest who does not have a car and would not have known of this wonderful opportunity unless I had first experienced it. She joins me in her thankfulness also.

It is important to mention this is not merely an eating group — they have taught us how to give little services ourselves. But this week, the opening for the year, we had a marvelous lady — who had the fun of a discussion on hats! She also brought little no-longer-needed treasures and we could — if we wanted — take some of them home. I picked a marvelous French felt cloche — like the ones Gloria Swanson wore and those that appeared in fashion photography and drawings. I can just barely remember those cloches and I guess they were also fashionable for a long time.

This is a small group (as public groups go) and the facilities are not set up for greater ones. But it does serve elder Americans in a positive and important way. These younger women have the knack of making us feel special. And another thing is we are "listened to." When they ask for suggestions - - they mean it and they do "hear." All of these women are special — the servers and those being served. We are given also the gift of being made to feel we count. And that is perhaps the best gift of all.

The women of the South Shore Baptist Church have for 10 years been giving of their unique talents. All of us who are being so honored give thanks to them. We come away from this gathering with happier hearts and a feeling we are being acknowledged. And we also learn what caring means in a really personal touch.

Don't expect too much of this contributors — a new great grandmother — it is impossible for me to remember all of their names so it is wiser to hug them together and tell them they are not serving ungrateful participants. We do love you — and the deeper meaning of your caring is not lost on us. Happy tenth anniversary to these community missionaries.

Christmas seals set to go

To the Editor:

Sometime in the next week or two, you will receive Christmas Seals from the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association in the mail. As always, their color and design will capture the sentiments of caring and good will that is part of the holiday spirit.

Christmas Seals have been a tradition in this country since 1907 when a Delaware woman, Emily Bissell, borrowing a Danish tradition, introduced the first Christmas Seals to save a small tuberculosis sanatorium on the Brandywine River. With $40 borrowed from friends, she designed and printed 50,000 stamps in the hope of raising $300 to prevent the hospital from closing.

From that auspicious beginning, the power of Christmas Seals has continued to grow. Early on, Christmas Seals helped to eliminate tuberculosis as a major health menace in this country. Today, the American Lung Association is making inroads against all respiratory diseases — including lung cancer, emphysema, and asthma — through research, self help programs, and public education.

When your Christmas Seals arrive this year, we hope you will be sufficiently generous in your response, that their power may grow. It's a matter of life and breath.

Sincerely,
Joseph Godzik, V.M.D.
President
Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association

CCC is a cooperative effort

To the Editor:

We found the Mariner article on Judy Volungis, Community Center Director, misleading. As former members of the board of directors, we agree that Judy has worked diligently for the center both as a volunteer member of the board of directors and as a paid director. So, however, have many others.

Through the years, many residents, too numerous to mention, have given long hours and hard work — first, to keep the center from being closed and then, having accomplished this, to restructure and reorganize it so that it could best meet the different needs of the town.

No one member of the board of directors has ever to our knowledge "started to make changes." Any changes that have been made have been a cooperative effort — proposed, voted on and implemented by that board. There were also two other administrative directors before Volungis was hired and a very active program committee.

The center would never be what it is today as the result of the "energy" of one individual. Rather is remains what it has always been, an example of what a community can do.

Sincerely,
John Doherty

Football pasta feast is a rousing success

To the Editor:

I would like to thank all the mothers of the freshman and J.V. football players who so graciously prepared all the food for our pasta feast. Our third annual Spirit Pasta Feast was a huge success. The food was delicious, all the players, cheerleaders and coaches were well fed. There are close to fifty players in the football program this year. Not only were we able to celebrate the spirit of football in Cohasset but we were able to celebrate a victory for the freshman team. They played a Hingham freshman team and won 28-0.

Special thank yous to the First Parish Church for allowing us to use their function facilities. Since we were feeding about 80 people, we needed a larger hall, we appreciate your generosity.

Gridiron Club, thank you for your support throughout the year and for providing drinks and paper goods for this event.

We had a fantastic kitchen crew of moms. Without all their efforts this event would not be possible, thank you.

Sincerely,
Sandra Theriault

MARINER SPORTS

Soccer team rebounds from loss

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

In the past two weeks, Cohasset has improved their record to 8-2-1, rebounding strongly from a tough 7-1 loss to Rockland, a game in which forward Dan DeMichele was the only Skipper able to score against a tight Rockland defense. However, Rockland's scoring opportunities did not result from solid passing, but rather from penalty kicks and breakaways. Despite this loss, the team did not become discouraged, and went on to win their next three games.

On October 9, the Skippers secured a 2-0 win away at Carver and restored any confidence lost in the previous game. Linc Marsac was the only Cohasset player to score, but he did so twice, Bart Weisenfluh assisting on the first goal and Linc Marsac scoring unassisted on the second, taking advantage of a loose rebound.

In the next game against Abington, Bart Weisenfluh again made his presence known by tying the game up 1-1 to end the first half. In the second half, Cohasset put the pressure on the Abington defense, and scored three times. Dan DeMichele began the scoring rally, aided by the assist of Linc Marsac. Marsac and DeMichele proved that they work well together, as the next goal, scored by Marsac was assisted by DeMichele. Finally, Marsac again extended the lead to 4-1 on a lead from John Murphy. Late in the second half Abington made a final attempt at a comeback rally when they penetrated the Skippers' net, making it 4-2, but Cohasset held them back for the victory.

On October 15, Cohasset lengthened their winning streak to three games, defeating East Bridgewater by a score of 2-1. Marsac again fulfilled his role as the team's leading goal scorer when he managed to catch the East Bridgewater defense off-guard during the first minute of the game. Dan DeMichele had the assist, continuing to earn his playing time on the team.

The Skippers have passed the halfway point of the regulation season and look forward to the upcoming games in the hope of making their winning record better still.

It should also be noted that the J.V. team is having an extraordinary season, the best in many years. With an undefeated 10-0 record, this team's only disappointment is that there is no playoff tournament in the J.V. league. Joe Andrade and Bill Jordan, the team's leading goal-scorers, head the offense while Chris Goodman, a very capable goalkeeper with six shutouts to his credit, manages the backfield. The success of this team is well deserved as their coach, Rich Chamberlain, works them hard. With the proven talent on the team, the potential for an even stronger future varsity team is high.

Soccer team victorious

By Rebecca Kirk
Special to the Mariner

Monday, October 15, was a great day in Cohasset soccer, not only did the boys' varsity succeed in destroying East Bridgewater, but the girls' varsity team was equally dominant on the field.

From the start of the game, Cohasset's aggressive tactics overpowered East Bridgewater. Sophie Redfield scored the first goal of the game and she quickly set the pace for the rest of the team. Jen Reidy and Kathleen O'Brien soon followed up with two additional goals bringing the final score to 3 to nothing.

Heather Bass is proving to be an excellent goalie bringing yet another shut out to the Cohasset record. The junior varsity team has done equally well this year.

Monday, Becky Golden led her team to a 1-0 victory, scoring the only goal of the game. Sarah Kirk recorded the shutout in goal.

If workers go to Mideast, town will cover benefits

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If town employees who are members of the armed forces reserves are called up for active duty in the Middle East, Cohasset will be ready with its newly adopted personnel policy.

The town will continue to pay for life insurance, the town share of health insurance payments, and pension while the employee is on active duty for a period not to exceed four years.

Selectmen were unable to reach an agreement about paying the difference between town salary and armed forces pay. Executive secretary Greg Doyon will investigate the policies adopted by other towns regarding salary and report back to the selectmen.

In addition to maintenance of benefits, returning employees are guaranteed reinstatement in the same or a comparable position at a comparable salary. No loss in seniority will be experienced.

Employees must return to town employment within a set period of time in order to qualify for reinstatement.

Selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle made his support of a salary supplement crystal clear.

"We should back them 100 percent. Salary, insurance and all," he said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby wasn't sure the town could afford to pay the salary differential. She suggested checking into the policies of other towns.

"I don't care about any other town," Laugelle retorted. "I care about Cohasset and our employees."

Only two employees are known to be subject to a call-up.

According to selectman Jane Goedecke, maintaining health insurance coverage for the families of the employees is another motivation behind the policy. Selectmen did not want to see families forced to abandon established medical relationships in order to receive care at a military facility under the health plan for military dependents.

In other business, selectmen:

• Approved a request by High Line Liquors, Inc. to pledge their all alcoholic beverages license as security for two loans totalling $60,000.

• Postponed making a resolution on ballot question #5 until Oct. 29 to allow greater citizen participation.

Question #5 guarantees cities and towns will receive a set percentage of tax revenues in local aid.

• Voted to schedule a police sergeant's examination.

• Approved the harbor dredging engineering contract with Nucci Vine Associates, Inc. The $21,800 contract is subject to approval by the state department of coastal management.

School video program expands on cable

Videotime lives! The thirty-minute display of school events and activities can still be seen each Thursday evening at 7 p.m. on Channel 3 Cohasset, with a repeat at 7 p.m. on the following Monday (that's a change from last year's 6 p.m. Monday time).

However, instead of each show having some material from all three schools, four separate shows will appear each month — one show from Osgood School, letting the viewers in on classroom events, trips, and seasonal activities produced by teachers and parents and edited by students at the high school; a second or Deer Hill School happenings produced by teachers, parents and students of Deer Hill School and edited with the assistance of Deb Duggan at the Scituate-Cohasset cable studio; a third called Inside CHS, featuring a variety of curricular and co-curricular events produced by high school students; and a fourth Cohasset School Sports Update, also shot and edited by students at the high school.

Here's the Videotime schedule for the next weeks — the pattern will repeat in the weeks to come:

Monday, October 22 at 7 p.m.: Repeat.

Thursday, October 25 at 7 p.m.: Inside CHS highlighting recent events in the High School.

Monday, October 29 at 7 p.m.: Repeat.

Thursday, November 1 at 7 p.m.: Deer Hill School events.

Monday, November 5 at 7 p.m.: Repeat.

Thursday, November 8 at 7 p.m.: Sports Update of the past weeks in the schools.

Monday, November 12 at 7 p.m.: Repeat.

This year a lot more parent and student volunteers have committed to producing the shows — this should add a variety of styles to the work.

IT'S A FACT
Chiropractic Can Help
Chiropractors have a very special education and training in treating nerve-related health problems caused by spinal misalignment. Chiropractors find the areas along the spinal column wher nerves may be "pinched" by a spinal vertebra. After finding the problem, the chiropractor manipulates the misaligned vertebra back toward normal. This restroes normal nerve supply and function. The result is that the body heals itself with no drugs, surgery or continued discomfort.

MARINER SPORTS

Hockey league starting

The First County High School Hockey League is for high school aged boys who do not have a place to play hockey for the high school season.

The new league is non-affiliated and will offer players all the elements of high school hockey.

- High school rules will be amended to give players the opportunity to get the maximum amount of ice time.
- There will be three, 15-minute stop/time periods.
- High school scorers and referees will be used.

The goal of the new league is to afford high school hockey players -- who do not otherwise have the opportunity to play high school hockey -- the chance to play, says Hoby Taylor, league director at the Pilgrim Skating Arena in Hingham.

The league will consist of 15-player teams with two goalies. Teams will be made up of a ratio of freshman, sophomore, junior, and senior players with birth years of 1973, '74, '75, and '76.

The target date for starting this non-affiliated high school hockey league is the last week in November. All games will be played at the Pilgrim Skating Arena, Recreation Park Drive in Hingham.

The cost-- including shirt, ice time for 16 games, referees, scorers and coach -- is $250 per player. For more information, please call Hoby Taylor at 749-6660.

Lacrosse clinic postponed

The first Fall Lacrosse Clinic, sponsored by the Friends of Cohasset Lacrosse, The Good Sport Inc., and the Brine equipment corporation, has been postponed until this Saturday by last weekend's inclement weather.

The clinic, scheduled from 2 to 4 p.m., will be at the Deer Hill School athletic field, off Sohier Street. The clinic is open to all fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grade age boys. High school students interested in taking up the sport are welcome too, announced Cohasset lacrosse coach Ken Ekberg.

Ekberg, who will run the clinic with Brine's Steve Washburn, a former college All-American, said pizza and soft drinks will be available to all clinic participants.

There will be no charge for the clinic, Ekberg said.

Field hockey sticks are high

With four games left in the regulation season, the Cohasset field hockey team is contending for a playoff spot. Their record, 3-1-6, shows that they have lost to only one team, and thus enables them to rank second (tied with East Bridgewater) in their league. The team needs to win two out of their next four games in order to gain entrance into the playoffs.

On October 3, the team celebrated their second win of the season against Norton, winning by a score of 8-0. In this game a variety of players were able to score including Kate Murray (who scored twice), Kay Long, Daniell Shaughnessy, Barbara Lagrotteria (who also scored twice), Sarah Deviney, and Bridget Corkery.

Both of the next two games, played away at Hull and Norwell, ended in ties. During the course of these games, the Cohasset players lost their rhythm, the offense unable to keep the ball on their stick and the defense not having its usual strength.

Before the next game against Hanover, coach Debby Boswick had a talk with the team, and got them pumped up to win. However, Hanover played surprisingly rough, which rattled the Cohasset girls, ending in a 3-0 loss for Cohasset, spoiling their undefeated record.

On October 15, Cohasset earned their third win of the season against Scituate, when Barbara Lagrotteria led her team to the 2-0 victory by scoring both goals. Nicole Greco was credited with the assist on the first goal, and Lagrotteria scored unassisted on the second as she made a lunging shot on a ball going out of bounds to send the ball rolling through the Scituate keeper's legs.

Little League elects officers

The Cohasset Little League held its 1991 reorganizational meeting on Sunday, Sept. 30 at 7:30 p.m., at the Deerhill School. The following officers were elected: president, John Smoot; vice president, David Leahy; treasurer, Paul Rooney; secretary, Marie Buckley; player agent, David Buckley.

John Rolandelli was elected vice president for the Senior League and Kevin Lewis and Kevin O'Connor were elected to the position of fund raisers.

After elections were held, David Leahy moved that John Kinchla be commended for the fine job he did as president of the Cohasset Little League Program for the 1989 and 1990 seasons. The motion was unanimously approved.

A number of concerns were mentioned which need to be addressed by the new administration such as registration dates, equipment, deadlines, coaching assignments, concession stand, and administration of the League. These will be addressed by the new officers.

The first meeting of the 1991 Cohasset Little League will be held on Monday, Oct. 29, at 7:30 p.m. at the Deerhill School. This meeting is open to the public.

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe- from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean is money-back guaranteed!

Save Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, you would have to buy over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safety. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some, may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course for all plumbing.

So, if your drains are signalling you, get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today! Available at:

Cub scout pack 38 plans exciting year

Welcome to Pack 38 Cub Scouts! We hope to have a fun and exciting year ahead. We would like to thank our last year's Den Leaders for returning—Tony Bruzzone, Velma and Kevin Begley, Tom Judge, and Carol and Earle Bestick. This year we are delighted to have so many eager new Den Leaders and assistant Den Leaders—Ann Lane and Gitte Shea for Den 1; Kate Lavigne and Ellen Sanchez for Den 2; and Robert Dennis and Linda Farrag for Den 3.

AKELA Den Leader training will be offered by the Old Mills District, the date is to be announced.

Bowl-a-rama is the only fundraiser Pack 38 has. It will be held at the Cohasset Community Center. The available dates will be announced. The cubs are asked to go to their friends and neighbors and relatives to get sponsors for the cub to bowl a total of three strings. The person can pledge 1¢ to 5¢ or can make a donation. The money collected after the Cub Scout bowls is divided: 50 percent goes to the council; 25 percent is for Pack 38 and the other 25 percent is towards prizes the cub chooses depending on how much he collected. This is a major fundraiser for the ten towns in the Old Mills District. The chairperson is Linda Farrag (383-9519).

Everyone will be receiving the cub roster for all the dens after this week.

We need volunteers for our future pack meetings for: a Halloween party committee, Oct. 24; Christmas party committee, Dec. 19; Blue and Gold Dinner committee, Feb. 10.

Dates to remember:

Committee Meetings—For all Den Leaders, Assistant Den Leaders, and interested parents to prepare for the pack meetings and cub discussions.

—Held at the Unitarian Parish House 7 to 8 p.m. Sundays.

—Oct. 21, Nov. 25, Dec. 16, Jan. 27, Feb. 3, March 24 and April 21.

Pack Meetings—For all the Cub Scout dens. Leaders, parents and siblings welcome.

—Held at the Deer Hill School 7 to 8 p.m. Wednesdays.

Creamer fund established

John F. Creamer, Principal of the Joseph Osgood School, former Principal of Deer Hill School, and Educator in the Cohasset Schools for 36 years, retired on Sept. 16. In honor of Mr. Creamer's years of dedicated service to the community of Cohasset, a scholarship fund, which will be awarded to a Cohasset High School graduate, has been established.

Donations should be sent to the John F. Creamer Scholarship Fund, c/o Cohasset Savings Bank, 13 Elm Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Someone must have missed the sight of Old Glory flying from the town's flag pole. Recently a 25 x 25 flag was found at the base of the pole bearing a note saying "Compliments of a friend."
Town workers will re-rig the pole to accommodate the smaller flag.

WHEN DENTURES CAUSE BONE SHRINKAGE, HOW CAN DENTAL IMPLANTS HELP?

It is the constant rubbing and wearing away of tissue by the dentures that often results in bone shrinkage, gum erosion, facial changes, and wrinkles. Because dental implants are permanently inserted in the jaw, there is nothing to wear away, thus preventing further bone loss. For more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617-826-8395.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Leaf Composting

The autumn is the time when the composting section of the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF) really comes alive. Begun two years ago in response to mandatory recycling in Cohasset, it has eliminated tons of yard waste from being landfilled, and with the opening of the transfer facility, from being incinerated. The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) estimates that in the fall 40 percent of municipal solid waste is leaves. This represents a significant amount of material that can easily be composted and turned into earth. It has proven to be such a successful solution to this portion of the waste stream that the state will ban the disposal of leaves in landfills and incinerators by Dec. 31. Cohasset residents can take great pride in the success of this program at the RTF.

It is time to reap the benefits of last year's leaves and grass clippings by taking the finished compost home with you. Jack Hubbard of the Recycling Committee and compost monitor recommends using the finished compost on your lawn. The well travelled areas that get packed down the most will benefit greatly from a fall application of compost. Simply take shovelfuls of compost and spread it on your lawn. Then, take a rake and smooth it out to an even layer between 1/2"-1" deep. Compost takes the place of peat moss. It lightens the soil, enabling it to absorb moisture and nutrients. Healthy soil, in turn, strengthens the grass. Healthy grass means less need for fertilizers and herbicides. Best of all, this compost is free. Many recycling facilities are new, selling their finished compost. The finished compost is on the left hand side of the RTF as you enter by the jersey barriers. This is also where you drop your leaves and grass clippings. It is easily recognizable as the mound of earth.

When bringing your leaves to the compost area, there are a few simple steps that you will need to follow. Most importantly, this is a leaf and grass clipping compost pile. When dropping off this material, simply empty out the bags or container onto the ground next to the other leaves and take the bags with you. When the composting program was first started, there was a lot of contamination from plastic bags. Thankfully, most people are taking their bags with them. The other source of contamination in the compost has been from brush. In order for the compost to break down in a reasonable amount of time, the brush cannot be accepted. So, just a reminder, no brush in the compost.

In response to the community's need for brush chipping, the Board of Health has arranged with the Tree and Parks Dept to chip brush three days in Oct. They are: this Fri., Oct. 19; Mon., Oct. 22; and Mon., Oct. 19; from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The chipper can accommodate wood up to 10" in diameter. If you work why not bring your brush by the RTF on your way in? You can load it in the car or truck the night before. The chipping is being done on these days to keep the costs to the taxpayers down. If this were done on the weekend, which would be more convenient to the homeowner, the town would have to pay overtime. Please, do not drop off brush in advance of those days.

The success of the composting program has been three-fold. First, you, the leaf-rakers, have brought in your leaves without brush or bags. Secondly, Jack Hubbard has been monitoring the mound for the past year, observing the decomposition process and taking the mound's temperature every week. If the compost is too cold, it doesn't decompose. If the compost is too hot it burns, creating a hard layer that rain falls off instead of into. When either of these conditions occur, the pile needs to be turned. Thirdly, and critical to the success, has been John Barnes, heavy equipment operator at the RTF. He has turned the pile with the backhoe. When the DEP compost coordinator came to inspect Cohasset's compost, he could not believe how quickly it had turned to earth. "It was miraculous," said Hubbard, "Johnny Barnes has been great at turning the pile. It was really his diligence that made the compost turn to earth so fast."

At a time when so many of our products come from "away," it's wonderful to have a product that Cohasset residents made together and can use again. Bring in the leaves; take out the compost, and enjoy the results of your labor.

5.) "Bach disc" — features Bach biography as well as an exploration of Fugere in B-Minor...

The titles above are but a sampling of the wonderful and rich variety of materials available in laser/video disc format to those at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools. I see a multi-media computer workstation housed in the high school library as a natural extension of these services to the whole school community.

This year the library received a grant from the Arts Boosters group to purchase a laser/video disc player, which we now have here in the library.

The video disc player becomes interactive (and quite user friendly) for students and faculty through the use of Mac SE to drive it. The other necessary components would be funded through the regular library budget.

The total workstation would consist of an interactive video disc player (here already), interfaced with a MacIntosh SE (hopefully to be acquired through Stop and Shop/Apple Program), (a 40 megabyte hard drive, a TV monitor (here already), and Apple's "hypercard" program (free with purchase of a Mac), an image writer printer, a CD ROM drive and cables and an Apple Scanner and cables.

It is our responsibility to consistently improve upon an environment that reflects our belief in all things being possible."

This is a 220-year-old New England antique. Only better.

OXBOW CHEST
Massachusetts, circa 1770

Over fifty Eldred Wheeler craftsmen continue to construct antique furniture. At their workshop in Hingham, Massachusetts they design, build, and finish pieces using the same methods New England cabinetmakers did over 200 years ago.

Some of the forms crafted include beds, chests, secretary desks, lowboys, tables, chairs, and highboys. Because each piece is made by hand, most people reserve them in advance. However, many items at our showrooms are available to take home.

The appreciating value of Eldred Wheeler Furniture has been demonstrated at local auction houses. Discover the affordability of these handmade pieces with Eldred Wheeler's new Preferred Collector Program.

The fall is a great time to explore New England. Plan to visit one of our showrooms.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Early release day Oct. 18

October 18, will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools only. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule:

School	Buses Depart
Deer Hill School	12:40 P.M.
Joseph Osgood School	12:50 P.M.

Lunch will be served in all schools.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee to allow the staff to attend a math workshop.

PSO News

The PSO will be hosting its fifth annual Monte Carlo Night from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. This year it will be held at the Cohasset Community Center and tickets will be on sale at a cost of $20 per person (which includes a start up stake of $5). Hors d'oeuvres and sweets will be catered by Arthur Roebuck of the British Relief in Hingham. The proceeds from the tickets, tables and auction will be used to benefit the PSO Curriculum Enrichment Programs for all three schools. There will also be a cash bar with the proceeds benefitting the Community Center.

For ticket information call Kathy Gray at 383-2718.

The 14th Antique Show and Sale will be held on Saturday, November 3, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street (off Route 3A) just before the Music Circus.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50. Regular admission is $2. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area. There is plenty of free parking.

Cookies help gain apples

Pat Baird and Elaine Smoot did some serious cookie baking for the Deer Hill School. They made cookies in the shapes of apples — enough for everyone — in an effort to remind students of the campaign Apples For The Students. They are co-ordinating this years campaign.

Again, this year we're asking for the communities support in saving all your blue register tapes from the Stop and Shop and your white register tapes if shopping at Bradlee's. The campaign is only running through Dec. 29. So, please save them now and turn them into the boxes around town. Or, on Halloween night give the kids and extra treat and give them your slips when they come around.

MUSCLES AND BACK PAIN

There are four sets of back muscles that work in concert to support the spine. When any one of the muscles of the back is injured, it contracts and goes into spasm. This response is the muscle's strategy for splinting the injured area so that no further damage will be done. As might be imagined, the constant tension of spasm produces considerable pain. Although the patient's primary concern lies with relieving the pain, attention to the affected back muscle should not stop once the pain subsides. Attention should then be focused upon working the contracted muscle back to its optimum working length. If the once-spasmed muscle is allowed to remain contracted, it is more vulnerable to injury than it was before the initial attack. The doctor of chiropractic knows that reconditioning steps are necessary to avoid repeated trauma.

Chiropractic goes to the source of your problem rather than merely dealing with the symptom of pain. Thus, DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, are able to effectively address your needs. For the chiropractic exam that will make a difference in your life, call today for an appointment. By appointment. Worker's Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted

P.S. There are some 140 muscles connected to the spine alone.

BULLETIN BOARD

Business show begins

The Business Show will premiere on Wednesday, Oct. 24 at 8:30 p.m. on Continental Channel 53 and Cohasset Channel 3.

The show will feature topics of interest to business people such as travel tips, finances, computers, office equipment and employment.

The first show will feature Ron Zoolek, executive vice president of the South Shore Chamber of Commerce, who will discuss the present state and future of the South Shore economy.

Artists featured at center

Three of Cohasset's fine artists will be featured at the South Shore Art Center's The Fine Art of Gift Giving on Friday, November 2 from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, November 3 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Claffey Williams' abstract paintings, Helen Gallop's water color still lifes, and Kirsten MacNeill's oil landscapes/seascapes will be on sale at this festive holiday event.

Regional artisans and Gallery Artists of the SSAC will offer original works of art at reduced prices reflective of the lower commission rate of the SSAC during this gift extravaganza. This will be a great opportunity to purchase unique gifts at less than $100, most under $50.

Come and browse while the children are entertained by creating Thanksgiving decorations in a supervised area. Admission is free and refreshments will be served.

Micarelli retrospective set

The Artist's Son Gallery in Cohasset is hosting "Clement Micarelli — 30 years of portraiture: a retrospective."

The show will run through November 3, 1990 and will feature various works spanning his career as a portrait painter.

Micarelli is one of the areas most well known portrait artists and his paintings hang in homes and offices across the country. He teaches at the Rhode Island School of Design and the South Shore Art Center.

The Artist's Son Gallery is located in Jonathan Livingston Square on Route 3A in Cohasset. For more information please call 383-1841. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and Saturday.

Halloween comes to CCC

Halloween costume making: Children ages 6 - 9 are invited to join this workshop at the Cohasset Community Center to design their own Halloween costume. Make them creepy or comical; just use your imagination to create a one-of-a-kind costume. The class will meet on Friday afternoon, October 26, from 3:30 to 5 p.m. The cost is $12.

Cut & pierced lampshades: At the end of one class on Saturday, you will have a lampshade ready to use. Learn how to design, color, cut and pierce a flat arc; assemble the shade and add a rim. The class will meet Saturday, October 20, from 9:30 to 1 p.m. The cost is $30.

Fabric painting and decorating: Use fabric for painting, stenciling, and applique. Simple techniques which require no sewing, will teach you how to turn plain t-shirts, jerseys, and even shoes into trendy boutique items. The class will meet on Friday morning, November 2, from 9:30 to 11 a.m. The cost is $25.

To register for these workshops call the Community Center at 383-0088.

Gardeners go to Manomet

The next meeting of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will be a trip to the Manomet Bird Sanctuary in Plymouth on Tuesday, Oct. 16.

Hostess will be Gert Young with Betty Madden as Co-Hostess.

Art center holds exhibition

The South Shore Art Center is planning an all member Blue Ribbon Exhibition with an opening reception on Thursday, October 18 from 5 to 7 p.m. Traditionally, members submit work in the mediums of oil, watercolor, acrylic, sculpture, monoprint and photography. Ribbons are awarded in the appropriate categories.

Immediately following the reception will be the South Shore Art Center Annual Meeting. The public is cordially invited to both the reception and the annual meeting although only members may vote. The exhibition will continue through November 10, 1990. Gallery and gift shop hours are Tuesday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. For more information, please call the Art Center at 617-383-9548.

Candidates forum at AARP

The next meeting of the South Shore Chapter #1139 of the American Association of Retired Persons will be on Thursday, Oct. 25 at noon at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A, Hingham. This is our annual "Candidates Corner" meeting. Brown bag it. Coffee and dessert will be available. Meet the political candidates in person before the election. Any member of the National AARP or NRTA may join a chapter and is welcome at this meeting.

Table settings displayed

The Oct. 23 meeting of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset will begin with coffee at 9 a.m. in Walton Rodgers Hall, St. Stephen's Church. Tish Grinnell will be demonstrating "Table Settings With Flair." For information contact Sally Avery at 383-6043 or Arlene Ferreira at 383-9341.

CLT forum for the faithful

A forum by people of faith for discussion of Question 3, which seeks to roll back taxes to their 1988 level, will be held at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, on Sunday, Oct. 21 at 2 p.m.

Presentations giving both sides of the issue will be made. Small group discussion from a faith perspective will follow. The objective of the forum is not to resolve the issue for all but to bring people together to discuss the many sides of it. In this dialogue it is expected that each person will achieve a greater clarity and understanding. As the time for voting draws near this will be a helpful opportunity for discussion.

Ambulance facts sought

Selectmen hope to resolve the ongoing debate over private vs town ambulance service with a few hard facts. Executive secretary Greg Doyon drafted a proposed contract for ambulance service to get quotes on what it would cost to purchase an equivalent service from a private company.

Stipulations in the contract include:

- The private ambulance service must be manned by EMTs with defibrillator training.
- The ambulance must specify the expected response time from a backup ambulance.
- The expected costs in succeeding years.
- Willingness to cooperate with the regional advanced life support ambulance service if it is established.

Selectman Edwin Tebbetts asked what communities have had experience with private ambulance services. Marshfield was the only town Doyon could cite. Town government structures chairman Roy Fitzsimmons said Quincy also used a private service.

Fitzsimmons said his committee wanted to review and comment on Doyon's proposal and contract. Comments have already been solicited from fire chief Daniel Brock.

Selectmen chairman Rocco Laugelle expressed concern about what would happen after the initial contract expired.

If the town gets rid of its own ambulance and lays off the firefighter-EMTs, the options are few, he said.

"At the end of three years they sort of have you where they want you," he said to fellow selectmen. He asked if there was any way to prevent rates from escalating at that point.

Doyon will refine the ambulance specifications and enclose a draft contract in the request for proposal package in the hopes of getting the kind of information necessary for the decision-making process to go forward.

Oct. 22 special TM articles

is not appropriate to do it by special town meeting.

Gjesteby said the town should take up personnel changes only at an annual town meeting to ensure the equitable treatment of all town employees. He raised the possibility of granting a promotion to one group of employees in October only to be forced to make cuts in the other employees in April.

The advisory committee will also recommend defeat of Article 13. That article requests transfer of $9,000 for asbestos removal from the police/fire station.

Gjesteby said the committee agreed the asbestos removal should be covered in the funds approved by the April town meeting for the police/fire renovation project.

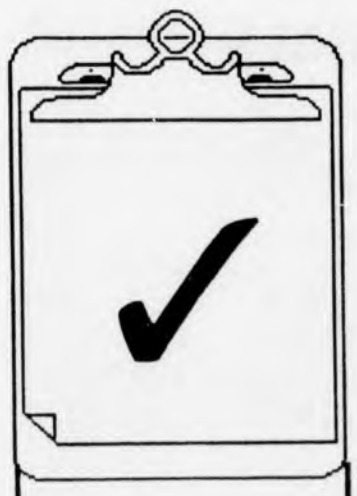
Although the committee initially took no action on Article 7, Gjesteby said they will undoubtedly support it at town meeting.

The article asks the town to appropriate funds to cash out the sick leave accrued by a retiring police sergeant Richard Barrows. Gjesteby said the committee took no action because they did not have a dollar amount when the article was sent to them for action.

Barrow's unused sick leave has been calculated at $17,097.

No action was taken on Article 14 as well. Gjesteby said the committee would not vote to abate taxes, outstanding fees and interest on a piece of land donated to the town in April without knowing when the taxes were incurred.

The committee is unlikely to approve abatement if the taxes were owed prior to the donation.



The committee agreed to recommend Article 8 after it was changed by mutual consent of the parties.

The article currently asks the town to appropriate $3,809.52 to fund the council of aging's outreach worker from Jan. 1 to June 15. The funds for the position were cut off by the state in a cost-saving move.

Originally the article sought to level fund the part-time position at $4,232.80.

Solid waste committee

Selectmen created a three-person committee to study the establishment of a regional solid waste district in conjunction with the South Shore Coalition's solid waste project.

Selectmen will be looking for members for the newly created committee. Individuals with expertise in government structure, finances and solid waste management are being sought.

Anyone interested in appointment to the committee should contact the selectmen's office in town hall.

Town workers swap days

Town employees will be able to spend the day after Thanksgiving and Christmas Eve with their families following action taken by the selectmen.

Employees get the day in exchange for working three Friday afternoons to compensate the town. There is no change in the number of total hours worked or the rate of compensation, executive secretary Greg Doyon said. Selectmen approved the policy in a 3-1 vote. Selectman Martha Gjesteby cast the lone dissent.

Cohasset Chamber cares

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce once again has mailed a package of goodies to each of the High School graduates.

A subscription to the Cohasset Mariner is one of the keynotes of the package so that the graduates will be able to keep up with the doings in town. Also included is a Tote Bag with the Cohasset Town Seal and the Chamber Logo designed and produced by Goodwin Graphics. The Cohasset PSO donated copies of their school calendars. We also included various and sundry goodies donated by Kimball's Motor Inn, Woolworth's, CVS, Walgreens, The Gillette Company, Nobles Camera Shops, Buttonwood Books & Toys, King Jewelers, Colpitts Travel Agency, Stop & Shop and The Goodale Company.

This project was started in 1989 and we received so many favorable comments that we decided to continue the practice. We have included the list of the addresses in each package so that the kids could keep in touch with each other. This was a suggestion submitted by a few of the parents.

We hope the package serves the purpose of letting the kids know that someone is thinking of them as they step out into the world from the rather protected environment of the secondary school system. Perhaps it will arrive just about the time someone might need a little boost. We hope so.

If you have any comments or suggestions we would like to hear from you; our P.O. box number is 336.

Public notice

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by WALTER G. ROSS, dated January 14, 1986, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 258, to COHASSET SAVINGS BANK of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 a.m. on the 26th day of November, 1990 at the premises 159 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts.

To wit: "A certain parcel of land situated in said Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, and being bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the Easterly corner of the granted premises, at the point in the Westerly line of South Main Street at land conveyed by Minnie P. Gilmore to Minerva C. Stone, June 27, 1923, the line runs South 74° 4' West by said land of Minerva C. Stone, one hundred ninety-seven and 70/100 (197.70) feet to a point in the stone wall at land now or formerly of one Sankey; thence line turns and runs North 16° 15' 30" West by said stone wall one hundred ninety-four and 21/100 (194.21) feet to Spring Street; thence South 84° 3' 10" East by said Spring Street, two hundred eleven and 93/100 (211.93) feet to said Westerly line of South Main Street; thence South 16° 57' 20" East, one hundred fifteen and 21/100 (115.21) feet to the point of beginning.

Containing 29,949 square feet of land and being shown as the smaller of two lots on a subdivision plan belonging to Minnie P. Gilmore, Cohasset, Mass., recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 1559, Page 357, dated June 25, 1923, H. A. Litchfield, C.E.

For title, see deed of Anita L. Ross to Walter G. Ross, recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 257."

TERMS OF SALE: Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles, municipal liens and assessments, if any, which take precedence over the said mortgage above described.

Deposit of TEN THOUSAND AND 00/100 ($10,000.00) DOLLARS cash or certified check will be required by the purchaser at the time of sale, and the balance of the purchase price within twenty-five (25) days; other terms to be announced at time of sale.

Recreation takeover sought by Community Center

"My board will be looking at what's best for the town," Worley said. "Not what's best for one group."

He said he imagined the Community Center's bid to take over town recreation is a move to increase its own revenue.

"There are only four programs that operate through the town budget," he said. "All the others are self-supporting."

He added that the budget could be made totally self-supporting at any time.

But the recreation commission has been reluctant to take that step.

"The philosophy is to offer the programs at the lowest possible cost," Worley said.

During 1989, 5,764 individuals participated in various recreation programs, according to the most recent town report. The budget for the year was $65,292. More than $45,000 in revenue was generated by the department. The revenue includes beach stickers. Worley said that in the height of the season, he spends a great deal of time working on the beach sticker program so he feels justified including the funds in his calculations.

The four programs that do not use the revolving fund are: summer playground, soccer, basketball and youth tennis. All four use town facilities not available through the Community Center.

Worley said the Community Center could rent the fields and courts from the town if the decision were made to take that route.

He pointed out, however, that his work includes more than running the recreation programs. His job entails the administration of the beach stickers and facilities permits, plus overseeing the maintenance of recreation property like Milliken Field and the Beechwood field and playlot.

"We've studied the numbers and think we can provide the same service for the same cost or in some cases for lower cost," Pratt said.

He pointed out that recreation has no chartered authority to maintain fields. And he said his agency is not looking to take over the beach permits. Contrary to local rumor, his group is not seeking to disband the recreation commission, an elected board.

Dooley agreed that the Community Center would not want to take over all the functions currently handled by the recreation department.

He said leaving the beach stickers with the town would guarantee the town about $15,000 in revenue and taking away the programs would reduce the shortfall by another $15,000.

He pointed out that fees for many of the recreation programs were doubled between 1988 and 1989 as the town sought to make recreation more self-supporting.

He said he thinks the $25 fee plus $5 for a T-shirt for eight soccer games is high.

"One of our concerns was that fees would continue to increase. We think we can do it for less," Dooley said.

He said his financial estimates include hiring a director to administer programs taken over from the town.

If the town were to accept the Community Center's offer, the change would take place at the start of the next fiscal year — July 1.

Cable co. gets bond break

Selectmen voted 3-1 to reduce Continental Cablevision's bond by $50,000. Martha Gjesteby refused to go along with the break for the cable television company.

The town required a $100,000 bond from the cable service ten years ago. The money was a hedge against accident or termination of service.

"There are no outstanding issues," executive secretary Greg Doyon told selectmen. "I see no need to hold $100,000."

Doyon said you could probably remove the entire cable system for less than $50,000.

Gjesteby was not assuaged.

"Our rates go up every year," she complained.

Vol. XIII, No. 4 | Thursday, October 25, 1990 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

Special TM finishes up

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset voters knocked off all 14 articles on the special town meeting warrant in just two hours Monday night. When the 160 voters left, they had committed the town to transfer or borrow $201,377.

In a meeting devoid of surprises or passion, voters approved 10 articles, defeated two and indefinitely postponed two others.

The big ticket item was the $64,000 question to balance the budget. Under state law, the town budget must be balanced before tax bills can be sent out.

Residents opted for a transfer rather than cutting the budget in the middle of the fiscal year. The shortage will be taken from the so-called free cash account.

Cohasset currently has $503,000 in free cash.

Plans to spend $46,405 repaving Elm Street drew considerable comment before passing. Citizens questioned the wisdom of the paving project despite the fact the money will be reimbursed by the state.

Several residents, including one living on Elm Street, wondered if this street was the one in most need of repaving.

Lynn Isaac of Hobart Lane said she rides her bicycle on Elm Street frequently.

"There are no potholes," Isaac said. "It is a gross

Chief Kealey suspends David Pomarico

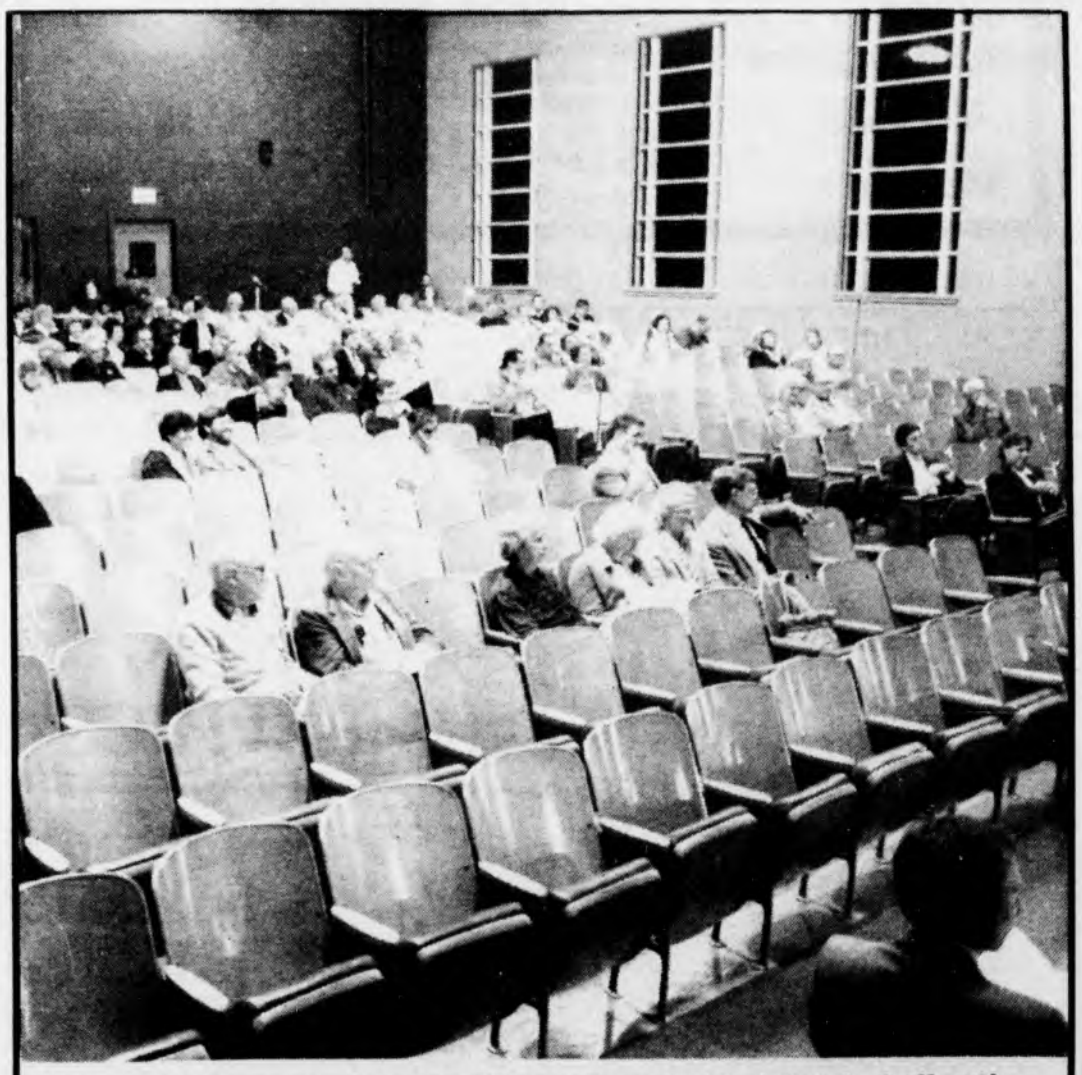
By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Police Sergeant David Pomarico was suspended without pay for five days this week by Police Chief Joseph Kealey for "conduct unbecoming a police officer."

The suspension came after Pomarico was taken into protective custody in Scituate last weekend. No charges were brought as a result of what police would only describe as "an incident."

The 17-man Cohasset police department is already down two officers due to one resignation and a retirement but the chief said the suspension would not add to the manning problems.

The five-day suspension — which is the maximum penalty the chief is allowed to deal out on his own — was effective Monday at midnight. By noon Wednesday, Pomarico had not filed an appeal, according to the selectmen's executive secretary Greg Doyan. Midnight Wednesday was the appeal deadline under civil service law.



Pomarico was unavailable for comment.

Chief Kealey said Pomarico had been picked up by Scituate police sometime over the weekend and held in protective custody.

Scituate police Lieutenant Mark Flounders would only say Pomarico had been involved in "an incident in Scituate." Flounders said the matter was being handled administratively by Cohasset's police department.

Chief Kealey refused to comment when asked about a previous incident involving Sgt. Pomarico

The special town meeting got off to a slow start but finished all action in two hours on Monday night.

Superintendent backs less punative policy

Student assistance program suggested by health educator

By Jane O'Brien
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset is "no better, yet no worse than other communities concerning substance abuse," Dr. Michael Gill, health coordinator told school committee last week.

Gill described the school system program in detail to the committee.

Afterwards School Superintendent Stephen Hart recommended creating a student assistance program that would involve early intervention with potential problems.

His recommendation is to be less punative in dealing with students involved in substance abuse issues.

"We find we don't really have a problem within the school," he said. "It's usually at the beach, in the woods or at a house party where we find abuse.

"Our kids have been educated to the dangers of AIDS, drugs, alcohol, drunk driving, etc.

"The problem of substance abuse is a social problem concerning many issues. We need to motivate a change in behavior. The children must be taught to communicate, to be assertive, learn decision-making skills and given the tools to build up self esteem — the holistic approach," Gill said.

He talked about how he works to develop a comprehensive approach toward health issues through work in other classes.

He said he sought to ask "the social studies teacher, for instance, to assign a research paper to study the social impact of substance abuse on a community or the English or science teacher to assign homework related papers on substance abuse, misuse or abuse."

Gill said there is a study done at Berkley in California that shows that certain characteristics in children with a predisposition to substance abuse will show up as early as grade 2.

The study showed that the youngsters had low self esteem and difficulty with peers, parents and other social interaction.

School committee took no official action on the superintendent's request to change the policy on drugs and alcohol.

The matter is expected to generate further discussion.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Hints for Halloween

Looking for a Halloween treat that won't cause cavities? Want to give a goodie that keeps on giving?

The PSO suggests you drop a Stop & Shop or Bradlees receipt along with the candy into those snack sacks when the ghosties and ghoulies and long-leggedy beasties come knocking on your door.

Those receipts translate into computer equipment or calculators for the Cohasset school system. Receipts from Sept. 30 to Dec. 29 are as good as gold to your local schools.

Gamble on a good cause

The PSO invites you to have a wonderful time supporting the school system.

Saturday, Nov. 3 is the date of the fifth annual Monte Carlo Night. Festivities begin at 8 p.m. at the Cohasset Community Center. Creative black tie is optional.

All proceeds from the evening support the curriculum enrichment programs at Osgood, Deer Hill and Cohasset Junior/Senior High Schools.

Tickets are limited for the gala evening that includes games of chance, hors d'oeuvres and sweets. Tickets are $20 per person and include a $5 start up.

For more information or tickets, call Kathy Gray at 383-2718, Helene Thornton at 383-2341 or Beth Christoffel at 383-6929.

You can't lose when the school system is winning.

Hart itemizes CLT impacts

If Question 3 (the Citizens for Limited Taxation referendum) passes on the Nov. 7 ballot, there will be an impact on the Cohasset school system, according to School Superintendent Stephen Hart.

Last week Hart issued a list of his assumptions about the effect of the referendum. While he pointed out that school committee would be required to vote on actual cuts, he said he assumed the impact would mean:

- an end to funds for athletics, which would mean higher user fees.
- elimination of the library position.
- a reduction in the health program.
- at the secondary level, art would be cut in half.
- at the elementary level, physical education would be reduced.
- cuts would also be made in some testing programs.
- developmental reading would be hit.

"We cannot cut fixed costs such as insurance," Hart said. "With these assumed costs, six full-time positions would be lost. We would have to add $8,000 per year for unemployment insurance for each teacher."

School Committee Chairman Barbara Bliss pointed out that the Parent School Organization (PSO) is sponsoring a forum on Question 3 at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Oct. 30, at the Deer Hill School.

Patricia Facey will serve as moderator.

Fair offers ghostly treats

On Sunday, October 28, The Community Center Nursery School will host the 6th annual Halloween Fair for children from 2 to 4 p.m. on the common.

The children will gather in costume at 2 p.m. near the duck pond for the traditional parade around the common. The Halloween Fair will follow at the church end of the common this year. The fair will feature many fun games for the children, face painting, cupcake decorating, penny candy store, guess the pumpkins' weight, and hot dogs and drinks. In case of inclement weather, all activities will take place at the center.

Police station bids are low

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen held a brief session before special town meeting to award the police/fire station renovation bids and clear other business off their desks.

The base bid for renovation work was awarded to Lambrian Construction Corp. of Roslindale.

Lambrian was the low bidder at $248,366, exclusive of the two alternate bids.

According to renovation committee chairman David Chase, 16 general contractors submitted bids on the project. Bids ranged from $248,366 to $380,600. One bid was rejected because of an error made by the contractor.

Lambrian was also low bidder for both alternate bids. The company took the bid for masonry work with a bid of $750 and plumbing and fixtures to bring the cells up to complete code for $11,680.

The total budget for the project is $396,000. Because the bids came in so low, the committee opted to recommend withdrawing the special town meeting article to fund the asbestos removal project separately.

National Abatement Services submitted a low bid of $8,690 for the asbestos removal. Action on the bid was held in abeyance so town counsel Richard Henderson could determine whether any conflict of interest existed because advisory board member Wayne Sawchuk is involved in National Abatement Services.

Selectmen also approved paying architectural fees amounting to $5,818 to Roger Hoit of Strekalovsky and Hoit.

In other business, selectmen:

• Agreed to postpone any decision on the Bates Building for one month to allow Keith Knowles to prepare a proposal to use the building, or a portion of it, to house a youth center.

Knowles, who also is chairman of the drug and alcohol committee, said he plans to survey high school students about their interest and preferences in order to determine the feasibility of a youth center.

Other plans for the building include affordable rental units and use by civic organizations.

• Announced the resignation of Francis R. Coffey of Norfolk Road from the historic district commission.

• Appointed Elizabeth Bates of Highland Avenue to the historic district commission.

• Awarded a bond issue of $2.435 million to Bear Stearns.

• Appointed selectman Jane Goedecke to represent the board of selectmen at the Parent School Organization voters' forum on Question 3, the CLT petition to rollback income taxes and fees. The forum is scheduled for Oct. 30.

• Approved a request from the Community Center nursery school to hold their annual Halloween Fair on the common Oct. 28 from 12:30 to 5 p.m.

"Blatant hypocrisy." That's what a leading newspaper said about Gerry Studds.

He deceived business owners by voting against them on a bill he supposedly sponored on their behalf. Just look at a few other acts of Studds' "blatant hypocrisy:"

Campaign Reform: Studds says he supports campaign reform, yet he's taken over $500,000 from lobbyists and special interests and voted against a bill limiting special interest money in elections.

S&L Scandal: Studds said we should investigate the S&L scandal, yet he voted against an investigation of the former House Banking chairman which could have saved taxpayers $200 billion. And in the middle of the scandal he took campaign money from the S&L lobbyists!

Limit Terms: Studds proposed an amendment to the Constitution which would have limited Congressmen to 18 years in office. Studds has been in office for 18 years and is running for re-election.

Sloppy Ethics: Studds accused the President of "sloppy ethics," yet he is the only member of Congress censured for unethical behavior.

It's time for a change!

VoTech teachers protest wage stalemate

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

Wearing red arm bands -- signifying their anger -- teachers at South Shore VoTech picketed in front of the Hanover campus prior to the regional school committee meeting Wednesday.

"We teach our kids that a deal is a deal," said newly elected teachers' union president, Carl Sousa.

"Apparently our school committee doesn't know that," added Sousa.

The teachers' union has filed two charges of unfair labor practices with the Mass. Labor Relations Commission.

One charge is based on the fact that the three-member subcommittee, appointed by the regional school committee, negotiated a tentative contract agreement with the teachers' union and then did not support that agreement in open session.

The other charge alleges that VoTech principal John Kosko of the Abington campus tried to intimidate a union member.

'AN INTERPRETATION'

Reached by telephone Regional School Committee Chairman Robert Molla of Norwell said the teachers' union view that the school committee had bargained in bad faith was an "interpretation."

Molla, Lou Crescenzi of Hanover, and Laurence Mitchell of Cohasset made up the subcommittee negotiating team.

When the teacher's contract came before the full school committee for vote in open session, Molla and Crescenzi abstained, and Mitchell voted no. The contract was rejected by majority vote of the school committee.

Molla said by abstaining to vote, that he and fellow subcommittee member Lou Crescenzi of Hanover had in fact taken no stand on the proposed contract.

"We did not support it or reject it, we didn't vote," he said.

Molla added that since negotiating began ten months ago, "the state fiscal economy has gone to hell" imperiling state funding at the regional school level.

The proposed contract calls for teachers' raises of four percent over the next two years and five percent in the third year.

VoTech teachers decided to participate in "informational picketing" as a show of unity Wednesday. Union president, Sousa said no more picketing sessions were planned at this time.

Union treasurer, Russ DeCoste explained that "informational picketing" is intended only to voice concerns. It does not involved blocking the entrance or forming a line and requesting that union members not cross it, he said.

Carrying signs stating the 'SSVTHS School Committee engages in unfair labor practices,' and 'SSVTHS Teachers still work in good faith' -- about 35 teachers paraded in front of the school entrance and out on Rte. 123.

FEEL CHEATED

"We needed to show we are unified and that we are concerned," said Sousa. "We are picketing for the first time in 28 years.

"We feel hurt, we feel cheated. We don't cheat our kids and we don't like being cheated," he said.

Union treasurer Russ DeCoste said one of the charges of unfair labor practices would not had been filed had the subcommittee supported the contract in open session with the school committee.

DeCoste said the teachers would continue to wear the red arm bands.

Since Oct. 2, teachers have also been meeting outside the school before the school day is set to begin, reporting to their sessions about a minute ahead of schedule. Before contract negotiations broke off three weeks ago, teachers often reported to their stations 45 minutes to an hour before school began, DeCoste said.

Contract talks reached a stalemate when the regional school committee presented a list of new proposals to the teachers' union. Both sides requested a mediator, who is due at the Hanover campus Oct. 29.

DeCoste said even if the contract dispute is settled, the charges of unfair labor practices will go forward.

Sgt. Pomarico is suspended for 5 days

other than to say the prior incident had nothing to do with his decision to issue the maximum penalty.

The chief said the charge (of operating under the influence) is still pending in New Hampshire. He said he will be notified "one way or the other" when the case is resolved.

That incident dates back to February.

"He is presumed innocent," the chief said, adding that if Scituate police had brought charges against Pomarico he would have waited until the court action was completed before making a decision on disciplinary action.

"Their action (taking Pomarico into protective custody) caused me to suspend him," the chief said.

Substance abuse policy ...

"It is important to remember that we need a collaborative effort," Hart said.

"We need to come together collectively. The school committee, the parents, the community, the teachers — to help prevent abuse at an early stage — to make changes.

"What value system, for example, allows sporting events to give contradictory messages by advocating drinking and athletic events? The need is for us to be aware and to help make these changes at all levels."

Call men can stand heat

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

In the face of smoke and flames, most people point their feet toward the nearest exit. But Cohasset harbors some folks who'll break down a door for a chance to get into a burning building.

They are the call firefighters. When the alarm goes off and the call goes out, they work side-by-side Cohasset's permanent firefighters to protect lives and property.

What motivates them to risk their own lives and limbs?

"I don't know," confessed Bill Brooke who has been battling blazes "for 20-something years." Brooke's answer is typical.

Looking at a list reveals few answers.

It's not a male thing. Although there are no women on the call force currently, women have served in the past. And it's not reserved for men of any particular age. The call men range in age from Jordan MacNeill, 21, to Cliff Dixon, 67.

Career choices don't link the call men. The force has executives, mechanics, security officers and guys looking for a job. Although some want to be or always dreamed of being permanent firefighters, others are happy just being on call.

Jack MacNeill said he was afraid of fire as a child and hid when the firetrucks went by. It didn't prevent him from giving 35 years of service to his community as a call man.

The allure is definitely not in the hours or the puny stipend. These guys can get called out in the middle of the night when the winds are howling and the roads are glare ice, and get $6 or $7 for their trouble.

Brooke has battled a fire all night long and reported to work the next morning with barely enough time to grab a change of clothes. Jack MacNeill has hustled IBM executives through a meeting so he can get on the road to a fire.

Obviously it helps to have an understanding boss. They are getting fewer and farther between. Even if they support the idea of call firefighters, daytime service is mostly out of the question.

Of the 15 active call men, only three are available during work days.

Call men don't claim to be braver than the rest of us. A healthy fear of fire can be downright healthy, says Jack MacNeill.

He should know. He's been seriously injured twice.

The first time he was fighting a Christmas Eve fire at Salvatore's Restaurant and the building exploded. The second time he was searching for victims in an Atlantic Avenue house and the ceiling and walls collapsed on him.

It's a life you have to love to lead it.

And love it they do.

Perhaps the similarity between the call men is they are Cohasset born and bred. They respond to the old tradition of neighbor helping neighbor because that's just the way it's supposed to be.

Joining the call force isn't difficult, they said. You fill out an application with Fire Chief Daniel Brock, take a physical and go through six months of training.

The training is essential. Some of it is classroom, some of it is drills and a substantial amount is on-the-job.

The lay person is apt to think a fire is a fire is a fire. To a firefighter, knowing what kind of fire he's fighting can be the difference between life and death.

Consider, for a moment, an "average" house fire. Plastic trays give off toxic fumes, sofa cushions produce lung-choking smoke, aerosol cans burst into flame and shrapnel and household cleansers can produce deadly chlorine gas.

The technology that has given the firefighters flameproof jackets and helmets has also created a new era of life-threatening substances.

The call man needs to be trained in using the self-contained breathing apparatus, using the hoses, search and rescue techniques and salvage operations.

He may not even be called to a fire.

Call men are trained as first responders so they can provide medical assistance in cases of injury, accident and emergency childbirth. Or the call could be for a hazardous waste spill. It all takes specialized and ongoing training.

The relationship between the permanent force and the call men is close.

"Everybody realizes we rely on each other," Jack waste of money."

Town meeting...

Although highway surveyor Harold Litchfield was home with the flu, wire inspector Steven Wigmore told the audience Litchfield told him Elm Street was chosen because erosion under the pavement threatens to destroy the road.

"We could lose the road in another year or so," he said.

Voters unanimously authorized the town to borrow $13,929 for engineering studies on a groundwater diversion wall at the Cedar Street landfill. The town is under state orders to cap the former landfill and deal with the contaminated groundwater.

Although voters questioned health board chairman Michael Sullivan closely on the feasibility of the diversion wall and the engineering costs, the alternative is a far more expensive leachate collection system.

Currently, 8,000 gallons of water pass under the landfill site daily and become contaminated.

The smallest article on the warrant created the biggest stir. Voters opted to overturn the advisory board recommendation and pay five old bills totalling $335.

The bills were submitted by the historic district commission, cultural exchange commission and the law firm, Warner & Stackpole. The advisory committee recommended defeat of the article to send a message to town boards about the necessity of processing their invoices and receipts in a timely manner.

Herbert Towle of Beechwood Street warned voters to reject the advisory committee's advice. He said if the town took such a hard line with him as it proposed with these citizen volunteers, "I would never do another thing for the town of Cohasset."

The measure passed easily despite the fact that it required a nine-tenths majority. The final vote was 129-9 in favor of paying the bills.

Voters also passed articles authorizing the town to:

• Fully fund the town's share of the Norfolk County Retirement Budget Account. The annual town meeting in April underbudgeted the account by $8,151.

• Transfer $12,650 to the short-term borrowing interest account from free cash. According to town treasurer Elizabeth Ripley, she reduced this account from $30,000 to $10,000 before town meeting with the understanding she could approach the town for more money if another round of short-term borrowing became necessary.

Ripley told voters she anticipated borrowing "just for the fall until we get the tax bills in the mail" to solve the cash flow irregularities.

• Authorized the school system to borrow $30,000 to repair a failing septic system at Deer Hill School.

Original estimates calculated the project would cost $45,000. Savings come from promises by the highway department and Norfolk County engineers to do a substantial amount of work.

• To meet a contractual liability by coming up with $17,097 for the police salaries account. The town needs the money in order to cash out the accumulated sick leave benefits for a retiring police officer.

• Ensure the ongoing position of Council on Aging outreach worker for the second half of fiscal 1991 by transferring $3,809 from free cash. The position was state-funded, but Governor Michael Dukakis ordered funds used to pay for the part-time position to be frozen effective Jan. 1.

• Unanimously agreed to transfer $5,000 from the "Sale of Lots" account to be used to re-purchase unused grave sites from their owners. The re-purchased graves will be sold again to ease the crunch in grave site availability until cemetery expansion plans are completed.

Selectmen are free to set the level of compensation. According to Jane Goedecke, that level could go as high as $500.

"This buys us time," Goedecke said. She told voters if there was significant interest among plot holders to sell, selectmen might come back to town meeting for more money.

Voters soundly defeated two articles seeking to reclassify employees of the water department and board of health.

Selectmen and the advisory committee said personnel issues should only come before annual meeting where they can be reviewed as part of the whole town employee picture. Voters overwhelmingly agreed with their position.

Both reclassification proposals had the support of the personnel commission. According to the commission heads, the proposals will appear on the annual town meeting warrant.

Special town meeting voters also unanimously agreed to indefinitely postpone articles authorizing the town to transfer $9,000 for asbestos removal at the police/fire station and to abate taxes, outstanding fees and interest on a piece of land donated to the town during April's town meeting.

Asbestos removal will be done within the budget of the police/fire station renovation project. And according to town counsel Richard Henderson, there is no authority to abate the taxes in accordance with the directions contained in Article 14.

Special town meeting also unanimously voted for a resolution honoring Robert Pape for his years of service to the town and for being "a friend, neighbor, helper and just plain good citizen."

• NOTICE •

Call firefighters try to help their neighbors

MacNeill said. "Our lives depend on each other. There's a teamwork you have to have."

Limited manpower on the permanent force makes the call firefighters essential, according to Brock.

"It takes 18 to 20 firefighters to fight an average household fire," Brock said. Cohasset only has five or six permanent firefighters on duty at any given time. If a fire breaks out, the off-duty men are called back along with the call firefighters.

Brock explained that according to a 1977 study undertaken before the fire department took on the responsibility of the ambulance Cohasset needs a minimum force of 28 permanent firefighters and 30 call men.

Right now there are only 24 permanent firefighters and 15 call men.

There is a risk in operating with so few men. Brock said experts say a firefighter on the line needs to be relieved every 15 minutes to prevent injury or exhaustion.

"We just don't have that kind of reserves even with the call force."

Many of the men on the permanent force — Brock included — started out as call men. They recognize the burden and responsibility the town places on the call force for very little in return. They aren't surprised there are so few call men.

"We can't get call firefighters," Jack MacNeill said. "We've tried."

In the past year-and-a-half, only one new call man has come on board. Another man is "in the works."

Still, Cohasset is ahead of the surrounding towns.

"Hingham only has a handful [of call men], Scituate has one and Hull has none," Jack MacNeill said. He thinks most people don't sign on because the work is hard, dirty and dangerous — and you can't work in Boston and be on call.

MacNeill explains that a room can be engulfed in flames in less than three minutes. After 15 minutes, there's little that can be done.

At 51, Jack MacNeill has no desire to quit chasing firetrucks. Neither does Brooke or Jordan MacNeill.

"It feels good when you can help your neighbor," Jack MacNeill said.

Good luck to him and the Gulls!

❑ Ed Amaral, tennis coach for CHS and Hanover High School's basketball coach will be inducted into the State Coaches Association Hall of Fame on November 9. The awards dinner will be held at Boston University at 7 p.m. Tickets can be purchased by contacting John Sullivan at Hanover High School, 878-5450. Tickets are $25 per person. Be sure to attend, and let Ed know what a coach you think he is!

❑ A lot of people will remember "little" Gwen Lytle, the pretty towhead that used to live on Linden Drive. Well, Gwen was married this weekend, in New Jersey, on October 21 to be exact. The wedding was said to be absolutely spectacular, with everyone looking beautiful and the whole occasion being truly a memorable one. Mom, Cynthia Responde, looked as elegant as ever and as pleased as could be. Gwen and her brand new husband are spending a month in Thailand for their honeymoon, sounds grand doesn't it. We wish you health and happiness, Gwennie.

❑ Congratulations go to Thomas and Ann Marie Mills on the birth of their little boy. He was born on October 2 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Another little boy was born in Cohasset this month, we congratulate Roger and Andrea Wade on the birth of their son, born on October 11 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Here's hoping that Dorothy Bates feels much better as she reads this. As this is being written she is still a patient at South Shore Hospital...keep those cards coming.

❑ For all of you antique owners that have a special something that you aren't sure of its worth, now is your chance. This Saturday, October 27 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., there is an Art and Antique appraisal day that will be held at the South Shore Plaza store of Shreve, Crump and Low. You can bring as many pieces of art or antiques as you wish for informal appraisals. Now that's fun, especially if you get a pleasant surprise regarding that "find" at the most recent yard sale.

❑ Congratulations to Leo J. Meehan III and Sara Goodwin on the birth of their daughter, born on September 12 at South Shore Hospital.

❑ Good luck wishes to Babe Trott as she undergoes hip surgery. Here's to a rapid recovery, you'll be out in no time, walking better than ever.

❑ Received another note from Ellery Clark this week, he really is something. His Senior Olympic year was a banner one, he earned 9 golds, one silver and one bronze. The New England Journal of Medicine and Harvard Medical School are both interested in the fact that in 21 events, track and field for the last three years, the "aging Cohasseter" has never regressed in one event and has always shown improvement over previous times. Ellery attributes this to Lilly Pond drinking water, hard training, life style, still a great competitor, dedication, etc.

Erika Gjesteby, born on July 11, is the granddaughter of Arne and Martha Gjesteby of Cohasset and the daughter of Pamela and Rolf Gjesteby.

❑ We all hope that Burt Pratt feels much better and that he will soon be up and around on his "new knees." Hurry home Burt, you are missed by us all.

❑ William E. Baird, Jr. of 55 Red Gate Lane, of Cohasset has been awarded the Rensselaer Medal.

Each year, Rensselaer presents the Rensselaer Medal to high school students for outstanding achievements in the study of mathematics and science during their junior year. One junior from each of approximately 1,700 high schools is selected to receive the award. Known worldwide for its rigorous academic programs, Rensselaer is a university with recognized strength in aeronautics, engineering, robotics, and computer science, coupled with considerable depth in science, architecture, management, humanities, and the social sciences. A coeducational, independent, nonsectarian university, Rensselaer has approximately 4,500 undergraduate and 1,500 graduate students.

Kecskemety, a sophomore at Nichols, is a graduate of Cohasset High School and the daughter of Jack and Susan Kecskemety of 7 Cushing Road.

❑ Daniel J. Kierce of Cohasset is vice-president of the Accounting Club at Nichols College for the 1990-91 academic year.

Kierce, a senior majoring in accounting, has been inducted into the Zeta Alpha Phi and Delta Mu Delta Honor Societies and is a dean's honors student at Nichols.

A graduate of Cohasset High School, he is the son of Rose and Christopher Kierce of 189 S. Main Street, Cohasset.

❑ Please be sure to call me with your latest event, we all love reading about them.

Happy Halloween!

This space has been occupied by serious concerns for too long.

It's true that there are weighty issues pressing down upon the town. And it's also true that the editor has opinions on many of those issues.

But the time has come to take a few minutes to look on the humorous side of things.

Our ability to laugh sets us apart from the animals. Our ability to laugh at ourselves brings us freedom from the bondage of self.

So, we want to take the time to offer some suggestions — in a light vein — for Halloween.

We happen to think it would be fun if we could round up the town's movers and shakers next Wednesday night in costume. We have a list of possibilities for appropriate outfits for some of our town's notables.

Pat Desmond would wear a giant dunce cap and a dress colored with some of the misspelled or otherwise off-track Mariner headlines.

Christy Mihos should show up at our bash wearing a toga-styled American flag.

Rocco Laugelle could come as a liberated man. It would mean wearing an apron and carrying a diaper pail but the effect would be fantastic.

Tanna Kasperowicz would want to come as a fairy godmother. Maybe she could borrow the pink fluffy dress that Hingham Civic Music Theater trotted out for "The Wizard of Oz," which is showing this coming weekend.

What do you all think about having the PSO all show up at school committee and pretend to be an interested audience?

And how about having Debbie Cook, the Mariner's ace ad rep, wear old coveralls and grease?

Just imagine Rita Burke in something skimpy? (You won't see it, even on Halloween.)

Jack Worley could dress up in green whale pants and a turtle neck and act like a yuppie.

Diana Kornet could wear a jogger's outfit and try to explain why anyone would call her Pokey.

Martha Gjesteby might fool everyone if she looked like someone unconcerned with the process.

Jane O'Brien, the Mariner's latest stringer, can probably get away with wearing whatever she wants — for a couple more months — before people start attaching her face to her stories.

Alison Cohen, Mariner staffer, should wear a trenchcoat and carry a tape recorder.

Stephen Hart might want to try carrying a hatchet for the budget still to come.

The high school coaches could come dressed up like publicity hounds.

The directors of the Cohasset Community Center would make a hit wearing ninja outfits, all the better for their takeover of recreation.

The Cohasset Sailing Club's directors could wear harbormaster suits and privatize the waterfront.

Mary Jeanette Murray could wear anything. People would recognize her anyway.

Banker praises town workers after fire

Letters

To the Editor:

The fire of Oct. 4, 1990, wherein several North Scituate businesses were either heavily damaged or destroyed, should be a lesson for all of us; namely, just how much we do depend and, more to the point, CAN depend on our town employees. The cooperation shown by all in this time of devastation was exemplary to say the least.

Special mention should be made here of the job turned in by our firefighters and police officers. Only through their collective efforts was a total holocaust avoided and order maintained. The chiefs, officers and men of all departments who fought or otherwise assisted in this fire can be and should be justly proud of their professional performance.

To everyone who had a hand in assisting in this fire, we are in your debt.

Thank you.

Polechronis corrects his spoken word

To the Editor:

A recent article reporting on an edition of the "Pierson to Person" cable program contained a quote of an error I made during the filming.

When asked if I thought the passage of the Citizens for Limited Taxation (CLT) Question 3 — rolling back all state taxes and fees to 1988 levels —would spell the end of the Old Colony Railroad Project, I meant to respond that "CLT would not kill just Old Colony". Unfortunately, I left out the word "just". I did, however, go on to say that CLT will cause the MBTA to fundamentally reconsider not only expanded services like Old Colony, but also our existing services such as bus, commuter boat and rapid transit services.

My intent was to convey to the questioner that CLT was not a way to postpone Old Colony yet keep all the other transit services the South Shore now enjoys.

My apologies to both leaders and listeners alike who may have been confused by my lack of clarity.

Stephen J. Polechronis
Senior Project Manager for Development

Goedecke takes issue with our editorial

To the Editor:

I must register my disappointment with the Mariner concerning its Editorial of October 18, 1990. The subject was the ongoing discussions concerning the Community Center's taking over the town's recreation programs.

The Mariner has always advocated creative, innovative solutions to our town's fiscal problems. Now, when some actual creative thinking is being attempted, this newspaper speaks out against it. As I read the news article and even the Editorial, no decisions have been made and, in fact, very little discussion or fact-finding has yet taken place. Ideas are being proposed and analyzed. That is all.

All the parties involved here wish only to provide the best service to the town for the lowest cost. This should not be an adversarial situation, but the Mariner , I am afraid, has gone a long way toward making it so. I hope the public will be a lot more open-minded and follow these discussions over the next few months before making up its mind. I certainly intend to.

Sincerely,
Jane O. Goedecke

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Plastic and Glass: Clean your containers with a little water and remove all caps and rings. We continue to have a great many problems in this area. Now more than ever it is important to take the time to prepare your commodities for recycling, as we have changed merchants for glass and plastic. They are unwilling to take dirty contaminated containers...and why should they? There are towns much bigger than our own ready with their clean glass and plastic. Those towns, like our own, understand that recycling is an important way to keep costs down as trash disposal costs mount.

To review: Rinse jars, bottles, and plastic jugs in a little water. If you hand wash your dishes, save the containers until the end and rinse them in the dish water. If you use a dishwasher, simply include these items in your machine. Milk jugs can be rinsed out with a "swish" of water. I would say a "swish" was about 2 tablespoons. Use cold water with all dairy products as it washes away the milk fat.

• Glass bottles need to have the metal rings removed. Keep a wire cutter close to your sink. Simply snip off the rings after rinsing the bottle and before placing in the recycling container.

If you are having problems with glass or plastic or any other recycling procedure, please let me know or anyone on the recycling committee, or you can leave a message for us at the board of health: 383-9900 ext. 121.

Home Composting

An important part of any garden is its source of readily available soil lightener, the home compost. Usually located close to the garden, it can range from the simple pile to special containers purchased or made specifically for home composting. Whatever you choose, the home compost is an easy and convenient way to dispose of food scraps and yard waste. Excuse me, did I say dispose of? Dispose of is entirely the wrong concept when talking about compost. This is gardener's gold and it is a gift that comes from your garden and gets returned to your garden every year.

Last week Jack Hubbard, compost monitor at the RTF, told us how we can use finish compost from the RTF and this week, he shares some tips with us on the home compost. "If you are starting a compost pile for the first time," says Hubbard, "start small." He recommends setting up three three-foot bins side by side. These can be constructed of scrap wood and chicken wire. (The scrap wood could even come from the RTF). Pressure treated wood is not recommended as that leaches arsenic into the soil and then into the food chain. After your container is completed, you are ready to start using it.

Hubbard tells us to start by using the outside containers first and turning the compost into the middle bin. Earth is created from grass clippings, food waste and leaves by decomposition. Decomposition is created by three key ingredients: heat, moisture, and air. Compost fails if one of these ingredients is out of whack. Start the layering process in one of the outside bins with a 1 foot layer of grass clippings, a one-foot layer of food scraps, and finished with a one foot layer of manure. Manure is locally available at the RTF and from area horse owners (ask first). When one outside bin has been completed, then use the other outside bin in the same manner. When both bins have their layers done, it is time to turn them into the middle one. You will notice that they are no longer 3 feet high but have compacted considerably and have started to decay somewhat; however, with aeration, this process will speed up considerably. Heat is provided by the manure. Moisture is provided by naturally occurring rainfall or a watering during a dry spell, and aeration is provided by turning the pile.

Hubbard also recommends that we start with small ingredients. Just as we don't include brush in the compost pile at the RTF, we should not include sticks, stones, or fibrous material in the home compost. The reason is simple: It will take too long to break down the large material. He recommends leaves, food scraps, and grass clippings. "You can further break down your leaves by running over them with a lawn mower," he says. Do this before putting them in the compost bins, and for your safety, make sure that there are no sticks or stones present.

Home composting is a simple way of re-using your resources. While composting of leaves and grass clippings is offered at the RTF, many homeowners might find it easier to simply recycle these ingredients at home and save themselves the chore of lugging more material to the RTF.

Living Life

Trick or treat! Halloween is just around the corner! There will be parties at school, parties at home, masks and funny faces galore, candy corn, apples on the stick. There will be costumes of ninja turtles, Bart Simpson, cowboys and Indians, cops and robbers, doctors and nurses, priests and nuns, reverends and rabbis, hobos, clowns and street urchins, but I haven't met anyone in recent years who said that they would like to be a saint! I wonder why? After all, isn't that what we are celebrating - Halloween, the Eve of All Saints!

Richard Sweeney, a well known author and teacher, tells the true story of a fourth grade teacher who wanted to instruct her students on what it means to be a saint. Being creative, she took a list of 30 very common professions such as lawyer, auto mechanic, barber, carpenter, bricklayer, waitress, bus driver, beautician et cetera and into that list she inserted the words HERO/HEROINE and SAINT. She instructed the youngsters to prioritize them from one to 30, one being what they wanted to be most of all, and 30 being what they liked least. It was her way of celebrating Halloween with her kids.

She tabulated all the information and discovered that most children put hero/heroine down second or third, while saint was relegated to 28th or 29th, beating out street cleaner/garbage collector in most instances. The teacher was rather curious as to why the students chose accordingly. Most said that to be a saint, you had to be special or out of the ordinary. They didn't feel too special in any area or they felt it was impossible for them to be somebody special. Others felt that to be a saint, you had to pray a lot, and spend a good bit of time in church, or the temple. Many said they didn't like going to church, or temple. I wonder why? One bright fourth grader said that to be a saint, you had to be dead, and he wasn't ready for that yet.

I am wondering what lies behind the children's choices? Could it be that if adults did the same priority listing, they would come up with the same answers? I don't know, but I am inclined to think they would. I believe that we, as an adult generation, are so divorced from true spiritual values that we cannot distinguish them from religious ones. I have met far too many persons in my lifetime who could not make the distinction between religion and spirituality. Every religion has its rules and regulations about what you need to do to be a good religious member of whatever the creed or denomination is. Jim Jones had his rules and so does Reverend Moon. The Roman Catholics have their rules and so do the Lutherans, and the Methodists, and the Baptists and the Muslims and the Hindus and the Shintoists and the Buddhists and all of the religions that have come and gone from the foundations of the world. There were religious wars and crusades and these still go on today. Could it be that we are dealing with a number of myths regarding religion and spirituality? That to be a spiritual person, or a saint, or a holy person, you have to belong to some religion, or profess some creed? That you have to spend a lot of time praying and the best place to pray is in church or temple? No doubt that prayer and good religion are tools for living life to its optimum, but living life on life's terms has everything to do with being a saint! To live life on life's terms is difficult - no wonder that few want to be a saint – no wonder they choose the easier, softer way.

At the core of every human being created from the beginning of time is imprinted the rules and regulations of the spirit. If a person wants to find happiness and joy, then they must seek the truth and live by the rules of their spirit. It is not always easy to be honest and truthful, loving and caring; it is not always easy to seek justice and have compassion; it is not always easy to find true humility and sincerity - it is not always easy, but it is a choice!

In seeking the truth, will we stumble and fall? Of course! And when we do, we find out how human we really are. And that is the secret of being a saint or a holy person. Find someone and seek them out - someone who is truly human, authentically human, almost ordinarily human, and you will find a saint, a holy person. Is this possible for me? Of course it is! And it is possible for every human being ever created. Seek the truth, and it will make you free, but it will make you miserable first. Let's face it! There is good religion and there is bad religion. There is positive spirituality and there is negative spirituality! It is up to every individual in this world to make the choice. What will yours be? I hope to be a saint! Happy Halloween!

Essay contest for students

The Massachusetts Bar Association is sponsoring a statewide essay contest to celebrate the bicentennial of the Bill of Rights.

The contest, which is being sponsored locally by the Plymouth County Bar Association, is open to students in grades nine through 12.

The essay topic is a hypothetical situation designed to generate discussion on stop and frisk laws and the difficulty of balancing the rights of alleged gang members against the need for safe, drug-free neighborhoods. Entrants will be asked to formulate and back up their own views, following specific contest rules.

Essays must be submitted by Nov. 5, then county bar representatives will choose five essays to be entered in the statewide competition. Final judging will be done by the Massachusetts Bar Association.

One student will win each of first through third place categories, and there will be five honorable mentions. First prize is $250 and all entrants will receive certificates of recognition. Winners will be acknowledged in January, 1991.

For more information, contact the MBA law related education office at (617) 542-3602.

Tim Abell plays Osgood thanks to PSO financing

By Margaret Palone
Special to the Mariner

PSO Curriculum Enrichment sponsored two concerts for Joseph Osgood School students on October 9 by Timmy Abell, a highly talented folk musician and storyteller who delighted students and teachers with his rousing active songs, gentle melodies and fascinating stories.

Children participated by singing choruses, doing actions, by playing the autoharp and by making the wooden man, "Charlie", dance on a paddle board.

K-3 students learned about the banjo, which was introduced into the United States by black slaves; it was made by stretching strings over a drumhead. The audience enjoyed an original song played on a hammer dulcimer, a 6000 year old Persian instrument, and a forerunner of the piano. The concertina aroused great interest amongst the children. It is a free reed instrument along with the accordion and harmonica. These instruments have flat metal reeds which vibrate as air passes over them, and the length of the reed determines which musical note will be heard. Everyone present loved the autoharp, which is in the same family as the dulcimer, and is a type of board zither. It was invented in the 1920s. Even small children can strum the chords for simple folk songs. Volunteers from the audience enjoyed playing a tune on the autoharp.

Abell has a tape of his music available called "The Farmers' Market." He provided lyrics to many of the songs that are on the tape in an excellent teacher curriculum orientation guide along with a great deal of information about the instruments which he plays.

The guide was used as a source for this article. Copies were given to each teacher in grades K-3 by the Curriculum Enrichment Committee.

Safe Homes pledges due

Cohasset parents of students in Grades 6-12, "Safe Homes" pledges are due back by November 2.

If you did not receive one or have misplaced yours, you can pick up another at the Cohasset Recreation Department office at Cohasset Town Hall or the Paul Pratt Library.

AARP fair is on Nov. 10

The South Shore Chapter AARP will hold its annual fair Saturday, Nov. 10, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at the Sons of Italy Hall, Route 3A in Hingham.

Tables will include: arts and crafts, white elephant, boutique, jewelry, baked goods and more. There will be a raffle plus door prizes every hour. Sandwiches and homemade desserts will be available and free coffee or tea. The fair is a membership effort to raise money for the community service activities the chapter sponsors.

"WHY DID WE CHOOSE THE VILLAGE AT DUXBURY?"

"TO SECURE OUR FUTURE."

"We're active independent people who enjoy life, our home...and doing interesting things. But we're planners too, and we've been looking for a way to make our future secure. We found it at The Village at Duxbury, the South Shore's newest senior living community.

"By reserving now we have guaranteed access to all the wonderful benefits that a well-managed community has to offer, including a full array of hospitality services and emergency medical and nursing care, if needed.

"Now ... no matter what the future has in store, we've planned for it, and we've secured our future at The Village at Duxbury."

Senior living never looked better. Come see for yourself!

BULLETIN BOARD

Safe Homes registers 87

Fifty-four households (with 87 students) have registered their homes for the Safe Homes program so far.

The Drug and Alcohol Committee would like to thank those who have made donations. If you have not received a Safe Homes pamphlet or lost yours, you may pick one up at the Cohasset Town Hall or the Paul Pratt Library.

The address to return a signed pamphlet is to: Safe Homes, Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025.

If you have any questions concerning the Safe Homes program please call Susan Shumaker at 383-1443. The deadline for responses is Friday, November 2.

Gymnastics meet at CCC

On Saturday, October 27, at 11:30 a.m. the Cohasset Community Center will be conducting a Gymnastic Meet. This meet will include gymnasts that are competing Entry Level (A or B), Level 5's, and High School Optionals.

There is no admission fee. The public is invited.

Congratulations are in order for Cohasset Center's Caroline DeLima 12, and Megan Pratt, 11, for their participation in the Octoberfest meet held at Cape Cod Gymnastics in Dennis.

On October 21, Coaching Director Ruthann Sargent, gymnasts, Caroline and Megan traveled to the Cape and participated in their first season competition. Megan Pratt received a 7.0 vault, 6.4 balance beam, bars 5.0 and floor exercise 5.5. Caroline DeLima received a 6.2 vault, balance beam 5.9, and floor exercise 6.4. Good luck to all competitors on Saturday, October 27.

Chamber plans auction

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce is now in the process of collecting gifts and prizes from area businesses and friends to be auctioned off at their annual fundraiser.

This year's auction will be held at the South Shore Art Center on Nov. 10, from 6:30 to 11 p.m. Any business or individual who would like to donate to the auction may call the Chamber at 383-1973, or Bob Davenport of Sestito Flower Shop, 383-1966.

All donors will be supplied with documentation of their tax deductible gift, and will be credited in the program that evening. This is the only fundraiser held by the Chamber during the year, and their many programs, such as Candidates' Night, the School Committee Forum, and the "Little Piece of Home" packages depend on the proceeds of this evening.

Service offers friendship

New Friends is an outreach program of the Social Service League of Cohasset that matches volunteers with people in the community who may be physically limited or lonely or in some way just wanting to share their life with another. One volunteer takes courses at a university and shares them with his housebound "New Friend" who is always eager to learn.

Another volunteer with her three small boys has become the "adopted family" of her 75-year-old new friend. Another volunteer simply takes her new friend for ice cream and then in the beautiful weather, they go for a ride in the car.

The volunteers and their new friends agree that there is much mutual joy in a relationship—that life is more expansive and rewarding as a result. If you can give four or five hours a month and would like to know more about being a New Friends' volunteer, or if you know someone who might like to be visited, please call Bobbie Fowle at the Social Service League, 383-0771 or 383-0821.

Back care offered at club

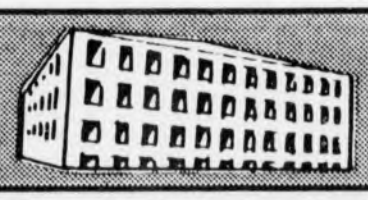
Dr. Jon Gillespie of Gillespie Chiropractic Route 3A, Cohasset ,will be speaking at the Work Out Club, Route 3A, Hingham, on Tuesday, Oct. 30 at 7:30 p.m.

Dr. Gillespie, former chief of staff for N.M.S. Rehabilitation will be discussing: exercise equipment usage and injury prevention, specific exercise programs (walking, running, cycling, and stretching), and good back habits. A question and answer period will follow the session. For further information call 383-2550.

For what its worth...

How many times have you looked at an old piece of silver, an heirloom bracelet, an antique print and wondered "How old is that? How much is that worth?"

On Saturday, Oct. 27 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Shreve, Crump & Lowe at the South Shore Plaza will be glad to tell you. A $10 charge at the door entitles you to as many informal (not written) appraisals on as many items as you wish. Shreve's have gone all out for this second annual event. Their own renowned experts in the areas of silver flatware and holloware, fine china, crystal stemware and fancies, antiques, jewelry and collectibles will be on hand to examine your treasures.



The Shreve, Crump & Lowe store at the South Shore Plaza is the only location for this one day event. Shreve, Crump & Lowe will donate all proceeds from the entry fees to the South Shore Art Center. For more information, please call Shreve, Crump & Lowe at 617-849-1250.

Grandfather's namesake docks in Boston

Pictured is the U.S.S. Clark, the nuclear frigate named for Admiral Joseph James (Jocko) Clark. The ship was dry docked in Boston for repairs.

On Saturday, October 20, Josiah (Joey) Slotnick and Laura Slotnick toured the USS Clark, now in drydock at General Ship in South Boston. The ship, a nuclear frigate in the Perry Class, was named after their grandfather, Admiral Joseph James (Jocko) Clark. There are 53 ships in this class. The first two were the USS Perry, named after Oliver Hazard Perry; the second the Morison, after Samuel Eliot Morison (the naval historian).

The Clark is in Boston for repairs. Lt. Grayson Haberle, of Philadelphia, gave the children a very exciting tour of the ship. Afterwards, they were given refreshments by the Commanding Officer, Cmdr. Victor Ackley and Executive Officer, Lt. Cmdr. John Murphy. Clark's daughter, Mary Lou Clark-Slotnick presented to the ship a portrait of the Admiral and a scrapbook containing memorabilia of his life.

The Clark was launched at Bath Ironworks, Maine, ten years ago in honor of Admiral Clark. He died in 1971, having served forty years in the US Navy, his last post being Commander of the Seventh Fleet, Formosa in the Korean War, retiring as a four star Admiral. He was Class of 1917 U.S. Naval Academy. Admiral Clark fought in three wars serving on many ships including the Yorktown, Hornet, Midway and Lexington. The aircraft carrier Yorktown became America's most famous World War 11 vessel and was nicknamed "The Fighting Lady".

Clark is famous for the risk he took during World War 11 in the Pacific when he "turned on the lights" against orders to allow his pilots to return to the carriers after dark. He was referred to as "The Patton of the Pacific".

He was part Cherokee Indian, born in Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, in 1893 and remains the highest ranking person of Indian descent in U.S. military history. Clark gave his Oklahoma boyhood friend, Will Rogers, his first airplane flight, by catapult off the battleship Mississippi.

Clark 's book Seapower and Its Meaning has been used as a textbook at the Naval Academy. Carrier Admiral, his autobiography, was praised by Samuel Eliot Morison as the best history of carrier aviation to come out of the War.

MID-BACK CORRECTION

Because it is experienced so often, lower back pain is given so much attention. However, just above the lumbar region of the back lies the thoracic spine which also may experience pain. This area extends upward from about five inches above the beltline to the base of the neck. Pain and stiffness in this mid-back region can be brought on by poor lifting technique, poor posture, or trauma. If these circumstances cause a misalignment of the thoracic vertebrae, a patient may experience sharp pain between the shoulder blades, muscle spasms, stiffness, and difficulty in breathing. When this occurs, the chiropractor may move to alleviate these symptoms by correcting any spinal fixations. Otherwise, attention may be directed to uncovering any deep-seated pathological causes or areas from which the pain is referred.

For work or even play related discomforts, chiropractic can provide the desired relief and correction from related problems. DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7300 and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, offer the drugless and natural approach to correcting such painful situations. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Pain in the mid-back can even be an indication of improper nutritional habits.

Field hockey scores

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

With two games left in the regulation season, Cohasset Field Hockey has a playoff spot just about wrapped up. Their record, 5-1-6, earns the team 16 out of the 17 points required to enter the South Shore tournament. However, the ambitions of the team run higher than simply making the tournament; Cohasset is in contention for a second place seating in the league, and if they win the final two games of the regulation season, second place will be assured to the Skippers.

The team reached this position by earning two crucial wins against East Bridgewater and Carver. The first of these came at home on Oct. 17 when Cohasset defeated East Bridgewater 2-0, eliminating any chance for the contending East Bridgewater team to finish second in the league. Bridget Corkery, the sophomore center halfback, scored first on an assist from Kathleen Conroy, a junior. Then team captain Barbara Lagrotteria increased the lead to two on assists from Nicole Greco and Cilla Goff. Goalie Merrie Hansen made four critical saves, keeping the other team scoreless.

Carver was the next team that tried to stop Cohasset, but failed as well when Cilla Goff, a freshman on the team, scored the only goal of the game in the second half, allowing the Skippers to record another victory, bringing them closer still to the South Shore tournament.

The last two games of the regulation season will be played on Tuesday, Oct. 23, away, verses Norton, and on Thursday, Oct. 25 at home against Hull.

Soccer destroys Hanover

On Wednesday, Oct. 17, Cohasset played away at Hanover and won, 2-1, defeating the team that had beaten them previously in the season, 4-2. This game improved Cohasset's record to 9-2-1. Cohasset won the next game at home against Hull 8-3. This victory clinched a playoff spot for Cohasset in the South Shore League tournament. There are three games remaining in regulation season. They will be played on Tuesday, Oct. 23, at Norwell, on Thursday, Oct. 25, at home against Norton, and on Monday, Oct. 29, at Rockland.

SENIOR CENTER NEWS

By Kathy Bryanton
Special to the Mariner

We have received many telephone calls regarding this year's fuel assistance program. All those who received fuel assistance during the 1989-1990 heating season, applications will be mailed to you by South Shore Community Action Council.

You should receive your applications by the last week in October. Once you receive your applications, the Council on Aging Outreach Worker, Susan Connolly will be available to render assistance on Tuesdays 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. and Wednesday, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to help you with completing the application.

The fuel assistance program will begin on November 1 and this year the maximum allowable benefit will be $500. The program is scheduled to run through March 30, if funding holds up. If you did not receive fuel assistance last year but feel that you may be eligible for it this year, the Council on Aging will also process applications for new participants. However, as stated earlier, we have only a few applications and money might run out early this year.

SWIM CLUB AT WEBB'S POOL

For Senior's only — exercise in the water, one half hour of free swim, use the whirlpool and facilities at Webb's Pro Fitness. You get to meet other seniors from neighboring towns. It's fun! Classes beginning Wednesday, October 24, for eight weeks for $39. Late comers will be pro-rated.

TUESDAY LUNCHEONS

Remember to join us on Tuesdays for lunch at the First Parish House, 23 No. Main Street. The cost of the lunch is now $2. Delicious food and wonderful social gathering where you can meet new friends. Reservations: call 383-9112. Call early to reserve your spot. October 30 is a Halloween party. Best dressed gets a prize.

MYSTERY RIDE

We have a few seats left for our Mystery Ride on Oct. 31. Great fun! Call 383-9112.

M.B.T.A. PASSES

Wednesday, November 7, 10 a.m. until noon, "Senior Citizen/Transportation Access Pass Registration Day". Make plans to be at the Hull, COA, 197 Samoset Avenue. Call Barbara for an appointment at 925-1239.

UP COMING HEALTHY NUTRITION COURSE

The Cohasset Council on Aging for seniors is pleased to be offering for the first time a nutrition class for the regional area seniors. "Slim Down for Seniors." There will be a meeting for eight weeks, topics will include eating for energy, cooking for one, and satisfaction, not deprivation. Fee $20. Call 383-9112.

A DATE TO REMEMBER

This is a 220-year-old New England antique.
Only better.

NANTUCKET TEA TABLE
Cherry and Maple
Over fifty Eldred Wheeler craftsmen continue to construct antique furniture. At their workshop in Hingham, Massachusetts they design, build, and finish pieces using the same methods New England cabinetmakers did over 200 years ago.
Some of the forms crafted include beds, chests, secretary desks, lowboys, tables, chairs, and highboys. Because each piece is made by hand, most people reserve them in advance. However, many items at our showrooms are available to take home.
The appreciating value of Eldred Wheeler Furniture has been demonstrated at local auction houses. Discover the affordability of these handmade pieces with Eldred Wheeler's new Preferred Collector Program.
The fall is a great time to explore New England. Plan to visit one of our showrooms.

Karen Ekberg weds Mr. Moritz

At a ceremony at Channing Memorial Church in Newport, R.I. Sept. 29, Karen A. Ekberg, daughter of Kenneth C. and Alva Ekberg, became the bride of Peter Worthington Moritz.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Moritz of Darien, Ct.

The bride's father is principal of Deer Hill School in Cohasset. The bridegroom's father is chairman of Dunn & Bradstreet in New York.

The Rev. Edward Atkinson of the First Parish Church in Cohasset officiated at the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was attended by Leigh Miller of St. Louis, Mo. as maid of honor.

Bridesmaids were Kristin Harris of Tokyo, Japan; Ellen Ciciotte of Boston; Katelin Whittemore of Watertown; Anne Moritz of Chicago, and Tracy Moritz of New York.

Ushers were John Bullock of Norwalk, Ct.; Richard Galiardo of New York; Richard Sullivan of New York; Steven Wright of Norwalk, Ct., and Ronald Yarish of Darien, Ct.

Dennis Peters of Norwalk, Ct. was best man.

A reception followed at the Astors' Beechwood in Newport, R.I.

The bride is a graduate of Cohasset High School and Brown University. She is an account marketing representative at IBM in Waltham.

The bridegroom is a graduate of the Lawrenceville School and Tufts University. He is a corporate sales manager for the American Express Company in Stamford, Ct.

The couple is residing in Norwalk, Ct. following a wedding trip to Australia.

Mrs. Peter Worthington Moritz

Lauren Hayes plans to marry John Concannon of Lexington

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Haynes of Cohasset announce the engagement of their daughter, Lauren Lane Haynes, to John J. Concannon III of Lexington.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Concannon Jr. of Waltham.

Miss Haynes is a graduate of Derby Academy, Cohasset High School and Boston College. She teaches history at Notre Dame Academy in Hingham.

Mr. Conconnan is a graduate of Boston College and Suffolk University Law School. He is employed by the law firm of Bingham, Dana and Gould in Boston.

Buttonwood Books and Toys

Though just a year old, Buttonwood Books & Toys has already established a reputation that extends far beyond the local area and that has made it a destination for scores of delighted shoppers. Customers are surprised at the cosmopolitan book inventory of over 20,000 titles and pleased with the willingness of salespeople to place special orders for titles not in stock. Toys are carefully selected and range from the traditional wooden blocks and stuffed animals to the latest items on the market. Quality and safety are important. A large arts and crafts selection also provides materials for the store's popular craft workshops.

Time spent by salespeople in helping customers find particularly appropriate books and toys is much appreciated, as is the complimentary gift-wrapping service.

The store reaches out to the community in a variety of ways, providing generous discounts to teachers, ordering books for schools, providing resource books for special interest groups and doing school book fairs. A particularly popular service is the Tuesday morning story hour for toddlers.

Amblergate.

Robert Ambler, a State Legislator for over a quarter of century, has raised over $200,000 to try to win a $37,500 job in the State Senate. Nearly $60,000 of that money has come from PACs, lobbyists, and special interests. Now he expects you to trust him to look after your interests.

If you're tired of this kind of politics; if you want to end the same old game that has brokered our government and broken our economy, there's something you can do. Elect Bob Hedlund your State Senator.

Bob Hedlund is a young businessman who is fighting to keep our vote in the Senate out of the hands of the special interests and lobbyists.

Let's end "Amblergate" and elect Bob Hedlund.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by WALTER G. ROSS, dated January 14, 1986, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 258, to COHASSET SAVINGS BANK of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 a.m. on the 26th day of November, 1990 at the premises 159 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts.

To wit: "A certain parcel of land situated in said Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, and being bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the Easterly corner of the granted premises, at the point in the Westerly line of South Main Street at land conveyed by Minnie P. Gilmore to Minerva C. Stone, June 27, 1923, the line runs South 74° 4' West by said land of Minerva C. Stone, one hundred ninety-seven and 70/100 (197.70) feet to a point in the stone wall at land now or formerly of one Sankey; thence line turns and runs North 16° 15' 30" West by said stone wall one hundred ninety-four and 21/100 (194.21) feet to Spring Street; thence South 84° 3' 10" East by said Spring Street, two hundred eleven and 93/100 (211.93) feet to said Westerly line of South Main Street; thence South 16° 57' 20" East, one hundred fifteen and 21/100 (115.21) feet to the point of beginning.

Containing 29,949 square feet of land and being shown as the smaller of two lots on a subdivision plan belonging to Minnie P. Gilmore, Cohasset, Mass., recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 1559, Page 357, dated June 25, 1923, H. A. Litchfield, C.E.

For title, see deed of Anita L. Ross to Walter G. Ross, recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 257."

TERMS OF SALE: Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles, municipal liens and assessments, if any, which take precedence over the said mortgage above described.

Deposit of TEN THOUSAND AND 00/100 ($10,000.00) DOLLARS cash or certified check will be required by the purchaser at the time of sale, and the balance of the purchase price within twenty-five (25) days; other terms to be announced at time of sale.

White ribbons show support for anti-porno campaign

Members of the Pro Family Forum of the South Shore are supportive of the White Ribbon Against Pornography campaign (WRAP) that will be held the week of Oct. 28 through Nov. 4. WRAP is a nationwide display of white ribbons which will say to our legislators and law enforcement officials that we want a safe and decent place to live. We want the obscenity laws of the Commonwealth to be enforced.

You can tie a white ribbon on your car, on your front door, on a tree in the front yard. This will say, yes, I want to clean up the moral environment of my community!

The sponsors of WRAP (Morality in Media) believe that through a united effort, peoples of good will can be vigilant and help turn the tide against obscenity and pornography that is so pervasive in our society today. For more information call Polly Doggett at 383-1847.

CAN DENTAL IMPLANTS BE REJECTED BY THE BODY?

No. The greatest amount of research on dental implants over the last twenty-five years has been devoted to bio-compatability: Will the body accept them? Thanks to the tireless efforts of bio-chemists, metallurgists and field specialists, the materials used in today's dental implants are fully accepted by the natural chemistry of the body. For more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617-826-8395.

Fine gifts for sale at SS art center Nov. 2

South Shore Art Center's "Fine Art of Giving" sale of original works by regional artisans and Gallery Artists on Friday, November 2 from 6 to 9 p.m. and Saturday, November 3, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. will be a unique opportunity to save dollars in this economic crunch and find that elusive and one-of-a-kind gift to mark your affection for those dear to you to commemorate the 1990 holiday season.

Gifts for that special person will reflect the lower commission rate of the S.S.A.C. during this event. Come and join us in this early celebration of the holidays. Youngsters will be kept busy creating Thanksgiving decorations in a supervised area, thus giving you ample time to browse. Admission is free.

Cushing Plaza might close

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

If Cushing Plaza doesn't clean up its act and make substantial progress in dealing with a failed septic system, the Cohasset Board of Health may shut down the 23-store shopping center on Route 3A.

The 30-year-old septic system has been a source of ongoing odor and sewage overflow problems.

Last December the Board asked Norfolk Superior Court to close the Plaza and impose $365,000 in fines because of long-standing failure to correct the situation.

The matter was resolved when the parties negotiated a detailed agreement for correction of the problem. However, the Plaza failed to meet the deadlines in the settlement plans. The entire project was to have been completed in September.

A key element in the plan of correction calls for the owners to lower the water table under the plaza's leach field by constructing an interceptor drain.

The drain would collect the ground water and channel it away from the leach field. The diverted water would empty into the state DPW drainage system and eventually make its way into Bound Brook.

Before the interceptor drain can be constructed, the Plaza must get permission to dump into the drainage system and must obtain an easement to extend the pipe across Dwyer's property.

Cohasset High cheerleaders pile up at a pep rally for homecoming last week.

According to Health Agent Dr. Joseph Godzik, the DPW will not grant permission until the easements are obtained.

Until the problem is corrected, the Plaza must control the flow into the leach field by having the septic tanks pumped out frequently.

Godzik said lowering the water table may not entirely solve the problem. He believes the Plaza may have to replace the leach field that is located beneath the asphalt parking lot.

The pitched battled between veteran Democrat Robert Ambler and brash Republican newcomer Robert Hedlund peaked last week when a furious Republican Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray of Cohasset, demanded that her name be removed from Hedlund's latest campaign flyer and abruptly quit his campaign committee.

Ambler and Hedlund are vying for the seven-town Norfolk-Plymouth state Senate seat which Sen. William Golden will vacate in January.

Murray says she never saw the four-page tabloid flyer before it was distributed over her endorsement, and strongly objects to it on several grounds.

"It's not a lie," she said last week, "but it isn't quite honest, either. This looks like something the [Boston] Globe would do."

The tabloid, being dropped and mailed to voters throughout the district, archly asks what a number of controversial corporations and interest groups -- including Braintree's Clean Harbors, Boston Edison and liquor distillers -- have in common.

The answer, revealed on the second page, is "Robert Ambler."

Then follows "a partial listing of Bob Ambler's contributors: 1989-90," including a listing of lobbyists -- and their clients.

The problem, Murray points out, arises in the fact that lobbyists may work for many clients, some of which may oppose Ambler, and some of which, as corporations, are barred by law from making political contributions.

Lobbyists give personal checks -- not client funds -- to politicians as a cost of the lobbyist business, and it is illegal for corporations to reimburse those donations. Since lobbyists may represent a number of clients, it's impossible -- and unfair, according to Murray -- to attribute any lobbyist donation to any particular client.

"VERY MISLEADING"

But that's what Hedlund's flyer proposes to do, with sometimes absurd results.

The tabloid lists, for example, lobbyist Michael J. Muse as donating $500 to the Ambler campaign.

Tuesday is the day of the voter

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

A high voter turnout is expected for the Tuesday, Nov. 6, state election, according to Town Clerk Frances Marks.

A high number of absentee ballots had been requested by Tuesday this week.

"The high number of absentees is a good indication the turnout will be high," Marks said. There were 200 people who had already appeared to vote absentee. The deadline for absentee voting is Monday, Nov. 5, at noon. The town clerk's office closes at noon Monday to prepare for the election.

There are 5,041 registered voters in town eligible to vote in the balloting, out of a population of 7,247.

Marks attributes the high voter registration to the overall age of the townspeople — there are more older people than children in town.

She said she is concerned about the whether everyone understands how to use the voting machines.

There were a number of votes in the state primary that were totally blank. Marks said that means to her that those voters did not understand how to use the machines.

"And they were too proud to ask," she said.

Bill Quigley hunts tame beasts

Bill Quigley is no Saturday morning cartoon-style dogcatcher. He doesn't drive a van, he doesn't own a net and his official title is animal control officer. But if Fido is terrorizing the neighborhood, you'll get to know him well.

Quigley said late summer and early fall is his busy season. He's busy picking up the pets abandoned by summer people and the strays that are looking for a place to live.

It's also the time when squirrels, skunks, raccoons and opossums cross humans' paths by burrowing into their homes or getting in front of their vehicles. Quigley's the one who gets called when wildlife gets in your way.

Tuesday morning he was asked to deal with a squirrel in a house, a raccoon in a dumpster, a rat in a trap and a cockatoo up a tree. Just an average kind of day.

He has also dealt with a runaway iguana, a ram taking a stroll down Route 3A and a peripatetic pony on Nichols Road.

"Those are usually a Sunday morning kind of thing," he said.

Dogs remain his biggest business. Despite the existence of a leash law in town, dogs continue to run loose.

"I try to use discretion with a first offender," Quigley said. Usually the owner gets off with a polite warning and a request to get the dog licensed.

Some owners don't take Quigley seriously. In the

COHASSET'S WEEK

Asbestos contract signed

Selectmen ratified their decision to award the contract for asbestos removal at the police/fire station to National Abatement Services of Cohasset. The contract is for $8,690.

Selectmen had asked town counsel Richard Henderson if there was any conflict of interest because advisory committee member Wayne Sawchuk has an interest in National Abatement Services. According to David Chase, chairman of the police/fire station renovation committee, Henderson found no conflict of interest.

Selectmen Edwin Tebbetts praised the committee for its work.

"I will be very proud when we bring this thing in below the numbers and on time," Chase said.

He also told selectmen the savings in construction costs may allow the department to afford some of the communication equipment that was on the wish list when the renovation work was first discussed.

Once the final construction figures are in, the committee will come back to the selectmen with information and proposals on the equipment. According to Chase, none of the renovation work will have to be undone in order to install the communication equipment.

No change for tax office

The tax collector's office will remain closed to public transactions on Wednesdays for the future following a unanimous vote by selectmen. The one exception will be the period during which tax bills are due.

The Wednesday closing was instituted to allow the staff to catch up on paper work. According to tax collector Elizabeth Ripley, the department fell behind after terminating a part-time position in an economy measure.

"You can't absorb 20 hours of work in an already busy office," Ripley explained. Ripley said dedicating one day per week to uninterrupted paperwork was the only alternative.

"It has helped tremendously," she said. "We're almost caught up."

Ripley wants to maintain the schedule to get caught up and remain that way. The office will also use the Wednesday period to start up the new computer system.

No overtime has been paid during the period the office has been closed to the public on Wednesdays.

Although the office is closed to the public, the staff remains available to department heads and employees.

Ripley said she has had no negative feedback from the public.

Occasionally, the office has made a special exception when someone has driven from Boston to pay a parking ticket.

Conservation taken to task

Selectmen Jane Goedecke was definitely not pleased with a letter the Conservation Commission sent out recently.

"I take issue with the tone as well as the content," Goedecke said of the letter sent to the Hagerty company concerning a change in the right of way at Government Island.

"I think it is wrong to chastise people before the fact," she continued. "No one has done anything wrong or has contemplated doing anything wrong."

The Conservation Commission wrote to the company concerning the change in the right of way negotiated with the town and a requirement that the company install and maintain a catwalk in the marsh area.

"If it is put in, the catwalk will go before the Conservation Commission as we said we would," Goedecke said. "The right of way does not involve touching the terrain in any way."

Residents: Circus too loud

South Shore Music Circus director Edward Kasses cancelled out of Monday's hearing, but two area residents registered their complaints anyway.

Lucia Woods, 231 Jerusalem Road, told selectmen on several Sunday evenings she was the unwilling recipient of the Music Circus offering despite 1.3 miles of field and forest.

"The volume at the site must have been tremendous," Woods said. "We ought to be able to control the noise pollution."

Although selectmen said the prevailing winds often decide who hears the evening's program, selectman Diana Kornet agreed the volume inside the tent was often so loud as to be painful.

Selectmen promised to take up the issue when Kasses can be present and see what kind of solutions are possible.

Question 5 gets support

Selectmen voted 4-1 to support Question 5, dedicating 40 percent of sales, income and corporate taxes to local communities. Selectman Martha Gjesteby was the lone opponent.

According to selectman Jane Goedecke, the purpose of the initiative petition was to reverse the trend toward shrinking local aid revenues at a time of increased need.

Goedecke claimed the only reason Proposition 2 1/2 worked was because local aid payments picked up the slack. Cohasset received a substantial increase in local aid following passage of Proposition 2 1/2. Goedecke said 15 percent of the town budget is local aid money.

In the last two years, however, the state has reduced the level of funding through local aid. Goedecke said 40 percent was doable and the towns needed a guaranteed level of funding.

Although Gjesteby said she had gathered signatures to get the question on the ballot, over the past month she had been questioning the wisdom of the initiative petition. A recent debate tipped the scales.

"I have changed my position from being very much in support," Gjesteby said.

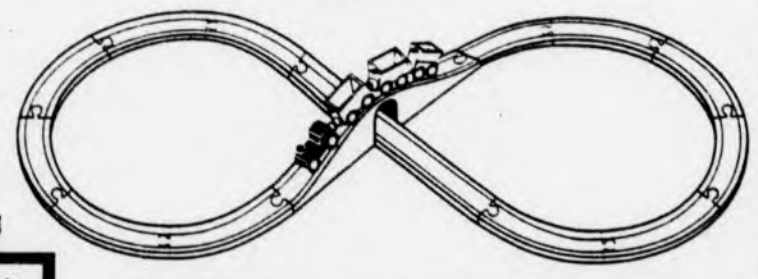
She said she believed it was important that the town get as much revenue as possible, but worried that the state may turn the tables by including other things like the MBTA assessments in the 40 percent.

Maria Plante of Jerusalem Road, vice president and legislative chairman for the South Shore Association for Retarded Citizens, urged selectmen to vote against Question 5.

"When you look at it, it sounds great," she said. "Who wouldn't want 40 percent coming back to the cities and towns." But, she asked, where is this money going to come from?

She said the state will either cutback on its commitments to the most vulnerable citizens — abused children, elders, or persons with mental illness or mental retardation — or shift those responsibilities to the local communities.

Plante also said she worried about the 40 member group that would be appointed by the governor to distribute the yearly allotment of local aid.



"There are too many unknowns," Norma Grassey of Ledge Way added. "There's got to be another way to do it."

Selectman Diana Kornet spoke for the majority when she said she doubted the state would shift responsibilities and costs onto the local communities. Kornet maintained Question 5 was the most appropriate way to force the state to meet its obligations to cities and towns.

- 41% Congressional payraises
- Never ending tax increases
- $3,000,000 Congressional pensions
- Rising budget deficits and government waste
- S&L and Ethics Scandals

It's Time For Reform!

As your next Congressman, Jon Bryan will work to:

- Reduce the tax burden on working families and retirees
- Create new jobs and housing opportunities
- Establish a national energy policy and recycling initiative
- Revitalize our declining fishing industry
- Enact a balanced budget amendment and a line item veto
- Initiate tax free savings and improved IRA's for homemakers

Projected tax rate is $9.90, up 30 cents

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Assessors expect the new tax rate to be set at $9.90, an increase of 30 cents over last year. The official tax rate depends on certification of the tax data by the state Department of Revenue (DOR).

The computer tape with the official certification by the DOR was received at the assessors' office Wednesday, but the information will not be available until the beginning of next week.

Figures sent to the state show a total valuation of $953,412,700 in real estate and personal property and a tax levy of $9,442,981.

Selectmen accepted the recommendation of the assessors and set a single tax rate for both residential and commercial property.

Tax bills will be sent out after the final figures from the Department of Revenue have been loaded into the assessors' computer. James Lagrotteria, chairman of the board of assessors, anticipates the tax bills will be sent out in two weeks.

Although the town could have elected to establish separate tax rates for residential and commercial properties, selectmen agreed with the assessors that a split rate was not feasible or advisable in a town with as little commercial property as Cohasset. According to Lagrotteria, slightly less than 10 percent of the town property is classified as commercial.

Most communities with split rates have at least 28 percent commercial property. Lagrotteria said no community with less than 18 percent of its property in the commercial column uses a split rate.

In recommending against the split rate, Lagrotteria said a split rate would have an extremely disproportionate effect on commercial properties.

"Just a 10 cent decrease in the residential rate would increase the commercial tax rate by almost $2," he said.

"In this town the only thing you could do is have the residential subsidize the businesses that are having so difficult a time," selectman Jane Goedecke said.

Selectman Edwin Tebbetts asked Lagrotteria whether the revaluation assessments were holding up in the real estate market. Tebbetts said he had heard of houses selling for 15 to 20 percent less than assessments.

Lagrotteria said of the 132 sales recorded in 1989 and the first six months of 1990, the ratio of sales to assessments was running between 1.06 and 1.07. Homeowners are free to request an abatement if they feel the assessment is out of line with the actual value, he said, but decisions would be made on a case-by-case basis after close scrutiny.

Lagrotteria warned that many sales involve cash or land transfers that offset the apparent sub-assessment sales price. In other cases, companies buy the homes of transferred employees. Many times they sell the properties at a loss and use that as a tax write-off on their books, Lagrotteria said.

The board of assessors recommended setting aside a $180,000 reserve to fund abatements that may be granted. Thirty-two appeals of assessments are pending.

Last year, $235,000 was set aside because it was a revaluation year.

In other business, selectmen:

• Appointed Guido Risi to represent the school department on the computer study committee.

• Accepted the resignation of Peter O'Connor from the transfer station building committee. O'Connor was previously named to the advisory committee.

• Granted a step increase to administrative secretary Joyce Studley.

• Approved the relocation of a joint telephone and electrical service pole at Margin Street and Stockbridge Street.

Some voters have trouble with machines

Sample machines are kept at town hall for demonstration purposes on the day of an election. Machines — really meant for absentee voting — are now in use in the town clerk's office.

"If anyone gets to the polls and needs help, someone would be available to help," Marks said. She pointed out that about 20 percent of the town's population turns over each year and people from outside this area are not likely to have used the machines in use in Cohasset.

Cohasset machines require the ballot card be inserted into the machine by being placed over two red buttons. A stylus is used to punch out numbers corresponding to the candidates.

Marks said there are two possible errors people can made that will cause problems. The first is that the ballot might not be inserted properly — in that case the chosen candidates numbers may not be the ones pushed out.

In the other case, the voter may not push out the holes all the way, which could mean no vote is recorded.

"The counter uses light to count up the votes. If the light doesn't shine through, the vote isn't recorded."

Marks said she noticed the problems this year when going over all the ballots by hand for the recent recount in the Senate race.

"Voters need to be sure they've checked to see the holes are punched out," Marks said. "You just run your hand along the back of the card."

The local cable station is planning to produce live election coverage locally on cable channel 53.

Ripley's100 year tradition ends

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Things will be different around town. For the first time in more than 100 years, there won't be a Ripley in residence at the corner of Ripley and Sohier Streets.

As of Wednesday, Sheldon and Denise Ripley will no longer own the 14-room home built by his grandfather. They are taking their act — and four generations of possessions — on the road and into a four-room condominium on the Cape.

Things are already different at the South Shore Conservatory. Denise Ripley retired after spending 13 years helping the Conservatory grow and develop. During her tenure, first as executive secretary and then 10 years as communications director, the Conservatory grew.

In the beginning, the Conservatory had 190 music students. Today it serves more than 2,000 families in all areas of the performing arts with branches in Hingham and Duxbury.

Ripley comes by her love of the arts naturally. Although she wasn't born in the proverbial theater trunk, she very may well have been — her mother was a professional singer and her father, Donald Brian was a matinee idol on the musical comedy stage in New York.

"My mother's theatrical trunk was in the cellar," Ripley said. She gave the trunk to Ellen Kelly, director of the drama department of the Conservatory.

The trunk, pasted over with stickers from all the towns her mother played, is on display at the Conservatory with other theatrical memorabilia collected by Kelly.

Love of the performing arts led to love, too. Denise Brian was in a resident theatrical company on tour in Cohasset. She met and fell in love with Cohasset's Sheldon Ripley who was slated to go off to London as part of the Young Vic theater group.

Love led her to marriage and Denise Ripley put down roots in Cohasset

"I ended my professional career," she said. Ripley remains active in community theater as an actor and director.

She and Sheldon also started a new generation of Ripleys. Their daughter lives in London, England and works as an editor in a publishing house. Their son lives in Kingston and works as a manager for an air freight company.

The acting bug definitely bit the newest generation of Ripleys. Denise Ripley described her grandson, Daniel, 7, of Kingston, as a born performer.

Ripley's retirement is not the stuff of Johnny Carson routines.

"I don't just plan to rock in a chair," she said. "I'm not the rocking chair type."

Much of her time has been taken up by boxing up and yard-saling the accumulation of generations. She jokes that just when she thought she'd boxed up the last shelf, another one revealed itself.

In 14 rooms (plus an attic and cellar), there are plenty of nooks and crannies for wayward stuff to hide.

Denise Ripley

Now that moving is behind her, Denise Ripley looks forward to long, leisurely walks on the wintertime beaches of Cape Cod.

Then she sighed and said she would miss the fireplace in the old homestead.

When spring rolls around, the Ripleys plan to visit England and their daughter. When they get home, it will be time to find a theater group or volunteer in a community service project.

What ever the future brings, Cohasset and the arts community will miss Denise Ripley's creative spirit and infectious laughter. There will also be a light in the window if the Ripleys want to come home to Cohasset.

ACO Bill Quigley ...

past four months he has picked up 23 dogs.

Letting your dog run free can be costly. The first offense costs $15 for the first day of impoundment, $25 fine for leash law violation, a $15 reclaiming fee and $8 to $15 for licensing. The costs escalate with subsequent offenses.

Owners receive a court citation.

"It's just like a speeding ticket," Quigley said. "The fines are paid through the court system."

If the animal must be impounded, the town works through the Hingham Animal League. After an initial evaluation, the animal is placed in a private home until reclaimed. If no one claims it, the league arranges an adoption.

Quigley said the system works well for the town. Not only is it a cost effective way of dealing with strays, it is beneficial for the unclaimed animals.

"We haven't destroyed a dog since July," Quigley said.

As of July 2, there were 667 dogs licensed in the town. Quigley assumes owners have neglected to license another 500 dogs. That failure could cause an animal to spend an extra few days impounded if picked up. Those days more than equal the cost of the annual license.

Although many owners object to having to have their dog leashed, Quigley wishes they knew how dangerous it is for a dog on the streets of Cohasset. And it isn't just cars a dog needs to be careful of.

William Quigley

One family let their dog out recently and heard a yelp moments later. They wound up rushing the animal to a veterinarian.

Quigley said the veterinarian believes someone — no one knows who — struck the dog with an axe and sliced open an eight-inch wound that required 40 stitches to close.

Those few moments of freedom cost the animal excruciating pain. Other Cohasset dogs have been shot by bebee guns by irate neighbors, Quigley said.

Quigley obviously enjoys working with the animals. Although only paid for eight hours a week, he routinely puts in 12 or more hours. The salary is hardly worth it.

"I do what has to be done," he said.

If you need the animal control officer you may need to be patient. The demands may come when he's on another call — or working at another job. Quigley is a part-time animal control officer in Hingham and a special police officer in Dorchester.

Quigley said he responds to calls as quickly as he can, but it can take time. Emergency calls should be routed through the police department who can summon him by pager.

If you find you have bats in your belfry or bees in your bonnet, Quigley is your man. If he can't help you, he knows who can.

AROUND TOWN

❑ The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce Auction is coming up on Nov. 10 at the South Shore Arts Center. There will be a light supper and dessert at 6:30 p.m. with the Auction to start at 7:30 p.m.

Dan Leahy will be the master of ceremonies, with a group of area business people serving as guest auctioneers. Anyone bringing a blue Stop and Shop register tape will get a free door prize (last year they pulled over $1,800 worth of tapes for the Apples for the Students program.) There is no charge for the dinner or admission to the auction itself, and everyone is invited. This is the event that makes it possible for the Chamber to send out those great "Little Piece of Home" packages each year, so be sure to lend your support.

❑ Speaking of those "little piece of home packages", Eric Theriault was one of the first to receive his, and he really wants to thank the Chamber of Commerce! He was thrilled with his package, and several of his buddies were surprised that the Chamber would do such a thing . . . see how nice it is for the frosh? Eric is a freshman at Plymouth State College in New Hampshire and is doing well. He is participating in the football program there, it is a Division III school. Best of luck to you Eric!

❑ Ronnie Nicynski has been a busy fella these past two weekends, busy being a star that is. Ronnie was one of the lollipop kids in the "Wizard of Oz" performance that was held in Hingham. Being a munchkin must have been great fun!

❑ A super birthday party was held recently at 60 Elm Street. Mary "dini" Migliaccio's sons, Joseph and Paul held a surprise 80th party, and many friends and relatives were in attendance. A citation was presented by Burtrum J. Pratt, former chairman of the board of selectmen and historian, accompanied with a personal life history dating back to her ancestors and how they arrived in Cohasset. Mary Jeanette Murray's office sent a citation also. Mable Biagini accompanied on the accordion with oldies and newies and they danced to the polka. The affair was catered by Jessica's. We all extend our many happy returns to Mary for a healthy and happy future, sure sounds like one grand party.

At the Common Sunday, there were pirates and witches and brides as the Community Center entertained the town.

Our town lost one of its grand gentlemen last week. John Elliot was a fine man, and did a lot for Cohasset and the townspeople in the years that he worked and lived here. We send our sympathies to John's wife Barbara and children Tammy and Jeff. John was a man that will be remembered by many of us!

❑ Congratulations go to Jo and Phil Lehr this week, at the birth of their daughter Samantha. Best of luck to you all.

❑ Here's hoping that Fred Pipenbrink is feeling much better as he reads this! Get well soon Fred!

❑ Sasha Bubanja of Hillside Drive and Mark Rattenbury of Briarwood Lane, both of whom made the Dean's List at Wentworth Institute of Technology in Boston.

❑ Congratulations to Caitlin Starnton of Dartmouth College, who recently was named Ivy League Player of the week. Caitlin is a senior forward, and had two goals and an assist in Dartmouth's 3-0 whitewashing of Columbia.

That's the news from here, please give me a call when someone in your house (or you) does something we'd like to know about!

Reasons to vote Tuesday, Nov. 6

Eighteen reasons why I should vote in the Nov. 6 state election:

❑Because the election of Bill Weld as governor would restore the two-party system to Massachusetts.

❑Because the election of John Silber as governor would foil the Republicans who are known to favor the rich and I am poor.

❑Because I want to show Barbara Anderson, Jerry Williams and Howie Carr that they are not really the governors of the state on Tuesday afternoon.

❑Ditto Jim Braude, Peter Meade and Alan Lupo on Tuesday night.

❑Because I want to get all the overpaid hacks (state workers) out of their no-heavy lifting government jobs and out of our pockets.

❑Because I'm an underpaid state worker (hack) and I want to keep my government job.

❑Because one of the candidates is a friend of mine and I want to become one of those overpaid hacks (state workers) with no heavy lifting that Howie Carr is always writing about.

❑Because Billy Bulger, Bob Ambler and Mary Jeanette Murray are too old and inexperienced to go to work in the real world.

❑Because Billy Bulger, Bob Ambler and Mary Jeanette Murray are mature enough and have the experience needed to get us out of the mess we're in.

❑Because John Silber doesn't think very much of women, Cambodians, television reporters, The Boston Globe and residents of Area B.

❑Because a bulldozer driven by Jim Rappaport's father destroyed the close family ambience of Boston's West End back in the 1950s.

❑Because Jim Rappaport's father had the foresight to develop a slum called the West End of Boston into the charming Charles River Park.

❑Because Marjorie Clapprood can tell a dirty joke better on stage at Nick's than Bill Golden can at Billy Bulger's St. Patrick's Day breakfast.

❑Because John Kerry likes Nicaragua's dictator better than El Salvador's dictator and was in the same square with Mike Dukakis on the ballot eight years ago.

❑Because Joe Malone is a nice guy (even though he is a Republican and I am a Democrat) and he ran the only clean campaign in the lot.

❑Because a lot of people would leave the state due to poor job prospects and that would (a) increase my prospects of getting a job or (b) send me to the want ads in the Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader.

❑Because Bill Sawyer is running for attorney general and we all know he is the husband of Joan Gardner, who was the executive director of the Hazardous Waste Facility Site Safety Council when it almost approved the Clean Harbors incinerator.

And most important:

❑Because I don't want to tell my children I failed to vote when they ask me what I did in the 1990 election that was so important to their future.

Recreation director thanks his coaches

To the Editor:

On behalf of the Recreation Commission, I would like to thank each of the soccer league coaches for their time, effort, and expertise towards the conduct of the Fall Soccer League. Cohasset is indeed very fortunate to have such a large number of individuals willing to donate their services towards the operation of this program.

It is my sincere hope, that each of you will be perceptive of the gratification and satisfaction that is very often manifested through work with children and youth. I am able to assure you that each of you have had an important, positive influence upon the members of your team. It is with no reservations that I feel certain that the participants of the 1990 Fall soccer league join us in gratitude for your dedication to them.

Without your volunteer participation, it would be virtually impossible, both logistically and financially, to operate a program of this magnitude. Many of you will probably not recall, but it wasn't too many years ago, that staffing teams with only one coach was a monumental effort and not always achievable.

While both the direct and indirect costs of operating the soccer leagues and clinics are encumbered by the Town of Cohasset, it would cost many times more than our entire annual budget to even minimally compensate for your collective efforts each season. While the direct costs of last year's Fall soccer were about $6,000, the Town also upkeeps the fields for use and covers the cost of liability insurance for every volunteer or employee associated with the program.

The $25 fee charge are monies that are deposited in the General Fund of the Town each year and are therefore of benefit to every Cohasset taxpayer, as it is the G.F. monies that are applied to offset the tax for the following fiscal year. Volunteerism, therefore, not only benefits our children and youth, but also benefits each taxpayer of our community, in a relatively direct manner.

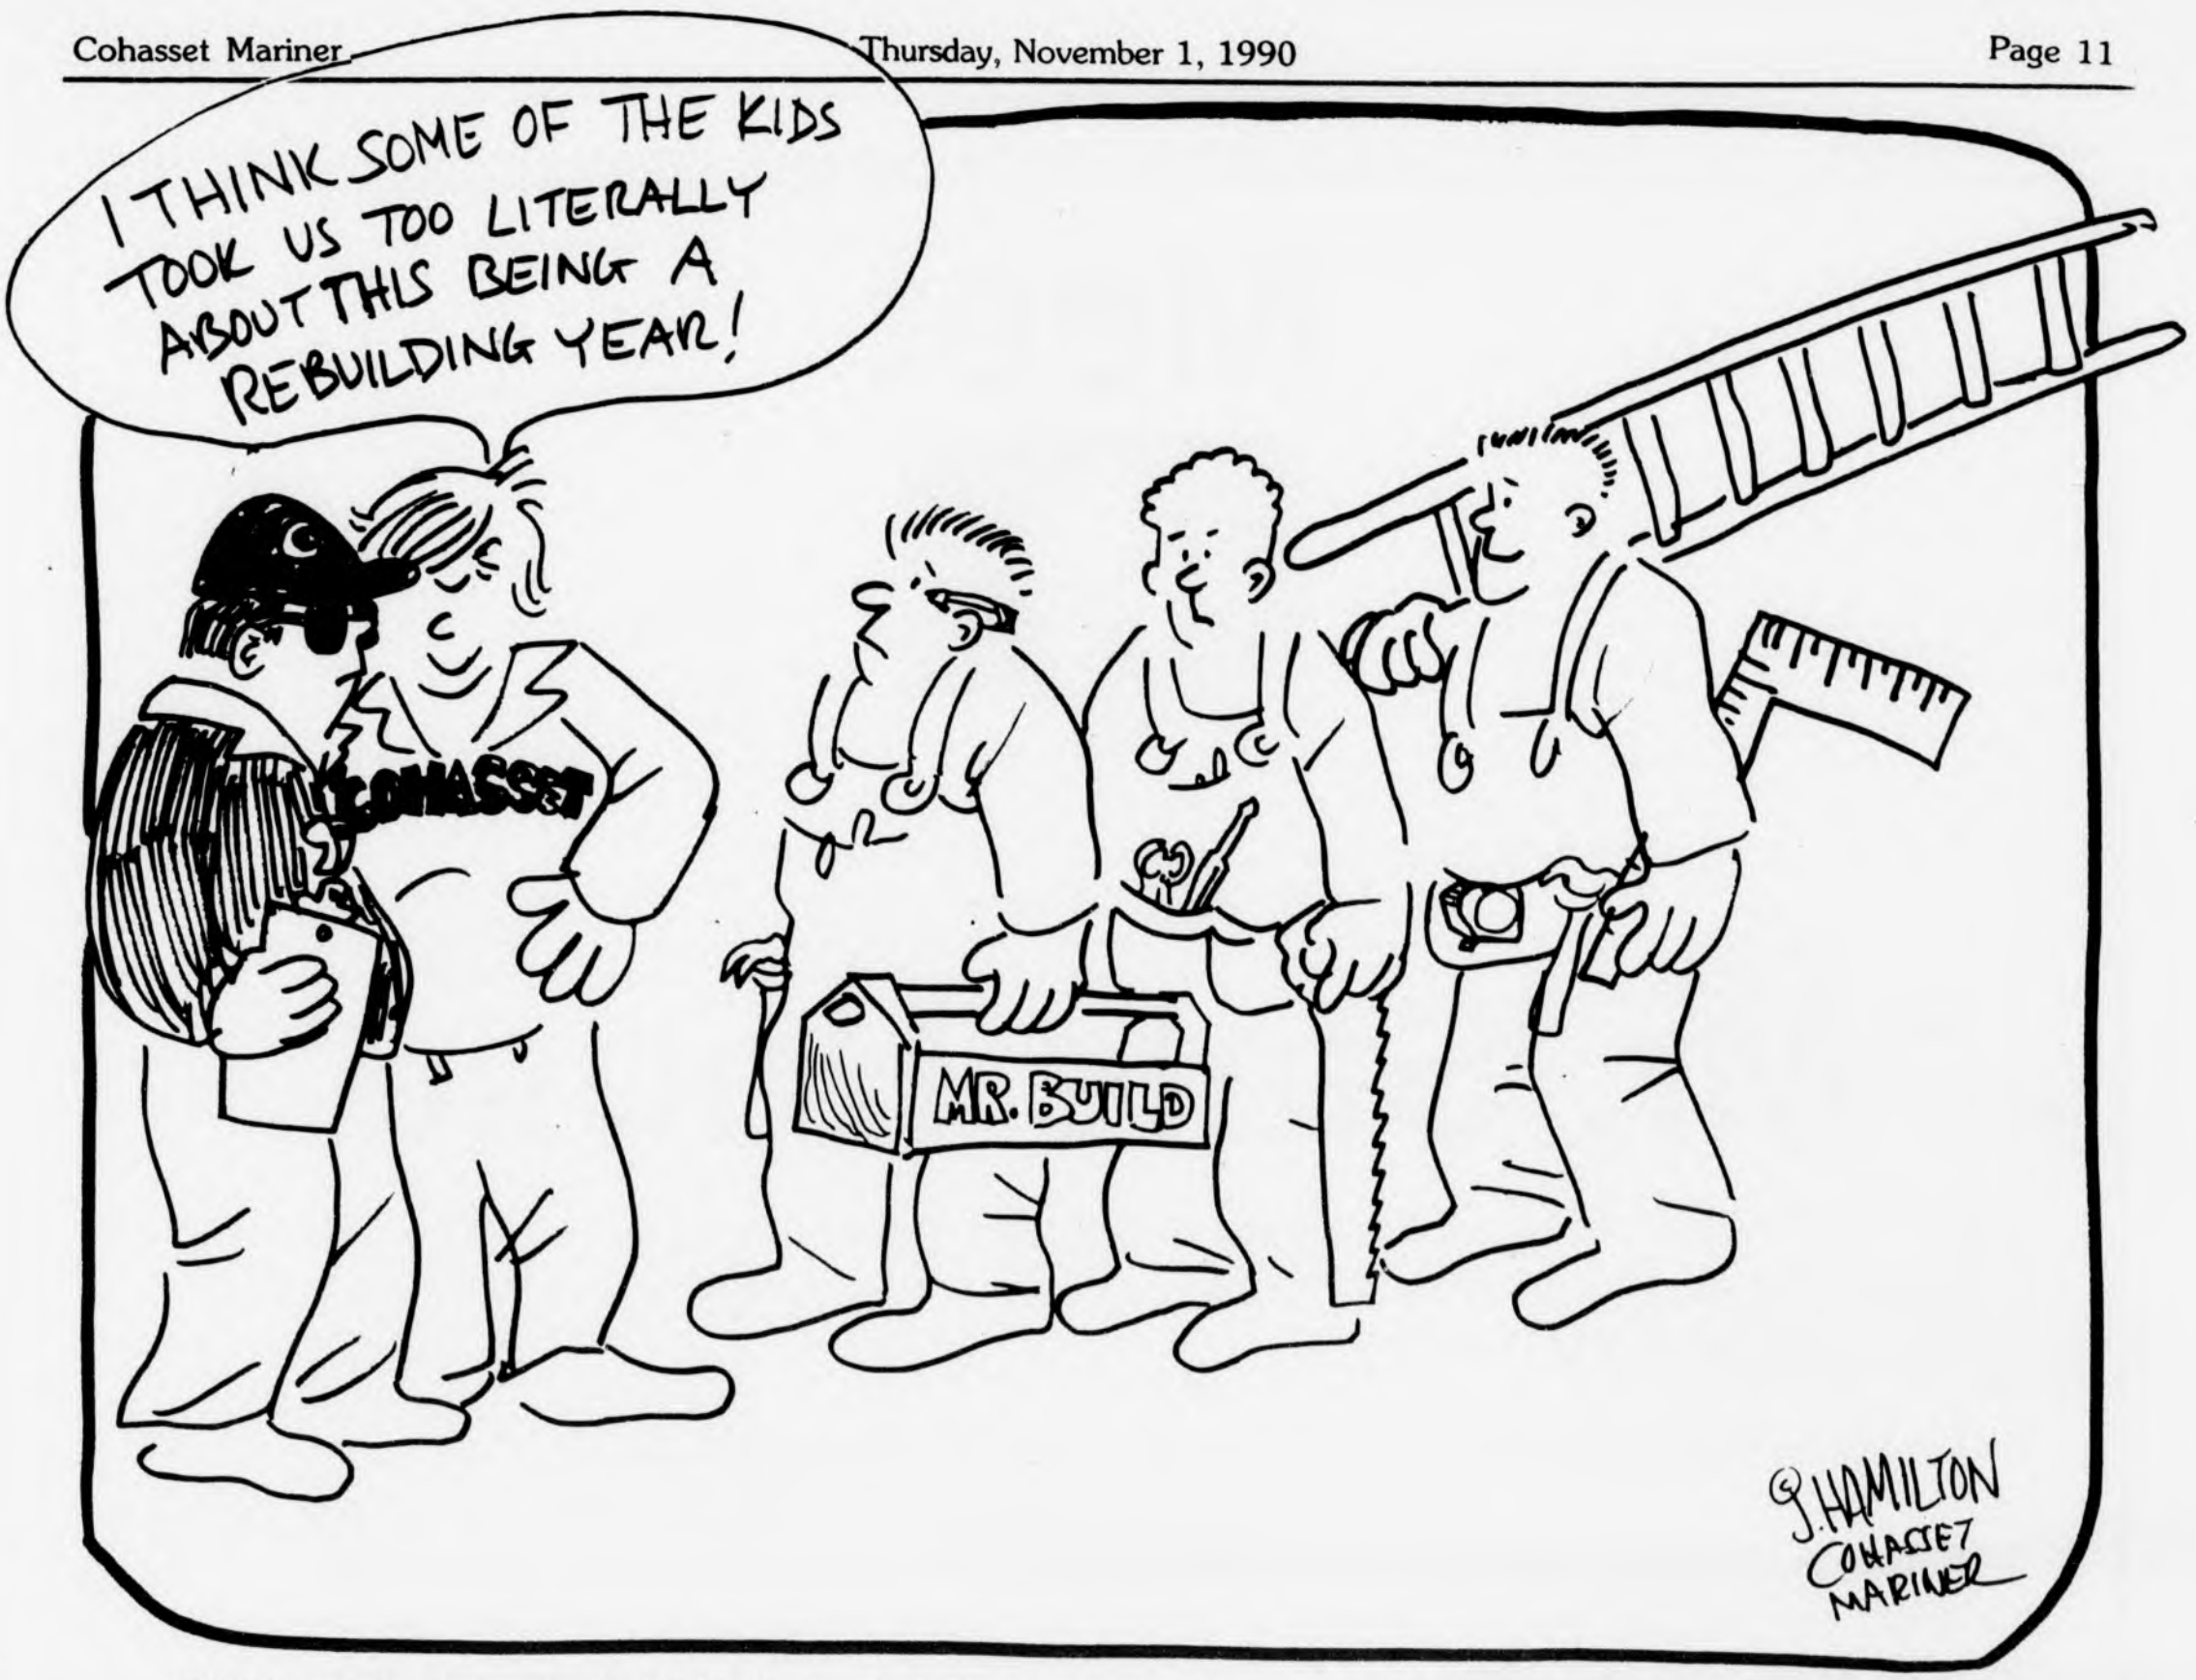
For example, the Fiscal Year 1990 Recreation budget was $60,000. $45,000 of revenue was deposited in the General Fund only, as generated via fee charges for various programs/services, leaving an operational cost deficit of $15,000. More importantly,the $60,000 budget allowed us to provide about $200,000 worth of leisure services to the Town in fiscal Year 1990, primarily via 100% self-supporting systems, from per capita fee charges for the services. However, it is the collective level of volunteerism that allows for extended and comprehensive programming in a number of instances. As I am certain you are able to determine at this point; it remains all residents of Cohasset that owe you a vote of thanks for your hard work, making possible the otherwise improbable. From my perspective, the effect of your efforts is resultant in helping make Cohasset a very fine community in which to live and work.

Very truly yours,
Jack Worley

Paratrooper wants news

To the Editor:

I am an 82nd Airborne paratrooper, recently deployed to Saudi Arabia. I have lived in Cohasset since I was two. Last year I joined the Army and you sent me a few newspapers while I was in basic. I have since then been the Commanding Generals award recipient in Basic and Honor Grad in AIT. I went to jump school and finished top in my class. I was wondering if it is possible to send a few papers over to me. My name is PFC Brian E. Curran. I don't know what the news people tell you about us, but I can assure you it is not all true. You see pictures in the paper with people wearing boone hats. We don't get to wear such luxury. We wear our helmet at all times. If you can mail some newspapers I would really appreciate it.



Thank You,
Brian E. Curran

Firefighters are praised

To the Editor:

Thanks Again,

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Recycling News: Plastic

We are still having problems with plastic. As I have mentioned previously, we have a new company picking up our plastic and they are asking us to prepare this material better than we have been. Over one third of the plastic was rejected last time because of contamination, mostly from milk bottles.

Here's the scoop: Rinse milk bottles with just a swish (2-3 tablespoons) water. Throw cap away (it's made of a different resin than the recyclable container). Step on container before placing in your bag for recycling. It's a simple and easy three-step procedure. This should be done to your glass containers (skip step three, of course).

After you develop a rhythm for this skill, it will become second nature to you. Rinsing your bottles, jars, and jugs with a little water is also for your benefit as your recycling area will not smell like sour milk, peanut butter and so on. It will also keep insects and rodents out of the area. Make this procedure as simple for yourself as possible. If you put obstacles in your way, you will never discover how easy this procedure is to do. I recommend that you use your dish basin in your kitchen sink. If you hand wash your dishes, simply hold all your recyclables that need to be rinsed until the end. Then rinse them in the used water. This procedure is to get rid of food particles, not to win any 'Good Housekeeping Clean Dishes Award.' Peanut butter is best cleaned out with a plastic spatula before rinsing. Milk is best cleaned out with 2-3 tablespoons of cold water. Those are the hard ones. If you have something sticky, soak it overnight in the used water. If you use a dishwasher, many of the dirty jars can simply be placed in the dishwasher. If your machine doesn't take pots and pans, I would not recommend putting jam jars in the machine. (Just soak them overnight).

I have recommended this three step procedure before, as my faithful readers will recognize. If you have some tips in the glass and plastic dilemma, please pass them along. The key is to make the procedure simple and easy to do.

Village Fair comes Dec. 1

By O.F. Ingram
Special to the Mariner

In individual homes and church buildings, groups of parishoners of four Cohasset churches are already at work crafting and gathering the treasures and treats that will be offered at the 50th annual Cohasset Village Fair to be held in buildings around Cohasset's historic Common on Saturday, Dec. 1 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Several committee chairs have set up schedules of work meetings and arrangements for dropping off items that will be sold at the fair and are inviting one and all to join in the enjoyable mix of activity that brings together members of the different churches year after year.

Under the pattern of revolving responsibility for the fair among the four participating churches, the Second Congregational Church has the leadership role this year, with Annette Sawchuk as chair of the Central Committee. She is being assisted by Debbie Anderson and Susan Cameron as representatives of the Congregational Church, Nancy Swatek from St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Debbie Casey from Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, and Deanna Mulligan of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church as Treasurer, assisted by Letitia Jordan and Claudia Story of the Congregational Church.

With only a month to go before fair day, the Wreath Committee under Jean Manganero and Merle Graham has scheduled weekly work meetings Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to noon at the home of Cathy Pratt, 482 King Street, to make the bows and other decorations to be added to the wreaths in the final week of daily sessions. They welcome any newcomers to these work meetings, emphasizing that no special skills are needed.

The basement of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street will again be the repository for books and items for the Bargain Bazaar. Helen Hooper and Betty Enders, co-chairs of the Book Committee, have arranged for books to be received on Mondays from 9 to 5, while Nancy Ross, chair of the Bargain Bazaar, announces that basement bargains and attic treasures may be left there on Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 to 12. In a spirit of cooperation, the committees note that bazaar items may also be left with books on Mondays and books with bazaar items on Saturdays.

Responsibility for virtually all the features of the fair has already been assigned with chairs of the various committees repeating their welcome of any volunteers.

Craig Muir will again make arrangements for the traditional visit of Santa Claus, who each year manages to arrive in mid-morning and schedule a wish-list session for children in the Unitarian Parish House.

Linda McCarthy chairs the arrangements for the Secret Room for young shoppers, assisted by Cathy Pratt. They will be making or gathering the hundreds of reasonably priced articles that children may buy for parents or other family members. Debbie Casey similarly is in charge of Grabs, while June Simeone chairs the popular Doll Raffle. Chris and Rose Kierce will head up the general raffle of donated articles and services, and also the important transportation of tables, chairs and other display materials.

Always major centerpieces of the fair are the Boutique and Children's Table that customarily occupy prominent locations on the floor of the Town Hall. This year, St. Stephen's church is taking on responsibility for these features with Ann Sargent, Peggy Capp and Mary Beth Curry heading up the group that will assemble an extensive array of holiday and gift items.

Jim and Cindy Dedes of the Panagia Greek church will arrange for the food for the Chowder Bar, which itself will be operated again by Ralph and Susi Coley. The Dedes will also handle arrangements for the bake table which again will add Greek pastries and delicacies to the donated breads, cakes and cookies produced by parishoners. Sophia Yeragotelis of the Greek church has taken on responsibility for the Plant table, enlisting contributions from gardeners of all the participating churches.

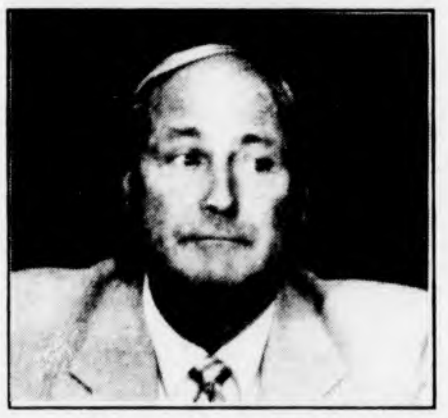
Under the pattern of revolving responsibility for the fair among the four participating churches, the Second Congregational Church has the leadership role this year, with Annette Sawchuk as chair of the Central Committee. She is being assisted by Debbie Anderson and Susan Cameron as representatives of the Congregational Church, Nancy Swatek from St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Debbie Casey from Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, and Deanna Mulligan of St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church as Treasurer, assisted by Letitia Jordan and Claudia Story of the Congregational Church.

With only a month to go before fair day, the Wreath Committee under Jean Manganero and Merle Graham has scheduled weekly work meetings Wednesday mornings from 9:30 to noon at the home of Cathy Pratt, 482 King Street, to make the bows and other decorations to be added to the wreaths in the final week of daily sessions. They welcome any newcomers to these work meetings, emphasizing that no special skills are needed.

The basement of St. Anthony's Rectory on South Main Street will again be the repository for books and items for the Bargain Bazaar. Helen Hooper and Betty Enders, co-chairs of the Book Committee, have arranged for books to be received on Mondays from 9 to 5, while Nancy Ross, chair of the Bargain Bazaar, announces that basement bargains and attic treasures may be left there on Wednesdays and Saturdays from 10 to 12. In a spirit of cooperation, the committees note that bazaar items may also be left with books on Mondays and books with bazaar items on Saturdays.

Responsibility for virtually all the features of the fair has already been assigned with chairs of the various committees repeating their welcome of any volunteers.

Craig Muir will again make arrangements for the traditional visit of Santa Claus, who each year manages to arrive in mid-morning and schedule a wish-list session for children in the Unitarian Parish House.



Linda McCarthy chairs the arrangements for the Secret Room for young shoppers, assisted by Cathy Pratt. They will be making or gathering the hundreds of reasonably priced articles that children may buy for parents or other family members. Debbie Casey similarly is in charge of Grabs, while June Simeone chairs the popular Doll Raffle. Chris and Rose Kierce will head up the general raffle of donated articles and services, and also the important transportation of tables, chairs and other display materials.

Always major centerpieces of the fair are the Boutique and Children's Table that customarily occupy prominent locations on the floor of the Town Hall. This year, St. Stephen's church is taking on responsibility for these features with Ann Sargent, Peggy Capp and Mary Beth Curry heading up the group that will assemble an extensive array of holiday and gift items.

Jim and Cindy Dedes of the Panagia Greek church will arrange for the food for the Chowder Bar, which itself will be operated again by Ralph and Susi Coley. The Dedes will also handle arrangements for the bake table which again will add Greek pastries and delicacies to the donated breads, cakes and cookies produced by parishoners. Sophia Yeragotelis of the Greek church has taken on responsibility for the Plant table, enlisting contributions from gardeners of all the participating churches.

Meet

Twelve-term, 26-year incumbent legislator
Robert Ambler

"Mr. State House"

Hundreds of lobbyists, fellow politicians, and Political Action Committees–not from Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Scituate, or Weymouth–have poured over $60,000 into Robert Ambler's campaign for the State Senate.

Do you believe that money was given so that Bob Ambler could represent us?

Just about every special interest you could think of (and a few you wouldn't) has enriched the campaign war chest of 'Mr. State House,' not to exclude insurance companies – banks – lawyers – dealerships and distributorships...
... from Clean Harbors to Yankee Atomic – from Tobacco to Big Oil – and one large junk yard!

Bob Hedlund distrusts the intentions of benefactors who don't know or care about our seven communities. He is running for the State Senate to evict Mr. State House and his interested friends our government.

The tax-and-spend policies of Mr. Ambler and his many like minded associates on Beacon Hill have all but bankrupt the state, and small business. That has to change. It will with tough, courageous state legislators governing for the people – and fighting against the special interests.

That's Bob Hedlund. Your State Senator.

Bob Hedlund.

Your State Senator.

SENIOR CORNER

November 1990 Message from...Bobbie Kamen, Ex. Director of Mass. Assoc. of COA's and Senior Center Directors.

Now that the primary election is over and angry voters have had a chance to vent their frustration, it is time to get serious about the most important ballot question to be voted on in the November election: Question #3. Question 3, simply, would roll back state taxes and fees to 1988 levels. If the question passes with "yes" votes, CLT says their initiative would cut "just a few hundred million dollars in the first year." They argue that if you vote yes on #3, you will be sending the legislators a message to cut spending. Their opponents, the campaign for Mass. Future, who are strongly supporting "Vote No on Question 3, say "What No on Question 3, say "What CLT is proposing is a radical multi-billion dollar defunding and dismantling of basic government services." This dismal prediction has been echoed in editorials in the Boston Herald (9/25/90), The Patriot Ledger (8/7/90) and the Boston Globe (2/21/90).

Question #3 would rollback the temporary income tax increase, repeal all recent fee increases repeal the gas tax and repeal the 1990 tax package for a total loss to state government, in the first three years, $6 billion. The impact of spending cuts to make up for the deficit would have to come from discretionary accounts which make up approximately 40 percent of the state budget. These include such line items as local aid: schools, police, fire, council on aging, libraries, plus public higher education, repair on roads and bridges, housing, help for the homeless, health care, AIDS education, environmental protection, home care, home health care, day care etc.

CLT claims that there is much fat and waste in government, but they have been unclear and unwilling to publicly discuss where to make cuts and they may have maintained that it is not their job to make the cuts. The campaign for Mass. Future points out most of the temporary income tax has been collected and already spent to pay off the 1989 deficit and Medicaid bills.

How did we get into such a mess? Certainly, fingers are still being pointed at the current administration. Now, let's get on with a rational solution and some facts! The state has made up for much of the lost revenue since Proposition 2 1/2 passed in 1980. Local aid to cities and towns doubled between 1981 and 1989 to $2.5 billion! In addition, the state lost $4 plus billion of federal money during the Reagan years. The lost federal monies had, in the past, funded housing environment, culture, and health care programs. In addition, the campaign for Mass. Future maintains that Mass. had the second smallest rate of spending increase among the eight Northeastern states between 1983 and 1989 (only Rhode Island ranked lower.) In a debate between the two sides, on Sept. 21 in Worcester, Jim Braude stated that an elder with an income of $15,000 a year could expect to save approximately $54 the first year if passed. Would that cover the cost of needed and desired services and programs now provided by the "Gov" through state taxes and fees? How much would transportation, daily hot lunches, home care, Council on Aging programs, trash pick up, police and fire protection cost if purchased individually?

Voters are angry, and rightfully so. We need to get the facts first before we vote. When you do vote on Question #3, please consider what is at stake. Is Question #3 an end to waste and inefficiency or a prescription for further chaos and financial disaster? What do you want for the future of Massachusetts? Please consider these facts when you go to vote on Nov. 8.

MARINER SPORTS

CHS boys soccer kicks out with precision

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

Despite Saturday's 1-0 loss to Holbrook, both the players and the coach believe that the team has played its best soccer so far this season. The defense, coming together in the past few games, has strengthened significantly, and the midfield also has picked up the slack, improving the team's transition game. Without doubt, such improvements could not come at a better time since the team has reached a storybook climax: on Oct. 29, the Skippers have a chance to earn the title of league champions when they play away against Rockland, with whom they are tied for first place. Following this game, regardless of the outcome, Cohasset will enter the South Shore tournament, which will demand the most of the team on the playing field.

In last week's games, Cohasset proved that they have the depth and the potential to succeed in the upcoming games. At Norwell, the Skippers won 2-0, Travis Coley assisting both of Linc Marsac's goals. Cohasset extended their winning streak to seven games when at home, they defeated Norton 4-1. Scoring in this game were Marsac, with two goals, Coley, and Ryan Cibelli.

On Saturday, Oct. 27, Cohasset soccer played its Homecoming game against Holbrook. In this game, Cohasset fought hard but, despite its efforts, was unable to score. Holbrook, much to Cohasset's disappointment, did manage to put the ball in Cohasset's net once at the end of the first half, which proved to be the game-winning goal.

In the opinions of team captains Bill Baird, Travis Coley, and Linc Marsac, Cohasset has improved as a team with every game since the middle of the season, and their record reflects such improvement, boosting their 5-2-1 record to 11-3-1. But, according to coach Alvaro Alvarez, the level of play must increase even higher if the Skippers wish to be successful in the games ahead.

Dan De Michele (left) watches Bart Weisenfluh move the ball toward goal in a 4-1 victory over Norton last Thursday. Cohasset's record stands at 12-3-1 as of the week's end.

Jason Cameron scores

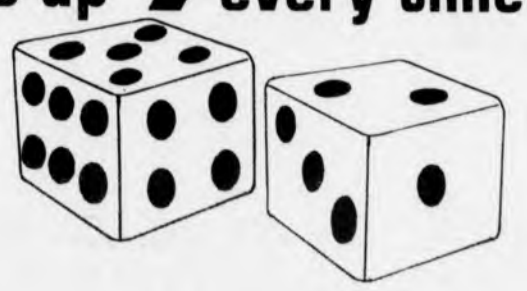
The 1990 Saint Michael's College men's soccer team, headed by coach Les Johnson, is aiming for a playoff bid as they enter the final week of play. The Purple Knights had a tough schedule this season but have surpassed last year's win total of six games. They have an overall record of 7-9-1 and a conference record of 4-4. The Knights have played well on the road (winning five of eight) and will play their remaining game against Merrimack away. If they should win, it will be Johnson's third most successful season in eight years.

First-year goalkeeper Jon Zaffino has done an outstanding job tending net for the Purple Knights. He has recorded four shutouts in 14 games. His goals against average of 1.36 and has recorded a save percentage of 89%. Zaffino recorded 29 saves against defending national champion New Hampshire College, breaking a 30 year College record. The Knights lost the game 3-0 despite Zaffino's performance.

Freshman Jason Cameron, son of Bruce and Lois Cameron of Cohasset, plays in the midfield. Because of the competition and limited number of positions, it is difficult for freshmen to make it as a varsity player in their first year.

CHS Swim Team wins varsity recognition

The Cohasset High School Swim Team has, of this year, been recognized as a varsity sport.



Congratulations to those swimmers whose enthusiasm and efforts have made this possible. Cohasset will be competing in the Southern Division of the Pilgrim Conference and will be swimming against Duxbury, Sandwich, Middleboro, Randolph, North Quincy and New Bedford. The season begins Nov. 26 and ends in February. The sectional championships and the state championships for which Cohasset swimmers qualified last year, are the weekends of Feb. 16 and Feb. 23 respectively.

One of the greatest strengths of the summer swim team has been its depth. While the Cohasset team already has swimmers who have proven themselves capable of winning first places in MIAA competition, we need additional swimmers to round out the team. (And perhaps become the first place finishers on the 1992 or 1994 teams). In MIAA competition, finishers one, two, three, four and five score points and can determine the outcome of the meet.

If you can swim free-style (crawl) and nothing else, or if you have strengths in other strokes, contact Linda Henderson at 383-0289. Join in making Cohasset's first year in the league an exciting and successful one.

Field hockey team rates tourney berth

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

In the final two games of Cohasset field hockey's regulation season, Cohasset failed to achieve a victory, but the girls were not overly despondent as they did manage to make the South Shore Tournament when they tied Hull, 0-0, earning the one point required on their record allowing them to be eligible for the playoffs. By keeping Hull, Cohasset's arch-rival, scoreless, Cohasset prevented Hull from gaining the two points it needed from a win to enter the tournament. Goalie Merrie Hansen helped considerably by stopping all six of Hull's shots put on net.

The Skippers travelled away to Norton on their next and final game of regulation season on Friday, Oct. 26. On this day, poor weather conditions consisting of cold wind and rain prevented the completion of a full game. The coaches agreed to call the game at halftime, resulting in a 1-0 win for Norton, their first in six years. This loss did not affect Cohasset's eligibility for the tournament.

With the conclusion of the regulation season, the team looks back and is pleased with their accomplishments. Playing in an extremely defensive-minded league, Cohasset's 5-2-7 record marks their success in adapting to the playing style, and their domination in the field. According to coach Debby Boswick, in 12 out of the 14 games, Cohasset maintained possession of the ball on their opponents' end of the field 85-90 percent of the playing time.

Cohasset players have also excelled in that three players have been nominated for the South Shore All-Star Team: Barbara Lagrotteria, Bridget Corkery, and Karyn Murray. The players on this team are chosen by the coaches to acknowledge outstanding performance in the field. Barbara Lagrotteria has also been designated as the #1 nominee on the South Shore for The Boston Globe All-Scholastic team.

Two good skates

The Skating Club of Hingham announces that two of its members won medals at the recent 1990 Providence Open Freestyle Competition held in Providence, Rhode Island.

Kara Protrulis placed first and won a gold medal in the Intermediate Ladies Figures category and Marisol Perry placed third and won a bronze medal in the Juvenile Girls Freestyle category.

Soccer goes on

Fall Soccer Programs will extend one more week than scheduled in order to make-up the cancellation of Saturday, Oct. 13, games and clinics. On Nov. 10, Soccer League teams will play the games as scheduled for 10-13-90.

Girls' Soccer qualifies

By Rebecca Kirk
Special to the Mariner

The girls' varsity soccer team has qualified for the state championships this week. On Thursday, Oct. 25, the varsity team demolished Norton at a score of 4-0.

The game began slowly and the score remained 0-0 at the end of the first half. But Cohasset exploded in the second half. Alison Ludlow, although hindered with a knee problem, managed to score two goals in the second half. The victory was then clinched with an amazing goal off of a corner kick by Sophie Redfield. And Jessica Delorenzo scored her first goal of the season with an assist from Jen Reidy.

On Friday, October 26, the girls were not so successful. Horrible weather conditions greatly affected the team's playing. Hail, rain and gusting winds along with almost freezing temperatures, made the game tedious. It was a very physical game, but each player gave it their best effort. By the end of the second half, the score was 0-2, in Rockland's favor.

Including this final loss, the girls varsity team ended the season with the favorable record of wins, 6 losses and 2 ties. This record earned the varsity team enough points to enter the "states."

It's time for a change: Jon Bryan for Congress

The Standard-Times, through the years, has for the most part been a supporter of U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds. We have endorsed him in election campaigns, and have appreciated much of the work he has done in Congress. But as times change and people change, the old relationships do not always work. This year, we endorse Jon L. Bryan for election to the 10th Congressional District of Massachusetts.

Rep. Studds, a Democrat, is a direct and forceful politician. He defends his political decisions with obvious conviction.

But some of those decisions lately have been troubling, and are a sign that Rep. Studds is gradually losing his political hearing.

If there was one vote in the past two years that serves as a benchmark for members of Congress, it is the pay raise. Rep. Studds was as direct as any House member in defending the raise, for which he voted, as necessary and fair.

Needless to say, millions of people disagreed, then and now, and we added our voice to theirs. The pay raise, approved as it was under the cloak of "reform" and "ethics," was a nauseating display of congressional arrogance at the very moment when a little humility and restraint would have gone a long way. Rep. Studds declared himself on that issue quite clearly, and we give him credit for his honesty about that. We simply happen to disagree, deeply disagree, about whether that raise - and the ripple effect it had on pensions and a host of other pay scales - was the right thing or the wrong thing to do.

More importantly, we also have a deep disagreement with Rep. Studds about the nature of campaign contributions from political action committees. PAC money, Rep Studds insists, comes from groups and organizations who are pleased with the work he does on the various committees to which he is assigned. He contends that these PAC contributions have nothing to do with the decisions that he makes, and that alternatives to PACs are potentially worse than the PACs themselves.

We sharply disagree. It is simply not possible to believe that one can receive thousands of dollars from one special interest group after another and not be influenced, at some point, to see things their way. This is largely a matter of perception, naturally, because it is impossible for any member of Congress to prove that he isn't influenced. And there are PACs whose objectives we would fully agree with. But please don't ask us to believe that a politician, making political choices, does so without taking into consideration those who have helped him stay in office.

Rep. Studds does not often encounter a challenger of much substance. In most of his races, he has stood so much taller than his opponent that it was easy to dismiss Rep. Studds' promise of long ago not to be a career member of Congress.

That's not the case this year.

Jon Bryan, a Republican who has been campaigning for this office for several years now, is ready for the job. As a college professor, airline pilot and successful independent businessman, he is clearly capable of handling the demands on a congressman.

What's more he comes to the voter with a fresh new approach to a lot of the old problems that incumbents in Congress, including our own, have failed to solve or even address. For example, Mr. Bryan would certainly be more determined to resolving the endless budget problems than Rep. Studds has been. And while marine and fisheries issues are certainly important to the 10th district, there is no reason why the congressman should be a specialist in them to the exclusion of others.

Mr. Bryan brings an enthusiasm, intelligence and broad range of interests and ideas to the table in his bid for office. In a short time, he, too, will benefit from the knowledge that experience in office brings. We think he has developed into a fine candidate, and we endorse him in this election.

Under the Muse entry is a list of his clients: the Int'l. Brotherhood of Police Officers, Clean Harbors, Mass. Community College Assn., and Citizen's Medco Corp.

If Muse's contribution could be attributed to any group, the IBPO would be an obvious choice, since Hedlund's partial listing includes no fewer than eight police and law enforcement groups supporting Ambler.

Yet Hedlund selected Muse's client, Clean Harbors, to include in his headline, "an absurdity," according to Ambler campaign manager Ted Wheeler, since Ambler opposed Clean Harbors' proposed Braintree incinerator and filed three separate bills to kill it.

Similarly, Hedlund's flyer lists Boston Edison lobbyist Leo Fleming as contributing $100, an amount Wheeler says represents Fleming's entry fee in an Ambler golf tournament.

Ambler has long served as business agent for a Boston Edison employees' union, and filed the request for an independent study of Edison's plan to revitalize the Edgar station in Weymouth -- neither likely to win support from Edison management.

Indeed, if Hedlund's flyer is to be believed, both Edison management and its unions support Ambler.

"This whole thing is extremely misleading," says Wheeler. "It attempts to link contributions with votes, but there is no compromising vote to show any bad action."

As to liquor industry support, Wheeler notes that Ambler filed the legislation that raised the drinking age from 18 to 21 over strong industry opposition.

Clearly, Ambler's manager would object to Hedlund's flyer. But for Mary Jeanette Murray to quit in disgust may spell trouble for Hedlund in Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, where Murray is overwhelmingly popular.

TEN COMMANDMENTS

Whether Murray's moral reservations will raise any eyebrows in the other district towns -- Weymouth, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury -- remains to be seen.

"I was taught all my life to live up to those Ten Commandments," says Murray, "and that means no lying. When something like this comes out, it goes against everything I've been taught all my life, and what I live by.

"He didn't lie, but he didn't tell the exact truth, either," she says.

Murray demanded her name be taken off future ads and flyers, and quit Hedlund's campaign committee, but says she still supports his candidacy, suspecting that Hedlund didn't actually write the flyer.

Murray says she has a feeling that Republican State Committee consultant Ron Mills is the culprit.

"If this stuff is coming out of the State Committee, we'd better revamp that whole operation," says Murray.

That, indeed, is where it did come from, according to Hedlund's campaign manager, Howard Hay, who names Mills, "a paid consultant," as the author.

Hay himself seems uneasy with the flyer.

"The point it tries to make is very good," says Hay. "I don't think it's negative in a personal way."

"POSITIVE ADVERTISING"

Hay hastens to point out that Hedlund is "also doing positive advertising, on radio and cable TV," but concedes that the "Amblergate" flyer, 50,000 copies strong, is the campaign's main piece.

Hay says the flyer makes the point that lobbyists "are not going to Ambler because he's a nice guy, but because if he's a senator he's going to have a little more clout.

"Mary Jeanette Murray, I guess, feels it was somewhat negative," says Hay, "because it attacked him on issues. But I don't know what else you can do. When you [discuss] issues, people call it negative, but they listen."

Hay says Murray is "still involved" in the campaign.

"She's running for re-election," he adds. "We respect that."

Murray is unopposed.

And what of the issues?

INSIDER-OUTSIDER

Certainly the key issue in the race is insider-versus-outsider. Hedlund paints Ambler as "Mr. State House," while Ambler argues that his record as an effective legislator proves experience counts.

"There's an anti-incumbent fever out there," says Hay. "We hope to capitalize on it," painting Ambler as the tool of the powerful.

Not so, says Wheeler, who points to such things as Ambler's sponsorship of the auto Lemon Law despite auto industry opposition, fuel adjustment reform despite opposition from utilities, retention of free directory assistance, despite the telephone company's insistence on charging fees, and no smoking areas in buildings and restaurants, despite the tobacco industry.

QUESTION 3

The candidates differ on Question 3, the Citizens for Limitation Taxation rollback, with Ambler opposed and Hedlund in favor.

And they differ on abortion rights, Hedlund opposed and Ambler in favor after his celebrated change of heart last year.

But both Ambler and Hedlund are against reopening the Greenbush line as part of the Old Colony restoration project, and neither can be linked with Michael Dukakis or a tax-and-spend mentality.

Two of Ambler's primary opponents -- John Creed and Brian McDonald -- have endorsed his election. The third, William Flynn, says he takes "no position" in the Senate race.

Ambler also has the endorsement of longtime Weymouth Republican Town Committee president and town official George E. Lane, now retired.

Hedlund, meanwhile, has the active support of primary opponent Hussey, as well as presidential nephew Jamie Bush and conservative Republican J. Alan MacKay, once an unsuccessful challenger to Congressman Gerry Studds.

But Christy Mihos, from whom Hedlund took the nomination in a tight election-and-recount in single numbers, seems to be sitting on his hands.

"I support all Republican candidates," says Mihos, "but I'm trying to get back into the mainstream of my business," Christy's Markets convenience stores.

Mihos is not signing any Hedlund ads or flyers.

"They didn't ask me to," he says.

BREAKING THE CIRCLE OF STESS
It is no secret that parenting, our busy professional lives and general fast pace are conducive to physical and emotional stress. The troubling aspect of these stresses is that they feed on each other to produce a vicious circle of stress. Prolonged emotional strain seems to produce a state of emotional fatigue that, in turn, produces physical stress. It is not uncommon for emotional stress to cause back muscles to lock one or more vertebra together. Patients cite the neck and shoulders as the place where stress manifests itself physically as a spinal fixation. While it is possible to deal with stress from both emotional and physical perspectives, spinal treatment for stress may bring the situation back to normal sooner than expected. This is usually the most direct route to breaking the vicious circle of stress.
A properly aligned spinal column provides a natural communications network upon which Mother Nature's natural maintenance and healing instructions pass. In this way one achieves comfort and enjoyment "naturally." For the chiropractic exam and attention that your lifestyle demands and deserves, call DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, today. By appointment. BULLETIN BOARD

Fall fashion show in town

Shirley Musto of Scituate, owner of Inspirations Boutique in Cohasset, will present a fall fashion show at 11:45 a.m., Nov. 4 at Anthony's Pier 4 in Boston.

This event is sponsored by the Thomas Sherwin Chapter of the Telephone Pioneers of America, a nationwide social and charitable organization of long-term employees and retirees of telephone companies.

In the past, the Pioneers have raised funds for Special Olympics, the homeless, veterans and other charitable organizations.

Pat Hart, a Pioneer, will serve as coordinator and commentator; Ann Cooper is event chairman.

Musto said she will provide all the fashions to be worn by 22 volunteer models as well as for celebrity models Dawn Hayes of the Massachusetts Lottery on Channel 7, Nancy Russo, the Channel 4 meteorologist and two John Robert Powers models.

A $35 contribution will entitle the donor to entrance to the fashion show, dinner, entertainment, door prizes and free parking.

For further information, call Inspirations Boutique at 383-1814.

Veteran's Day prayers

A service of evensong will be held at St. Stephen's Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, on Veterans Day, Sunday, Nov. 11 at 6 p.m.

An organ recital at 5:30 p.m. by Robert Barney, organist and choirmaster at St. Stephen's, will precede the worship service.

Barney is a graduate of the New England Conservatory and has performed locally, around Boston and for national conventions of the American Guild of Organists and the Organ Historical Society.

The Evensong will be sung by the St. Stephen's Choir and will include music by Felix Mendelssohn, Charles Villiers Stanford and Jan Peterson Smeelinck.

All are invited to the Evensong which will honor those who served in the Armed Services. Prayers will be offered for the safety of those now serving and for peace in the Persian Gulf. If you would like more information you may call the office at St. Stephen's at 383-1083.

Antique show and sale

The 14th Antique Show and Sale will be held Saturday, Nov. 3, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, 206 Sohier Street.

Admission to the show with a card or ad for one or two persons is $1.50 - regular admission is $2. Admission cards are available from dealers and members of the Beechwood Congregational Church. Antiques such as glass, silver, jewelry, primitives and other collectibles will be on display and for sale. A public snack bar will be held in the school cafeteria with sandwiches, hot dogs, homemade squares, coffee, tea and cold drinks. Homemade baked goods will be on sale at the ticket area. There is plenty-of free parking.

Cheryl Kristiansen, chairman of this year's Antique Show, is pleased to announce the following dealers: Eve Makowski, Dog Corner Antiques; Mary Hill, Ye Old Tin Trunk; Sherry MacDonald, Country Collectibles; Cynthia Peterson, Country Accents; Madeline Hoagland, Eel River Antiques; Caroline Connor, Lincoln Mill Antiques; Joan Talbot; LaPetit Curiosity Shop; John Brandt, Mixed Bag; John Richardson, Indian Fort Bookhouse; Geraldine Pearl, Purple Pigeon Studio; Richard Ogden, Cohasset Antiques; Carol Franzosa, Times Past; Sue Krueger, Older & Better; Cathy Whalen, Calendula Antiques; Maureen Brown; Mary Stoddard, Snug Harbor Antiques; Doris Bourdage, Red Penny Studio; Nancy Perets, Cohasset Antiques, Arlene Ferreira, Andrea Hunt & Caroline Cohen, Pegleg Duck; Joan Kranin, Torrey House; Ida Warren; Paula Gockel, Country House; Barbara Donohue, Full Circa; and Jane Chatfield.

Republicans march out

The spirit of Paul Revere — along with area Republicans — rides again Sunday, Nov. 4.

The Paul Revere Motorcade (horses, too) will gather at the South Shore Country Club at 10:30 a.m. for breakfast, according to the chairman of the Norfolk Plymouth Republican Council Polly Logan.

All state, county and regional candidates will meet at 9:30 a.m. to decorate their cars (horses, too) with signs, flags and streamers, she said.

Coordinating the spirited ride throughout Norfolk Plymouth Senatorial District to encourage all residents to vote for GOP candidates, to ensure responsible government and assure victory Election Day, November 6, will be Tom Nash and Richard Silvia of Cohasset, Susan Williams of Weymouth, Debra Torterela of Duxbury, Ethel Wheatley of Scituate, Cathlynn Claypoole and Alexander MacMillan of Hingham.

Reservations must be made in advance for breakfast. The $5 charge is payable to Norfolk Plymouth Council c/o Polly Logan, 121 Nichols Road, Cohasset 02025.

Maps for the Paul Revere Ride through Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury will be given at the breakfast following the introduction of all statewide and other candidates. This is open to the public. For information call 383-0031, 383-0500, 749-0612, 383-1963.

Live cable election show

Once again, Continental Cablevision's Newsbeat 53 staff and crew will be providing complete live coverage of election results and reactions on Tuesday, Nov. 6 to cable television viewers in six South Shore communities.

Wide open races for local seats in the state legislature, as well as at the top of the ticket, have made this one of the most exciting campaign seasons in years. The political team of Newsbeat 53, the weekly newscast of the South Shore, will present the local results as they come in.

Newsbeat 53 Decision '90 will feature live reports from the headquarters of State Senate candidate Bob Hedlund in Hingham, State Rep candidates Jan O'Brien and Norman Buitta from Hanover and Norwell, and State Rep candidate Ron Wheatley from Scituate. Reporters will also be conducting interviews at the headquarters of State Representative Frank Hynes of Marshfield, and State Senate candidate Bob Ambler in Weymouth. Volunteers will be on hand at each of the local polling places to secure results.

Anchors Bill McColgan and Christine McDonald will provide analysis from the Newsbeat studio in Scituate, and interview experts about the impact of each race here on the South Shore.

Channel 53's coverage will once again feature an exclusive satellite feed from WBZ-TV 4. In a partnership that proved very successful during primary elections, WBZ will provide statewide results and analysis, while Newsbeat 53 focusses on the local angle. The program will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Channel 53.

Continental staffer Bob Belliveau, who is coordinating the studio production, and Newsbeat mainstays Jeff Spencer and Wendy Larrabee, will be assisted in this production by Don Roine and Deb Duggan. Dozens of volunteers will serve as the real backbone of Newsbeat 53 Decision '90, including director Mike Finnerty, who is responsible for keeping the entire program flowing. The unprecedented five live remote feeds are provided through the efforts of Continental's technical crew.

The Last Thing We Need In Congress Is More Baloney.

We've listened to some wild charges in this race for Congress. But when you ask Jon Bryan "Where's the beef?"— all you get is baloney.

Bryan calls our Representative, Gerry Studds, a "dolphin killer." But the Sierra Club praises Studds for passing landmark legislation to protect our dolphins. And Greenpeace told Bryan to stop deceiving voters.

Bryan charges Studds is "against senior citizens." But the National Council of Senior Citizens, the National Committee To Preserve Social Security & Medicare, and countless other senior organizations give Studds one of the highest ratings in Congress.

In Congress today, we have plenty of name callers and more than enough baloney.

Gerry Studds has given us intelligence, courage, hard work and a strong voice for change.

And if we want to change Congress today, we need more of these qualities. Not less.

Gerry Studds for Congress

Paid for by the Committee to Re-elect Congressman Studds, Edwin M. Martin Jr., Treasurer.

DO DENTAL IMPLANTS REQUIRE SPECIAL CARE?

Perhaps the best way to answer this question is: Presume that dental implants are natural teeth and treat them that way. Return to regular check-ups. Brush and floss. Realize also, that caring for the gums is the best way to care for one's teeth. More teeth are lost as a result of gum disease than any other single cause. Even with dental implants, care of the gums is the first order of good oral hygiene. For more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617-826-8395.

Over fifty Eldred Wheeler craftsmen continue to construct antique furniture. At their workshop in Hingham, Massachusetts they design, build, and finish pieces using the same methods New England cabinetmakers did over 200 years ago.

Some of the forms crafted include beds, chests, secretary desks, lowboys, tables, chairs, and highboys. Because each piece is made by hand, most people reserve them in advance. However, many items at our showrooms are available to take home.

The appreciating value of Eldred Wheeler Furniture has been demonstrated at local auction houses. Discover the affordability of these handmade pieces with Eldred Wheeler's new Preferred Collector Program.

Living Life

Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner

Last week I was feeling overwhelmed! So many things were happening to me, at me, around me, and with me and beside me and over me et cetera. Living life was complicated to say the least. There was the part of me that wanted to run away. If I ran away, nothing could catch up with me, or so the myth played in the CD of my mind. Then there was the little boy in me that wanted to play helpless so that someone else would really do the work that was mine. My manipulative powers were failing, I thought to myself. Everywhere I turned, no one wanted to rescue me. I told my wife how busy I was; she informed me how busy she was. At the office, Jane, our secretary told me that I needed to fill out a P-5 form for fiscal. I politely ignored her letting her see how busy I was. I heard her say out of the side of her mouth to Trudy, "Mike doesn't seem to like doing paperwork." She was right again. I had so many things to get done before Thursday. I even brought work home hoping that my computer genius neighbor, Jeff Waal, would take me off the hook. Let me share what happened.

Some weeks back, Jeff showed me the wonderful layouts and prints that he had done on his Apple computer. I was fascinated. I wanted to do the same. "It should be easy," I thought to myself, as I watched Jeff push the buttons on his computer. One program was working this side of the screen. With the click of the mouse, another program popped to the left, with yet another box coming up to the right. Push button glamour with mouse and scanner and all the rest. I also have a mouse and scanner, a 386 PC compatible, with Word Perfect, Publisher's Paintbrush and a host of software I haven't had time to look at yet. My new Panasonic laser printer could perform miracles. Wow, was I going to have fun! Or so I thought!

I was trying to print a 10-page booklet that I needed for Sunday. I had it all planned in my mind; it was going to be beautiful and I even figured out how long it would take me. Monday was a holiday, so I set to work in the morning in my computer den. By 5 p.m. I had gotten nowhere. I called Jeff and told him of my confusion. He asked me if I had read the directions that came with the software. I had sort of looked at the index, but not very thoroughly. I thought my knowledge of computers would stand me in good stead. Jeff was busy that night, but set aside Tuesday evening for me. Fine, I thought. Jeff will be able to do this thing in an hour for me.

Jeff came to my computer den. To tell you the truth, I would like to have gone to his. It all seemed so easy. He worked with me all evening. He read the directions for Word Perfect, and even devoured the operating instructions for the last printer. I was getting tired of watching him read all the directions. "Gosh, Jeff," I said to him, "is this what you had to do to get to the point where you can do what you can do!" Jeff kept reading away. I yawned, hoping to let him know I was tired, but he kept reading away. I admired his tenacity. "He must have put a lot of time into reading directions," I thought to myself. "Maybe that is why he is able to work so well on his computer." When all else fails, read the directions! How many times have I heard that—how many times have I said it. It is amazing how I can know all these rules and regulations in my head, how I am so deft at pointing out to others in counseling situations the skills they need to develop for living life well. But when my mind is rushing—every other part of me is rushing. There are no short cuts to doing something well. There are no short cuts to learning to do something well. I need to take the time to read the directions.

Jeff left me that evening around 11 p.m. Both of us were a bit confused because these expensive machines were not accepting our commands. I may have been confused, but I learned so much that evening from Jeff. He showed me what it is to be a good friend, a good parent, a good teacher. He did not rescue the little boy in me and say, "Here, Mike, I'll do this for you in my Apple." He probably would have saved time. But no, he chose to work with me and spend four hours helping me to study mine instead. I spent Wednesday afternoon and evening practicing what I preach. I read the directions. I published the ten page booklet and it came out beautiful. Out of the one hundred people who used the booklet Sunday afternoon, I felt I was the one most healed. Thanks, Jeff, for being such a good friend and a wonderful neighbor. Living life has its rewards!

HAVE YOU BEEN MEANING TO SEE A CHIROPRACTOR?
A lot of people know someone who's seen a chiropractor and had good results. Often they've been meaning to see one themselves...about a nagging back problem...a stiff neck or persistent headache...or numbness in their arms, hands or legs.
At Lewis Chiropractic Center we specialize in locating the cause of pain or numbness and restoring good health through gentle re-adjustment of the spine and vertabrae. Often, conditions which have plagued patients for years are improved after only a few visits - without resorting to drugs or surgery.

MORTGAGEE'S SALE OF REAL ESTATE

By virtue and in execution of the Power of Sale contained in a certain mortgage given by WALTER G. ROSS, dated January 14, 1986, and recorded with Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 258, to COHASSET SAVINGS BANK of which mortgage the undersigned is the present holder, for breach of conditions of said mortgage and for the purpose of foreclosing, the same will be sold at Public Auction at 10:00 a.m. on the 26th day of November, 1990 at the premises 159 South Main Street, Cohasset, Massachusetts.

To wit: "A certain parcel of land situated in said Cohasset, Norfolk County, Massachusetts, and being bounded and described as follows:

Beginning at the Easterly corner of the granted premises, at the point in the Westerly line of South Main Street at land conveyed by Minnie P. Gilmore to Minerva C. Stone, June 27, 1923, the line runs South 74° 4' West by said land of Minerva C. Stone, one hundred ninety-seven and 70/100 (197.70) feet to a point in the stone wall at land now or formerly of one Sankey; thence line turns and runs North 16° 15' 30" West by said stone wall one hundred ninety-four and 21/100 (194.21) feet to Spring Street; thence South 84° 3' 10" East by said Spring Street, two hundred eleven and 93/100 (211.93) feet to said Westerly line of South Main Street; thence South 16° 57' 20" East, one hundred fifteen and 21/100 (115.21) feet to the point of beginning.

Containing 29,949 square feet of land and being shown as the smaller of two lots on a subdivision plan belonging to Minnie P. Gilmore, Cohasset, Mass., recorded with Norfolk Deeds in Book 1559, Page 357, dated June 25, 1923, H. A. Litchfield, C.E.

For title, see deed of Anita L. Ross to Walter G. Ross, recorded with the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds in Book 6920, Page 257."

TERMS OF SALE: Said premises will be sold and conveyed subject to all unpaid taxes, tax titles, municipal liens and assessments, if any, which take precedence over the said mortgage above described.

Deposit of TEN THOUSAND AND 00/100 ($10,000.00) DOLLARS cash or certified check will be required by the purchaser at the time of sale, and the balance of the purchase price within twenty-five (25) days; other terms to be announced at time of sale.

Recreation Notes

OPEN GYM AT CHS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will sponsor an Open Gym for basketball, for Cohasset youth in grades 7 through 12, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., beginning Thursday, Oct. 25, and continuing four weeks, Thursday, Nov. 15.

The Open Gym will be free of charge and supervised by Matt Salarno. Participants must wear sneakers and no food or beverage is allowed in the gym. The program is open to both girl's and boy's, meeting at the Cohasset High School — downstairs gym.

FURNITURE RESTORATION/REFINISHING

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday from 9 to 11 a.m., at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for the 10 hour program is $50 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture, that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class, other supplies will be provided. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class.

AEROBIC EXERCISE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department is offering Fall sessions of Low-Impact, Aerobic Exercise classes, taught by Margaret Watson on Tuesday and Thursday, from 6:15 to 7:15 p.m. at Cohasset Town Hall Auditorium.

Sessions are conducted in eight week cycles, costing $40, for twice- weekly classes. Fee for 16 classes is $40. However, you may join at any time, at any class, and the fee will be pro-rated based upon the number of classes per week you would like to take, and the number of weeks left in the session. Checks would be made payable to: Town of Cohasset, and sessions continue on a year round basis. Classes are structured in order that all levels of proficiency may participate comfortably.

Should you require further details, call the Cohasset Recreation Department office at: 383-6791, otherwise, you may register at any class.

Halloween ideas from Osgood's resource room

Wanda the Witch

By Brian Hurley

Wanda went to the village. She tried to scare the village. She scared everybody out of the village. The next year, she couldn't find even a mouse. Five years later, some people went to the empty village. The people stayed overnight at the village. The next morning, the people said that they will have a Halloween Party at the empty haunted house at the top of the hill on the other side of the village. So, almost a hundred people went. The witch used her want and almost turned herself into a killer witch. Then she realized she wanted to let the people have fun. She turned herself into a wonderful woman, she broke her wand, and lived happily ever after.

Bee the Witch

By Tom Bilodeau

Bee, the witch, lived far away in the woods. She watches MTV and MC Hammer. She eats bees when she's watching MTV. One day, Bee went to see her friend. His name was Count Dracula. They went to the Hanover Mall to scare everybody. They yelled, "Boo!" and Bee made a bat pop out of her hand. The bat's name was "A, the Bat." Then, O, the ghost, came out of her hand. He wanted to make some of his own frog soup. A, the bat; Count Dracula; and Bee, the witch, and O, the ghost, went home together. They made some nice frog soup. They watched MTV while eating it. Frog pie was the dessert. After eating, they ran out the door. They met "M, the pumpkin." He has arms and legs coming out of him. Frankenstein popped out of a tree. It was Halloween, so they all went to scare everybody.

Wanda flies high

By Katie Roth

Wanda was flying in the air on her magic broom. She saw a pretty girl. The pretty girl had a unicorn. The pretty girl's name was Allison. It was almost Halloween, so Wanda said Hi to Allison. Allison said, "Hi, what's your name?" The witch said, "Wanda. Do you want to come over to my house?" Allison said, "Yes, I would like to go to your house, if I can bring my unicorn." Wanda said, "Yeh, but the unicorn has to get on the broom, and we have to go on his back." Then, they flew to Wanda's house. They had a cup of toad tea. Allison turned into a witch, too. They all lived happily ever after in Wanda's house.

The ugly witch

By Danny Sullivan

The witch is ugly. She is green. She had an adventure. She flew all around the United States. She was flying and her broom broke. She fell down in a chimney and got stuck. She couldn't get out. There was a fire in the chimney. The witch was so fat, she broke the chimney. She fell off the house and landed in thorns. She walked home with thorns in her.

Wanda & Mr. Bleach

By Aryanna

Wanda the Witch was flying. She saw a jack-o-lantern, then she remembered it was Halloween. She went back home, and got her scariest costume. She got her broom and flew to everyone's house. The broom dropped down into the chimney. The broom burned. Wanda was crying, but she remembered that in her pocket there was a toad. It could turn into a flying toad. Wanda got on the toad's back. They flew to Mr. Bleach's house. Mr. Bleach and Wanda went to a Halloween party.

A poor witch

By Justin Cullivan

Once upon a time there was a witch. She was poor. She went in people's houses at night. The witch tries to steal money to buy a broom, so she can fly. On Halloween, she steals all the people's candy, when the people aren't looking. The witch made candy pie. She ate the pie. A kid came by. The kid was crying because he didn't get any candy, and felt sad. So, she gave the kid some candy. The witch never stole again.

Over the moon

By Caitlin Welby

Wanda the Witch was flying to Cohasset for Halloween. She was on her broom, with her black cat. She flew over the moon, then she went trick-or-treating. A girl named Patricia was walking by. Wanda walked by Patricia. Wanda looked back at Patricia and turned her into a toad. Patricia, the toad, went to Wanda's sister's house. Wanda's sister's name is Hilda the Witch. Hilda is a good witch. Patricia made it to Hilda's house. She was very tired. She asked Hilda if she could turn her into a person again. Hilda turned her into a cat, by accident. Hilda tried again and she turned Patricia back into a person. Patricia went back to her house.

The witch and the cat

By Danny Mulligan

One night Wanda went out on her broomstick. She saw a black cat. She got off her broomstick and got the cat. She got back on her broomstick and went home. When she got home, she gave the cat food. Then she worked on her stew. She put the cat in the stew, some bat brains, and some frog legs. Then, she went trick-or-treating. Then she found a kid and made him eat the stew. He grew 1,000 feet tall. Then she made the kid eat the stew again. The kid grew back to normal.

Flying on a broom

By Malissa Rosano

A witch flies a broom. The witch has black hair and a green face. A witch's hat is pointy and the dress is black. The shoes are pointy. Wanda the witch is going to fly around the moon. She got tired, so she decided to go rest on the moon. The moon woke up and yelled, "Get off of me." The witch got off and flew her broom back home. People came to her house to get some candy for Halloween. The witch gave them some moon candy. Everyone had a good time.

Debra Krupczak, a witch and mom, couldn't avoid the only exit from the haunted kitchen. (Staff photo by Jodi L. Rome)

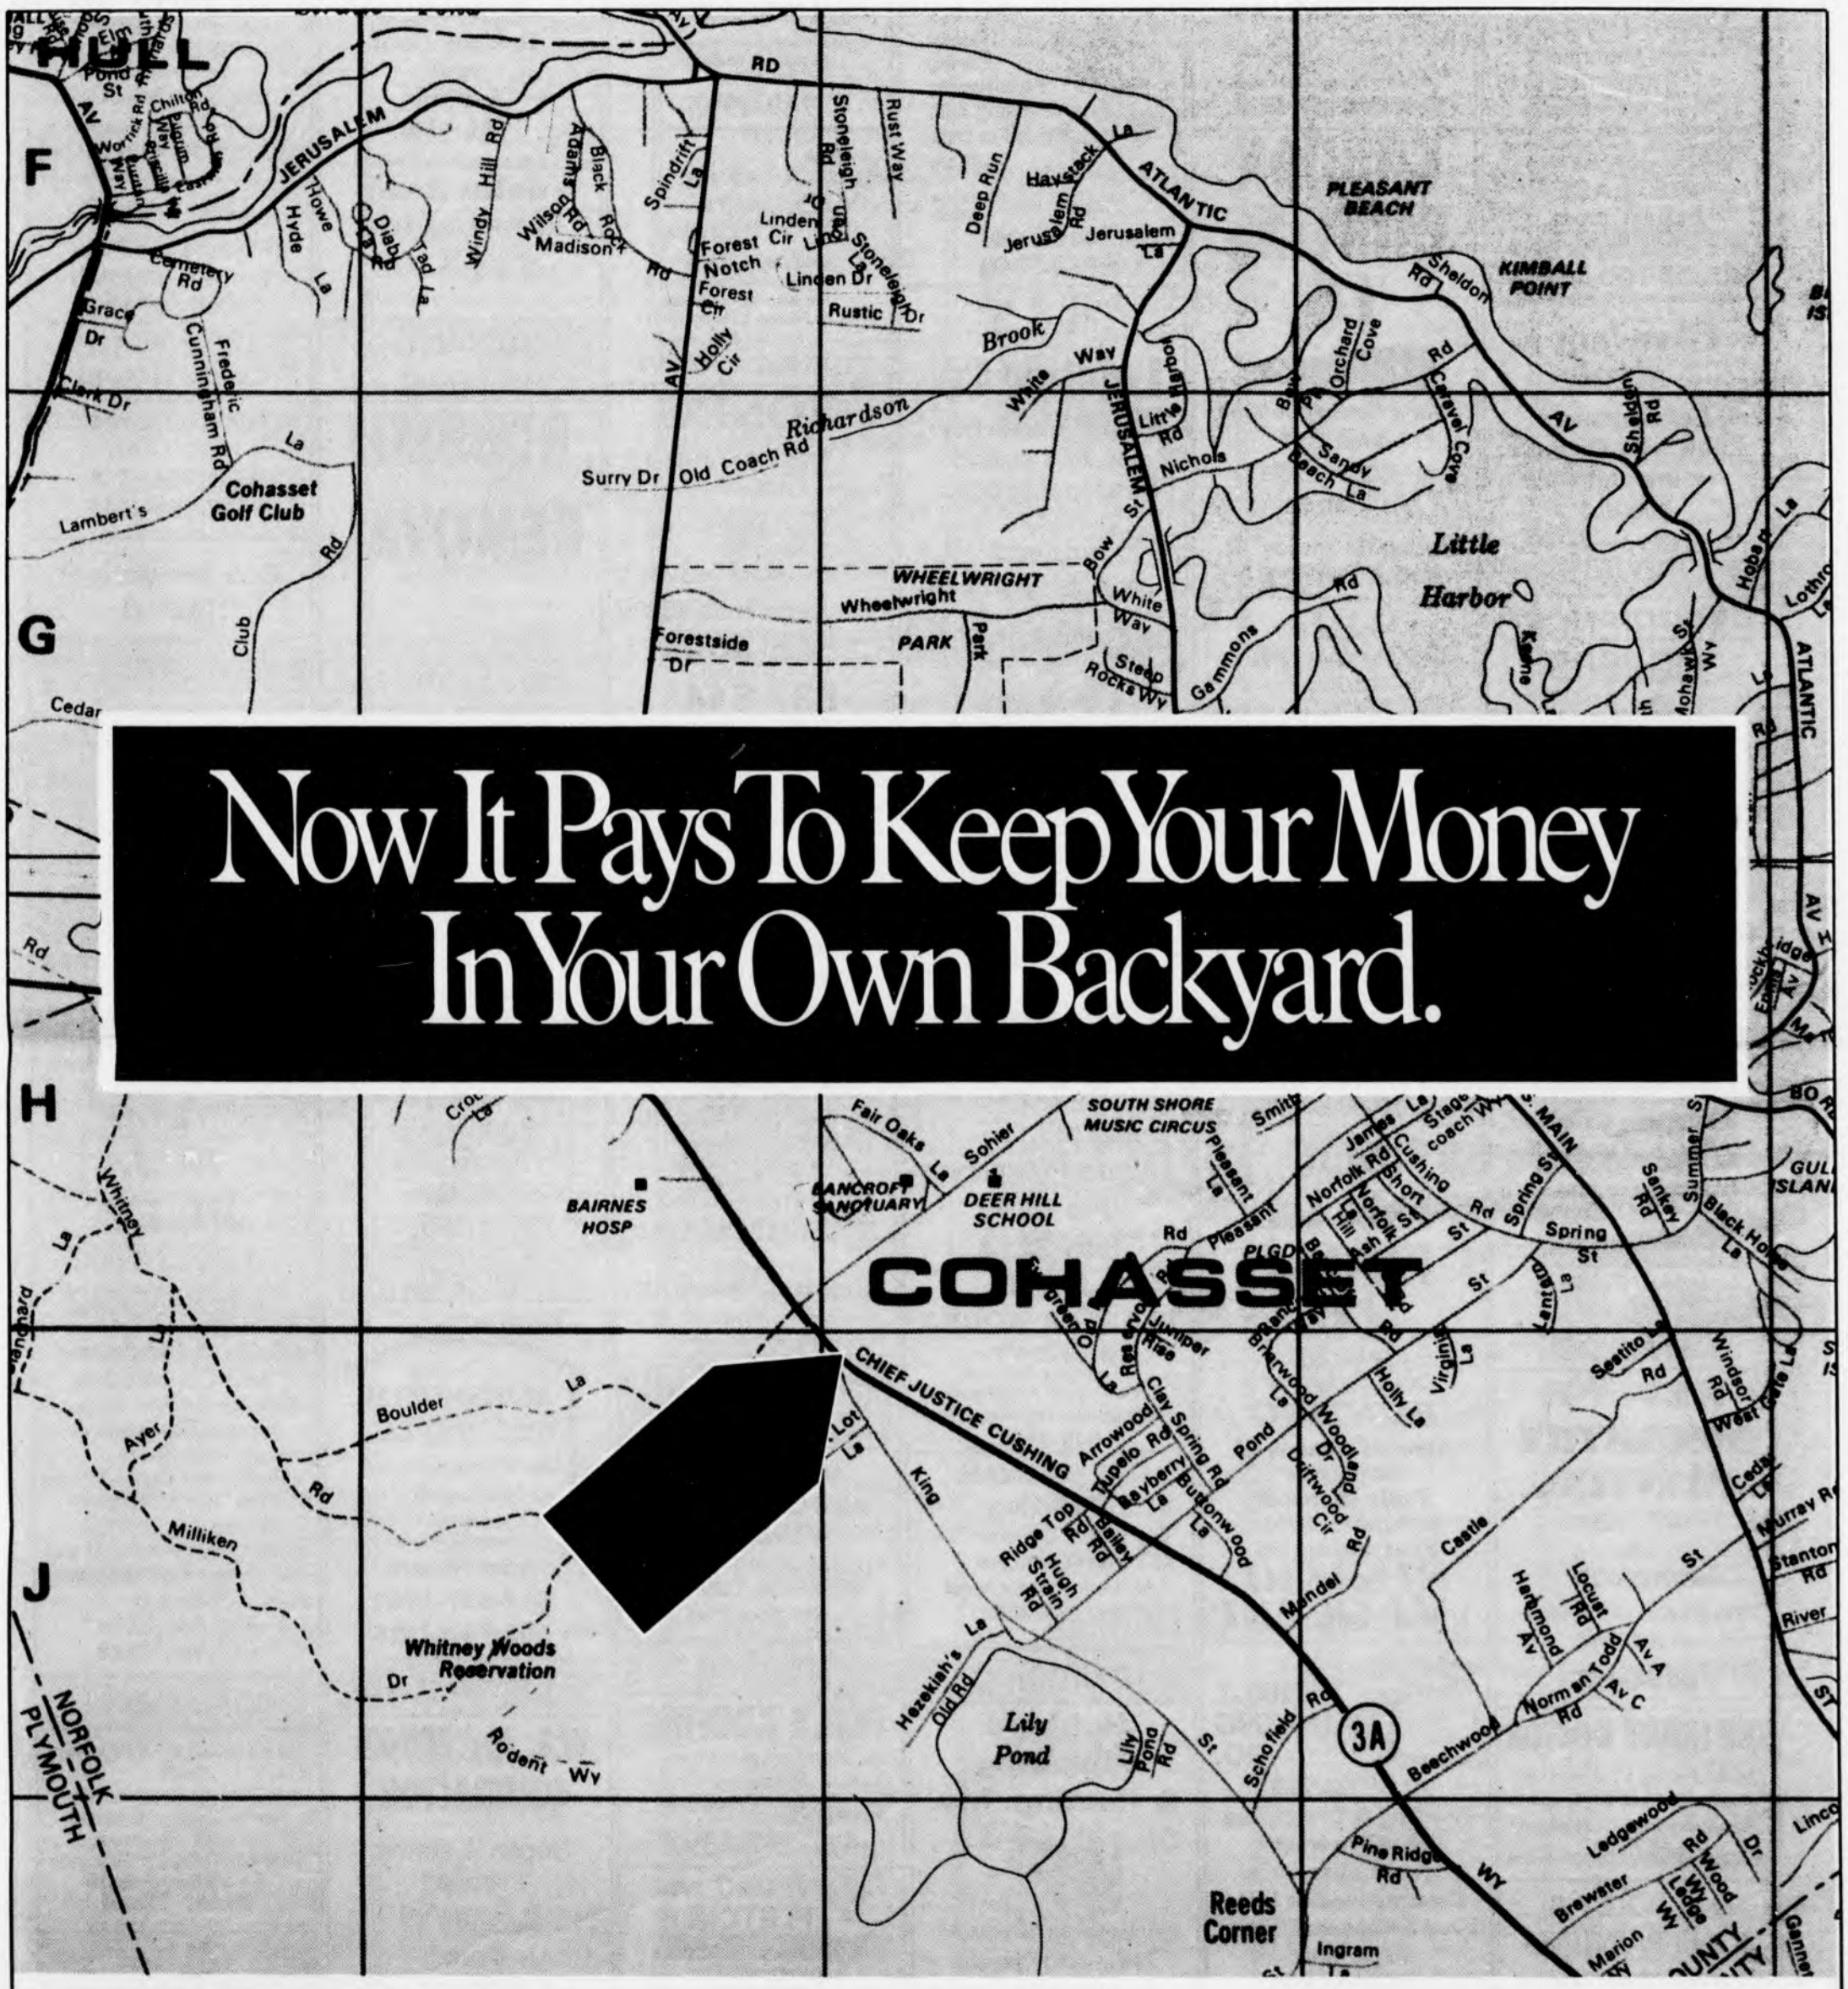
'Queen of the Back Bay'



Actress Robin Lane will perform "Queen of Back Bay," a dramatization of the life of Isabella Stewart Gardner, at Cohasset High School, 143 Pond Street on November 18, 2 p.m. Tickets are $10. Proceeds will benefit Cohasset Council on Aging. For more information call 383-0572.

"Queen of Back Bay," which was extensively researched and written by Lane, depicts this exceptional woman, her times, and the palace she created.

Lane has toured the United States with her one-woman show, "Ladies First," a portrayal of some of America's First Ladies. A singer and actress, she has starred in such musical productions as "Company," "Follies," and "Man of La Mancha.". Her non-musical credits include leading roles in "The Little Foxes," "The Autumn Garden," "Another Part of the Forest," "Medea," and "A Winter's Tale."

Lane, like Isabella Stewart Gardner, is a Bostonian. Lane also loves art.

As writer, producer and star of the very successful "Ladies First," Robin Lane tours the United States performing her show about the lives of the First Ladies. Knowing she is from Boston, people ask her about that cultural "Athens of America" and about the Gardner Museum. Has she visited it? What does she know about Mrs. Gardner?

Hedlund takes state senate seat

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

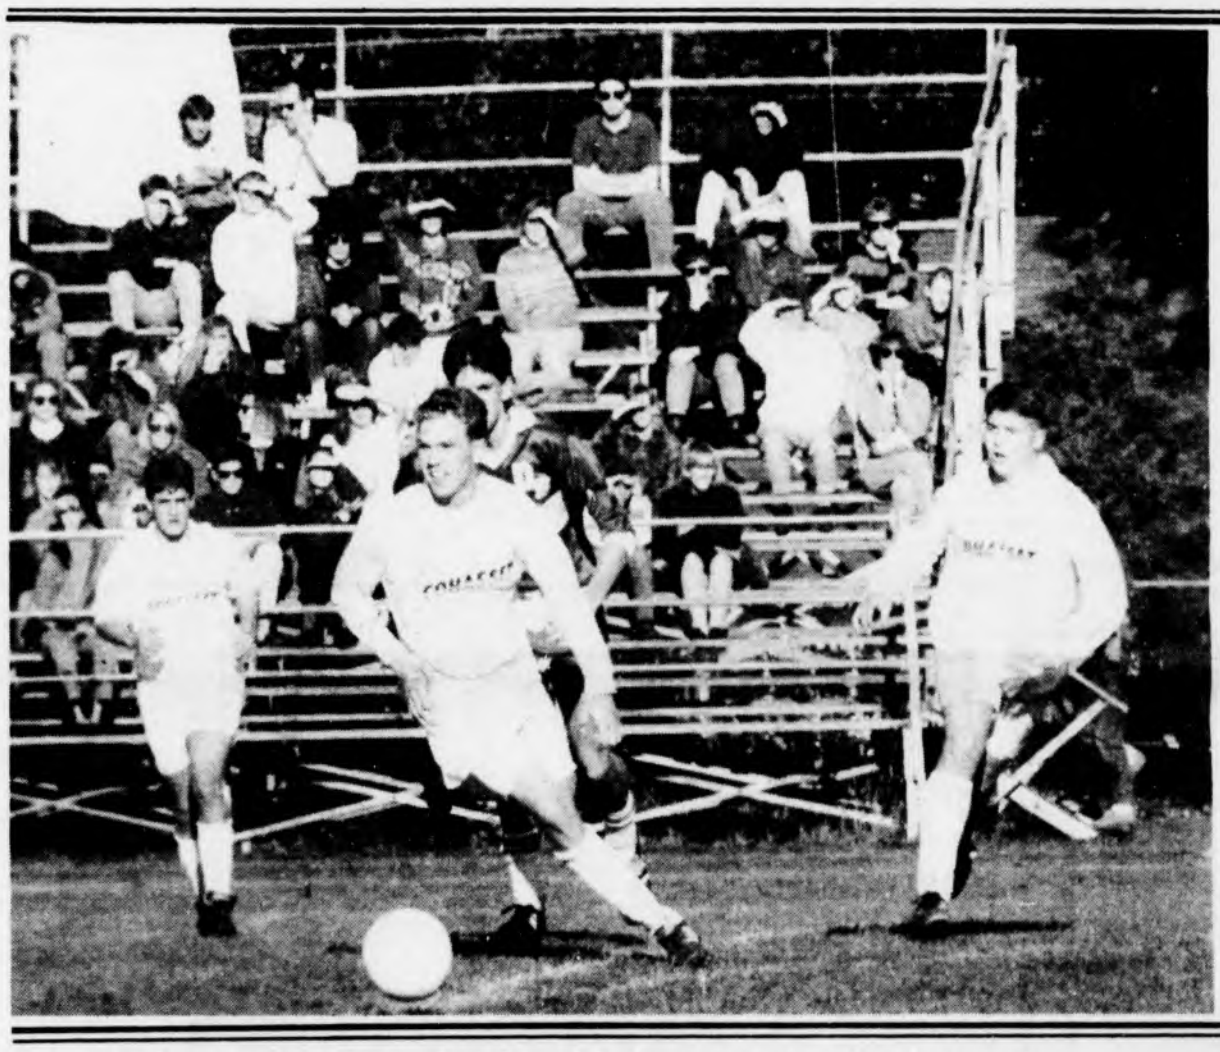
When Robert Hedlund won the Republican nomination in September he was down to one sign, one bumper sticker, a depleted coffer and the threat of a recount looming over his slim victory.

Despite his underdog status against political veteran Robert Ambler in the general election for the Norfolk-Plymouth senate seat, he kept his eye on the prize and reclaimed the seat for the Republican party for the first time in over 20 years.

Hedlund soundly defeated Ambler by a nearly 57 percent margin, earning 38,994 votes to Ambler's 28,717.

The district includes the towns of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Duxbury, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield. Of those town's Ambler only managed to narrowly carry his hometown of Weymouth.

In Cohasset, Hedlund swept both of the town's precincts, beating Ambler 2,460 votes to 1,261. Hedlund took 1,298 votes in precinct 1 and 1,162 votes in precinct 2. Ambler polled 606 ballots in 1 and 655 in 2.



Hedlund credited his victory to a hard-working staff that he said organized into a "strong grass-roots campaign."

Hedlund, a 29-year old from Weymouth who runs a truck repair business in Quincy, served on the executive board of the Republican State Committee and was the South Shore Coordinator for Citizens for Limited Taxation.

Hedlund backed the Citizens for Limited Taxation referendum that was defeated by voters in Tuesday's election. He is anti-abortion and opposes the MBTA's planned restoration of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad.

Hedlund and Ambler were among a group of can-

South Shore Music Circus promises to do better

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Problems with noise, late-running shows, traffic and parking violations brought residents in the neighborhoods around South Shore Music Circus to the selectmen's meeting. Music Circus producer Ed Kasses and board president Bruce Cameron attempted to smooth ruffled feathers by promising to do better in the coming season.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby said her efforts to relay residents' complaints about the Music Circus during the summer resulted in a threatening message being left on her answering machine.

"I was told that if I continued to talk about it, I'd be killed," Gjesteby said. Cameron said no one from the center would have made such a call.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she was specifically concerned about a week night double show that resulted in a traffic jam when the first show got out late.

According to neighbors, the traffic jam extended up Sohier Street and down Route 3A to the Hingham rotary.

Resident Mary Gainor said theater goers park along both sides of Sohier Street, creating a real safety hazard for homeowners.

"There is no way an ambulance or fire engine could have gotten to any house on Sohier Street or Fair Oaks," Gainor said. She was particularly concerned because two Sohier Street residents have heart conditions.

Kasses conceded that traffic problems resulted from the Diana Ross. He said the theater carefully planned all the details of the concert and then were derailed when the airport was fogged in and Ross arrived two-and-a-half hours late.

Ross' late arrival meant the first show ran late.

Joel Carpenter - a profile in courage

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Joel Carpenter is almost seven years old. His mother describes him as sophisticated and brave.

Joel was diagnosed with leukemia three years ago. Last year he spent 100 days in the hospital. He has undergone radiation treatments, chemotherapy and a bone marrow transplant. This week doctors removed an eye he'd lost in his fight with cancer. His surgery was done and he was sent home in one day. Later he'll undergo further surgery — an implant is planned.

"They're treating him just like any other patient," Marita said.

Every two weeks he spends six hours at the hospital hooked up to a machine that pumps gammaglobin into his body.

"The gammaglobin is just to build up his immune system. He's not dependent on blood products since the bone marrow operation," his mother said as she made coffee in the kitchen of her home.

Today Joel's at home on Heather Drive.

Like other children he's allowed to play with his brother and sister.

His parents — Joel and Marita Durkin Carpenter — care for him, driving him back and forth from Floating Hospital in Boston for his ongoing medical care.

But there are differences in Joel's life — differences he accepts.

- He's not allowed to play with animals, lest he catch something his fragile immune system can't handle.
- His mother screens his playmates on the basis of healthiness. He's not allowed to play with anyone who has been exposed to chicken pox. His best friends wear masks when they come over to play.
- He studies his grade 1 lesson under the supervision of a tutor's guidance. Next year he'll be ready to go back to Osgood School.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Fiscal 1990 taxes due now

Warning letters have been mailed to property owners who still owe fiscal 1990 taxes, according to Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth B. Ripley. These notices are not be confused with the new fiscal 1991 real estate tax bills that are to be mailed out in the next two weeks.

Payment in full must be made on or before Nov. 30. Any properties with unpaid taxes at that time will be processed for a tax taking and the town will place a lien on the property.

Taxes must be paid by bank check, money order or cash.

Demands were sent from the treasurer-collector's office may 17. Warrants were served on delinquent accounts during the week of July 30.

In some cases taxes may remain unpaid due to a change of ownership. Ripley said any new homeowners since Jan. 1, 1989 who failed to receive a notice should contact her office immediately.

For more information, call the treasurer-collector's office at 383-9900, extension 113.

No overnight parking

Indian Summer must be over — because overnight parking on Cohasset roads is forbidden after Nov. 15. Violators may be ticketed, according to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon.

"There is no such thing as an automatic first time void," Doyon warns residents.

Garden club gives gift

Town hall will get a new brick walkway courtesy of the Community Garden Club. The gift won't duplicate a previously announced donation.

When Selectman Jane Goedecke donated her surplus campaign funds to the town to build a brick walkway at town hall, the last thing on her mind was campaign finance laws.

"It is not absolutely clear to me all the ramifications of the campaign finance laws," Goedecke said. She feared it would cost more in legal fees to find out if she can legally donate the money to the town than she has to give.

Goedecke donated the money to the Community Garden Club instead.

"The garden club chose to fund the same project I would have chosen," Goedecke said.

She added that she will ask state Representative Mary Jeanette Murray to address the issue.

Ambulance issues surface

Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the committee to study the structure of town government, came before the board of selectmen seeking to clarify the ambulance specifications. He left after getting an earful from exasperated selectmen.

Selectman Jane Goedecke was blunt about her reaction to his committee's request for detailed infomation from the selectmen.

"I am somewhat put off by this," Goedecke said about the tone of the letter. "Please don't hold your breath waiting for a long answer."

"I see this getting more and more complicated," Selectman Diana Kornet complained. "I share her reaction to this. I think it is inappropriate."

Hazardous roads

Residents on Fair Oaks Lane and Atlantic Avenue probably only wanted to protect their lawns, but they ran afoul of town bylaw article VII, section 2 under safety and public order.

Their crime: placing rocks on the public streets. According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, the rocks were one to two feet into the paved area of the road.

Safety officer Clifton B. Jones said the rocks created a safety hazard for cars, bicycles, runners and pedestrians.

Doyon and Jones want residents to be aware that no obstructions can be placed in the roadway.

What's open, closed on Veterans' Day

Banks, schools and government offices will be closed next Monday, Nov. 12, when Veterans' Day is observed.

According to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce:

- federal, state, county, and municipal offices are closed
- schools and libraries are closed
- manufacturing plants are closed
- banks are closed
- retail stores and supermarkets are open
- liquor stores, taverns and bars will be open
- stock markets will be open
- Post Offices are closed, and there will be no mail delivery.

VoTech students stage walkout for teachers

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

About 100 students at the Hanover campus of the South Shore Regional Vocational High School walked out of class Friday in a show of support for the teachers.

VoTech teachers have been picketing before and after school since last Tuesday.

And for about a month the teachers have been assembling in the parking lot before school and entering the building about a minute before they are due at their teaching stations in a show of solidarity.

Teachers are also staying after school only until 2:45 p.m. and not until 3:30 p.m. which had been the practice before contract negotiations reached a stalemate on Sept. 27.

Students who approached the Mariner said their walkout was a show of support for their teachers.

However, several students said they were unhappy that teachers were currently only available for extra help for 15 minutes after school.

As a result, students said, they have to stay after school several times to receive an adequate amount of help. They also said from 2:45 p.m. until 3:30 p.m. (when the late bus arrives) they were left with nothing to do.

The regular school day is over at VoTech at 2:30 p.m.

HEARD RUMORS

Several students also said they had heard rumors that sports and extra curricular activities were going to be cut.

The student walk out began at 10:10 a.m. and lasted for the remainder of the day Friday.

At first about 60 students left the building. The group walked around the school building four times while they called and yelled to their fellow students to join the walk out.

Several buses also arrived at school with students who were returning from cooperative work/study programs. Some students left the buses and joined the protest while others returned to class.

By about 11 a.m., a total of about 100 students had joined the walk out.

Several students told the Mariner that the group was comprised mostly of seniors.

About 409 students attend the Hanover campus.

The protest was orderly. By lunch time, one student offered to order pizzas from the cellular telephone in his car.

Another student shared a role of red crepe paper which was used to make arm bands. Teachers have been wearing red arm bands for several weeks.

Teachers' union president Carl Sousa said the teachers were not in favor of the student walk out and had advised the students to stay in class.

"We would never encourage anything like that," said Sousa in a telephone interview.

TEACHERS DISCOURAGED STUDENTS

Sousa said he had heard rumors of a planned walk out the day before and advised the teachers to discourage students from participating.

Sousa also said when students stay after school, the teachers are giving students enough work to keep them busy from 2:45 until 3:30 p.m. when the late bus arrives.

He said the administration could supervise the students in the cafeteria while they did their work.

Sousa said however that the union had not "actually talked to the administration about this."

Union treasurer, Russ DeCoste, said the extra curricular activities like the year book, newspaper, and cheerleading which require the teachers to stay after hours are continuing as planned.

"We are still discussing basketball," he said. DeCoste added that basketball starts after Thanksgiving and he is optimistic that the contract stalemate will be settled by then.

"We did not want an impact on the kids so we have not stopped what (extracurricular activity) was already started."

DeCoste said students were told the walkout would "not do us a favor, and that the students were only hurting themselves."

"If they (kids) are angry at us we told them to come and talk to us," he said.

'HAVE THE LEAST IMPACT'

"From the beginning we have said we want this to have the least impact on the actual delivery of education, so we would never actually encourage anything like this," said DeCoste.

Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton said the students who walked out broke the rules and would be punished.

He said all the students who walked out would receive a zero for the classes they missed.

Easton added that students who broke any other school rules such as smoking or leaving the school grounds would be "punished to the extent (stated) of the student handbook."

Easton said he "heard rumors late Thursday afternoon" that a walkout was planned.

"Staff and student leaders tried to head it off," he said.

"I permitted them to do it (walk out) as long as they stayed on school property," he said. Easton said students, who so desired, were allowed to reenter the building and return to class between periods.

"I will say this, those who walked out conducted themselves very well. There was no 'crazyness'. The situation for the most part was monitored from the building and from the portico," said Easton.

PROTEST WAS PERMITTED

"I was opposed to them going out but I permitted the protest," he noted.

Easton said the only infraction of the rules he was "forgiving" was the "leaving class without permission."

Easton said the students who walked out "were misguided."

"They had seen modelling behavior and wanted to do the same thing," he added. Easton would not elaborate on what the modelling behavior was and whether or not he was referring to the teachers' picketing activity.

Easton added that several students came in to request a plastic bag to pick up the trash left in front of the building.

Easton said the only previous student walkout he had heard of occurred when some students staged a walk out in 1981 to protest the closing of the metal shop.

Teachers began daily picketing Tuesday because two of the three members of the Regional School Committee bargaining subcommittee did not show up for the contract mediation session Oct. 29.

As a result the meeting was cancelled and the union is seeing if there are grounds for filing a third unfair labor practice charge against the school committee, said DeCoste.

UNFAIR LABOR PRACTICES

The union has filed two charges of unfair labor practices with the Dept. of Labor. One charge alleges the school committee negotiated in bad faith because their negotiating team did not support an agreement reached between them and the teachers' union in open session. And the other charge alleges that a union member was harassed about the union demands by a member of the school administration.

Another negotiation session was scheduled for Monday, Nov. 5.

Music Circus offers its defense

Th.. patrons arriving for the second show found they couldn't get into the parking lot.

"In the business we call it an act of God," he said.

Kasses assured neighbors that it was a circumstance that was highly unlikely to recur.

"The only reason we scheduled a weekday double show was because it was someone of the caliber of Diana Ross," he said. He pointed out that the theater only offered three double shows during the season, one of them a children's concert.

In previous seasons, a dozen double shows were scheduled. Kasses thinks it is unlikely the new season will have as many double shows as this year.

"An unfortunate reality of the business today is our c! ances of having double performances is an ever-c! sing window," Kasses said.

nts also complained about the volume of ois..

"The noise is a perplexing problem," Kasses said. "We are acutely aware we are in a residential neighborhood."

He blamed part of the problem on wind shifts that direct the sound out of the tent area. He said the theater attempted to reduce the volume by removing a number of speakers in the theater.

That solution proved to be unworkable. The audience received inferior sound quality and performers resorted to turning up the stage monitors they control to try and compensate.

"John Denver said he wouldn't come back because he could get enough of the quality of sound into the audience," Kasses explained.

Kasses said the theater was going to scrap the present sound system and try using a system with more speakers but lower volume. He said he hoped the new system would satisfy performers, audiences and neighbors.

Neighbor Janet McClure asked why the theater expanded the number of seats in the theater when there wasn't enough room in the parking lot to accomodate the additional patrons. Gjesteby complained that theater goers clog the parking lot at the Osgood School, the private swim center and the roadsides.

Kasses said two temporary trailers installed during construction work at the Music Circus took up valuable parking space. He also said the company hired to park cars would have to do a better job or they would be replaced.

Kasses said there was nothing he could do about Cohasset residents parking in the Osgood School parking lot. The only solution suggested was restricting parking at Osgood to users of the playpark and arranging to use Deer Hill School's parking lot for Music Circus overflows.

Kasses also said the Music Circus was going to experiment with afternoon matinees as a way to avoid complaints about programs extending to late into the evening. He also promised a few musical plays would be added to the program.

"We've gone out of our way to be good neighbors," he said.

Resident Diarmuid O'Connell objected to the for-profit attitude that resulted in "encroaching on the personal lives and homes around the Circus."

Kasses contradicted O'Connell's assertion that the Music Circus had "grown like Topsy."

According to Kasses, the number of shows has declined from 120 to 51.

"Next year the times will be even less," Kasses said. The Music Circus will not open until July 4 and will close Labor Day weekend.

Kasses and Cameron also stressed all the good the Music Circus has done for the community.

Cameron said the South Shore Playhouse Association, parent company of the Music Circus, has supported non-profit organizations throughout the South Shore.

According to Cameron, approximately $185,000 was given to 35 different non-profit organizations last year. Since 1982, donations in excess of $1 million have been made, more than half to Cohasset organizations.

Cameron emphasized his desire to be a good neighbor.

"Hopefully we can all rally together and come up with some cooperative rather than antagonistic solutions," he said.

Art center needs receipts

The South Shore Art Center is participating in the Star Share Program. Non-profit organizations may apply for certain dates during which participants bearing Star Share Identification Certificates who shop at any of the participating Star Market stores will have five percent of their total receipt donated to their organization. The South Shore Art Center is thrilled to announce their days in November are: Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 13, 14 and 15. Call or stop by the Art Center for your Identification Certificate, shop at Star Market on November 13, 14 or 15 and have five percent of your total grocery bill be donated to supporting the South Shore Art Center.

Deer Hill students flock to fun afterschool club

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When the final bell rings at Deer Hill School, not every student rushes for the exit. More than two dozen students find after hours at Deer Hill means good friends and great fun.

These are the students in kindergarten through sixth grade who are enrolled in the after school program. If the program is a rousing success, a good share of the credit must go to director Melissa Walker.

"The program is designed for fun," Walker said. "We want the kids to want to stay."

Watching the students burst into the room at the end of the school day, it's clear they want to be there.

The room they share with the resource center is bright and cheerful and full of the kinds of things children like to do.

Games fill one area and an abundance of art supplies lurks in another. Bean bag chairs invite children to nestle in for reading and whiffle balls, nerf footballs and other sporting goods beckon others to go out and play.

In short, no matter what the age level or interest, there's something for everyone.

"We usually do one or two structured projects — or children can choose free play," Walker explains.

The structured projects can be delightfully messy in the making. A shelf in the room holds plaster of Paris masks the students molded to their faces. When the masks dry, the students will decorate them to suit their favorite Halloween fancies.

Another project had the students making their own bean bags for games. Walker was pleasantly surprised to discover that the boys enjoyed and were good at sewing.

In addition to the after school room, students have access to the gym and courtyard for more rambunctious activities. The kitchen is available for organized cooking activities.

As if that isn't enough, Walker plans an assortment of field trips that use skills or explore areas the students are studying.

Recently students went apple-picking. After gathering their harvest, they made apple jelly, applesauce and apple dolls.

A field trip in the planning stages will take the children to the library. While they are there the students will play a variation on the old scavenger hunt that actually requires them to use the library skills they have been working on during school hours.

Group activities range from board games to field trips at an afterschool club at Deer Hill School. (Staff photo by John Stobierski)

Walker said most of the students like drawing best of all the activities. She is impressed by the artistic talent among the students.

Because the program is heavily weighted to boys — only three of the after school children are girls — the art work runs heavily to planes, aircraft carriers and Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles.

Walker wants to stretch their artistic imagination. One favorite exercise had them creating "rock creatures" using rocks, a glue gun and bits and pieces of craft materials.

One adventurous child created a punk rockfish with a Mohawk hairdo. Others found mice waiting to be created out of rocks, felt and yarn.

They also created a collage of a forest scene using items they found on a nature walk.

Walker has lots of ideas and hopes the program will continue to grow and expand.

And while the students are busy having fun, Walker sees children who aren't latchkey children going home to empty houses at the close of the school day because they are "too old" for day care.

Walker tells parents the program is wonderfully flexible for fifth and sixth graders. She can give them both the supervision and the freedom and independence they need.

Proof of how much the children like the program is that many children bring along a "friend" who is anxious to get in on some of the fun that happens at the end of the day.

Village pump replica planned for square

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The old town pump will no longer be a thing of memories only. This week selectmen approved plans to install a working replica of the pump that stood at the intersection of Elm and South Main streets from the early 1800s to 1928.

According to the latest plans, the pump will sit in a semicircular area paved with cobblestones. Work will begin in the spring.

Selectmen asked the fire chief, police chief and highway surveyor to comment on the plans before approving them.

As a result of their comments, the area to be occupied by the pump was reduced because of the difficulty of maneuvering firetrucks and snowplows through the congested area.

Police Chief Joseph Kealey said he still believed it was necessary to make Elm Street one-way or eliminate right turns onto Elm Street by northbound vehicles on Main Street. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said the board would take action on the proposal if Kealey's fears were born out by experience.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts asked who would be responsible for repairs if the pump was vandalized.

Jacqueline Dormitzer, who heads up the project for the Village Renaissance, said the group hopes to establish a maintenance fund to cover repairs.

Resident Phyllis Leslie donated money for the purchase of materials for the project. Money leftover from her donation will form the seed money for the maintenance fund.

Most of the labor associated with the project will be donated as well.

Local architect James Sandell and his firm, Carr, Lynch, Hack and Sandell, did the final design work. Preliminary plans were drafted by Ben Blake.

Ralph Dormitzer is doing the engineering drawings.

Cobblestones will be installed by mason Kevin Sargent and plumber Bob Leonard will make the necessary plumbing connections for free.

Woodworker Charlie Butman Jr. volunteered to make the wooden pump cover.

Harold Litchfield and the highway department will excavate the site and the water department will connect the pump to the water supply.

Dormitzer said she hoped the pump would be used "by the young and the young-at-heart."

Selectmen debate 'regular' mooring regulations

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen tabled a request to approve a new harbor regulation to clarify what it means to be "regularly" moored in Cohasset harbor. Selectmen will put the issue on an upcoming agenda.

Town counsel Richard Henderson advised selectmen that approving the regulation would result in two bodies of law with different provisions.

"That is exactly the problem that happened before," he said. "I wouldn't approve this."

Henderson claimed the town could eliminate 90 percent of the litigation costs if the town counsel approved bylaws before they are voted on by selectmen or town meeting.

The regulation was an attempt to deal with a situation that arose this summer. Harbor committee chairman John Pfaffman, Executive Secretary Greg Doyon and Harbormaster Irv Gadow drafted the regulation that was adopted by the Harbor Committee.

The proposed regulation defined "regularly" to mean a boat habitually moored, docked of situated in Cohasset harbor for at least 30 days the previous summer season and on which an excise tax had been paid to Cohasset. Owners who planned to be away from the harbor for more than seven days would be required to notify the harbormaster of their plans.

Several selectmen were sympathetic to the intentions of the regulation.

"It says if you want to have a mooring, you ought to use it," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "I don't think 30 days is unreasonable."

Pfaffman said the Harbor Committee hears from people who have been on the waiting list for 12 years and are upset that there are people with moorings who never use them.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle disagreed.

"If a person pays for his mooring," Laugelle said, "he should be able to come and go as he pleases. I think we're taking a person's constitutional rights away from him."

"This has to be settled once and for all," Selectman Jane Goedecke said.

Selectmen will gather all interested parties to review the harbor regulations and come up with a fair solution.

In other business, selectmen:

• Granted permission for the Montessori School fair to offer pony rides along the concrete walkway at Constitution Park Nov. 17 from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

• Agreed to request a traffic survey of Sohier Street from the Norfolk County engineer in response to a request for speed limit signs on the street.

• Accepted the resignation of William J. Good from the Housing Partnership Committee with "deep regret" and appointed Mary Gallagher to the Computer Study Committee.

Chamber auction Nov. 10

The Cohasset Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual fund raising auction on Saturday, Nov. 10, at the South Shore Art Center. The evening will begin with a light supper, coffee, and dessert at 6:30 p.m., followed by the auction at 7:30 p.m.

Dan Leahy of Kimball's, master of ceremonies for the evening, will be joined by a host of area business people serving as guest auctioneers, and auction coordinator Jerry Cirone of Cohasset Jewelers and his committee have scoured the community to provide items for every taste, budget and interest.

For more information please call the Cohasset Chamber of Commerce at 383-1010. The auction and dinner is open to everyone, and there is no charge to attend. And remember, anyone bringing a blue sales slip from the Stop & Shop, to be donated to the Apples for Students program, will receive a free door prize ticket.

❑ The Cohasset VFW Post 9169 is sponsoring a National Scholarship Award. It is conducted each year during the fall school term and gives high school students an opportunity to win many scholarships and awards while expressing their opinion on America. To enter a student writes then records a three to five minute script covering the years assigned patriotic theme (Democracy-The Vanguard of Freedom). Any 10th, 11th or 12th grader can enter, if you didn't receive a brochure explaining all about the scholarship award, contact Pat Keenhan at the High School. First prize is $18,000, second is $13,000, third is $9,000, fourth is $5,500, fifth is $4,000, sixth is $3,000, seventh is $2,000, eighth is $1,500, ninth is $1,000, tenth is $1,000 and eleventh and twelfth is $1,000. Get all of the facts today!

❑ Senior Caitlin Staunton of Cohasset, scored two goals and added an assist to lead the Dartmouth women's soccer team to a 3-0 victory over Columbia University on October 6.

Staunton opened the scoring, her first of the season, just 4:49 into the game on an assist from Sarah Pettus of Southboro, Mass., then reversed roles with Pettus 40 seconds later. She added her second goal with just over ten minutes remaining in the game.

On October 4 Staunton notched her first point of the season, assisting on the goal that sent Dartmouth on its way to a 1-0 win over nationally-ranked University of Massachusetts. It was Dartmouth's first-ever win over UMass in women's soccer.

The Dartmouth women's soccer team is currently 4-3, 1-1 in the Ivy League. They hope to continue their winning streak when they host Yale University on October 13.

Staunton is a former two-sport captain at Cohasset High School, and was a former Massachusetts State Select player.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Staunton of Cohasset.

❑ Rob Davenport is also making a name for himself in the world of college sports. Rob attends Ripon College in Ripon Wisconsin and plays for the football team. The opening game he had six tackles. We'll bet that with each game he got better.

❑ We hear that Babe Trott is recovering nicely from her recent hip surgery.

❑ We have a celebrity in our midst! Captain Arthur W. Johnson, class of '36, was recently selected by the Athletic Hall of Fame at the U.S. Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.

Captain Johnson was a three-sport athlete during his cadet days, competing in football, swimming, and baseball, but it was football where he really distinguished himself. He was a four-year starter for the Bears and a captain his senior year. He did not miss a game during the four years and he rarely missed a play as he played on both the offensive and defensive team. The induction into the Athletic Hall of Fame took place during the Homecoming weekend Early Bird Buffet dinner at the Officers Club on Friday evening Oct. 5. Congratulations to Captain Johnson.

❑ Congratulations go to Donna Harrington, who was named to the Dean's List at the Duxbury Campus of Fischer College for the July 1990 Academic Term.

❑ Lots of people are hoping that the Bates Building will indeed be a Youth Center. Sure is a nice idea for our teens . . . it would seem that there are never enough places to go for them. Wonder if they could make it a moviehouse sort of place . . . neat idea that was offered by a reader! Bet lots of Moms would like that, no rides involved!!

❑ Katherine Migliaccio's nickname might well be "wonder woman," she is incredible. On Thursday, October 25 she had 12 residents from the Ripley Road Nursing Home, as well as the activity director, Karen Mastico and volunteer, Corrinne Fish to her home for lunch. She served them spaghetti and meatballs, salad, rolls and hot fudge sundaes. She made the spaghetti sauce and chocolate sauce from scratch. Four of the guests were Cohasset residents: Ruth Wheelwright, Mary Glines, Priscilla Thompson and Irene Doyle. They all had a nice time catching up. Katherine and Ruth go back 50 years.

Mrs. Migliaccio worked at the nursing home for over thirty years, and she retired when she was 80 years old, almost 4 years ago. She still lives on North Main Street and does her best to keep active, especially considering the fact that her husband and most friends are gone. She has flowers for all seasons in her garden, does her own shopping and has many family dinners. To coin a phrase made popular by the kids, you are awesome.

❑ Received two news items from the Cohasset Dramatic Club this week. The Club is opening its 70th season, and it will be back at the Town Hall (yeah!). They are opening their season November 16-18 at the Town Hall with Robert Anderson's sensitive play, "Silent Night, Lonely Night," a play that takes place in a New England colonial inn on Christmas Eve. Peggy Corrigan of Cohasset stars as Katherine.

In the supporting cast is Joe Whelan of Cohasset. It is produced by Rosemary Scott and Gayl Varallo of Cohasset. The Cohasset Dramatic Club presents its Sunday matinee free to Senior citizens 60 and over. Tickets may be purchased at Cohasset Hardware or at the door.

❑ Another piece of news from the Dramatic Club is their Saturday morning acting classes. Club members Darcy Pratt and Peggy Corrigan are currently teaching children's dramatics at the Cohasset High School through December 8. Registration is through John Worley, Cohasset Recreation Department. This is the second successful year for the acting workshops for children. Darcy, a graduate from B.U. in Communications, recently directed five children's productions at the summer theatre camp in New York State. Call Worley at 383-6791 for information.

❑ Congratulations to David Foster, who was recently named to the Dean's List at Newbury College, a two-year college accredited by New England Association of Schools and Colleges and offers over twenty degree programs at many convenient locations throughout eastern Mass.

❑ If you have been looking for the Sun Shack, the surf skate board, clothing store that used to be on Rte. 3A, look no more. Christopher Kulturides has relocated his store, it is in the Quincy Fair Mall (formerly the Sears Building). So, your favorite store for the special one on your Christmas list is still around, just ask Chris for some ideas and he will be happy to help you.

❑ Ann Pompeo reports that the DAR is involved in a project that we can all help with. They have a list of

Good riddance

The best part of the state election results was that with the final figures flashing on TV screens, the whole collection of candidates packed up their media campaigns.

This year has been a particularly negative year for the politicians who seemed to know all the reasons why their opponents were unacceptable.

It would have been a better use of their time and advertising dollars if they'd thought about how to fix the mess of a state budget, or how to repair the public trust.

There are some other problems we would like to see solved. But our hope isn't high. After all the negative campaigning didn't come from one side of the race.

Some candidates were definitely worse than others. But they all politicians with opposition seemed to be coming from a fairly negative place.

Early Wednesday morning, the new senator-elect from the district, Bob Hedlund, said he never meant to personnally attack his oppoent Bob Ambler.

"I was attacking the system he was part of for 26 years, not him," Hedlund said. The voters must have agreed with Hedlund's assessment of the political system.

Many voters had this same critical attitude. Some people said the sky would fall if Question 3 passed. Others said taxes would continue to skyrocket if Question 3 failed. No one knows what will really happen now that we have the same taxes and some new politicians.

Nobody talked much about the fact that the broadcast media would be financially hurt by passage of Question 6.

We guess all this negativism is just a sign of where our society happens to be today. It seems we're stuck in a black hole with little to be grateful for and less to look forward to.

Hey, the political ads aren't cluttering up the TV screen anymore. That's something to be thankful for.

New leaders have been given a mandate to try to improve conditions.

Michael and Kitty Dukakis are probably getting ready to sell more books next year. Maybe they can collaborate on one about the need to face financial realities.

The new governor is working to get his transition team in place in time for the New Year. His opponent is probably wondering whether he might have won if he'd kept his opinions to himself.

Bob Ambler is packing to move — maybe to Florida.

The old order is indeed changing, yielding place to new.

Now it's time we changed our attitude — became positive about this state, about this decade, about this economy.

Maybe it isn't the best of times. But it sure isn't the worst of times.

We live in a society that cares about people, that cares about freedom, that promotes quality education of our children, that values democracy and responsibility.

We have quite a bit to be positive about. And we have the ability to put a stop to the negativity that has seeped into our atmosphere.

It's time to do just that.

Fire department thanked

To the Editor:

On several occasions we have required the services of the Cohasset Ambulance. Each time we were confident and impressed with the calm and professional manner in which they performed their job. On the most recent occasion we required their help twice in one day and they were compassionate, quick and efficient. My family, as well as all families in Cohasset is privileged to have such an outstanding team standing by to assist us at a time we are frightened and desperate.

Sincerely,
The Proodians

Earth Day ideas linger - so does the dedication

By John K. McNabb, Jr. and Simon McNabb
Special to the Mariner

On April 22, the 20th anniversary of the first Earth Day, over 200,000 people gathered at the Hatch Shell in Boston to dedicate themselves to environmental protection. All across Massachusetts, thousands of others took part in local cleanups and ceremonies to help save the Earth.

Public opinion polls have consistently shown that Americans strongly support environmental protection. The 1990s promise to be the "decade of the environment" because of a worldwide renewal of environmental consciousness. After Earth Day, we seemed to be on the verge of an explosion of environmental activism.

Just in time, it would seem. The problems are daunting, and daily fill the headlines. New problems accumulate even before we can get a handle on the old ones, and overwhelm government and industry. The enormous costs of environmental protection have to be weighed against the even bigger cost of doing nothing, and the risk of poisoning the planet through inaction or ignorance.

These problems include global warming, which is changing the climate of the entire planet; depletion of the ozone layer, which will increase skin cancers and kill phytoplankton which are the basis for the aquatic food chain; hazardous waste and solid waste, which poison drinking water supplies; radioactive waste, which is deadly for centuries; water pollution, which makes rivers and lakes unfishable, undrinkable, and unswimmable; and smog, which injures our lungs, makes our eyes water, and darkens the sky. The list goes on.

The central message of Earth Day, 1990, was for people to make a personal commitment to protect the environment. Over 300,000 Massachusetts residents signed the Earth Day "pledge card," which called for individual action to save the Earth.

This pledge card says, among other things, that we will "pledge to vote and support those candidates who demonstrate an abiding concern for the environment." To implement that pledge, and to give Earth Day some lasting meaning, we should all place an environmental spotlight on all candidates running for election this fall.

Most environmental problems are basically political problems, not technological problems. Detroit could be building clean, fuel efficient cars which get over 50 miles per gallon if Congress told them to. The problem of acid rain could have been solved ten years ago if the government had mandated low sulpher coal and better scrubbers on smokestacks across the US.

Politics is, at best, the art of helping people to work together to solve their common problems. Unfortunately, in Massachusetts we are seeing an increased public disillusionment with government and elected officials, which exacerbates a decades-old trend of reduced public participation in elections and the political process. Environmental activists must buck this trend.

In Massachusetts, we could have tougher environmental laws, cleaner air, cleaner water, cleaner rivers, lakes, and ponds, stronger watershed protection, increased recycling, and safer waste disposal. We could have the better quality of life which comes from a clean environment and the preservation of natural resources.

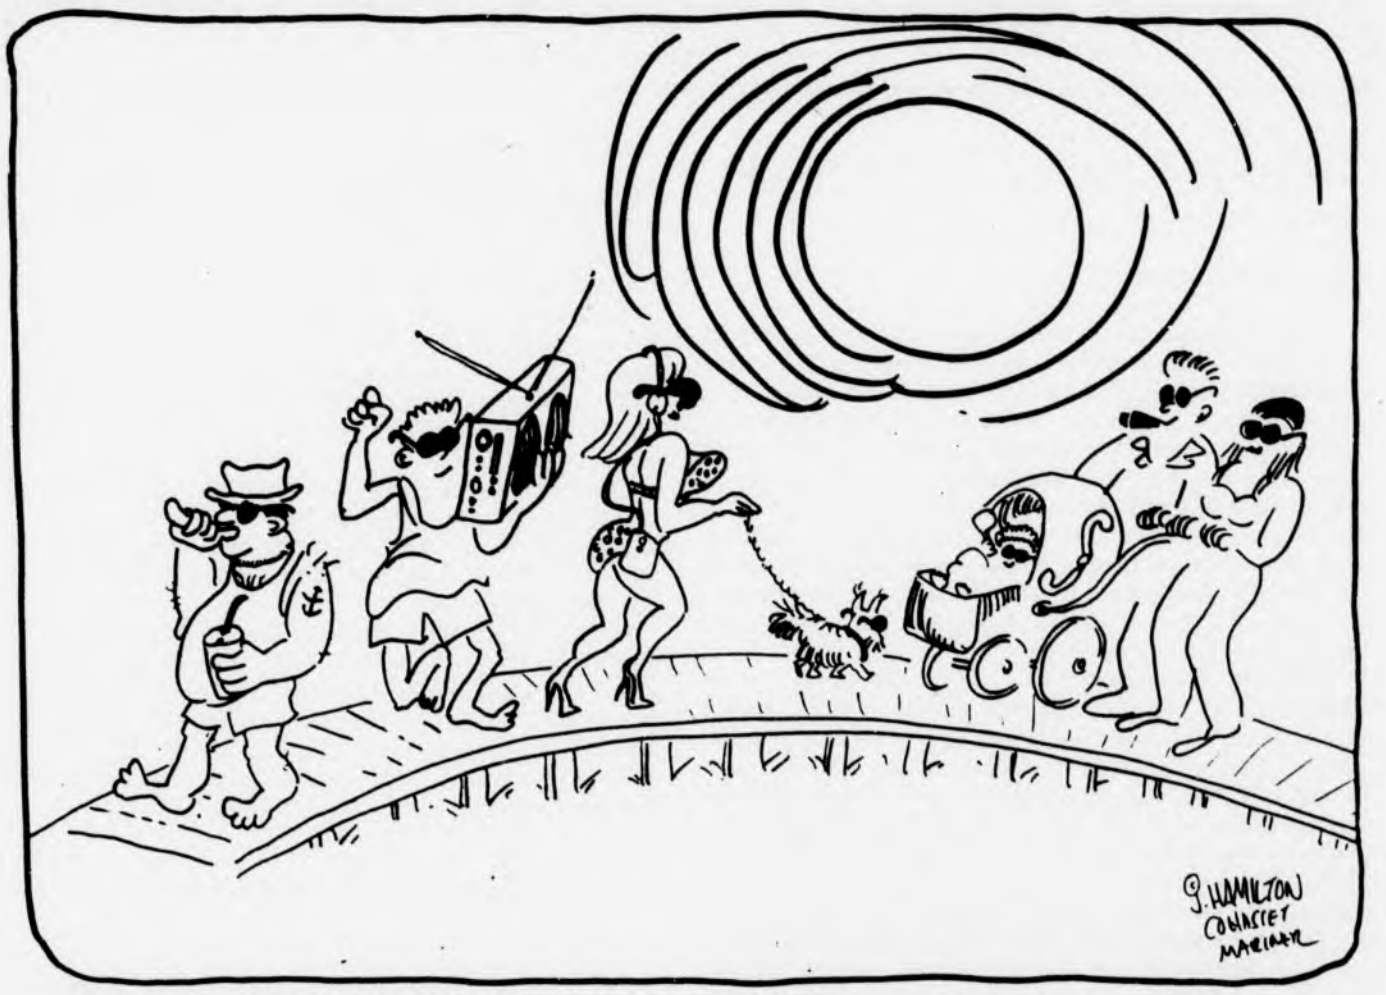
We could have a cleaner environment, that is, if the state legislature passes more good environmental laws, and appropriates sufficient funds to implement them. We could have a cleaner environment if there are more pro-environmental legislators to pass those laws. We can get a better legislature if we elect more pro-environmental legislators, and if more people participate in the process, if for no other reason than to help save the Earth.

Circumstances dictate that to protect the environment, we must all exercise the responsibilities of citizenship — to vote and to participate in the political process. The urgent need to solve the many serious and vital environmental problems mandates that we exercise environmental citizenship — that we cast an informed vote based on knowledge of environmental issues and the environmental positions of those who would represent us.

Overall, Massachusetts legislators do have a good environmental record. They have passed many major environmental laws in the past decade, dealing with wetlands protection, hazardous waste cleanups, acid rain, open space protection, solid waste management, water pollution control, and water supply protection. Last year they passed two landmark bills — the sewage construction revolving fund bill and the toxic use reduction bill — which, if funded adequately, will have a lasting positive effect.

However, there are still many environmental problems to be dealt with in this state, and many new environmental laws which still need to be adopted. We need to be assured that the legislature will continue to support a clean environment, and will adopt and fund the environmental laws which we need.

Massachusetts voters will have a timely opportunity at the State Election on Nov. 6 to help protect the Massachusetts environment. This fall, the first state elections following Earth Day, is a golden opportunity to send a clear message to politicians that the environment is an issue which cannot be ignored.



Do something. Cast an informed environmental vote. Make all candidates for office — for State Representative and State Senator especially — accountable to you for their environmental position. Make sure the environment is an issue in the race. Ask for their environmental record, and demand specifics. Insist on cutting through the rhetoric — everyone wants to sound like an environmentalist these days.

Look for endorsements, or the lack thereof, from recognized environmental groups such as the Sierra Club, Clean Water Action, and the League of Environmental Voters. Request their pledge to support strong environmental laws. Tell candidates you will base your vote on their environmental position.

Our electoral process — and your participation in it — can either help protect the environment, or help despoil it. Remember that "not to decide is to decide." If you don't go out and vote, you are leaving the decision to those who do. Non-participation can have a high cost. Apathy is itself an environmental threat.

If we all individually exercise our right to vote, if we all practice environmental citizenship, and if we put a bright environmental spotlight on legislative candidates, we can together help ensure an environmental legislature and a cleaner environment. By participating in the process as an environmental citizen, we can help make our celebration of Earth Day mean something tangible both at the State House and in our everyday lives.

Skippers suffer heartbreak

By John Brister

Last week, the Cohasset Skippers soccer team suffered two heartbreaking losses. First, on Monday, Oct. 29, they played in the league championship game against Rockland. Unlike Cohasset's previous confrontation with Rockland, (a 7-01 Cohasset loss) this game stayed close from start to finish. In fact, no team scored until the final ten minutes, when Rockland finally broke down the Skippers' defense and scored the only goal of the game. Throughout the course of the game, many scoring opportunities presented themselves to Cohasset, but the team simply could not capitalize.

Then, on Thursday, Nov. 1, Cohasset met Dover-Sherborne at home in the first round of the playoffs. This game, like the Rockland game, was extremely close. However, with the help of an outstanding Dover-Sherborne goal-keeper, the visiting team defeated Cohasset 1-0. After the first two regulation periods, the game remained scoreless, whereupon a series of overtime periods began. During the first two six-minute overtimes, still no team could succeed in reaching its opponent's net. At this point, two five-minute sudden death overtimes were played, and in the second of these, Dover-Sherborne finally put the ball in the back of Cohasset's net. Dover-Sherborne had a breakaway, forcing Cohasset keeper Ollie Nouveaux to come out. The forward ripped a shot, but Nouveaux made a diving save, preventing the score, but could not hold on to the ball, and another attacking Dover-Sherborne forward recovered the rebound, and made the game-winning goal.

The Cohasset soccer team's season ended with a 12-4-1 record, and they ranked second in their league.

Looking ahead, next year's team will undoubtedly miss the ten graduating seniors on the team, but the J.V. team, which went undefeated this season, will most definitely be a source of talented players of future teams.

Despite a four-point deficit, Cohasset did not give up, and pumped up its own offense. Daniell Shaughnessy, following a shot on net, passed the rebound to Sarah Deveney, who drilled another shot for the score. This goal brought new life to the Cohasset team, who, in the next three minutes, was able to score again when Bridget Corkery's shot on net sneaked by the Medway goalie, closing the gap to two. In the final nine minutes of the game, Cohasset rallied, putting the pressure on the Medway defense, but was not able to convert any scoring opportunities.

Coach Boswick designated sweeper Karyn Murray as all-star of the game, whose playing intensity was so high that, in the final minutes of the game, she was moved to forward where she added to the offensive pressure.

Even though Cohasset made an early first round exit from the play-offs, Coach Boswick is pleased with the team's 5-3-7 record, and looks forward to next year's season. Though the team will miss its five graduating seniors, there are many prospective younger varsity and junior varsity players who will be sure to shine in the years to come.

Fall soccer is extended

Fall Soccer Programs will extend one more week than scheduled in order to make-up the cancellation of Saturday, Oct. 13, games and clinics. On Nov. 10, Soccer League teams will play the games as scheduled for 10-13-90.

Basketball League and Clinic information for registration will be forthcoming very shortly in all local news media.

Registrations will be accepted on an on-going basis for Furniture Repair/Restoration/Refinishing Classes and Aerobic Exercise Classes by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at: 383-6791.

Limited registrations will continue for one more week for Drama Workshop for ages 6 to 10, but registrations for Drama Workshop for ages 11 through 17, will continue for the next month, as that class is not scheduled to commence until January. Please call Cohasset Recreation for details and/or registration.

Open Gym for basketball at CHS will continue from 6:30 to 9 p.m., on Thursdays until Nov. 15, for girls and boys, grades 7 to 12. The program is free and no pre-registration is necessary.

Dog Obedience Training Classes and Indoor Golf Lessons will begin new sessions during January. Current Dog Obedience Classes are full, and scheduled to terminate in early December. Registrations will be announced during late December.

Blue Hills Ski Lessons will be held once again this January, meeting on Thursday afternoons, beginning Jan. 3, continuing five weeks, through Jan. 31, however, registrations will be held during mid-November, and further details for registrations will be announced shortly. Ski lessons are for boys and girls, age 7 and over and all levels of instruction are offered. Bus transportation to and from Blue Hills will be provided.

The Cohasset Recreation Department's Ski Trip Program will begin on Sunday, Dec. 16, with a trip to Loon Mt. N.H. Details for registration for this trip will be announced during early November and early registrations are advised as the bus can fill quickly.

A number of day ski trips will be conducted again this winter and more detailed information regarding all trips will be made available as soon as prices for the season can be confirmed.

Sports Festival and Afterschool Games/Sports Programs are being planned for operation this winter and details will be made available in the near future regarding a variety of after school programs for grades K through 6.

For further details on these, or any other recreation department program, please call the Cohasset Recreation Department at 383-6791.

Field hockey is eliminated

By John Brister

On Thursday, Nov. 1, Medway field hockey defeated Cohasset 4-2, eliminating Cohasset from the South Shore Tournament and putting an end to their 1990 season. Despite the disappointing score, the game was hard-fought, and suspenseful until the final whistle.

Medway scored the first goal in the first half when the Medway offense reacted quickly to a rebound off goalie Merrie Hansen and fired the ball on net to make the final score of the first half 1-0. In the second half, Medway again came on strong, extending its lead to 3-0. Then Merrie Hansen suffered a blow to the knee, and when it began to swell, coach Debby Boswick brought in J.V. goalie Catherine Andrews. Medway again showed the strength of its offense, its quick forward wings setting up another goal making the score 4-0.

The Cohasset Skippers give chase as the ball is passed into their territory.

VFW script contest open

High school students interested in competing for national Voice of Democracy scholarships sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars should contact social studies Chairman Patricia Keenan.

Participants must write and record a three- to five-minute script on "Democracy — the Vanguard of Freedom." Tapes will be judged on delivery, originality and content. The deadline is mid-November.

The top national prize is an $18,000 scholarship, with 10 other national scholarships that total $60,000. Also available are $1.4 million worth of local and district scholarships, awards and trips.

Tracy Ciciotte returns

Miss Tracy Ciciotte is a former student at Deer Hill. She even had our teacher Mr. Deakin!! Before she was an I.M.S. and computer teacher at Deer Hill School, she was a substitute at the Cohasset High School. Before that she was a student at Green Mountain College in Vermont. Her major was education. She wanted to be a teacher and Miss Ciciotte certainly succeeded. Miss Ciciotte lives in Cohasset and also grew up in Cohasset.

Arthur Dove's art studied

The "Artist of the Month" program at Deer Hill School began in October. Arthur Dove, the first abstract painter in the United States, was the artist for the month.

The "Artist of the Month" program attempts to familiarize students with the life and works of various artists. The students must then create a composition of their own which imitates the style of the artist they are studying. Throughout the school year, the students work with a variety of media, not necessarily the one chosen by the artist.

In October, each student, using colored tissue paper and starch, created a collage of autumn leaves. Although Arthur Dove used paint, his experimental style often resembled a collage.

Each Deer Hill class has a representative sampling of the art created this month on display in the corridors. Thank you to all the volunteers who helped with the October program.

In November we will be highlighting Japanese wood block prints. This art form was chosen to tie in with the special exhibit that is currently at the Museum of Fine Arts. The exhibit is called "Courtly Splendor; Twelve Centuries of Treasures from Japan" and can be viewed now through November 25.

'Silent Night, Lonely Night'

Having leased clubhouse space at Stagecoach Way for two years, the 70-year-old Cohasset Dramatic Club is moving back to Town Hall November 16-18 (2 p.m. - 18th, 8 p.m. - 16 and 17) with Robert Anderson's sensitive "Silent Night, Lonely Night", drama that takes place in a New England Colonial Inn on Christmas Eve.

Robert Anderson amazed Broadway audiences with his searching play of hidden homosexuality in "Tea and Sympathy", and with "Silent Night, Lonely Night" he examines marital infidelity and the stresses that can lure mature marrieds.

Peggy Corrigan of Cohasset stars as Katherine and Richard Frazier of Holbrook stars as John, the two leads through whose romantic encounter Anderson compares mature and idealistic loves.

In the supporting case: Joe Whelan of Cohasset, Katie Spinzola and Betty Miessner of Scituate, and Andrew Clarke of Norwell as the teen-age son. Directed by Harry Heineman of Scituate. Produced by Rosemary Scott and Gayl Varallo, Cohasset.

Cohasset Dramatic Club presents its Sunday matinee free to senior citizens 60 and over. Tickets may be purchased at Cohasset Hardware or at the door. They are $6, $5 for children and seniors.

A Safe and Easy Way to Meet New Friends

Colleen Lucas produces art

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Colleen Lucas

Most residents probably don't know her, but Colleen Lucas created a place they long to go.

The diminutive art teacher at Cohasset's junior/senior high school created the garden mural on the wall of Tedeschi's. It's a sight that beckons you in and it typifies her creative spirit.

The art rooms at the high school are like that mural. You just want to spend the whole day walking around looking at things. But Lucas would be happier to see people creating, not just looking.

"I don't want them to just sit back and be an audience," she said about her students. So Lucas constantly puts projects and ideas in front of them.

Her art room is definitely full of things in process.

"It's a little bit of chaos," she apologizes. Then quickly adds, "I want them to make problems and then solve them."

Pen and ink studies and charcoal sketches cover the walls. Buckets full of markers and brushes wait for inspiration to strike. Even the chairs are unique creations.

One recent assignment called on students to create a self-portrait that shows who they are, not what they look like. The possibilities for interpretation are endless.

Lucas encourages her students to experiment, to try new things and to express themselves.

"I only have three rules in the art room. You have to be nice to each other, you can't throw things and you have to clean up your own mess."

Lucas thinks the rules make her room a safe place to be and a safe place to create. Students know no one will rank on their work and their work won't get wrecked.

As a result, Cohasset kids produce some remarkable artwork.

Lucas is too modest to say it, but she serves as a role model for the students. In addition to her busy life as teacher, she is an accomplished and award-winning artist. Recently she took two first prizes in the South Shore Art Center's Blue Ribbon Exhibition. Lucas won in the graphics and drawing/pastel categories.

"My own artwork is very, very important to me," she said.

When Lucas first began teaching, her artwork suffered.

"I couldn't find the time or energy," she said. "Then I realized you just do it. You find the time."

Although she finds the political and confrontational themes prevalent in much of today's artwork very exciting and interesting, her own work is very different.

"I seem to always go back to the personal, intimate interiors of my home," Lucas said. "I do a lot with relationships, family."

Lucas' artwork is a window into her world. Although she experiments with color and media, the images are of corners of her house, objects that she loves. In many ways, her art is like a talisman.

"I want to create a warm, positive feeling," she explained. "The world is so filled with things that are negative."

In place of the negative, she tries to create a place where there is "no war, no politicians. It's safe, filled with memories and beautiful."

She finds teaching nurtures her artwork.

"They inspire me," she said. "They have great ideas."

It's clear that Lucas loves her work and her students. A steady stream of students and colleagues flows through the art room. They ask questions, borrow books and try their ideas out in paint, paper and clay.

One of her favorite things to do is create interdisciplinary studies. Students don't just "get art" from Lucas. They get art and music from Lucas and Colleen Foley. Or art and literature.

Art and food is another nice combination.

"I'm working on a multi-cultural project," Lucas said. "But I want it to be more than a one-shot deal."

She calls her project the Culture Vulture Club. Participants do hands-on projects, visit museums, see theater and dance productions and try exotic new foods. The idea is to expose them to the sights, sounds, smell and taste of the wider world in the hope that it will create an insatiable appetite to see and know and do more.

"The goal is to make it so they won't need me any more," she explained.

Although they may not need her, one suspects they will always want to be around someone who knows them so well and encourages them to reach out for excellence.

The small, intimate world Lucas creates in her artwork is really just an image of the place she's created in her students' lives.

Colleen Lucas' award-winning pieces are on exhibit at the South Shore Art Center, 119 Ripley Road, through Nov. 10. For information about gallery hours, call 383-9548.

Joel Carpenter inspires the sale of cards

"There are some studies that show it might be possible to go to school six months after a transplant operation. But it takes a year for the system to build back up. With all the infection in the winter, his father and I aren't red hot about sending him back then," Marita said. "He won't be anywhere near up to par by then."

In the past two weeks the family has had a chance to spend quite a bit of time together. Joel, the father, just took his two-week vacation. He is a lawyer with the Boston law firm of Sullivan and Worcester.

The family spent the time at home, working on the house and yard, resting, just being together.

"We couldn't go anywhere this year. We couldn't travel. We couldn't even take day trips because Joel can't be near people," Marita said as her three children returned home with their father.

They had driven to Cohasset Village to pick up Robbie, who turns 5 in January, after nursery school.

Kate, who will be three in January, and Robbie had a chance to watch a videotape of "Americas Funniest Home Videos" while Joel got ready to head off for Boston and his dose of gammaglobin with his father.

Kate provided the bone marrow for Joel's transplant.

"She was a perfect match," Marita said. "We didn't think about it's effect on her until afterwards."

The harvesting of bone marrow requires a special genetic match. Kate was the only family member with the match. The procedure involved taking eight ounces of her marrow. The marrow was taken by asperating (or piercing) the child through her back and hips 100 times.

"She was very sore," Marita said, adding that there were no after effects for Kate beyond the soreness.

The doctors say Joel has a 50-50 chance he can avoid another remission.

"He's resilient. He's very strong. He's the one that gets us through it. When we told him he'd lost his eye he said, 'At least it's not both eyes,' " Marita said.

'Queen of the Back Bay' benefits CCOA

The life of a uniquely independent, single-minded, confident woman of the late 19th Century — Isabella Stewart Gardner — will be presented by the Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging on Sunday, Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. at the Cohasset High School auditorium.

In the one-woman show, "Queen of Back Bay," Robin Lane portrays Gardner, her palace, and her times. Living in an era when women were expected to submissively follow their husbands, Gardner fulfilled her dream of providing an American museum filled with the artistic wonders of the world. Using projected visuals, "Queen of Back Bay" transports its audiences all over the globe.

"Queen of Back Bay" is an original production, written and performed by Lane, a versatile actress who has performed in comedy and drama in theatres, colleges, and nightclubs throughout the United States. Her re-creation of the witty, eccentric grande dame who successfully built a palace in Boston is delightful entertainment for all audiences.

The Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging will present "Queen of Back Bay" on Nov. 18 as a fundraising activity that will benefit the Council and its programs and services to senior citizens through the Cohasset Senior Center. A tax deductible donation of $10 is requested for each ticket, and they are available in advance through the Senior Center (383-9112) and Karin Bartow (383-572), or at the door.

Refreshments will be available during two short intermissions during the one hour-and-forty-five minute performance. The Senior Shuttle will operate for this show; contact the Senior Center for transportation reservations.

Card sales benefit cancer program

Marita Carpenter will be selling holiday greeting cards to benefit the pediatric cancer program at Floating Hospital on Nov. 17 at Super Stop & Shop from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Below are samples of the cards Marita Carpenter is selling for the Floating Hospital Children's Cancer Center. The cards were designed by patients at the hospital.

Joel and Marita Carpenter

On the opposite page are photos of Joel Carpenter's homecoming last summer after a bone marrow transplant. The party was arranged by Peggy Lewi, one of the family's neighbors.

Marita Carpenter is selling Christmas cards to benefit a program to deal with the emotional side of cancer.

The Families for the Floating Children's Cancer Center hope to raise $75,000 for a series of programs at the Boston hospital which is the peditaric unitt connected with New England Medical Center.

Parents whose children have been treated at Floating have organized to raise money to keep hospital programs they value in operation. Michael Mroz, who heads up the committee, said parents involved come from Scituate, Marshfield and Hingham.

Marita will be at the Super Stop and Shop on Route 3A in Cohasset on Saturday, Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Christmas cards are also being sold at Sea 'N Cheese and Cohasset Jewelers. Marita is looking for more locations for the cards.

She can be reached at 383-2914 for those interested in purchasing the cards.

The cards are aimed at keeping what are called the "human touch" part of services at the hospital.

The cards were designed by children who are cancer patients at the Floating Hospital in Boston. The simple, moving cards are sold 24 to a box for $15.

Money from the card drive will be used for programs the hospital could not offer without donations, according to Kate Nixon, spokeswoman for Floating Hospital.

The "human touch" programs provide psychological help for the brothers and sisters of patients at the hospital, child life specialists — who help the young patients keep their minds busy while undergoing treatment, play space and the like.

The cost of these programs are not covered by insurance or government funding.

He's spent the past three years battling leukemia. After he was given lethal doses of chemotherapy and radiation, his two-year-old sister donated the bone marrow he needed to go on living.

Monday as he headed for the hospital and another six-hour session receiving gammaglobin, Joel casually talked about wrestling with the IV (intravenous needle).

"I want to break it in two," he said.

Hedlund takes senate seat from Ambler

didates who ran for the senate seat that was vacated by William Golden when he chose to run for lieutenant governor, a bid that would prove unsuccessful.

Hedlund narrowly defeated challengers Christy Mihos and Donald Hussey in a close race that was only decided after Mihos called for a recount. The recount only served to strengthen Hedlund's lead to a stronger, but still slim 39 votes.

Many felt that Hedlund had little chance against Ambler who has been in public service since his rival was a young boy. Campaign donations also served to show Hedlund at a disadvantage; Ambler spent $20,000 in the primary, as opposed to Hedlund's $27,000.

Hedlund, however, appeared to be undaunted by the disparity, and centered his campaign on the state's anti-incumbent mood, accusing Ambler of being entrenched in the political system.

At times Hedlund was accused of running a negative campaign. He accused Ambler on "flip-flopping on such issues as abortion and the Old Colony restoration.

In his victory speech Hedlund praised Ambler's campaign and apologized for any personal insult he may have caused.

"He ran a very strong race," he said of his opponent. "I hope he realizes many of the things I said were not meant personally.

"He was an honorable man, and a good man, but it was the system I had fault with. It was really a campaign against the system and not against the individual.

He said his campaign's shoestring budget was not the issue many thought it would be.

He said what he and his volunteers lacked in funds they "offset with hard work" getting the "most bang for the buck."

"That's the way the state government should be run," he added.

He said he prepared for Tuesday's hectic pace by "getting a good night's sleep on Monday night."

The rest was short-lived, however.

"Tuesday morning I got a call on my answering machine and I could hear 'get the hell out of bed and start acting like a candidate' so I got up and hit almost every polling place and visited every town in the district."

He said his first priority upon taking office is to "bring the economic madness under control at the state house."

Hedlund told the celebratory crowd that he would live up to campaign pledges to start the ball rolling on rules reforms at the house and to investigate campaign finance regulations. He also vowed to either reform or eliminate the pension system for elected officers.

He restated his pledge not to be a campaign politician. "I campaigned on that issue and I won't serve more than four terms, if I decide to run for two terms and I am elected," he said.

Hedlund said that even though Question 3 did not pass, it should still have an impact on the legislature. He suggested that savings could be made by consolidating the police force, eliminating the legislative research bureau and voting against "the door holders."

He said the bottom line is that the state either has to have "more taxes or more cuts" and that it "cannot have it both ways."

In his concession speech Ambler blamed his defeat on a "sea of voter anger."

"It's tough to lose," he said, "but I understand I am also a victim of the times. Absolutely no sour grapes. People were looking for a change. I am proud of my 26 years of service...nobody can take that away from me."

The morning after the election Ambler blamed his loss on the anti-incumbent mood of the state.

"The people right across the state rejected incumbents, the race certainly wasn't won or lost on the issues," he said.

Ambler also blamed residual voter anger against the failed financial policies of Governor Michael Dukakis. He said he suspects a large number of voters took out that anger on Democratic candidates, lumping many of them unfairly with Dukakis cronies.

Ambler took his rival to task for running a "very negative campaign."

"We ran a very highroad campaign," he said, "not once did I talk about my opponent when he wasn't there. Anybody who bases a campaign (on negative tactics) has to live with that, I don't."

Ambler denied rumors that circulated at Hedlund headquarters last night that he planned to move to Florida, attributing it to what he called his opponent's "low ball tactics."

"It (the rumor) is totally false. We may escape to Florida for a couple of weeks a year, but we have six grandchildren and we have no intention of moving away from home."

Ambler said he put off retirement plans for the senate race, and now that its over he plans to enjoy that status.

He said although he has no plan to run for another office he is open to helping other campaigns and staying active in the political scene.

"I'll always be a political junkie," he said.

Both the winner and the loser agreed that the state has tough times ahead, and the legislature, both incumbents and new faces, has its work cut out.

Senator-elect Robert Hedlund

Rep. Robert Ambler, the loser

Voters favors GOP as 81.6% turn out

With the help of the voters of Cohasset, the Republican Party emerged from Tuesday's election as a viable force for the first time in many years.

The election of Robert Hedlund as state senator from this district gives the GOP the ability to sustain a veto. It takes 14 of the 40 senators to uphold a governor's veto, Hedlund will go to Beacon Hill in January as one of the 14 Republicans in the senate chamber.

Town Clerk Frances Marks pointed out that the voter turnout for the election was 81.6 percent as 4,115 voters went to the polls in town.

The overall vote decidedly favored the Republican side of the ballot — the new governor, William Weld, and his running mate Paul Cellucci, took 2,333 votes to 1,589 for John Silber and Marjorie Clapprood. There were 66 votes for the independent team and four scattered write-ins.

Democratic Sen. John Kerry had a slight edge over the challenger John Rappaport, 1,987 to 1,885.

Another Democrat, Scott Harshberger, came out on top of William Sawyer, 2,093 to 1,806.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray won 3,404 votes in her uncontested bid for re-election.

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, who votes in Cohasset, only won a narrow victory here over the challenger Jon Bryan, 2,059 to 1,933.

Despite the unrest, voters rejected the tax rollback referendum, Question 3.

Recycling committee observes at the RTF

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

The Recycling Committee met this past Sunday in the incredible warmth of the November heat wave. There weren't enough chairs, but only one person had to stand. One member brought his own chair, and the standee forgot to check the boutique before joining the meeting — he probably could have found a chair there. You see, the committee meets right at the Recycling Transfer Facility. There had been some discussion in the beginning about meeting some place more comfortable like Town Hall, where it's warm in the winter and cool in the summer. It was agreed, however, that it was easier to observe the problems of recycling if the committee members could look at the problem collectively and come to a decision hopefully right then and there. That's why the committee meets the first Sunday of every month in the RTF supervisor's office. If you would like to help increase recycling or have ideas on how to make recycling better, come join the committee. Oh, and bring your own chair!

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

There had been a problem with motor oil collection. Someone had taken the tray used to hold the waste oil bottles. (Yes there is still trouble with vandalism.) Because the meeting was held right at the RTF, the committee decided to look in the appliance/metal recycling section to see if there would be a suitable container for the residents to place their waste oil containers in; and, they found half of an old fuel tank. The greatest problem with any oil collection is spillage. We the residents can help by making sure that the caps on our bottles are secure.

Speaking of bottles, (I'll also throw in jugs and jars as well.) There has been confusion over plastic jugs and jars. As you know, the RTF recycles resins #1 and #2. Look for this resin number on the bottom of your plastic container inside the "chasing arrows" triangle. Sometimes, residents have been challenged at the RTF as to the recyclability of their containers. Fear not, fearless recyclers! Just show the #2 or #1 "chasing arrows" and recycle the container in the bin inside the transfer building. The confusion has come from changing plastic recyclers. The new company is much more demanding of us (I'll be updating you on this later) and in the last load they rejected a full 33% because it was contaminated. Contaminated (from what I saw of the rejected containers) meant dirty, something the previous dealer hadn't objected to. Contaminated can also mean milk residue. Rinse out all containers before placing them in the recycling bin.

I don't know how many of you have been following our recycling report card. Do you remember that for the past two or three loads we had gotten a "D" on glass because of metal contamination. Well, congratulations to everyone who worked harder to take the metal rings and lead collars off your glass bottles and jars. Our grade this past load was a "B." That means instead of being merely turned away from glass pickups or charged, the pickup was free. Let's try for an "A" on the next load. It will mean money and savings for us as taxpayers and recyclers.

For all of you who haven't been taking off the metal rings and collars on your glass jars and bottles, please thank Johnny Barnes for that. He spends hours cleaning the glass before crushing it. He is employed as a heavy equipment operator. I am sure in this mood of financial cutbacks, you would rather see our tax dollars more wisely spent than having to pay Mr. Barnes to clean our glass of metal for hours each week when it only takes us seconds to do the same thing at each of our homes.

Finally, don't forget to take some of the compost. The price is free. It will need to be screened, please see Oct. '90 CARE articles for use.

CHS accreditation process is detailed

At this time, Cohasset High School is undergoing a process of accreditation by the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. The NEASC is a nationally recognized agency that accredits public elementary, middle level, and secondary schools as well as independent colleges, overseas schools, and vocational, technical, and career institutions. Beginning last year and continuing through next year, the process involves members of the staff, the community, and a committee of visiting professionals that all offer input into an evaluation of the school and its programs. The following questions are often asked by people in the communities of the schools being evaluated:

What is accreditation?

Accreditation of a school by the NEASC indicates that the educational institution has conducted a self-evaluation of all its programs, and has hosted a visiting committee to evaluate the school in terms of its own stated goals and the nine standards of membership of the Commission on Public Schools.

The awarding of accreditation signifies that the schools has met Commission standards and is willing to maintain those standards and to improve its educational program by implementing the recommendations of the visiting evaluation team.

What is the value of accreditation?

The "value" of public school accreditation may differ depending upon one's point of view.

To the local citizen and taxpayer, accreditation of a school by the NEASC assures that his/her tax money is supporting a school facility and program that have been judged worthwhile by an outside team of evaluators, both in terms of the school's stated philosophy/objectives and the nine standards of membership. Through the process of evaluation, the citizen is advised of the needs and long-range plans of the school. Finally, the reputation of the community benefits from accreditation because the retention or the loss of accreditation has a demonstrable effect on local property values.

For the school board members, who are ultimately responsible for the quality of public education in their town, accreditation assures the townspeople that the board's educational policies are sound. If changes are needed, the accreditation process highlights them. The self-evaluation phase of the process also provides an ideal opportunity for the board members to gain a comprehensive knowledge of the school.

College admissions officers are responsible for judging students from diverse geographical areas in terms of their qualifications to enter institutions of higher learning. When interviewing students from an accredited institution, the college representative can be assured of the quality of a student's record of achievements in a school program that meets the Commission's standards.

The school's administration and teachers enjoy the professional pride of working in an accredited institution. Accreditation provides both a personal and a professional opportunity to work toward educational improvement. The evaluation experience offers the opportunity for the school staff to conduct and receive a rigorous analysis of present conditions so that needed changes may be carefully planned. Individual staff members develop not only a new perspective on their own positions/programs but also a view of the institution as a whole.

The students are most affected by accreditation because they are the focus of the educational process. Accreditation assures them that their needs are being met through a quality educational program, that their transfer credits will more likely be accepted should their family move, and that college representatives have assurance of the quality of their preparation.

In summary, accreditation signifies that the school has gone through a process of self-evaluation, that it has clearly-stated goals, and that an objective group of outsiders has examined these goals and the programs designed to accomplish them. A school that earns accreditation can assure local citizens that its programs, services and facilities have been scrutinized and deemed worthwhile and appropriate to the needs of its students.

What are the steps involved in the accreditation?

There are three phases to any accreditation: the self-evaluation, the visitation, and the follow-up program.

The self-evaluation involves all members of the professional staff in the school. Each person serves on at least two different committees, which examine learning areas (subjects such as math, science, foreign language, etc.) in order to determine if the individual program meets the standards established by The Commission on Public Secondary Schools.

In summary, the accreditation process is a crucial opportunity for the community and the school to examine the educational process at Cohasset High School in order to determine that the school is providing the excellent education that has been a tradition in Cohasset.

Chiropractic for Health

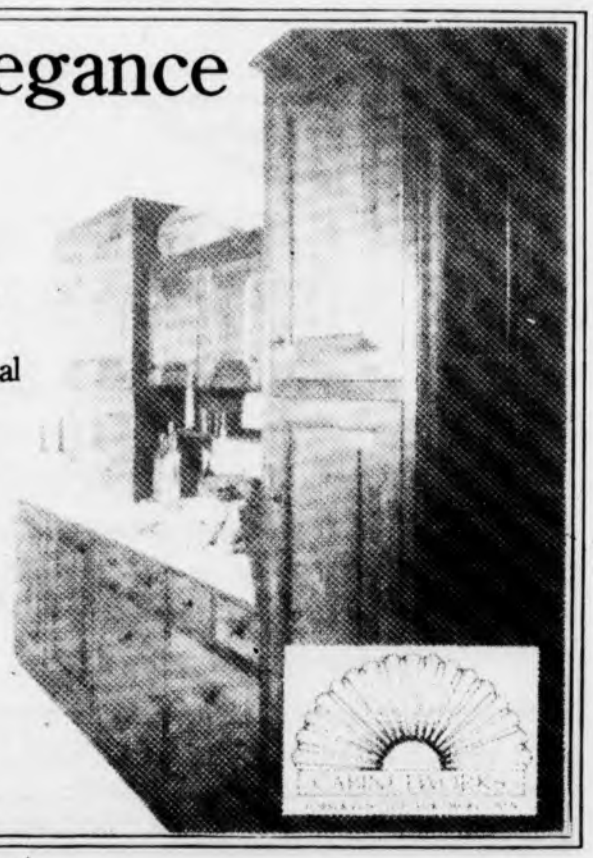
Chiropractors

DECLARATION OF DEPENDENCE

One need only turn on a T.V. news program to see that drug addiction has become a serious problem in this country. Unfortunately, some people only have to look as far as their own medicine cabinets to see that drug addiction has become a personal problem. Almost without exception, the abuse of prescription medication begins with the desire to alleviate pain. At first, medication in the prescribed dosages may help a patient cope with chronic pain. As the patient's tolerance for the drug heightens, a switch to stronger medications may be needed. As the medication spiral continues, the patient may eventually find that he has a physiological or psychological dependence on the drug. At this point, the medication is in control of the patient. Chiropractors do not usually prescribe medication, they simply seek to eradicate the source of the pain.



DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330. We offer you a choice for a declaration of independence. Chiropractic utilizes a natural approach which goes to the source of your difficulties. By allowing Mother Nature to do "her thing", your problems are assessed and attention focused in a natural, knifeless and drugless approach to solving the problem. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Psychological drug dependence can be characterized by striving for the effect of the drug, aside from relief from pain.

ARE DENTAL IMPLANTS RECOGNIZED BY THE AMERICAN DENTAL ASSOCIATION?

Yes. It is significant to note that the ADA's recognition of implant dentistry comes after years of close observation and evaluation of the materials, procedures and results. This recognition is also of great significance in that, professionals throughout the country are now encouraged to consider dental implants as a safe and successful solution for the over 100 million Americans who have suffered severe tooth loss. If you would like more information on dental implants and how they can benefit you, please call 617-826-8395.

In addition to his practice, Dr. Strecker enjoys speaking to community and professional groups on topics relating to eye disease. Contact the Cohasset office for more information.

Health studies feelings

During the weeks between Nov. 5 and Dec. 21 students in the Deer Hill and Joseph Osgood schools will be participating in health education programs in their individual classrooms. The "theme" for this period of time is Feelings/Human Relations, and each grade level will be concentrating on some "age appropriate" aspect of this theme as part of their health education instruction. This theme will deal with areas such as mental, emotional, and social well-being, self-esteem, self-image, family, and appreciation of human differences, etc.

Through our health education program, we are attempting to cooperate with parents in assuring the emotional, social, and physical health and well-being of the children. We feel this is best achieved by reinforcing healthy attitudes and values, in building self-esteem, and by empowering students to make healthy, appropriate decisions about their behaviors.

MARY JEANETTE
MURRAY

Dear Friends,

It is with a deep sense of humility and gratitude that I personally thank the residents and voters of the Third Plymouth District for their continued support and vote for my Re-Election as your State Representative.

As in the past - so will it be in the future - that my duties and voting record will reflect the will of the people of my district during these trying times.

So many thoughtful people have expressed kind sentiments to me regarding the loss of my late husband and Campaign Manager, Phil, who was so active in my political career. He is truly missed.

My very best to all of you.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Mac attack at high school

By Sue McFadd
Special to the Mariner

If Cohasset residents send in Stop & Shop and Bradlees register tapes between now and Dec. 29, all three schools in Cohasset may benefit from an integrated computer work station to be housed at the jr./sr. high school library. Register tapes will be used to acquire a MacIntosh SE computer.

You may wonder how a work station at the jr./sr. high school will benefit the Osgood and Deer Hill schools. Quite simply, the work station will enable the high school to generate resource materials for the elementary schools.

The multi-media computer work station will consist of:

- A laser/videodisc player already purchased for the high school library through a grant from the Arts Boosters.
- A MacIntosh SE computer to operate the laser/videodisc player to be purchased if the school collects enough register tapes through the Apples for the Students program.
- A 40 megabyte hard drive.
- A monitor the school already has acquired.
- The Apple "hypercard" program that is available free of charge with the purchase of a MacIntosh computer.
- And an Imagewriter printer, a CD ROM drive, an Apple Scanner and the necessary cables to link all the parts of the work station together.

With the work station, the schools can use such advanced technology as Compton's Multi-media Encyclopedia and World Book's Information Finder. The school would also try to acquire videodiscs on the art collection in the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C.; For All Mankind, a chronicle of the history of man in space; Insects, a videodisc on the role and function of insects in the ecosystem; Bach, featuring a biography of the composer and a study of Fugue in B-Minor, and Salamandre — Chateaux of the Loire, available in both English and French.

These titles are only a sampling of the rich variety of materials available to expand and enrich the curriculum at all levels.

The key to establishing the work station is townwide participation in the Apples for the Students program. By turning in Stop & Shop and Bradlees register tapes, the children of Cohasset will enjoy an educational advantage at no cost to taxpayers.

Collection boxes for the tapes can be found at each school, town hall, the library and other public places.

Osgood artist-of-the-month

A meeting to discuss the first artist-of-the-month program for Osgood School will be held at the home of Retta Dwyer, 49 Hobart Lane at 10 a.m. Nov. 8.

Organizers welcome all interested individuals who would like to spend time in their child's classroom presenting a fun activity.

For more information, call Retta Dwyer at 383-6629, Linda Gardner at 383-9881 or Olga Nohe at 383-1273.

Parenting for Character

The Cohasset PSO will present a program on parenting for character Nov. 15 at 7:30 p.m. in the Cohasset high school cafeteria. The public is invited to this free program.

Stephanie Meegan will speak about strategies for avoiding "cornucopia kids." These are the children who expect that "the good life will always be available to them, without effort and without the need for personal accountability."

Two of the warning signals of a child at risk of becoming a cornucopia kid are:

- A high need for constant external stimulation; frequent complaints about being bored.
- A high demand for brand name clothing, toys, recreational equipment, diversions or fad items.

Meegan's program will provide parents with strategies and tools to "cornucopia-proof" their children.

Meegan has provided educational consultation and training for teachers and administrators, gifted and special needs associations, health and mental health organizations and national educational conferences. She is the author of two nationally-distributed school curricula.

Meegan also has been a guest on network television, radio talk shows and was interviewed for a recent article in McCall's Working Mother magazine.

Cancer screenings planned

Judy Fitzsimmons, of Cohasset's Social Service League announces that they will again be sponsoring a mammography screening program.

The best means of controlling breast cancer is through early detection. Breast cancer is a curable disease, if found early. Most women who have not had mammograms as recommended, give inconvenience and cost as the reasons. This mammography service is both convenient and less expensive. It only takes 20 to 30 minutes of your time.

Mammography screening will be held Monday, Nov. 12 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. in a van near the town hall.

Appointments are needed.

American Cancer Society guidelines: 35 to 39 years of age - a baseline mammogram; 40 to 49 years of age - a mammogram eery one to two years; over 50 years of age - a mammogram every year. Women under 35 need a M.D.'s order.

Mobile Diagnostics, Inc. of Wellesley provides a fully equipped coach which is comfortable, private and staffed by registered, female technologists. The equipment is a state-of-the-art low dose mammography unit. The x-rays are read by board-certified radiologists, and the results will be sent to you and your physician.

The total cost, which can be billed to your insurance, is $97. This is significantly below the average area cost of $120 to $200. Recent legislation requires most insurance companies to provide coverage for Massachusetts residents. If you have private insurance, your insurance company can be billed directly. If you belong to any HMO, you must get written permission from your primary physician. Some HMO's require you to have mammograms at their own facility. Women with Medicare also need written prescription and diagnosis for the x-ray to be covered. Medicare pays 80 percent of the cost and if you have supplemental insurance the 20 percent can be billed. If you have only Medicare and have met your deductible, your cost will be approximately $15. There is a $75 price; only available on the day of the exam, payable by cash, check, Mastercard or Visa, for women with no insurance, or whose insurance does not cover the test. Check with your carrier if you're not sure of your coverage. If your insurance is billed and they do not pay, then your bill will e $97.

Call the Social Service League at the following number for appointments or questions. 383-0771.

Trip-bid fundraiser set

Bargain hunters can pick from a variety of mini-vacations and get-away week-ends and help support the fight against cancer at the same time at the 3rd annual harvest of Happiness Auction being sponsored by the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society at the Sheraton Tara Hotel, Braintree, Friday, Nov. 9. Viewing, hors d'oeuvres and mood music are scheduled for 7 p.m., followed by bidding at 7:30.

Get-away week-ends and similar mini-vacations have been donated by the Sheraton Boston and Sheraton Needham hotels, by Boston's Park Plaza and the Wequassett Inn in Chatham, all to be put on the auction block by celebrity auctioneers Jordan Rich and Leslie Palmiter of WSSH, or by professional Robert Turner.

If elegant dining is a person's choice, the auction will offer gift certificates to the Navona restaurant in Hingham, or brunch at the Mystery Cafe at the Sheraton Tara in Braintree.

In addition to tickets to various major sports events, the committee headed by Barbara Sullivan of Braintree, has secured donations of tickets to the Boston Ballet's popular Nutcracker performance and to the usually sold-out Christmas concert of the Boston Pops.

Recent additions to the list of other attractive offerings include a Nynex mobile telephone, Christmas decorations and a clock made by students at the Quincy Vocational School.

For further information and tickets at $12.50, call Barbara Sullivan, 848-2795 or 848-9414, or Marcia at 341-4210.

Holiday auction planned

A Holiday Auction will be held on Monday evening, Nov. 12 at 7:30 at the Golden Rooster Restaurant, 78 Border St., Scituate, for the benefit of the Panayia Greek Church of Cohasset.

Items to be auctioned include jewelry, hand-knit couture ladies sweaters, personal services and a variety of new articles suitable for Christmas gift giving too numerous to mention. Preview will be 7 to 7:30 p.m. prior to the auction.

Auctioneer will be James Dedes of Pembroke. Chairman of the church fund-raiser is Linda Argeros assisted by Cindy Dedes and Eva Sedell. Anyone wishing to contribute any items or services may contact Mrs. Argeros at 617-545-9815.

A gala evening is planned with hors d'oeuvres and cash bar followed by complementary coffee and pasteries.

Gourmet Club to meet

The Gourmet Club sponsored by the Council of Aging will meet again Nov. 12 at 9:30 a.m. in St. Stephen's Church.

Members of the club will prepare — and then enjoy - a gourmet feast under the direction of Anna Abbruzzese.

The dynamic group of men and women is looking for new members. Currently there are nine members, more than half are men.

Interested people are encouraged to show up at 9:30 and plan on staying for lunch.

"That's the best part of the club," Council on Aging director Kathy Bryanton said.

Senior/Osgood luncheon

On Nov. 13, 20 third-grade students from Osgood School will join seniors at the Senior Center for lunch.

Following lunch, participants will join together in an arts and crafts project. The senior friends will get to take the project home as a gift from their junior friends.

The lunch gets under way at 11:30 a.m. Reservations are still being taken from seniors. Call the Council on Aging office at 383-9112 to sign up.

Booster basketball time

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's Basketball registrations will be held for girls and boys in grades 1 through 9, at Town Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 10, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The fee for the program is $25, with a $5 discount offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks should be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset." There will also be a $5 per participant, team shirt charge, and checks for shirts must be made payable to: "Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club."

Registration, at the prescribed time is essential, because evaluations will be held Nov. 17. Should you be unable to register on Saturday, Nov. 10, you must do so between the hours of 2:30 and 4 p.m., on Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the recreation office.

Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid conflicts.

The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and the recreation department. George W. Ellinger will coordinate the basketball program again this season.

Festival of Trees

Friends of Cranberry Hospice, which meets the needs of the terminally ill and their families in twelve area communities, will be holding their first annual Christmas Festival of Trees at Plimoth Plantation Dec. 1, 2 and 3.

There will be 31 decorated trees and Mrs. Claus' Christmas Shop and Kitchen for everyone. Continuous holiday music will fill the rooms and there will be a snack bar.

For more information call Santa at (617) 934-6097, 934-5034 or 934-2446.

Society sets annual event

Thursday, Nov. 15 is the date of he Cohasset Historical Society's 1990 Annual Meeting with catered dinner and special evening program.

Subject of the special program will be the history of Cohasset's historic First Parish Meetinghouse and its 19th century George S. Hutchings tracker organ. The old Colonial Meetinghouse dates from 1747 and its fine organ dates from 1892. This program will be presented by Caroline Curtis, music director of the First Parish, and by David Wadsworth, senior curator of the Historical Society.

Schedule for the annual meeting will begin at 6 p.m. with a social hour at the Unitarian Parish House, North Main Street, and with dinner at about 6:45. Following dinner there will be a short annual business meeting of the Society, for reports and election of officers and directors. The special program will be held at the historic Meetingshouse, across North Main Street on the Common. The Society's Curator will outline the long and unique history of Cohasset's Meetingshouse, itself the first center for the town's religion and also the original seat of its government. The history of the Hutchings organ will be presented along with selections of organ music to be performed on the instrument itself.

Reservations for the Historical Society's Nov. 15 dinner and program are $12 per person, and may be mailed with check accompanying, to the Society at 14 Summer St., Cohasset 02025. Those wishing to make reservations area asked to do so early, since seating in the Parish House hall is limited.

Gardeners meet Tuesday

Members of the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset will meet on Tuesday, November 13 at one o'clock at the home of Mrs. Rita Drake with Mrs. Isabelle Wilson assisting as Co-hostess.

The program, "Holiday Arrangements," will be presented by Lou Littlehale.

Living Life

By Michael J. McFadden
Special to the Mariner

After having bypass heart surgery some years back, my cardiologist strongly suggested that since I lived alone, I acquire a pet to live with me. I did exactly that acquiring two personable cats which I named Sass and Frass. When I moved to Cohasset, the three of us came together along with our twelve tropical fish. We were one big happy family!

Since the day Sass and Frass entered my home, my life has been different. I was never that fond of cats as I felt that they were too independent and did just what they wanted to do without any regard for their masters. We had a cat named Mitzy when I was small and I remember her scratching me in the face. I was probably trying to have my own way then too. Having put these prejudices aside, however, when I decided to get a pet, I was open to learning what I could about cats. Before one can learn from another, there must be that openness and tolerance of the other. Herbert Spencer said that contempt prior to investigation will keep a person in everlasting ignorance. So I welcomed them into my home.

Frass was the first one out of the cage. She looked like a miniature clergyperson, dressed in black fur with a white collar under her chin. All of four inches long, she had the airs of a queen meeting her subjects for the first time. Her scepter was a toothpick, nestled in her mouth and her first meow let it be known that she was at home and in charge. Her self-esteem was totally in tact and she flaunted her presence letting everyone know how beautiful she was. "This is my home," she said, "and I want you to know that." And she was right. She took over.

While Frass was introducing and preening herself, Sass stayed inside the cage looking out. He just sat there, ohhh so cute but terribly afraid and suspicious. His eyes darted from side to side and the perpetual smile on his face that most cats seem to have was gone. He, too, was a small kitten like Frass, but grey and striped. When I tried to reach for him, he shot out of the cage hiding under the table. I pursued him under the table, under the bed, into the living room, under the chair. The more I pursued, the more he ran. He was so frightened. I wanted to take him into my arms and tell him there was no need to fear, but he kept his distance. As I look back, I think I wanted him to do things my way–I tried to make him into Cat McFadden, rather than allowing him to be just plain old Sass Cat. Our pets have a way of knowing what we are really about. There was no way that Sass was about to make friends with me or anyone else. I decided to practice some cat psychology.

I set up my litter box and allowed my cats to be fully cats. Frass walked about inspecting everything while Sass would appear only on occasion spending the rest of the time in hiding. Every time I would see him, I would smile and with a high pitched voice tell him: "I love you, Sassy! I love you, Sassy." It took more than six months for Sassy to start trusting. Being a family therapist, I wondered what went on in his family of origin–what were the issues he had with his mother, or his father for that matter. What made him so frightened! Who did he want to blame it on in his family or was he ready to accept responsibility for his own actions? Sass continued to be Sass–impudent, cheeky, fresh, but gradually started to come out of his shell. I let Sass be Sass, and I went about being me–a real lover. Love always wins! Now, each day when I meditate, Sass sits at my feet, or sometimes jumps into my lap and we pray and meditate together. He purrs away and I listen and I thank God for the gifts of Sass and Frass in my life. They have taught me so much about living life. They have taught me so much about myself.

So many of us have "control issues" in our life. We try to control our spouses, our children, our circumstances, our bosses, our associates. We have so many subtle ways of trying to manipulate, coerce or ever force others to think the way we think, to act the way we act, to do as we would have done. The Archie Bunker in each of us has a hard time keeping quiet. We get angry when things don't go our way or others don't do as we wish or would have done in similar circumstances. We tell others they "ought to" do this or "should have" done that. We project so many of our own "control issues" on to others and make judgements when we have no right or authority to be there. Left to our own devices, we would like to clone ourselves. Heaven help us!

Living life for me has been a process of learning how to let go of control. That way, life has become much more meaningful. I have become much happier and more content. I have found serenity and I know what it means. When I lose it as I sometimes do, I have to look to myself, not to others. "Live and let live" is a slogan I see on bumpers. Practicing it is a real bumper for living life. Thank you Sass and Frass for all you have taught me. Frass died from injuries in an auto accident last July. She is gone, but she is immortal in my heart!

Metco problems discussed

On Thursday, Oct. 24, a group of concerned parents, school personnel, booster club representatives, and a representative from the school committee met to discuss the dilemma created by the loss of the high school late bus, which transports METCO students home weekday evenings following extra-curricular activities.

There was agreement among those present that the situation is difficult at best and denies the students from Boston the opportunity to fully participate in what Cohasset High School has to offer. Currently, Boston students are coping by spending long hours on public transportation, spending the night with friends or host families, getting rides from coaches and others to the T, or crowding into car-pools formed by Boston parents who drive down from Boston after work in the evening. There was no doubt that these "solutions" would be short lived, and that they were taking their toll on the students and families involved.

A fund has been started with pledges from the Cohasset METCO Parents Organization, the PSO METCO Committee and various Booster organizations. A later bus has begun to operate as of Oct. 29.

A series of fundraisers are being organized to provide a continuing source of revenue for the new fund, which is called MEOF, the METCO Extra-Curricular Opportunity Fund.

Dec. 9 there will be a bus trip to the Black Nativity. All are invited. Anyone interested in making a tax-deductible contribution to MEOF may do so by sending a check made out to Cohasset High School–MEOF to MEOF, c/o Superintendent's Office, 143 Pond Street, Cohasset, MA 02025.

SENIOR CENTER NEWS

TELEPHONE ASSISTANCE FOR LOW-INCOME ELDERS

We have been informed by the Ex. Office of Elder Affairs that N.E. Telephone has developed two low-income assistance programs called Lifeline Telephone Assistance and Link-up America. The Lifeline program gives eligible residential customers a $3.50 reduction in their basic monthly rate, plus a waiver of the monthly FCC subscriber line charge of $3.50, for a total monthly benefit of $7. The Link-Up America program provides installation of telephone service of 50 percent of the normal service connection charge. To be eligible for either of these services, a customer or household must be receiving one of the following benefits: Medicaid, Fuel Assistance, SSI, Food Stamps, General Relief, or AFDC. New England Telephone's Lifeline telephone assistance program should not be confused with the Lifeline program which provides living at home with a button to push in case they need emergency assistance. Although they have the same name, the two programs are not connected.

HOW TO SIGN UP FOR SOCIAL SECURITY

If you are approaching retirement age, you are reminded that people who plan to file for Social Security or Medicare should start the application within three months prior to the month they plan to stop working. But remember that you do not have to retire to receive Medicare benefits. These benefits can start at age 65 even if you continue to work. For more information call on our SHINE volunteers at 383-9112.

SENIOR SHUTTLE SERVICE

The Senior Shuttle provides free transportation to Cohasset residents 60 and over. You can request rides to medical appointments, food shopping, and recreational/social events. The hours of operation are Monday through Fridays from 8:30 a.m. to 3 p.m. and also on Sundays to Church services 9 a.m. to Noon. Reservations are a must! — Call 383-9112. Remember that all of our drivers are volunteers, please be good to them by not asking to go places that are not listed and please have patience when they are delayed — They are trying their best! Schedule as follows:

Recreation takeover put on hold

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Plans for the Community Center and recreation commission to meet over the Community Center's proposal to take over town recreation programs have been postponed until Dec. 6.

Recreation commission Chairman Richard Barrow recently characterized the proposal as a "hostile takeover." The Community Center is unlikely to find a recreation commission meeting a friendly venue for their proposal.

Commission members have complained that the Community Center cut the recreation commission out of the loop in broaching the idea with the town. They said they considered it rude that the commission was not informed about the proposal in the first place.

This is not the first time the Community Center has offered to take on the programs offered by the recreation department.

In January 1990, the Community Center sent a letter to the advisory committee offering to absorb the activities of the recreation department.

At that time they said they were not suggesting the town subsidize the center in place of the commission. They said they would provide the services based on user fees.

The recreation commission contended then, and continues to maintain now, that if the town is looking for areas to save money, this is not the department to do it in.

According to recreation director John Worley, the recreation programs the Community Center wants to takeover generate considerable revenue that is returned to the town.

"The bottom line cost is so very little," Worley said. "We are giving back more than we've spent."

Worley contends the Community Center wants to skim off the revenue-generating programs and leave the town with the deficits.

In January, the stability of the Community Center was called into question by Barrow.

Greenbush line pulled out of OCRR

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

The Greenbush line will be separated from original plans for the restoration of Old Colony commuter rail service so proponents can move ahead with the less controversial Middleboro and Plymouth lines.

As the Mariner went to press Wednesday the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority's board of directors were meeting to approve the new turn in the $561 million project. The new approach has been endorsed by MBTA general manager Thomas P. Glynn and was expected to be approved with little debate.

According to MBTA spokesman Peter Dimond, the decision was made to draw up a separate environmental review for the hotly debated Greenbush line so that numerous complaints about that line can be dealt with in depth without slowing down the other two lines.

Thomas Glynn, the MBTA's general manager is quoted in a statement on the decision as having said that "the decision to fast-track federal review of the Plymouth Middeboro lines will save (the MBTA) money and get rail service started sooner."

He said the decision will allow the Greenbush line to be studied in depth without slowing progress on a final environmental impact report on the other two lines.

Glynn said the MBTA expects to submit the final draft to the Urban Mass Transit Authority by the end of the year, with federal approval and funding hopefully coming by early 1991. The two lines will account for $421.9 million of the whole project.

The Greenbush line has drawn strong opposition, most notably from the town of Hingham where selectmen compiled a two volume report filled with over 500 pages of anti-railroad sentiment.

In the report selectmen called the MBTA's draft environmental report "inaccurate, incomplete and outdated," and accused proponents of glossing over environmental, Historical and aesthetic impacts.

Chief among the concerns was that traffic jams caused by several grade crossings, would pose a safety hazard and negatively

The rail's potential impact on Hingham historic districts has effected two federal reviews.

Representatives of the town have been meeting with MBTA officials to work out the details of a re-

Noel Ripley, our veterans' agent pays back old debt

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Noel Ripley volunteered to become the town's director of veterans' affairs to repay a debt.

A veteran himself, Ripley found himself in utter and excruciating back pain. As a self-employed person, he had no health insurance. The Veterans' Administration hospital didn't care.

"You get as good service there as anywhere else," Ripley said. "It's almost like an extended family."

When the hospital got him back on his feet again, he kept wishing there was someone he could at least thank.

"I thought, I should do something to pay it back," Ripley said.

And five years ago, he took on the job of director of veterans' affairs when it opened up.

First Parish offers shelter to homeless

It all started with a book and a movie.

The women of First Parish, the Unitarian Universalist formed a reading group. The first book on their list was Rachel and Her Children by Jonathan Kozol.

Kozol wrote about the homeless mothers and children of New York. For several South Shore mothers and children, that has made all the difference.

The book profoundly touched the women in the reading group.

"We got so outraged and frustrated, we knew we had to do something," Madeline Olney said.

The most obvious thing they could think of was to offer shelter to a family that needed it.

The Rev. Edward T. Atkinson was concerned about the plight of homeless families, too.

"I preached a sermon on how generous Faith Nazarene was with its resources," Atkinson said. That church has provided shelter and been part of a network of private homes offering shelter to people in need.

And so the women who wanted to do something approached the outreach committee and the congregation as a whole.

Their proposal was simple.

The church had a homelike parish hall in a neighborhood. They wanted to convert space on the second floor into a temporary home for families with no place to go.

The space had been used for Sunday school classes, but the committee envisioned a small kitchen, comfortable living room/bedroom and a

Selectmen's other action

In other business, selectmen:

- Appointed Guido Risi to represent the school department on the computer study committee.
- Accepted the resignation of Peter O'Connor from the transfer station building committee. O'Connor was previously named to the advisory committee.
- Granted a step increase to administrative secretary Joyce Studley.
- Approved the relocation of a joint telephone and electrical service pole at Margin Street and Stockbridge Street.

Vo-Tech opens Nov. 15

South Shore Vo-Tech cordially invites you to Open House '90 on Thursday, Nov. 15, from 6:30 to 9 p.m., at the Hanover campus, 476 Webster St. (Route 123) or Abington campus, Ralph Hamlin Lane (Memorial Field).

There will be demonstrations, displays, exhibits, refreshments, transportation between campuses, admission, placement and career information.

For information, call 871-4153.

What's open, closed

Banks, stores, schools and government offices will be closed Thursday, Nov. 22, Thamksgiving Day. Many restaurants, however, remain open to serve Thanksgiving dinner.

According to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce:

- federal, state, county, and municipal offices will be closed
- schools and libraries are closed
- manufacturing plants are closed
- banks are closed
- retail stores and supermarkets are closed
- liquor stores, are closed, but taverns and bars will be open
- stock markets will be closed
- Post Offices are closed, and there will be no mail delivery.

Lanata scholarship benefit

On Wednesday, Nov. 21, from 8 p.m. to midnight, there will be a benefit for the John A. Lanata Memorial Scholarship fund at the American Legion post.

Due to the holiday next week, the Mariner deadline for copy is Friday, Nov. 16, at 5 p.m. The paper will be delivered next Wednesday, Nov. 21.

Recreation takeover debated by town

"To me, they're like the stock market. They're up and down," Barrow said at the time. "They're having a good year, but golly knows what next year is going to bring."

The recreation commission was created in 1978 when it appeared the center was about to go out of business. The center recovered from those lean times and has expanded its services and its building.

Worley said the two recreation services had coexisted because of an agreement to avoid duplicating programs. That agreement has been breached in recent years.

Back in January, the advisory committee asked to see detailed budget sheets so they could determine who could offer the most comprehensive recreation program at the lowest cost.

"If you have a department that is making money, there's no reason to change," advisory committee member Arne Gjesteby said then.

Worley said he had yet to see any written proposal or budget figures on the Community Center's proposal.

The Community Center is on the recreation commission's agenda for 7:30 p.m. The recreation commission meeting begins at 7 p.m.

'Silent Night, Lonely Night'

Having leased clubhouse space at Stagecoach Way for two years, the 70-year-old Cohasset Dramatic Club is moving back to Town Hall November 16-18 (2 p.m. - 18th, 8 p.m. - 16 and 17) with Robert Anderson's sensitive "Silent Night, Lonely Night", drama that takes place in a New England Colonial Inn on Christmas Eve.

Robert Anderson amazed Broadway audiences with his searching play of hidden homosexuality in "Tea and Sympathy", and with "Silent Night, Lonely Night" he examines marital infidelity and the stresses that can lure mature marrieds.

Peggy Corrigan of Cohasset stars as Katherine and Richard Frazier of Holbrook stars as John, the two leads through whose romantic encounter Anderson compares mature and idealistic loves.

In the supporting case: Joe Whelan of Cohasset, Katie Spinzola and Betty Miessner of Scituate, and Andrew Clarke of Norwell as the teen-age son. Directed by Harry Heineman of Scituate. Produced by Rosemary Scott and Gayl Varallo, Cohasset.

Homeshare means shelter bathroom.

The congregation had many concerns and questions, but decided to go forward with the project.

It meant creating a kitchen and adding a shower to the bathroom.

Fortuitously, Warner Brothers had given the church a sizable donation in thanks for being allowed to use it during filming of The Witches of Eastwick. The church had voted to invest the money and use the interest on outreach.

That money was available to begin the renovating and equiping the space. It was not the only resource the homeshare committee lucked into.

One committee member was discussing the costs of various renovations. An electrician who happened to be doing work in her home overheard the conversation and offered to donate his time and labor for free.

Not only did he wire the apartment, he picked up a hammer and helped nail down the flooring.

Decorating the apartment and seeing it take shape was another pleasure. And then they held a shower to equip it with pots and pans, dishes and silverware, mops and brooms and all the little — and expensive — necessities of life.

Filling a cupboard with food, paper products and cleaning supplies to get the family started or tide them over difficult spots has been an ongoing project. Disposable diapers are in always in short supply.

The church has been working with the Homeshare program coordinated by Dorothy and Herb Newell. Homeshare matches families who need temporary shelter with the First Parish apartment.

There are a few requirements.

"It's small," committee member Carol Martin said. It cannot house more than one adult and three children.

Although Martin and fellow member Madeline Olney describe the space as small, they recognize that it seems large and peaceful to people who are escaping crowded shelters or the streets. The difference in perception is humbling, they say.

Because Cohasset is somewhat remote and there is no full time staff, the women housed in the apartment must be self-reliant and have access to transportation.

And they require that the guest not smoke in the building.

The first mother and child arrived in October 1989. A year later, five families have called the little apartment home.

"Cathy" and her children became homeless came from Florida to visit family members and became stranded here. Although her family could not house her, they provided plenty of love and support while "Cathy" struggled to stabilize her situation. In just five weeks, she found a place in Hull.

Martin and Olney are thrilled to report that "Cathy" is an accounting major at Quincy College. She plans to become a CPA.

"Rita" became homeless when she was evicted. She and her two daughters experienced the beauty of a Cohasset Christmas season — and the thrills and chills of ice-skating on the common pond — during the six weeks they called the apartment home.

"Rita" found an apartment near her family in Everett. Today she is a straight "A" student in computer programming at Bunker Hill Community College. Her children are thriving, too.

Life was more difficult for "Donna" who was struggling to overcome substance abuse. After 10 weeks in homeshare, Donna needed to go back into rehabilitation for a brief time.

Her determination to recover shows. Today she and her family are living in a nearby town and doing well.

"Tina" came to the apartment from a large New Bedford shelter. "Tina" faced many trials and tribulations during her time in homeshare. She and her infant son had chronic health problems, her parents divorced, her grandmother died and she was involved in an automobile accident.

"Tina's" attempts to find a place to call her own were complicated by the difficulty of securing a housing subsidy because of state cutbacks. Ultimately, "Tina" made it. Today she lives in a two-family home in the area.

Today, someone new is looking for a permanent home. When she is successful, Martin and Olney know there will be another person needed the apartment as soon as the committee can clean the apartment and restock the shelves.

The committee tries to provide support and encouragement and still respect the privacy of the women and children who come to First Parish. A measure of their success is that the program is so anonymous.

"I don't think people necessarily know there are homeless people living here," Martin said.

That may well be because homeless people are like you and me, but circumstances have caused them to slip into homelessness, the women said.

"They're good mothers," Martin said. "They have sweet children."

Martin and Olney play down the contribution of the church.

"It's really not all that much," Olney said. "I feel like I'm finally doing something. It's easy to write a check."

The one-to-one contact makes the project so much more than just another charity. These are real people struggling to make their way in the world. First Parish just tries to lighten the burden a bit along the way.

For those who want to help, the group welcomes donations. Other organizations or private people who want to open their doors and their hearts to people who need a place to call home can call the First Parish or Dorothy and Herb Newell.

Kozol said, "Having a home, some place to go that is your own place, is assumed to be an essential for any human being."

And though many people quote Robert Frost's line "Home is the place where, when you have to go there,/ They have to take you in," Frost's heart was in the next line: "I should have called it/ Something you somehow haven't to deserve."

Assessors set tax rate at $9.90

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Assessors set the new tax rate at $9.90, an increase of 30 cents over last year. The official tax rate was certified by the state Department of Revenue (DOR) last week.

The increase will cost the average homeowner about $102. The average assessment of the town's 2,068 single-family houses is $340,000. The average tax bill is estimated at $3,366.

Figures sent to the state showed a total valuation of $953,412,700 in real estate and personal property and a tax levy of $9,442,981.

Selectmen accepted the recommendation of the assessors and set a single tax rate for both residential and commercial property.

The treasurer-collector's office was stuffing envelopes with tax bills Wednesday. Treasurer-Collector Elizabeth Ripley expects tax bills will be in the mail by Friday.

Taxes will be due Dec. 18.

Although the town could have elected to establish separate tax rates for residential and commercial properties, selectmen agreed with the assessors that a split rate was not feasible or advisable in a town with as little commercial property as Cohasset. According to Lagrotteria, slightly less than 10 percent of the town property is classified as commercial.

Most communities with split rates have at least 28 percent commercial property. Lagrotteria said no community with less than 18 percent of its property in the commercial column uses a split rate.

In recommending against the split rate, Lagrotteria said a split rate would have an extremely disproportionate effect on commercial properties.

"Just a 10 cent decrease in the residential rate would increase the commercial tax rate by almost $2," he said.

"In this town the only thing you could do is have the residential subsidize the businesses that are having so difficult a time," selectman Jane Goedecke said.

Selectman Edwin Tebbetts asked Lagrotteria whether the revaluation assessments were holding up in the real estate market. Tebbetts said he had heard of houses selling for 15 to 20 percent less than assessments.

Lagrotteria said of the 132 sales recorded in 1989 and the first six months of 1990, the ratio of sales to assessments was running between 1.06 and 1.07. Homeowners are free to request an abatement if they feel the assessment is out of line with the actual value, he said, but decisions would be made on a case-by-case basis after close scrutiny.

Lagrotteria warned that many sales involve cash or land transfers that offset the apparent sub-assessment sales price. In other cases, companies buy the homes of transferred employees. Many times they sell the properties at a loss and use that as a tax write-off on their books, Lagrotteria said.

The board of assessors recommended setting aside a $180,000 reserve to fund abatements that may be granted. Thirty-two appeals of assessments are pending.

Last year, $235,000 was set aside because it was a revaluation year.

AROUND TOWN

❑ Our congratulations go to Kathy and Bob Pangherlini this week, they are the parents of a brand new baby girl, Marissa Grace, born on Nov. 3, weighing in at 9 pounds 2 ounces. Marissa will join her big sister Alida Rose, I'll bet she's excited to have a baby sister in the house. Her grandparents certainly are happy too, Janet Figueiredo and John and Anna Pangherlini. Joy, health and happiness to you all.

❑ Lauren Wood managed to leave UNH recently, to compete in the Annual Rockland Winterland Competition, and it was certainly worth the trip! Lauren earned herself a silver in freestyle, a gold in footwork and a gold in couples. After the competition it was back to UNH, where Lauren is a freshman.

Lauren is another college student that spoke highly of the "care packages" that the Chamber of Commerce sent to our college students this fall. Everyone sure is impressed, be it at the various colleges or here with the Chamber's hard work and thoughtfulness. The next time you see a member be sure to tell them so, I'm sure that they would appreciate their hard work is getting so much praise.

❑ Hats off to the following award winners that entered the South Shore Art Center's annual all-member Blue Ribbon Exhibition: Colleen Lucas who won a first in graphics; Ros Farbush who won an honorable mention in oil-acrylic; Joanne Chittick who won an honorable mention in watercolor; Colleen Lucas who won a first in pastel drawing and Nancy Connolly who won an honorable mention in pastel drawing; Mark Connolly who won an honorable mention in 3-D; Eleanor Gorman who earned an honorable mention in photography.

From left: Ann Mitchell, Debbie Becker and Sharon Moody work on plans for the Village Fair Dinner, which winds up the fair on Dec. 1 around Cohasset Common. Mitchell is in charge of the dinner.

❑ We are happy to report that Dorothy Bates and Fred Piepenbrink are both home from the hospital and both doing well. Had a chat with Fred last week, he is feeling great and promises to follow doctor's orders! Same with you, right Mrs. Bates?

❑ If we don't do anything else this holiday season, we should all support Marita Carpenter in her efforts to sell holiday greeting cards that will benefit the pediatric center at Floating Hospital. Everyone undoubtedly read about Joel last week, and this is one way we can all pitch in. Marita will be selling the cards at Stop and Shop on Nov. 17 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m., or you can purchase them at Sea 'n' Cheese and Cohasset Jewelers. Put it at the top of your list right now!

❑ We congratulate all of the fall sports teams, their efforts were grand though they didn't come home with any state trophies, they are all winners. Fall sports may be over folks, but winter sports aren't far behind. So watch the Mariner for the schedule then make plans for your family to participate.

❑ While on the subject of fall sports, there won't be a football game on Thanksgiving this year. But, there will be the annual powder puff game, that's when the junior girls challenge the senior girls to a tough football game. It will be on Nov. 18 at 1 p.m. It's great fun, don't miss it.

Rave reviews were "around town" after the three performances of "Godspell" this weekend. It was stated that they should repeat it at another time so that all could attend, maybe they (the cast and crew) will think about it and do it.

❑ Ruthann Sargent sure is a busy gal, and it seems that all that she does involves kids . . . they sure take a shine to her! She is holding a re-run this Friday (11/16) at the Community Center, "Boy's Night Out". Boys from 5 to 9 have pizza, bowl, do gymnastics, hold contests and watch videos. The hours are from 6-8 p.m., the cost is $15 for members and $22 for non-members. Have a fun night out with Ruthann.

Beth Salvador was spotted around town last weekend, she looks super! Some people sure don't change, she still looks like a little high school student! Great gal.

❑ As the season approaches, be sure to shop Cohasset. Our merchants really have all that we need, and go out of their way to please! We even have our own flea market now, located at the old skating rink. Go up and take a peek, it's fun.

Please don't forget to call with your news, there should be lots around at this time of year!

Wigmore sees DPW as a threat

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The committee studying the feasibility of creating a public works department stirred up controversy last week.

Wire department Superintendent Stephen Wigmore appeared before selectmen and demanded that selectmeh tell him within a week whether his department would be abolished.

In an exchanged marked by raised voices, Wigmore told selectmen he believed "one individual is out to get us."

Wigmore also told selectmen he would not cooperate with the committee.

The study committee was charged with looking at a variety of ways different town departments could be combined to save money and improve efficiency. Their report is due early next year.

Wigmore's department handles most electrical problems for the town and school, including fire alarms and wiring inspections.

Other departments being looked at include highway, sewer, water, tree, park and cemetery departments and the recycling transfer facility.

Wigmore was incensed at reports that the committee questioned the need for a wire department.

Committee member Mary Jane McArthur raised the issue. She said several towns, including Hingham, hire electrical inspectors.

The wire department had support from the committee as well.

Selectmen were not pleased by Wigmore's ultimatum.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle told Wigmore he was out of order.

Laugelle also tried to smooth ruffled feathers by telling Wigmore the committee was only making a recommendation. The final decision, he said, was up to the town.

Laugelle told Wigmore his demand was futile because no one would have that kind of information by Wigmore's deadline. He also said he personally supported the wire department.

"As far as I'm concerned, the wire department should never be cut. I realize what it would cost to hire an electrician."

Selectmen Jane Goedecke put Wigmore on notice that she would not tolerate his ultimatums.

"You can be angry and you have every right, but the fact remains that you work for us," she said. "I consider [your ultimatum] to be insubordination."

Selectman Diana Kornet, usually the peacemaker on the board, said, "You don't deliver an ultimatum to us."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby encouraged Wigmore to work with the study committee.

"I understand your concern. I don't think it helps us if you get mad at us," Gjesteby said. "We're looking for efficient ways to organize ourselves as a town. Go and educate that committee. The jobs still have to be done."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts reminded Wigmore that economic conditions may force the town to make difficult decisions.

"It's quite possible we may have to cut back on employment in the community, particularly if we can't get an override," Tebbetts said.

All five selectmen stressed the importance of defending his department before the committee.

"I'll go. I'll go," Wigmore finally conceded.

THE CURVE AHEAD

Scoliosis is a disorder which is characterized by a side-to-side lateral curve of the spine in the shape of a "C" or an "S". It strikes females in seven out of every ten cases, and may begin in any of the three stages of life. Until relatively recently, it had been thought that pregnancy carried the risk of increasing the progression of the curve of the spine. This presumption worried many scoliosis-sufferers to the point where they decided against motherhood. However, a study undertaken at the Alfred I. du Pont Institute in Wilmington, Delaware shows that scoliotic women need not fear pregnancy. According to the study, pregnancy carries no increased risk for adding to the progression of the spine's natural curve. In addition, the study showed that scoliosis had no impact upon delivery.

❑ We congratulate all of the fall sports teams, their efforts were grand though they didn't come home with any state trophies, they are all winners. Fall sports may be over folks, but winter sports aren't far behind. So watch the Mariner for the schedule then make plans for your family to participate.

❑ While on the subject of fall sports, there won't be a football game on Thanksgiving this year. But, there will be the annual powder puff game, that's when the junior girls challenge the senior girls to a tough football game. It will be on Nov. 18 at 1 p.m. It's great fun, don't miss it.

Rave reviews were "around town" after the three performances of "Godspell" this weekend. It was stated that they should repeat it at another time so that all could attend, maybe they (the cast and crew) will think about it and do it.

❑ Ruthann Sargent sure is a busy gal, and it seems that all that she does involves kids . . . they sure take a shine to her! She is holding a re-run this Friday (11/16) at the Community Center, "Boy's Night Out". Boys from 5 to 9 have pizza, bowl, do gymnastics, hold contests and watch videos. The hours are from 6-8 p.m., the cost is $15 for members and $22 for non-members. Have a fun night out with Ruthann.

Beth Salvador was spotted around town last weekend, she looks super! Some people sure don't change, she still looks like a little high school student! Great gal.

❑ As the season approaches, be sure to shop Cohasset. Our merchants really have all that we need, and go out of their way to please! We even have our own flea market now, located at the old skating rink. Go up and take a peek, it's fun.

Please don't forget to call with your news, there should be lots around at this time of year!

Wigmore sees DPW as a threat

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

The committee studying the feasibility of creating a public works department stirred up controversy last week.

Wire department Superintendent Stephen Wigmore appeared before selectmen and demanded that selectmeh tell him within a week whether his department would be abolished.

In an exchanged marked by raised voices, Wigmore told selectmen he believed "one individual is out to get us."

Wigmore also told selectmen he would not cooperate with the committee.

The study committee was charged with looking at a variety of ways different town departments could be combined to save money and improve efficiency. Their report is due early next year.

Wigmore's department handles most electrical problems for the town and school, including fire alarms and wiring inspections.

Other departments being looked at include highway, sewer, water, tree, park and cemetery departments and the recycling transfer facility.

Wigmore was incensed at reports that the committee questioned the need for a wire department.

Committee member Mary Jane McArthur raised the issue. She said several towns, including Hingham, hire electrical inspectors.

The wire department had support from the committee as well.

Selectmen were not pleased by Wigmore's ultimatum.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle told Wigmore he was out of order.

Laugelle also tried to smooth ruffled feathers by telling Wigmore the committee was only making a recommendation. The final decision, he said, was up to the town.

Laugelle told Wigmore his demand was futile because no one would have that kind of information by Wigmore's deadline. He also said he personally supported the wire department.

"As far as I'm concerned, the wire department should never be cut. I realize what it would cost to hire an electrician."

Selectmen Jane Goedecke put Wigmore on notice that she would not tolerate his ultimatums.

"You can be angry and you have every right, but the fact remains that you work for us," she said. "I consider [your ultimatum] to be insubordination."

Selectman Diana Kornet, usually the peacemaker on the board, said, "You don't deliver an ultimatum to us."

Selectman Martha Gjesteby encouraged Wigmore to work with the study committee.

"I understand your concern. I don't think it helps us if you get mad at us," Gjesteby said. "We're looking for efficient ways to organize ourselves as a town. Go and educate that committee. The jobs still have to be done."

Selectman Ned Tebbetts reminded Wigmore that economic conditions may force the town to make difficult decisions.

"It's quite possible we may have to cut back on employment in the community, particularly if we can't get an override," Tebbetts said.

All five selectmen stressed the importance of defending his department before the committee.

"I'll go. I'll go," Wigmore finally conceded.

Chiropractic for Health

THE CURVE AHEAD

Scoliosis is a disorder which is characterized by a side-to-side lateral curve of the spine in the shape of a "C" or an "S". It strikes females in seven out of every ten cases, and may begin in any of the three stages of life. Until relatively recently, it had been thought that pregnancy carried the risk of increasing the progression of the curve of the spine. This presumption worried many scoliosis-sufferers to the point where they decided against motherhood. However, a study undertaken at the Alfred I. du Pont Institute in Wilmington, Delaware shows that scoliotic women need not fear pregnancy. According to the study, pregnancy carries no increased risk for adding to the progression of the spine's natural curve. In addition, the study showed that scoliosis had no impact upon delivery.

We urge you to establish a routine of a periodic chiropractic exam and discover how such a procedure can benefit your lifestyle and your enjoyment. Call today and learn how chiropractic applications address the problems and discomforts you may be experiencing. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted. We'd like to extend our very best wishes to all our friends and patients for a very Happy Thanksgiving.

P.S. In 80 percent of all cases, scoliosis is "idiopathic", meaning it occurs for no apparent reason.

Giving thanks for blessings

It's time to be thankful.

Thanksgiving — which happens next Thursday (Nov. 22) — means more than turkey dinner and fruit pies.

It's a chance to slow down and think about what is truly important.

It's an opportunity to acknowledge all the good that exists in our lives.

Our own gratitude list could take up half the paper. But space limitations bring their own blessings — the limits force us to make choices about our priorities.

Anyway we just want you all to know we are grateful that:

- the military personnel in the Middle East aren't engaged in all out warfare — at least for today.
- the state's economy will get its chance to improve.
- our schools continue to provide high quality education to the children of our town.
- the community is affluent enough to pay for basic services — and even manages to fund some others like the country club.
- private social service agencies are able to in Cohasset despite cuts in state and federal aid — agencies like the Cohasset Social Service League and local Council on Aging.
- there is an ambulance which responds quickly to calls for help.
- people care enough to complain about problems in government agencies.
- the Recycling/Transfer Station continues to operate — recycling can give our children a better future.
- our Harbor isn't more polluted.
- the dramatic arts program at Cohasset High continues to turn out top performers. (Incidentally, a fine "Godspell" played last weekend at the high school.)
- our readers value news about our community enough to keep the Cohasset Mariner in their homes and our advertisers are willing support us. (Newspapers only survive through the support of readers and advertisers.)
- there are hundreds of adults who volunteer their time and energy to keep the youth sports programs alive and kicking. The coaches who volunteer for the soccer, baseball and other great sports programs deserve high praise.
- people come forward with such generosity to the needs in our community. (We understand the PSO's Monte Carlo Night was a fantastic success.
- we have the ability to focus on the good, the truthful, the beautiful.

Indeed, we are thankful for our health and for today.

Have a happy & joyful Thanksgiving

Commissioner Ahearn thanks the voters

Letters

To the Editor:

Through your letter column I thank the voters of Norfolk County for their support of me as a Commissioner since 1978. And for local voter approval as a State Representative from 1964 to 1974.

We look to a future with changes made by the voters and sincerely wish the best to those who will serve in the times ahead.

All of us are proud of the rule of the majority, but some of us are, on occasion, naturally disappointed in the outcome!

Limitations of space and your reader's time preclude a wider discourse but, suffice to say, I have enjoyed my years in the public service, and will be forever grateful to my many loyal supporters and friends. It is they who have kept their faith in me, performed the tasks, and sought nothing in return!

And there is the knowledge that, without the responsibilities of office, I will be able to devote more time to family and the practice of law.

Many thanks!
David C. Ahearn
Norfolk County Commissioner

PSO issues note of thanks to businesses

To the Editor:

The Cohasset P.S.O. would like to thank everyone who supported our recent Monte Carlo night. It is through these fundraisers that the P.S.O. is able to provide enrichment programs to our schools. Special thanks to the Mariner for its' ever-faithful help with publicity, Dwyer's Cleaners for the generous use of its sign, all the merchants who allow us to hang posters in their stores, Bob Morgan and Associates, Dick Senechal, Dennis Lamp, Rep. Mary Jeannette Murray, South Shore Sports Center, John Carr, Laura Atherton, the Christoffels, Helene Thorntorn, Lappen Auto Parts, Reeds Country Way Nursery, Buttonwood Books, Curtis Liquors, and Cohasset Plaza Liquors. Our children benefit from your generosity.

Thank You
P.S.O.

Success of PSO's Monte Carlo praised

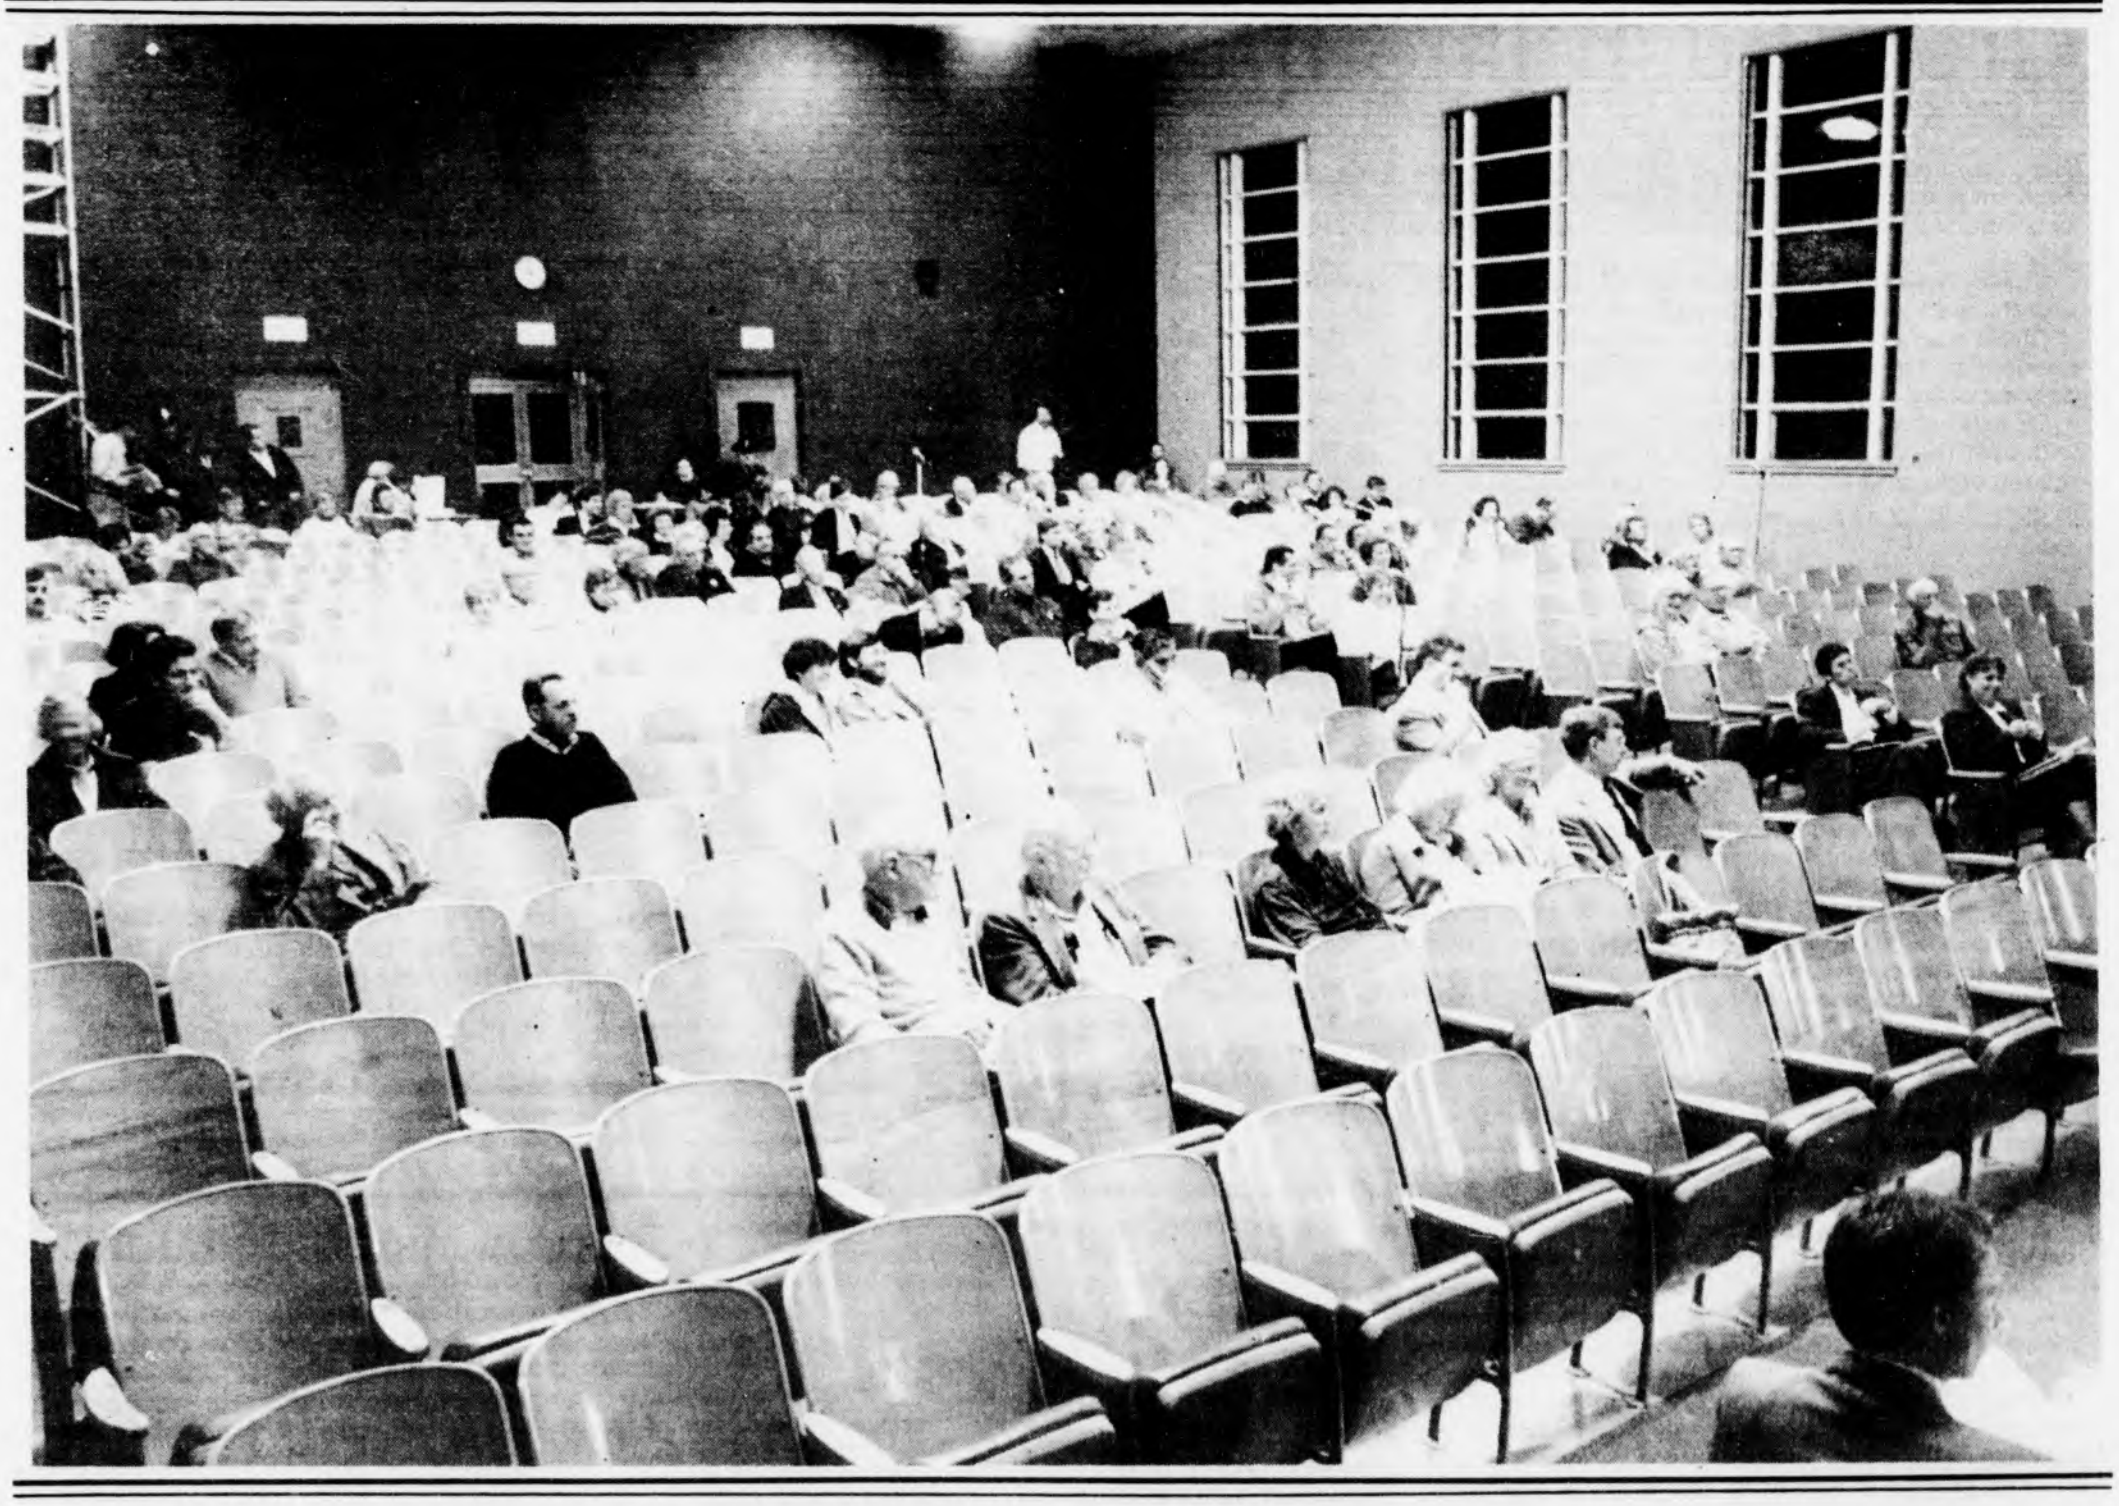
To the Editor:

We would very much appreciate the opportunity to thank the many members of the Cohasset community who graciously supported the Parent School Organization's Fifth Annual Monte Carlo Night held on Saturday, Nov. 3. Because it was the most successful yet, we are able to sponsor a record number of curriculum enrichment activities in the Osgood, Deerhill and Jr./Sr. High schools this year.

We are grateful not only to those who participated, but also to those who helped in a myriad of ways throughout the evening. Additionally, the success was due in large part to the many local connections and area businesses who generously provided a number of door prizes and auction items.

Three delightful weekend get-a-ways were donated by the Guest Suites group: Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowes Wharf, the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel in Waltham and the Guest Quarters Suite Hotel in Boston/Cambridge. Dick Senechal helped obtain the weekends and Francois Nivaud is managing director of the Boston Harbor Hotel at Rowes Wharf.

A number of items offered were sports orientated: The South Shore Sports Center in Hingham and Ted Carroli, donated a soccer clinic and a basketball clinic, while Dennis Lamp of the Boston Red Sox promised to give a pitching lesson for two. Bob Morgan of Morgan Associates, the The Northeast Group arranged for the donation of Puma, Etonic and Nubec shoes, as well as several pairs of Quetee sports sunglasses. Stan Walsh of American Sales and Marketing helped obtain a 10 speed all terrain mountain bike. And, the Sextons made available a condo at the Killington Golf Club — all to help raise funds for supplementing the school's curriculum.



Others to whom we are grateful include Ed Lappen of Lappen Discount Auto Parts and Buttonwood Books for gift certificates; Cohasset Plaza Liquors and Curtis Liquors for several bottles of wine; representative Mary Jeanette Murray for conducting a day behind the scenes at the Massachusetts State House; and, Laura Atherton for catering hors d'oeuvres and desserts for an upcoming French Country Supper.

Reed's Country Way Nursery on the Cohasset/Hingham line generously loaned floor plants and Arthur Roebuck of The British Relief Restaurant in Hingham catered the evening.

On behalf of the school children who will participate in and benefit from the curriculum enrichment programs you have made possible, we thank you!

Most sincerely,
Beth Christoffel and Helene Thornton

'Babes in Toyland' is musical gift for whole family

By Diane Manuel
Special to the Mariner

That New Theatre opens the holiday season with "Babes in Toyland," a musical for the entire family.

Featuring a storybook cast of characters, from Bo Peep and Mother Goose, to Simple Simon, Miss Muffet, and Red Riding Hood, the show opens Nov. 30 at 7 p.m. at Cushing Center, Route 123, Norwell. Additional performances are Dec. 1, 7, and 8 at 7 p.m., and Dec. 1, 2, 8, and 9 at 2 p.m.

All seats in Cushing Center are assigned, and ticket prices are as follows: general admission $10; seniors $9; children 12 and under $8; groups of 20 or more $7. Group sales and credit card orders can be reserved by calling 826-7983. All other tickets can be ordered by calling 878-1298 or 749-0867.

Featured performers in "Babes in Toyland" include Kristy Kedian of Plymouth as Contrary Mary, Doug Mathews of Scituate as Alan, Sharon Petti of Hanson as the Widow Piper, and Dan Walsh of Weymouth as the dastardly Barnaby. Thirty-six children from nine South Shore towns portray dolls, toy soldiers, and fairies as they romp through a spooky spider forest and magical toyland.

The "toyland" cast includes the following adults and children: Gina Vanaria of Scituate as Hilda; Jason and Abbe Reis of Norwell as Jack and Jill; Anne Harris of Hingham as Bo Peep; Greg Baker of Marshfield as Tom; Ed Cherry of Weymouth and John Seamans of Hanson as Gonzorgo and Roderigo; Maura Elizabeth Finn of Hanson as Jane; Allison Brink of South Weymouth and Leigh Donadini of Abington as Spiders; Lisa Modano of Hingham as Brown Bear; Jeanne Scammell of Norwell as the Fairy Queen; Sandy Moore of Hingham as Mother Goose; Deborah Carleton of Scituate as Mistress Toymaker; Maureen Rowe of Kingston as Grumio; Jeff Clarke of Norwell as Simple Simon.

Also, Patrick and Casey Dwyer of Marshfield as Peter and Tommy Tucker; Brian Hawes of Marshfield as Boy Blue; Adam Huke of Hanover as Bobby Shafto; Shannon Hedrick of Hingham as Sallie Waters; Emily Bartholomew of Hingham as Miss Muffet; Elizabeth Trozzi of Norwell as Curly Locks; and Heidi Ferguson of Norwell as Red Riding Hood.

Featured as fairies are Hilary Baker of Hingham; Melissa Christino of Hingham; Emilee Dennis of Norwell; Julie Hunt of E. Weymouth; Bethany Johnson of Hanover; Kerri Jones of Hingham; Brie and Erin Lyall of Hanover; Healey Sutton; Megan Williams of Hingham; and Kristin and Lauren Vose of Scituate.

Toyland dolls are Melissa Baker of Marshfield; Allison Huke of Hanover; Sarah Holmes of Norwell; Katie and Mark Mahoney of Norwell; Mary Ellen Raymond of Cohasset; Rachel Paolucci of Scituate; Sarah Spencer of Pembroke; Meaghan Sutherland of Scituate; Abigail and Emily Taylor of Marshfield; and Claire Whitner of Hingham.

The ladies chorus includes Sandy Baker of Hingham; Allison Brink of S. Weymouth; Leigh Donadini of Abington; Lisa Modano of Hingham; and Jaye Ellen Moore of Norwell.

Football mom finds cartoon offensive

To the Editor:

I am a parent of a son who participates in the Cohasset football program and found your cartoon very offensive to the kids who are doing their best to keep a program alive. It is time that we as residents of Cohasset should be supporting the program, not putting negative cartoons in the town paper about them.

These kids are practicing every day and the new players are getting stronger and stronger. At game time they always give one hundred percent. They play hard and sure they would love a winning record, but even they understand that it takes time to build a strong program.

I applaud them for their effort and will always be there to support and encourage them.

Sincerely,
Barbara Rolandelli

PSO seeks register receipts for Macintosh program

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Parent School Organization would like to remind the citizens of Cohasset of the wonderful opportunity to support our schools and students this holiday season by donating Stop and Shop blue register receipts and Bradlees sales stubs to our schools for Apple computers and software.

Last year Cohasset surpassed all expectations during this program and we were able to purchase almost $100,000.00 worth of equipment for our school system.

Please remember to donate your slips through December 29, 1990. Red apple collection boxes are located in each school, every church, the Community Center, the library, the Town Hall and the meeting room at the Elm Street Senior Housing.

Thank You,
Patricia Baird

Greenbush line branches away from OCRR

view implemented by section 106 of the National Historic Preservation Act and a Section 4(f) review necessitated of the Department of Transportation Act.

These two reviews, expected to take several months, apply only to the Greenbush line.

Glynn said the additional environmental analysis needed for the Middleboro and Plymouth lines is only expected to take a few weeks.

He estimated that separating the Greenbush line will save the MBTA nearly $20 million in inflation related costs and will allow the other two lines to be in operation by 1994.

Although the MBTA still plans to go ahead with environmental reviews for the Greenbush line opponents think this latest development may be the death knell for the line.

Alexander Macmillan, the chairman of the Hingham historical commission and an outspoken opponent of the proposed line, said he actively campaigned for governor-elect Weld after the Republican candidate said he would not go ahead with the line unless South Shore residents wanted it.

"Bill Weld has said he will be sensitive to us and he is going to be sympathetic to our concerns," he said.

Macmillan said that the victory of Weld, a fiscal conservative, spells trouble for proponents who wanted to break ground on the line before Governor Michael Dukakis leaves office in January.

Weld's victory was not the only glimmer of hope for opponents, he said. "More importantly we have a new state senator who opposes the Greenbush line."

Republican Robert Hedlund beat out 26-year political veteran Robert Ambler in the Nov. 6 general election.

Hedlund, who has publicly given his complete opposition to the line, made a campaign issue of what he called Ambler's "flip-flopping" on the issue. Ambler who attended a meeting of the HVA to clarify his stance denied any ambiguity to his position.

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, who ran unopposed in this year's election, has also opposed the restoration, citing a list of potential adverse impacts the rail would bring.

The new state representative for the Fourth Norfolk District, former assistant district attorney Paul Haley of South Weymouth, has also come out against the railroad.

Macmillan said these elections will only add to what he thinks is a doomed project of a lame duck governor.

The Hingham historical commission has been attending scoping meetings with the MBTA to map out negative impacts under a Section 106 review mandated by the Massachusetts Historical Society.

At the Nov. 13 meeting of the board of selectmen Macmillan presented the board with a map detailing the area of noise and vibration impacts the two have agreed on.

He said the two have yet to hammer out an agreement on the impact of the rail on traffic and traffic patterns.

In January another scoping meeting will be held between the two to work out the details of a federally mandated Section 4(f) review of historic district impacts.

Macmillan said representatives from the Urban Mass Transit Authority (UMTA) will attend the meeting to ensure the review goes by the book.

"When the MBTA conceded that 4(f) applies, it showed that they won't fool around anymore," Macmillan said. "This won't be the kind of thing you can toss out in a couple of months. UMTA is calling for all prudent and feasible alternatives to be studied. Those are extremely strong words. The MBTA may have to come up with as many as five alternatives to study."

Macmillan said internal problems also threaten the viability of the third line.

By Nov. 30 the MBTA will have to submit a detailed budget to the citizen's advisory committee that oversees the authority.

He said he has spoken to committee members who are beginning to question whether the MBTA's plan to use federal money allotted for repair and upkeep of present lines is feasible.

"They (the MBTA) have been moving things around and doing tricks with mirrors to get around the election," Macmillan said, adding that now the authority has to come clean and spell out exactly what it plans to do and what it can afford to do.

MILESTONES & AWARDS

Lombard grant awarded

Stephen Carroll, son of Kathleen Carroll of Cohasset and James Carroll of Scituate has been awarded the Joseph P. Lombard Congressional Intern Scholarship from Merrimack College. Stephen, a junior, a Political Science and Economics Major will be studying at American University in Washington, D.C. in the upcoming Spring, 1991 Semester. BULLETIN BOARD

First ski trip set

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first Ski trip of the year will be on Sunday, Dec. 16, to Loon Mt. This first, early-bird trip will again be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club. The cost for this trip is $38 per person, and $28 per person for the Beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson, equipment rentals. For the $38 non-beginner package you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners, are $13, and you should bring your rental money with you the day of the trip, in cash.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before as for $28 you will be fully outfitted and given a lesson as well. For seasoned skiers, you will be provided the opportunity to get an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Thursday, Nov. 29. To register you may call the recreation department office, at 383-6791, however, payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and that must be paid at the recreation office, 1st floor Town Hall, or mailed to us along with a parental info/permission form.

RECREATION/BOOSTERS BASKETBALL

The Cohasset Recreation Department/Booster's Basketball registrations will be held for girls and boys in grades 1 through 9, at Town Hall, on Saturday, Nov. 10, from 9 to 10:30 a.m.

The fee for the program is $25, with a $5 discount offered to second and subsequent children registering from the same family. Checks should be made payable to: "Town of Cohasset." There will also be a $5 per participant, team shirt charge, and checks for shirts must be made payable to: "Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club."

Registration, at the prescribed time is essential, because evaluations will be held Nov. 17. Should you be unable to register on Saturday, Nov. 10, you must do so between the hours of 2:30 and 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the recreation office.

Details on the Basketball Program will be available at registration. Games are played on Saturdays, but not during any vacation periods in order to avoid conflicts. Including playoffs and finals, a total of six games will be played and the season is projected to end on Feb. 9.

The Recreational Basketball Program is made available via the joint efforts of the Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club and the recreation department. George W. Ellinger will coordinate the basketball program again this season.

Holidays at Art Center

Focus on the holidays with Family Art, Young Artist and Adult Workshops at South Shore Art Center, Cohasset, ranging from 1 to 3 classes per workshop or for adults, perfect skills in a favorite medium.

Watercolor, a three day workshop with renowned painter, Ted Minchin meets Dec. 4-6 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Through Minchin's inventive approach to watercolor, students will concentrate on finding a means of personal expression. Additionally, Minchin's work will be the Faculty Feature Exhibit at the Art Center Nov. 16 to Dec. 21. Other adult workshops include River to Sea Critique with Ann Marguerite Murphy, Silk Screen with Mary M. Cotter, Midas Touches with Jane Viator, Piecing with the Nine-Patch Square with Cindy Hilgendorf, Papermaking with Brenton Welsh and Clay Luminaria with Maria Gould.

For the first time, the Art Center is offering Family Art Workshops: parents and children explore different facets of art together. Specially designed for your very young artist, Making Art Together meeting on Nov. 17 and Dec. 15 from 2 to 3:30 p.m. focus on totally different activities. On Nov. 17, learn about the ancient city of Carthage and construct a mosaic using oven baked clay tiles and acrylic paints. On Dec. 15, learn about the holiday traditions of Hispanic and Spanish cultures. Activities include making luminarias and breaking a pinata! Other Family Art Workshops include Introduction to Origami and Clay Christmas Ornaments and Gifts. The Family Art Workshops offer a creative way for families to enjoy the holidays together. Young Artist Workshops focus traditionally on the holidays at this time of year. Holiday Crafts for ages 4, 5 and K; Creative Holiday Crafts for grades K and 1; Holidays around the world for grades 1-3; and Holiday Folk Arts for grades 4-6 all meet for three classes each. For dates and times for any or all of the workshops at the Art Center, please call Tues. to Sat. 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Community center events

Boys' ages 5 to 9 can join their friends for a fun night out at the Community Center with Ruthann Sargent. The boys will enjoy pizza, do gymnastics, bowl, see videos, and have contests. Join us Friday, November 16, from 6 to 8 p.m. Space is limited. Call 383-0088 to sign up. Members $12, non-members $22.

The Community Center can fit aerobics into your schedule without juggling your routine. Low impact aerobics with Mary Doherty meets on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday morning from 9 to 10 a.m. Babysitting is available. Come by for a morning workout on any given day or for all three days. Evening aerobics with Normandie Nigh meets on Tuesday and Thursday evening from 7 to 8 p.m. A Saturday morning class gets you motivated from 8:30 to 10 a.m.

Learn to make a fabric and lace covered album for holiday gift giving, just like the ones you have seen at craft shows. Students receive step by step instruction, enabling them to apply this creative skill to future projects. The fee includes the price of all materials.

This workshop will meet on Monday morning, December 10 from 10 to 12 noon. The cost is $25.

New times and days are now available for the Gym Dandy classes at the Community Center. A creepers and crawlers class for children 3-12 months old will meet on Wednesday morning from 12 to 12:45 p.m.

International Cooking for kids with Ann Gallagher will cook up again for another 10 week session beginning Wednesday, December 5. Kids learn to prepare their favorite Chinese, Italian, Mexican, and Cajun dishes and create delicious desserts. Children ages 7-12 are welcome and the cost is $70.

A special workshop with Christmas Crafts for Kids will meet on Thursday afternoon December 6 for three weeks. Children will learn to make holiday crafts for themselves and for gift giving. This class is for children ages 7-12 and the cost of this class is $20 for members and $25 for non-members.

A new Gymnastics class for children ages 7 and 8 is now being offered at the Community Center. The class will begin on Wednesday, December 5, and it will meet for 12 weeks from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. The cost is $60 for members and $70 for non-members.

A special workshop for The Victorian Wreath and Christmas Tree will have a date change to Monday, December 3 from 10 a.m. to noon. You will create beautiful Victorian Christmas fantasies for gift giving and home decoration. You will be able to choose your own color scheme from peach, mauve, or pink. We encourage a week in advance registration for this class. All materials are provided and the cost of this class is $50 for the Victorian Wreath and $55 for the Victorian Tree.

A Sweater Sampler workshop to revolutionalize your sweater knitting. This workshop offers experienced knitters freedom from pattern reading. Some supplies will be needed for class. The class will meet on Monday, November 19 from 9 to 12 noon for 4 weeks. The cost is $48.

Bowling classes are offered for children in grades K through 3 on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoon beginning December 11. Kids learn how to bowl and keep score at the Center's 4-lane candlepin bowling alleys. Classes will meet for 12 weeks and the cost is $36.

To register for any class or workshop please call the Center at 383-0088.

Safe Homes on the rise

One hundred and fifteen households (two hundred students) have registered their homes for the Safe Homes program so far.

If you have not received a Safe Homes pamphlet or lost yours, you may pick one up at the Cohasset Town Hall or the Paul Pratt Library. The address to return a signed pamphlet is to: Safe Homes, Cohasset Drug and Alcohol Committee, 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, MA 02025. If you have any questions concerning the Safe Homes program please call Susan Shumaker at 383-1443. The deadline for responses has been extended up to Wednesday, November 21. Parents who have registered their home as a Safe Home will receive a list of all the houses by the first week of December.

Food for all at Village Fair

Though, as usual, the emphasis will be on holly, greens, and attractive holiday gift items, foods to suit many tastes will also again be featured at the 50th annual Cohasset Village Fair to be held in buildings around the Common, and on the Common itself, on Saturday, Dec. 1, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Talented cooks and bakers around the town are already planning their delicacies to be offered at the fair, while those who offer some of the popular "fast foot" items are ordering their items and organizing the groups that will staff the booths.

Jim and Cindy Dedes of the Panagia Greek Orthodox Church, have the overall responsibility for the bake table and are enlisting representatives of the other three churches to canvass their parishioners for donations of breads, cakes, cookies and pastries to go on sale at the fair. With the participation of the Greek Church there will again be offerings of Greek delicacies that have become one of the most popular of the fair features.

Ralph and Susi Coley will again preside over the Chowder Bar that is the popular lunching spot at the fair, vending sandwiches and drinks in addition to the traditional New England specialty. This is always a major attraction at the Fair, providing an interlude between shopping the many booths and tables.

Only severe bad weather would prevent the snack bar from again operating on the Common where it has been a center of activity in recent years. Bob Moody is managing this feature and will recruit a group of men and young people to assist in preparing and dispensing the hot dogs, hamburgers and hot and cold drinks that attract scores of young and old.

Traditional wind-up of the fair is the annual Village Fair Dinner which again will be held in Walton Rodgers Hall of St. Stephen's Church on Saturday evening, with diners gathering at 6:30 p.m. and dinner served at 7 p.m. This year the dinner will be catered by Arthur Roebuck, whose British Relief restaurant in Hingham Square is known for its tasty specialties. Debbie Becker is chair of the dinner, assisted by Ann Mitchell and Sharon Moody. Tickets at $15 are now on sale through representatives of the four participating churches. Historically this has been a sold-out event, attracting many who have no other role in the fair but who come for the socializing and carol singing that go with the good food.

Proceeds of the fair will go as usual to the four churches...Second Congregational, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, St. Stephen's Episcopal, and Panagia Greek Orthodox.

Aerobic class time change

Due to the Montessori Craft Fair at the Cohasset Community Center on November 17, the morning aerobics class has been cancelled.

Class will begin at a new time, 9 a.m. on Saturday mornings as of November 24. Drop-in fee is $5. Call 383-0088 for more information.

BULLETIN BOARD

Meditate with Pierson

Mediation experts Stephen W. Dorsey and C. Michele Dorsey will discuss the role of mediation in settling disputes between individuals and corporations in the first segment of the Pierson to Person show, Thursday, Nov. 15.

The second segment will feature Cohasset Town Clerk, Frances L. Marks, and Election Warden, Domenic M. Baccari, reviewing the recent election results and the inner workings of town government.

Pierson to Person is televised live weekly, each Thursday evening, 8 to 9 p.m., on South Shore Channels 3 and 53.

The show is broadcast in the towns of Hanover, Cohasset, Scituate, Norwell, Hull and Hingham. Also, the show is shown on a tape delayed basis each Monday evening in Weymouth at 8:30 p.m.

Get your creativity flowing

Registration is now being taken for the Nov/Dec series of Children's Creativity Workshops.

The series runs for five weeks. In this fall series realistic as well as imaginary themes will be the focus. Each child will be encouraged to express their own creativity as well as learning a more realistic approach by drawing through observations from nature.

The newly developed "Mini Creativity Workshops" are a series of two workshops. "Creating with Pressed Flowers" and "Painted Ornaments and Cookies" are taking place this month. Each workshop meets for 1 1/2 hours and has a limited enrollment to assure lots of individual instruction. To reserve a place for these experiences or to sign up for the fall program call instructor Lynn Rizzotto at 749-2453.

Prime Assets available

Premiere Funding, a mortgage consulting firm, has announced the availability of its Prime Asset Mortgage Line. The Cohasset-based company indicated that the new line combines the best features of an equity loan and a permanent first mortgage. It can also be used as a second mortgage.

According to Premiere Funding president, Richard Lahar, the loan is written for a normal 30-year repayment schedule. During the first 10 years, the loan acts as an equity line, with repayment of interest only required. It can be used and reused as an equity line. After 10 years, the loan goes on a 20-year repayment schedule, so that it is completely paid off at the end of 30 years. There are no prepayment penalties and the loan is based on the prime rate, the rate paid by large corporations.

Lahar indicated that typical equity lines run too long, which can result in excessive interest payments. The Prime Asset Line limits the term, in effect forcing repayment within a more reasonable period. Premiere Funding expects this to be a popular program due to its dual use.

Premiere Funding is a mortgage consultant that works with more than 20 national and regional lending institutions. For more information regarding Premiere Funding's Prime Asset Line or other programs for mortgage borrowers, call 383-6920 or write: Premiere Funding, Inc., 714 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, MA 02025.

Sixty-plus club to meet

The Cohasset Sixty-Plus Club holds it's monthly meeting Thursday, Nov. 15 at the Unitarian Parish House. A sandwich lunch is served at noon. A business meeting follows. Entertainment — Bingo.

Christmas luncheon is Thursday, Dec. 13. Reservations are a must. Call 383-1130.

'Queen of the Back Bay'

The Friends of the Cohasset Council on Aging will present "Queen of Back Bay" on Sunday, Nov. 18 at 2 p.m. at Cohasset High School, as a fundraiser to benefit the Council and its programs and services to senior citizens through the Cohasset Senior Center.

In the one-woman show, versatile actress Robin Lane recreates the life of Isabella Stewart Gardner, the uniquely independent grande dame of late 19th Century Boston. Using projected visuals, "Queen of Back Bay" transports its audience all over the globe, and is delightful entertainment for everyone.

A tax deductible donation of $10 per ticket is requested. Tickets are available through the Senior Center, 383-9112, at the performance.

LDS Church hosts event

Latter-day Saints from the greater South Shore area will convene this weekend, Nov. 17 and 18, for the Hingham Mass. Stake Conference, a conference sponsored by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and held twice a year. The Saturday evening meeting will take place at the Foxboro LDS chapel, 76 Main Street, Foxboro, and the Sunday session will begin at 10 a.m. at the Hingham LDS chapel, 379 Gardner Street, in South Hingham.

Stake President, Robert S. Wood, of Newport will conduct the meetings with a General Authority in attendance.

Benson work displayed

A special exhibition of Frank Benson etchings will be displayed at South Shore Art Center from November 16-December 21.

Benson (1862-1951) is a highly respected and renowned American Impressionist whose work is included in major museums and collections throughout the world. The upcoming exhibition will focus on the etchings he created in Salem and Cape Cod principally of marsh and duck hunting scenes.

Etchings shown at center

The 65 etchings are intimate in scale and evocative of a place and mood. Traditionally, the South Shore Art Center exhibitions focus on living regional artists, but this exhibition will feature an historic although regional artist.

Augmenting the etchings of Frank Benson will be wood sculptures of waterfowl by Hingham artist, Roy Black. A self-taught wood sculptor, he sculpts various genre of art; wildfowl decoys, decorative birds, and primitive toys although his primary interest is in interpretive sculpting and painting of wildfowl decoys.

On Friday, November 16 the Gala Preview Reception 6:30-9 p.m. will be the initial opportunity for collectors to select from the 30+ etchings which will be for sale. For ticket reservations ($25/person) and additional information, please call the Art Center Tuesday-Saturday from 10 a.m.-4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Bruin is seals chairman

Boston Bruin Glen Wesley has been selected the 1990 Christmas Seal Chairman for Lung Associations across the state. An announcement was made by Joe Godzik, president of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association and Cohasset Health Agent.

Christmas Seals—festive decorations for holiday gifts and packages—originated in 1907, and are the Lung Association's most important fund raising activity. Last year the Christmas Seal Campaign raised more than $1 million to fight lung disease and promote lung health in Massachusetts.

Contributions to the Christmas Seal Campaign support the Lung Association's public health education and research programs as well as activities such as asthma camp for children, smoking cessation and environmental health programs.

The first ski trip of the year

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first Ski trip of the year will be on Sunday, December 16, to Loon Mt. This first, early-bird trip will again be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club. The cost for this trip is $38 per person, and $28 per person for the Beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson, equipment rentals. For the $38 non-beginner package you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners, are $13, and you should bring your rental money with you the day of the trip, in cash.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before as for $28 you will be fully outfitted and given a lesson as well. For seasoned skiers, you will be provided the opportunity to get an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Thursday, November 29. To register you may call the recreation department office, at 383-6791, however, payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and that must be paid at the recreation office, 1st floor Town Hall, or mailed to us along with a parental permission form.

Ski registrations set

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for ski lessons on Monday and Tuesday, November 26 and 27 from 2:30 p.m. to 4 p.m. both days, and Thursday, November 29, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall.

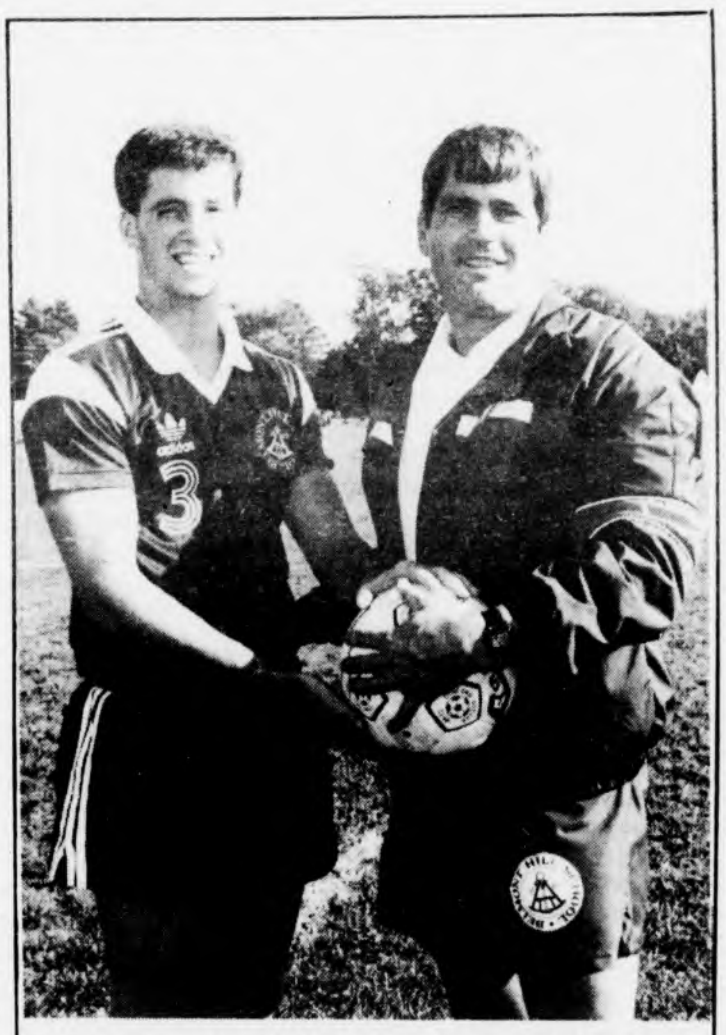
The cost for the five weeks of lessons to be held at the Blue Hills Ski School will be $80 per person. There are 5, 1-3/4 hour sessions. Parents must register children as a release form must be signed. Checks are to be made payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Lessons are scheduled to begin on Thursday, January 3. The fee covers lessons and transportation to and from Blue Hills for the 5 weeks. Equipment rental is $8 per session, payable in full, ($40), at the time of registration. Classes are offered for all levels of instruction, however, participants must be seven years of age at the start of classes. Buses will leave from the Town Hall parking lot at about 3:15 p.m., and return at about 6:45 p.m. Parents who wish to go as volunteer chaperones may sign-up during registration.

Gymnastics tryouts

Any girl interested in High School Gymnastics that is in grades 7-12 meet in the high school upstairs gym on Monday, Nov. 26. Try-outs will be held on Monday afternoon from 2:45 to 5 p.m. and Tuesday, Nov. 27, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Team will be posted in the upstairs lobby on Wednesday afternoon.

Basketball meet planned



Any girl in grades 7-12 interested in High School Cheerleading for basketball meet on Monday, Nov. 26, 27, 28 for practice 3 to 5 p.m. Tryouts will be held on Thursday evening at 8 p.m. in the upstairs gym. For more information regarding cheerleading please see Lisa Kondrat or Rebecca Hackenburg.

The list will be posted on Friday, November 30, in the upper lobby.

Spring soccer registration

Registrations for spring soccer will be accepted on Saturday, November 17 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Deer Hill School. All Cohasset children and students ages 6 through 19 (in 1991) are eligible to play. Teams comprised of 8 year old and above players compete against teams from area towns. Under 8 age teams will play only "in-town" teams. Registrations must be completed by December 15. The exact number of Cohasset teams must be submitted to the state association (MYSA) by Jan. 4. A maximum of 18 players will be allowed per team. Placement on a team will be according to the player's registration date. Late registrations will be returned if there are no available openings on a team.

The fee for the 1991 season will be $30 for the first family member, $25 for the second and $20 for each remaining family member. Checks should be payable to the "Cohasset Soccer Club." This fee covers all state and league assessments, uniforms, equipment, referee costs, and liability insurance.

Brian Pompeo accepts the congratulations of Belmont Hill assistant coach Cliff Goodband.

MARINER SPORTS

Team scores first win

On Saturday, Nov. 3, Cohasset football won its first game of the season away against East Boston, winning by a score of 18-0. Steven Harrington scored two of the three touchdowns, while Ray Jones scored the third. Next Saturday, Nov. 10, the final game of the season will be played at home against Scituate.

Davenport succeeds

On a drizzly, overcast day, the Ripon College football team of Wisconsin ended its season be defeating archrival Lawrence University, 14-6, at the Banta Bowl in Appleton.

Ripon scored first on a 10-play scoring drive late in the first quarter that covered 59 yards. The big plays in that drive were a 26-yard run by senior Dick Jahns of Ripon, Wis., and a 12-yard pass from senior Brian Besler of Madison, Wis., to junior Mark Meyers of Cudahy, Wis. The drive was capped by senior Eric Peterson of DeForest, Wis., who scored on a one-yard run. The extra point was added by senior Cam Lohergan of Blawenburg, N.J., to make the score 7-0.

That score remained until the second series of the second half, when Lawrence took possession on their own 41-yard line, their best starting position of the day, and put together an eight-play drive that featured two long pass plays, including one for the touchdown. That made the score 7-6 as they missed the extra point.

The final score of the day came on a 19-yard pass from Besler to Meyers. That play capped a four-play drive that was set up by an interception by Ripon's Larry Bailey, a junior from From Atkinson, Wis., which gave the Redmen possession of the ball on Lawrence's 29 yard line.

Ripon's defense, which came up with big plays when they needed to, was led by juniors Bob Pagel of Eyota, Minn., and Ralph Marvin of Crandon, Wis., who had 14 and 12 tackles, respectively. Marvin also broke up one pass and was credited with one and a half quarterback sacks, as was sophomore Clay Dutcher of Wautoma, Wis. McGee broke up two passes and intercepted one, while Bailey and junior Steve Votis of Hiles, Wis., each had one interception as well. Sophomore Rob Davenport of Cohasset, Mass., had eight tackles, senior Dan Allen of Abrams, Wis., had six, and senior Dick Kasson of Stevens Point, Wis., had five. Senior Dean Polster of Kiel, Wis., had one fumble recovery to go with this two tackles.

Ripon ended its season with a 7-2 overall record and 4-2 in conference, which ties them for second place in the North Division of the Midwest Conference.

The senior class won the award for the most spirit during the homecoming pep rally.

Veterans' agent Ripley punches no clock

Ripley doesn't stand on ceremony with set office hours. Veterans can call him any time they have a problem or a question. If he's not corralled in his clock shop trying to deal with recalcitrant cuckoo clocks or an obstreperous grandfather's clock, he'll soon be back.

"I'm delighted to help veterans," Ripley said. Although the state only expects him to administer the benefits, Ripley goes at least one step further.

If a veteran needs a job, Ripley will search around until he finds something that might be suitable. As a townie of long standing — his family arrived around 1638 — he probably knows everybody who might possibly have a job to offer.

If there are papers to fill out, Ripley will help fill them out.

And if there are bureaucracies to navigate, he'll do his best to steer a vet straight.

For medical needs, Ripley is sold on the V.A. hospital.

Being veterans' affairs director isn't a full-time thing.

"I don't have many cases," he said. Most of the veterans he works with served in World War II or Korea.

"We lost the last World War I veteran, Bunny Kennedy, one or two years back," he said.

Although veterans who served in Grenada and Panama are eligible for veterans' services, Ripley said he isn't aware of any Cohasset men or women who served in those conflicts.

He hopes there won't be any fighting in the Persian Gulf.

"All this money they're trying to cut out of the V.A., they'll fill right up," he said.

Ripley is a World War II veteran. He dropped out of high school and enlisted in the army at 18. He went to Japan as part of the Army of Occupation in 1946 and spent the next two years there.

It wasn't a difficult assignment for him. When he wasn't on duty, he did some site-seeing and climbed Mount Fuji.

"I thought Japan was marvelous," he said. The Japanese were already beginning to recover.

When he went home, he finished high school and went on to college.

Soon other careers beckoned.

He spent time with United Fruit in Columbia, then joined the State Department as a diplomatic courier.

To become a diplomatic courier you had to be 25 or older, single, a veteran, have overseas experience, a college degree, security clearance and type 35 words per minute.

It was the last one that nearly killed his career before it began.

"I must have had the reddest face by the time I was done typing," Ripley said.

He traveled the world with his pouches full of classified documents.

He describes the job as "just nerve wracking" not dangerous. But he traveled throughout the communist bloc, the Middle East, North Africa and the Philippines.

He probably flew on every plane in the world's fleets.

"I never saw the same airline hostess twice," he joked. It was definitely a job for a young men. Most diplomatic couriers "burn out" after a few years.

Ripley lasted for six before he headed for home.

He was ready to settle down. His future wife lived in the same Boston apartment building. And in 1965 he and Nancy married. Today they have two children in college. Heather is a student at UMass-Amherst and Noel Jr. attends Johnson State College in Vermont.

Ripley tried an assortment of other jobs and then fell into clock repair by accident. Basically an antique shop asked him to clean up and put together some grandfather clocks they had imported from England.

Ripley got hooked. Today he spends his time in a little shop stacked floor to ceiling with clocks of every description. A roly-poly wood stove keeps everything ticking along when the weather gets nippy.

Noel Ripley in his workshop.

Ripley praised the Legion for their efforts on Memorial and Veterans' Days.

"They do a nifty job," he said. "They deserve a lot of credit."

If you are a veteran, Ripley encourages you to contact the state and federal information lines for up to the minute information about benefits you may qualify for.

The state line is 727-3578 and the federal line is 227-4600. If you need copies of your service and discharge papers, the state maintains copies for all Massachusetts enlistees.

Merchant marines who served during World War II now qualify for benefits, he said. So far only one former merchant marine has contacted him.

Ripley wasn't a Marine, but he understands their motto, Semper Fideles. If you ask Ripley how long he plans to go on serving the veterans of Cohasset, you'll get a two-word answer.

"Probably forever."

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Library displays Osgood

To celebrate Book Week, November 12 - 18, there is a special display of children's art at the Paul Pratt Library.

All third grade students at the Osgood School had the opportunity to be the illustrator of a book cover for an imaginary book of their own. Under the guidance of art teacher Linda Stevens, students discussed different types of books, then chose their own subject and made up a title to illustrate.

Art work was executed in mixed media, with tempera and markers. The results are on display at the library and also at the Osgood School. So come take a look at the cover for Pat Penguin's Tux and other intriguing titles from the third grade class!

Teachers attend MFLA

Joseph Federico of Cohasset High School and Paul Narkiewicz attended the annual conference of the Mass. Foreign Language Assoc., November 2-3, at the Burlington Marriott Hotel. The conference consisted of over fifty workshops addressing classroom needs in six different languages and the use of computers and video communications. The Conference celebrated twenty-five years of MaFLA support for foreign language learning in Massachusetts. With its present membership of one thousand language teachers, the organization is working hard to help Massachusetts respond to the needs of the nineties: a global economy, the international business community and the new realities of a unified Europe.

Artists visit classes

Three projects were initiated by visiting artists. All second graders worked at least two times with each artist, and on occasion used the clay study at SSAC. Based on images from The Firebird and The Two Ivans, Susan Rodgerson directed large tempera-painted murals (now hanging in the 2nd grade corridors.) Serena Brundidge taught children the history of the Kremlin and Ivan the Terrible. She worked with clay forms based on the architecture of St. Basil's Cathedral. Nancy Connolly created folk art people with the students. Each child constructed a tiny armature, or skeleton, padded and tied it, then designed peasant clothing, or that of a Tsar's, to decorate their puppet figure.

Mrs. Linda Stevens, the Art Teacher at the Osgood School, created Firebirds with some of the second grade classes. Pearl Smith, whose son, Gregory, is a first grader, has lent information about the Ukraine.

Amy Golden has volunteered to demonstrate Russian Egg Painting with the classes, to create another authentic folk art display.

The second graders welcome their families and friends to view the many art pieces created from September to November on the Soviet Union at the Joseph Osgood School on display in the front hall during the week of November 13-16. On Friday, November 16, a Russian Tea Party Reception for all second graders will be held in the Dillon Gallery of the South Shore Art Center to culminate their program on the Soviet Union.

Grade 2 studies USSR

The grade 2 study of the Soviet Union began the last week of September, 1990 at the Joseph Osgood School. The idea for this unit took form after Rose Collins, a second grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood, previewed an open house for the "Arts Camp/The Soviet Union" at the South Shore Arts Center this past August. Mrs. Collins spoke with three of the artists who had developed the program.

Nancy Connolly, Susan Rodgerson, and Serena Brundidge, artists and teaching staff at SSAC, were invited to present their variations of Russian Folk Art and history to the entire second grade.

Reading from a collection of folk and fairy tales found at the Paul Pratt Library and Buttonwood Book Store, children were introduced to this Slavic culture. Using contemporary, non-fiction sources (from Soviet Union today, the Samantha Smith Story, etc.) children were encouraged by their teachers and visiting artists to compare people from the past to present. (Some Second Graders now follow the 6 o'clock news for events featuring Russia!)

Mrs. Johnson and daughter, Erin, a third grader at the Osgood taught some of the children how to count in Russian and how to say several Russian words. A language tape was made by Mrs. Johnson for all second grades to practice the Russian language.

Alix White narrated numerous slides of her personal experience travelling through Russia and the Ukraine. A video-tape of this presentation is available for viewing. The slide presentation was followed by beautifully illustrated Russian stories read by teachers and parents.

High math scorers

The following students were the top five scorers in the November contest of the New England Math League. Their combined score will be the team score for Cohasset.

The students were Peter Fahey, Maureen Smith, Katie O'Sullivan, Mike Cisneros and Andrew Ross.

Second Congregational Church builds with faith

By Gary A. Ritts
Special to the Mariner

For our third annual service project, the Second Congregational Church promoted a trip to Orland, Maine to work with the H.O.M.E. organization (information attached). On Sunday afternoon, July 29, 14 teenagers and 7 adults traveled 7 1/2 hours north to Orland, Maine (between Bucksport and Ellsworth). There we spent the week working for an outreach program established to help people help themselves through building their own homes, working in craft shops, maintaining livestock and gardens, and processing their own wood — from the fallen tree to the shingles on the homes. We worked in all of these arenas: hauling wood and brush, working in the sawmill, weeding and harvesting in the gardens, building fences, starting construction for a new home, splitting fire wood, etc.

Teen-age participants were: Matt Marks, Maria Kierce, Oli Nivaid, David Poole, Charlotte Begley, Penelope Dane, Paul Ford, Jon Mitchell, Katie O'Sullivan, Travis Coley, Jessica Pyfrom, Erin O'Leary, Nora McCarthy, Katie Brennock; Adults were: Rich and Becky Chamberlain, Whitey Dunn, Susan McFadd, Robert Orme, Judy and Gary Ritts.

To prepare for our fourth annual trip, early summer of 1991, there will be an organizational meeting on Sunday, Nov. 18, from 5:30 to 6:45 p.m. at St. Anthony's Catholic Church, South Main St., Cohasset. We will be discussing interest-level, destination, possible dates and fund raising ideas. All Cohasset teens, grades 9 through 12 are welcome to come and share their ideas. No obligations at this meeting — just information, pizza and soda. Sign ups and fund raisers will begin in February after we find out where and when we're going.

(The following are notes from the participants).

Whenever 14 teenagers get together for a religious retreat, be it a service project or just for fun there is bound to be mischief, happiness, flirting, fun, but also loneliness, sorrow, and fatigue. This previous week I participated in my 2nd service project in which I experienced many of the same feelings and emotions, but the level of need was far below that of last year's project. Need is a difficult word to comprehend. I "need" money to make my car payments or else. . . . or else my parents will have to pay. I really have no "needs," only desires. Some people of Maine and more so of Kentucky have real needs like mortgage payments on one-bedroom shacks with holes.

When I left my home, I was thinking of all the things I would miss. But I didn't miss them. One shower for 21 people sounds bad, but there was always the dam pond. On our free time we talked to each other, instead of watching TV. When I get home, I probably won't even turn on the TV. Contrary to my primary belief, hard work doesn't kill you.

Before today, I didn't know whether I wanted to stay or go home. I had no problem finding motivation. I surprised myself as well as others with the work I did. Working at the chapel 3 out of the five days, I found a sort of devotion or loyalty towards it which propelled my motivation. On day 5, I was moved to the saw mill which died within 10 minutes. So I ended up splitting wood (yippee!). I caught some Z's after lunch and surprised myself again by salvaging enough energy to split more wood. The sun was beating and the pile was endless. I couldn't believe how tired I was. Anyway, it was quitting time before I knew it.

Well, today is the last day and I have mixed feelings about tomorrow's departure. The week has been interesting and different. I think that it's the first time I've ever done such hard labor (though some may not call it that), but in a way, it actually felt good — helping others and finding ways to motivate myself. I think this came from the feeling of those in charge. I'll admit the first day I was discouraged — hauling logs and falling in the mud are definitely not my strong points. But as the week progressed, I grew to enjoy the work as well as the company. I have never met such a diverse group of people who all possessed such motivation and dedication to the same thing — H.O.M.E. I want to wish everyone at H.O.M.E. and on the trip luck and happiness.

It's hard to believe this was our last day and that tomorrow AM we'll be heading out. This really has been a great week — a challenging week in many respects. We've had a fun group to be here with and have met some great folks at H.O.M.E. I have a tremendous amount of respect for the women I've met here: Lucy, Marie, Ellen, Barbara. I admire their humility, strength, faith and vision. H.O.M.E. is truly an amazing place and is having an amazing ministry. It's hard to comprehend all of the many ways in which H.O.M.E. saves people in need. I feel like this place is really living out Christ's words that when you "did it for the least of these brothers of mine, you did it for me."

For me I think Thoreau's idea of "being warmed twice by the wood I've cut myself" really sums up the week at H.O.M.E.

In one way or another we were all involved with wood — be it at the sawmill, chopping wood, hauling brush, hammering shingles on the Chapel steeple, working on the new home site out at the farm . . .

I feel privileged to have been a part of such a wonderful caring community even for a short time. What an overpowering environment — not just for those who need help, but also for those of us who came as volunteers to serve. I think we all came away realizing that we were capable of doing a great deal more than we'd ever thought possible; so in the end we all benefitted.

If we can each hold onto this vision of H.O.M.E. for ourselves, "that working together . . . we can provide an alternative to the competitive, alienating norms of the larger community," we will certainly grow and become more caring human beings.

School gives teens alternative

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

As a young boy he grew up under the shadow of a father who would come home drunk and abusive nearly every night of the week. The father eventually abandoned the family, leaving the boy's mother to support the family by herself.

As a student, the boy's uneasy family life reflected on his school life.

School, with its authority figures and structure became a punching bag for the young man. He made his own rules and broke those set by teachers. The more he rebeled against the school, the more the school disciplined him. It became an endless cycle.

To deal with his defiance and unruliness the school confined him to lower level classes with the rest of the school's "trouble makers" and "problem cases." Despite a natural intelligence some of his teachers can see, he continued a downward slide, losing self esteem and feeding the problem.

This is a typical example of the many students served by a specialized high school program sponsored by the South Shore Collaborative that tries to help students break the failing patterns of their life and salvage a future.

The program takes in students who are selected by their guidance counselors and offers them a program of counseling, support and structure their regular high school cannot supply.

These are the "problem" students who once carved and whittled heavy metal bands and four-letter epithets into desks. They skipped classes and defied teachers. It seemed unlikely that any of them would graduate, or even complete their present grade without leaving or being asked to leave.

The school gives these teens a chance to earn their education in an environment that is specially geared for their needs and problems.

Joseph Heggi, the school's program director, said all 10 of last year's seniors graduated and five went on to further their education.

He said the school's success rate shows that despite the failures these students may have had in a traditional school system, they can be turned around, and become achievers.

The high school, located at the site of Hingham's former East School, takes in a maximum of 50 students between the ages of 15 and 21 from the collaborative's member towns.

Hingham and Weymouth contribute the most students to the school with eight and twelve respectively. Scituate contributes six students; Cohasset and Quincy both send three students and Norwell sends one student.

The other openings are filled with students from other towns that are willing to pay the schools tuition. Heggi said the towns of Needham, Plymouth, Duxbury, Abington, Kingston and Hanson all have students in the program.

Heggi said keeping the enrollment at 50 allows both a low tuition for member towns and a small class room size. He said the larger the classroom, the less individualized attention the student gets. Class size averages between 6 and 8 students to a teacher.

There is a small waiting list that allows new students to enter the program as others either graduate or leave.

Some students may have had previous psychiatric hospitalization, others may demonstrate severe emotional disorders such as severe depression, thought disorder, or withdrawn behavior, Heggi said.

While at the school, students work on behavioral and emotional problems along with a specially geared academic program that meets all the requirements of their hometown's school system.

Heggi described the program as "very structured."

"The whole program is built around them making decisions on their own," he said. "We have to provide an environment that is safe, consistent, and that is able to get them into a different pattern of behavior. The program provides a caring safe environment with expectations."

Heggi said any number of problems can contribute to his students' failure to compete in a traditional school setting.

Dysfunctional families, alcoholic parents, or a broken family, can all contribute to the low self worth and anger that keeps many of the teen-agers at odds with society.

"They (the students) have pushed a lot of buttons and dug themselves into a hole they cannot get out of," Heggi said. "They have not been taught or shown what is appropriate behavior, 'it is appropriate to yell an scream in my house, why isn't it here' or 'I use a lot of four-letter words, what is wrong with that' (they ask)"

"They are here because they are not stars. They are here because they are not doing so well in their high school. When they come here we start fresh."

Heggi said the key to the school is cooperation between the teacher and student. To open lines of communication the school has an informal atmosphere. Teachers are called by their first names, and are fluent in the current slang and buzzwords.

"There is still authority and still respect," Heggi said, "but there has to be an open line of communication. They have to be willing to talk."

Students take classes in five academic majors and also attend group counseling sessions.

The school even has a wood shop, where students can make the usual assortment of bird houses, ashtrays and bookends.

To help gear them for the growing responsibilities of life outside the classroom the school institutes a system of points and levels.

Points for the completion of school work and other projects; the accumulation of these points allows a student to move up a ladder of levels with different ground rules.

"We up the ante," Heggi said. "The higher you get the more privileges and perks you get, but also there is more responsibility and more you are expected to do."

Heggi said each student is still a member of his original school system and has all the privileges and responsibilities of their high school.

Students receive a diploma from their home town and have access to the guidance department.

Some students also participate in school sponsored activities, such as proms and homecoming dances. Occasionally some students have even tried out for varsity sports.

Even though the opportunity to be active in their home town school exists, only a handful choose to, Heggi said.

"Not a lot of them want to do that. They have made their break from the high school and that means they would have to go back to a situation where they were not successful." he said.

Heggi said that although the success rate is fairly high there is still the occasional student that becomes a problem. He said the school cannot and will not accept the responsibility for a student's chemical dependency problem.

"Last year we had one student leave school because of a substance problem," Heggi said. "If someone is going outside of school making a lot of poor decisions and abusing things there is no choice"

Heggi said the school can help students who want to help themselves but its role is not to take the place

"We are a program that can get them information on what to do, to get around that. We can access Alcoholics Anonymous meetings and substance abuse clinics"

The role of the school, he said is not to babysit problem cases, but to work out their problems and give them a fighting chance at a decent life.

Heggi said the majority of the student body appreciates what the school does for them, and they are proud of the school. He said the school's neat and clean appearance illustrates this pride.

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe- from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That allows i to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean is money-back guaranteed!

Save Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, you would have to buy over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safety. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some, may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course for all plumbing.

So, if your drains are signalling you, get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today! Available at:

Community Garden Club creates balance

By Arlene Ferreira

Time was when being a Garden Club member meant donning a hat and white gloves and sipping tea while discussing what to tell the gardener.

Now, the members of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset balance love for beauty and interest in flower design and horticulture with a strong commitment to their community and the environment.

With about 275 members, one of the largest and most active volunteer organizations in town, the Community Garden Club of Cohasset annually spends more than $5,000, plus countless hours of volunteer work on town beautification projects, with funds raised through our semi-annual house tour and the sale of Cohasset Entertains, Encore, a recently published new cookbook.

Under the chairmanship of Therese D'Urso, the club landscapes and maintains the grounds of the Community Center.

The club has also done extensive plantings at the Lothrop House and maintains the grounds there as well. Ginny Riley is in charge of our many plantings at Constitution Park.

Margaret Cotter and Debbie Cook were chairmen of the Nature Trail created by the club between our two grade schools; while Regina Schultz manages the creation of "A Garden for Honoring" in the high school courtyard.

Workshops and programs such as "The Quest for Paradise," Russ Marchand's exciting new slide show, photographed for three screens and with a sound track, which traced the history of Garden design through the unique contributions of 10 countries. This program was presented in September. In October our own Tish Grinnell presented her program, "Table Settings With Flair," demonstrating new and interesting ideas for setting your table. These entertaining and educational programs are offered to members at our monthly meetings.

The horticulture committee of the Community Garden Club of Cohasset with Phyllis Peck as chairman has held its first two workshops of the year. A garden walk, led by Marilyn Connor and Bev Leach, featured 4 members' gardens all in the process of developing or reclaiming new areas. Brick walks and terraces had been employed in each of the gardens to heighten the horticultural interest.

A topiary workshop was held at Tomasi's Nurseries in Pembroke. Amid the lush foliage and sounds of a waterfall within the greenhouse, participants learned how to create three different styles of topiary.

A creative workshop, "Working with Hydrangeas," was presented by workshop chairman Barbara Henderson in October.

Blessed with very talented members, the Community Garden Club boasts five master judges, one flower show school instructor, three landscape design critics council members, four life judges, two junior judges and one flower show judge and has sent members to landscape design school and to flower show school.

The Junior Gardeners from the fifth and sixth grades have started up their program at the First Parish Meeting House. Lee Androski has a fun filled year planned for the girls. Activities vary from working with dried plant material to actual planting and exhibiting in our club flower show.

With all of our talented and community minded members we hope to continue our effort of beautifying our lovely seaside community.

Peg Nugent Mullen of Hingham and her granddaughter Cameron Nugent of Cohasset work together on a project during Grandparents Day at the Community Montessori School in Scituate.

Plea for COA upgrade begins

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Just like Topsy, the council on aging has grown dramatically since its formation in 1984. Much of the responsibility for that growth lies in the lap of Director Kathy Bryanton.

Gerard Keating and David Chittim told selectmen the town has given short shrift to Bryanton. They want the town to reclassify Bryanton's position to reflect the demands and responsibilities it imposes on her.

Keating and Chittim will be asking selectmen, the advisory committee and the personnel committee to support the reclassification at town meeting.

When Bryanton came on board in 1986, the town was in the middle of an employee reclassification. Her newly-created position did not fit into any existing category.

"We never got the pay rate squared away," Keating said. "We just let the thing drift. I think we are doing an injustice to the director."

Since its formation, the program has experienced phenomenal growth. In 1986, the program offered meals on wheels, shuttle service and fuel assistance. Today, there are 18 different services ranging from pre-retirement planning to telephone reassurance for fragile homebound elders.

David Chittim told selectmen Cohasset's program offers more services than larger towns.

The council serves 1,450 seniors. Today, 45 percent of the seniors use the center, up from seven percent in 1986. Last year, 42,609 units of services

Hedlund offers some new ideas

By Tom Henshaw
Mariner staff

Robert L. Hedlund of Weymouth, the 29-year-old Republican neophyte who upset the veteran legislator Robert B. Ambler to become senator-elect from the Norfolk & Plymouth District, has some more surprises for entrenched politicians.

He'd like to eliminate pensions for elected officeholders as an incentive to discourage them from running for office too many times.

"One of the thing I heard on the campaign trail constantly was, 'We gotta limit terms.'" he told The Mariner in an interview. "I don't necessarily agree to that.

"I think a better way to go about it is through elimination of pensions for elected officials. Let them rely on IRAs or Social Security like everyone else. I think if you took away the lucrative pensions you'd see some turnover.

"George Keverian (the retiring House speaker) is getting out with 54 grand a year. In my mind that is totally outrageous. They like to refer to it as 'public service.' How can you call someone getting out with 54 grand a year of the taxpayers' money public service?"

Hedlund repeated a campaign pledge that he would serve no more than four terms, or eight years, in the Senate "and I'm going to reiterate it to you right now on tape."

He said he would also like to see some changes in the rules governing campaign financing and reforms in Senate procedures to see Senate President William Bulger's grip on the upper house loosened.

"I think the increased number of Republicans (in the Senate) bodes well for bringing some rules reform and some openness to that body," he said.

Hedlund also made these points in the far-ranging interview:

● He regrets that Ambler, a state representative for 26 years whom he defeated by more than 10,000 votes, took personally some of the things he said during the heat of the campaign.

Ambulance will go out to bid

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen approved bid specifications developed as part of a feasibility study to replace the town-owned and operated ambulance service with a private service. The town government structure committee contends the current service is not cost-effective.

After town counsel drafts the contract required under the uniform procurement regulations, the ambulance service will go out to bid.

Under the specifications, companies bidding on the service must provide service equal or superior to the service provided by the fire department.

Private companies must provide their own primary and back-up ambulances, staff, equipment and supplies.

The companies must agree to assign two EMTs on a full-time, twenty-four-hour basis. The EMTs must be trained in the use of defibrillation equipment and have at least one year's full-time EMT experience.

The primary ambulance is to be housed in Cohasset and will respond to Cohasset and mutual aid calls. The specifications call for a maximum arrival time of under 10 minutes for 80 percent of the

COHASSET'S WEEK

What's open, closed on Thanksgiving Day

Banks, stores, schools and government offices will be closed Thursday, Nov. 22, Thanksgiving Day. Many restaurants, however, remain open to serve Thanksgiving dinner.

According to the Greater Boston Chamber of Commerce:

- federal, state, county, and municipal offices will be closed
- schools and libraries are closed
- manufacturing plants are closed
- banks are closed
- retail stores and supermarkets are closed
- liquor stores, are closed, but taverns and bars will be open
- stock markets will be closed
- Post Offices are closed, and there will be no mail delivery.

Tax time arrives again

The first half fiscal 1991 real estate tax bills were mailed Friday, Nov. 16. Payments must be received in the collector's office by 4:30 p.m. Dec. 18.

Any payments received after 4:30 p.m. on the due date will be subject to interest charges at the rate of 14 percent from the date of mailing. Postmark dates will not be accepted and no exceptions will be made, treasurer-collector Elizabeth B. Ripley warned.

A number of tax bills have been returned to the tax collector's office because of improper mailing addresses. Any property owner who has not received a tax bill should call the collector's office at town hall at 383-9900, extension 113.

Ripley and her staff thanked the nine senior citizens who came to town hall Wednesday, Nov. 14 and spent five hours preparing the tax bills for mailing.

The volunteers were Gerard Keating, Peg Smart, Olga Sawchuk, Elizabeth Abell, Margaret Taylor, Virginia Anderson, Pauline Keating, Eileen Kurtz and Phyllis Kelly.

"With their help, we were able to mail the bills on time," Ripley said. "They are to be congratulated for volunteering their time to help their community.

Liquor stores seek Sunday

Some local liquor stores have expressed interest in a state law permitting package stores to open on the Sundays before Christmas and New Year's.

Cohasset Plaza Liquors and one other store contacted town hall about the little-known law.

Selectmen said they would accept the guidelines established by the state Alcoholic Beverages Control Commission (ABCC) despite the reservations of Police Chief Joseph Kealey.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, Kealey said there was ample time for consumers to plan their shopping without the Sunday hours.

"The way the economy is today, any time we can help a merchant no matter what business they're in we ought to help them," Selectman Rocco Laugelle said.

According to the ABCC guidelines, package stores may open on the two Sundays, subject to the following conditions:

- They must secure a permit from the local licensing authority after a public hearing. No permit may be granted for Dec. 25 or Jan. 1.
- Stores may not open before noon.
- Stores must close no later than 11 p.m. or 11:30 p.m. on Dec. 24 and Dec. 31. The local board may require an earlier closing time.
- Employees are entitled to time-and-a-half pay for the Sunday work.
- Employees cannot be required to work. If they refuse, employers cannot discriminate, dismiss, deduct hours or penalize them in any way.

Taxes abated on gift land

Selectmen approved an abatement on land donated to the town by the Mitman family in December 1989.

The Board of Assessors requested abatement of taxes accrued from the time the Mitmans transferred title to the town on Dec. 29, 1989 until June 30, 1990.

The town formally accepted the gift of land during the April town meeting.

Budget items realigned

Printing and mailing the town warrant will become part of the selectmen's budget if the advisory committee and town accountant agree with the selectmen and Town Clerk Frances Marks.

Marks sought to transfer the line item from her budget to the selectmen's budget since she has no authority over the issue.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said it made little sense to pay the bills out of Marks' budget when she has no authority to approve or deny the expenditures.

Selectmen passed the matter to the advisory committee and town accountant for appropriate action.

Accountant's contract debated

Selectmen voted to offer Town Accountant Mary Gallagher a new contract.

The new contract covers a three-year period with virtually no changes in contractual duties.

The new contract maintains her current level of pay until July 1, 1991. At that time, and every subsequent year, Gallagher will receive the same cost of living increase negotiated with other non-union employees. Gallagher will also be eligible for a merit pay increase ranging from 0 to four percent.

Gallagher currently receives $35,416. Her last pay raise was negotiated in September and was retroactive to July 1.

Selectmen denied Gallagher's request for an increase in vacation time.

Gallagher will have some additional duties folded into her job description.

Selectmen want her to keep them abreast of changes at the state and federal level that will affect municipal finances. They will also ask for budget forecasts, based on realistic assumptions, for both the current fiscal year and the following one.

Selectmen said they also want Gallagher to analyze budget trends and alert town officials to any unusual items that could affect financial planning.

Selectmen voted 4-1 for the new contract. Selectman Martha Gjesteby said she voted against the package because Gallagher had not appeared at either of the meetings scheduled to discuss her contract.

"I find this very demeaning to our board," Gjesteby said.

According to other selectmen, Gallagher preferred to provide selectmen with a written proposal rather than appear in open session.

In previous years, contract negotiations with non-union personnel were conducted in executive sessions. According to town counsel Richard Henderson, negotiations must occur in an open meeting.

"It never has been this way in the past," Selectman Jane Goedecke said. "It was a rude awakening to us all."

Hedlund ...

"I made it a point in the campaign to say that Rep. Ambler is fundamentally a good man but trapped by 26 years on Beacon Hill. It was the system I was criticizing and not the individual."

● His chief of staff will be David Schugori of Dedham, who is currently working in the office of Senate Minority Leader David Locke of Wellesley.

"The rest of my staff will be people from the district. We will have a district office in Marshfield. For the last 20 years, Duxbury and Marshfield have kind of been the forgotten towns in the district."

● He knew he was going to win in the dying weeks of the campaign when he got a sense of the way things were going in Duxbury and Weymouth.

"We needed Duxbury to be solidly in the Republican side. There were tremendous negative responses to Ambler down south. But what really blew my mind was the response I was getting in Weymouth. I said, 'I wouldn't be surprised if we took a couple of precincts in Weymouth.'"

He took seven on Ambler's home turf.

Here is the text of the Mariner's interview with Hedlund.

The Mariner —What turned you on to run for public office?

Hedlund — I've been active in various campaigns since 1978, when I worked in Arvi Nelson's campaign. I didn't come from a political family but it was something that was just there in me. I was very active in 1988, working in a congressional campaign. I was also following the state senate race. Bill Golden had his first opponent since he was elected. I went to a couple of the debates and I decided that I'd run in '90. I didn't really expect it to be an open seat. I had to reevaluate the situation when it did become an open seat. Would any candidates emerge who believed in the same things I did. I didn't necessarily need the job so I felt that if there was a better candidate who believed in some of the things I believed in I would work for that candidate. But it wasn't to be the case. There were some big differences in beliefs on issues between Hussey and Mihos and myself.

The Mariner — Why did you run for the senate? Usually first time candidates start a little lower on the ladder.

Hedlund — I was at the TV studio back in 1988 when Golden debated Bill Robinson. I made my mind up that night that if there was no one else there to take on Golden in '90, I would. It was basically on issues. There were other races where I was already represented by someone who was ideologically compatible. Mary Jeanette Murray was my state rep — that was prior to moving to Weymouth. I can't say I calculatedly picked state senate.

The Mariner— Did beating Christy Mihos surprise you?

Hedlund — It didn't surprise me. What surprised me was beating him based on the turnout. I wanted a small turnout because Mihos had the billboards and the fancy newspaper advertising. He had Rep. Murray and Rep. Mann in his corner as well as the town committee chairmen from Hingham, Marshfield and Cohasset. The Cohasset Town Committee donated money to him in the primary. He had all the heavy hitters in his corner. All our efforts were focused on Republican households. We did direct mail into Republican households. We felt we would do well among Republicans and we were projecting an 8,900 voter turnout. It was closer to 17,000 and I felt the influx of the independents would go to him. That's what surprised me, the turnout. If it had been a small turnout I think we would have had a more comfortable margin.

The Mariner — Why do you feel you beat him?

Hedlund — I think we ran a better campaign strategically and I think that I outworked him. We really offset the disparity in money with some hard work. We had volunteers who worked harder in my campaign than people in almost any campaign I've worked in and I've worked in them on every level.

The Mariner — Did you beat him on any issue?

Hedlund — Someone said one of the reasons I was successful in the primary is that the thing I talked about in the debates were things that I believed in and I knew why I believed in them. I don't know if any single issue helped us. It was more on a strategic standpoint that we beat him, not necessarily on issues.

The Mariner — Did beating Ambler surprise you?

Hedlund — I was afraid he would have the name recognition and inundate the newspapers with ads, yard signs, cable TV, because of the finances that he had. We were concerned about that. We certainly didn't match him in spending but we put together a budget and we stuck right to it and we got the things out that we wanted to get out, particularly some timely newspaper ads and some targeted mailings. We didn't have enough money to go district-wide but we got some key areas out and some mailings to independents. Two weeks prior to the election, I said, 'Gee, this is going to be a close race.' In the last week of the campaign I was convinced we were going to win based on the vibes I was getting down in South Weymouth.

The Mariner — When did you know you had won?

Hedlund — I'd say the last week of the campaign. I spent my last week primarily in Duxbury. We wanted to solidify whatever base we had down there. We needed Duxbury to be solidly in the Republican side. The name recognition was a little higher in Duxbury than we anticipated. I don't know what it was but there were tremendous negative responses towards Ambler down south. But what really blew my mind was the response I was getting in Weymouth during the last week. I was primarily in South Weymouth and I said, 'I wouldn't be surprised if we took a couple precincts in Weymouth.' I thought we might take 16 and 17 and 18 but we took seven precincts and came close in a few others. That really surprised me.

The Mariner — You were a strong supporter of CLT yet CLT lost and you won. How do you explain that?

Hedlund — I was saying all along that the real issue for voters wasn't necessarily CLT but changing the makeup of the Legislature and those who are going to have to deal with the fiscal situation whether CLT passes or not. If CLT passed and we had the same people in the Legislature, they might play the same cruel game they've been playing the last couple of years anyway and if CLT didn't pass, we'd have more of the same. I was trying to put the focus on some of the legislative races and not necessarily on Question 3. Obviously, on the basis of the results, people separated the two.

The Mariner — Are you just as happy CLT went this way?

Hedlund — I think the fact that we made greater gains in the state senate than anyone would have anticipated will offset the fact that CLT didn't pass. We have enough votes in the state senate right now to uphold any Weld veto that may come. That is as equal as tool as Question 3 itself.

The Mariner — You are starting from scratch. No experience in public office. How do you go about setting things up?

Hedlund — I think I've been around the game long enough to know what responsibilities I have and how to go about them. My experience within the party, even life experience qualifies me. One of the things that I've just done is select my chief of staff is going to be coming out of Sen. Locke's office. I'm just ecstatic about having this person come on.

The Mariner — Who is he?

Hedlund — His name is David Shagoury.

The Mariner — Where is he from?

Hedlund — He's from Dedham.

VoTech teachers grieve conditions

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

After reading the 'fine print' of their current contract, the South Shore Regional Vocational High School teachers' union has decided to play political hard ball with the regional school committee.

The teachers' union filed two grievances with the regional school committee last week. Issues that Supt. Dr. Clifford Easton said would not have been raised if a contract settlement had been reached.

The first grievance, which was settled after considerable discussion, concerned the lack of a telephone in the teachers' room of the Abington campus.

The second grievance, which was denied, asked that teachers not be assigned to corridor duty for a few minutes before and after the students' lunch period because hall duty is not spelled out in the contract.

Teachers have been working under their 1987 contract since new contract negotiations broke down in September. The union and the regional school committee are currently holding contract negotiations with the assistance of a mediator.

Union spokesmen said they will take the second grievance to arbitration.

Teachers successfully argued that a faculty telephone was needed to insure privacy.

'PROBLEM IS CONFIDENTIALITY'

"There's a telephone in the contract and our people over there (Abington) feel they need one," said union president, Carl Sousa. "The problem is confidentiality in talking with the parents, etc."

The contract language regarding time limits is vague. The document states that a union member must bring the contract violation to the attention of school officials within 15 school days of when the teacher should have known about the violation.

Dr. Easton contended that the statute of limitations had long since past.

"We've been in the building since Sept. of '82, that's enough time to reasonably know there was a contract violation," he said, referring to the Abington campus. Easton also said a new phone line would be a "costly issue in a difficult financial time" and he noted that a possible option of installing a pay phone in the faculty room "would not be an attractive solution."

At the Hanover campus, the faculty room is equipped with its own telephone.

School committee member Lou Crescenzi of Hanover asked that the contract language be read. The contract states that "a telephone for incoming calls be provided within the faculty room."

School committee chairman, Robert Molla of Norwell, said therefore only a telephone for incoming calls need be installed.

Dr. Easton argued that if the school committee agrees to install a telephone "then in the spirit of fairness let reason prevail for a phone with two ways to it."

Easton said the phone would cost about $120 to install plus any monthly charges.

Abington VoTech director, John Kosko, said a separate line for teachers "would greatly free up existing phones in the office."

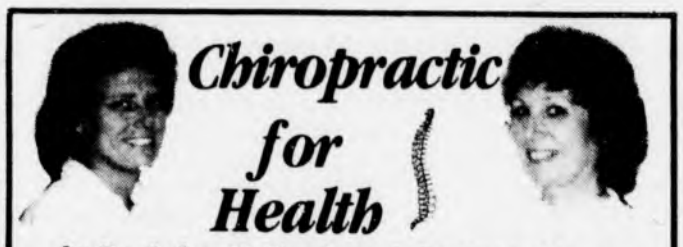
After the regional school committee approved the telephone in a majority vote, union president, Sousa, presented the second grievance.

CORRIDOR DUTY

Sousa explained that "a lot of us weren't aware of the fact" that in the contract teachers are only required to accompany their classes to the lunch room and are not contractually bound to monitor the halls.

Asst. Supt. Warren Anderson said that during the four-minute change of periods before and after lunch, two teachers are asked to monitor "the hot spots" for a few minutes while students pass through the hallway.

"It's strictly an answer to a safety problem," he noted.



Union treasurer, Russell DeCoste, said the teachers had been serving hall duty "voluntarily."

"We volunteered to do this on a rotating system," he said. "Now you're shoving this down our throat."

Easton said that teachers had indeed begun serving hall duty on a voluntary basis. But because the school needed the service, he added, it had become mandatory.

In a majority vote, the school committee denied the grievance.

A month ago, the teachers' union filed two charges of unfair labor practices with the Dept. of Labor against the regional school committee. The charges allege that the regional school committee had not been bargaining in good faith and that a member of the administration harassed a union member about contract demands.

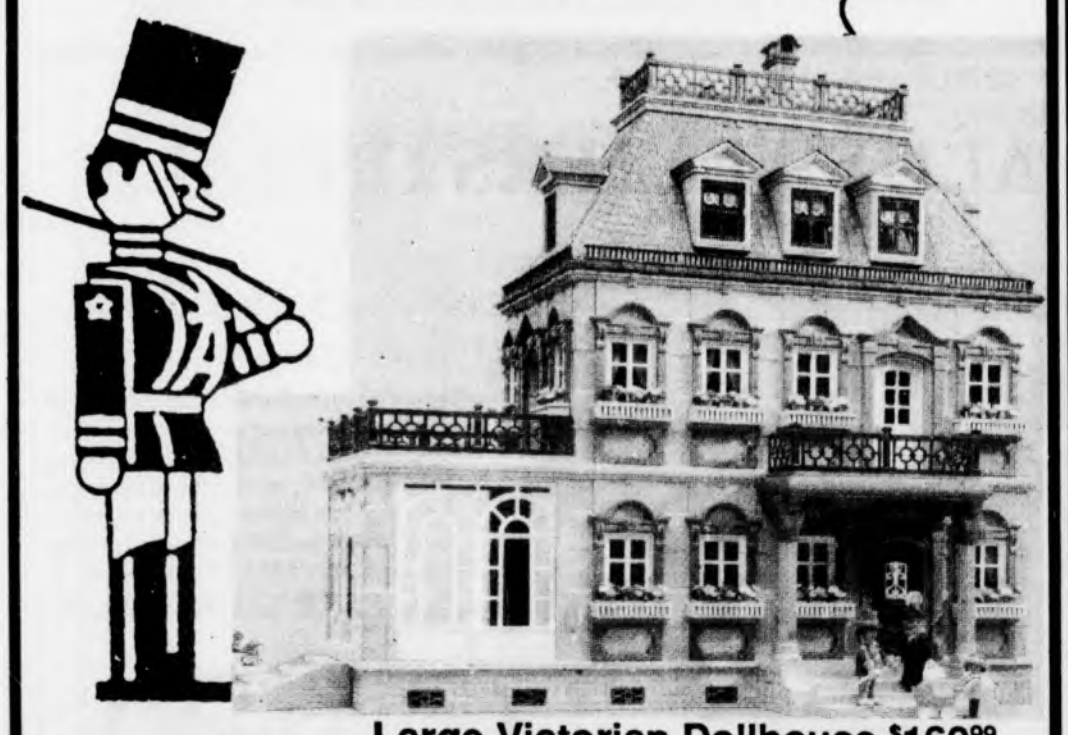
CHIROPRACTOR ANYONE?

When tennis is a player's game of choice, he should consider seeing a chiropractor as a preventive measure. Tennis is a rigorous sport that can exact a heavy toll on the body. Players often put their lower back at risk for injury by their serve, and hard-court play is tough on the entire lower body. Then, of course, there are the usual injuries associated with racket play – tennis elbow, ankle and knee sprains, rotator cuff disorders, as well as strains of the neck, shoulder, and lower back. Quite clearly, any sport that requires sudden stops, shifts, and powerful torquing motion is going to place heavy demands on muscles and ligaments. As part of a preventive program, the chiropractor may be able to pre-empt tennis-related problems. He can certainly work to correct them after they occur.



From the professional athlete to even the couch potato, DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, have a lot to offer to address existing discomforts and problems as well as offering preventive applications. To feel better and enjoy life to its fullest, we invite you to call today. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. The U.S. Tennis Team at the Olympic Summer Games in Seoul was accompanied by a chiropractor.

Hedlund ...

have them come from their districts. The rest of my staff will be people from the district. And I think one thing that is a positive for our district is that the person who is going to be my chief of staff is someone who's got tremendous experience working out of the Senate minority leader's office.

The Mariner — That would leave you open to charges that Locke is your Billy Bulger, wouldn't it? Will Locke be calling the shots through your aide?

Hedlund — No. I've known this kid for a while. I think it's a coup to be prying him away from Locke. There may be some areas where I don't know the inner workings of that body that would be helped by having this kid by my side.

The Mariner — What are you doing now actively to get ready for Jan. 2?

Hedlund — We had one brief meeting over in Locke's office. We've got a number of orientation meetings set up for the next month. We'll be talking about committee assignments over the next couple of weeks; office assignments, things like that. The minority leader's office is working right now with Bulger's office in determining that. One thing that will bode well for the district is that because of the large number of freshmen Republican senators, there's going to be more committee slots available.

The Mariner — What committees would you like?

Hedlund — We're looking at a couple. We'll have to see what transpires next week.

The Mariner — How are they assigned? Does Locke assign them?

Hedlund — We don't know what the representation of Republicans is going to be on the committees. Believe it or not, that'll be determined by Billy Bulger. Locke will have to go in and make a case for us. That's how authoritarian it is. There's no formula for determining that. At least there'll be more available. For instance, say we lost two Republicans and one left banking and one left transportation and we were just going to have to fill in for those. But there's a wide array of openings in committee slots. I'm hoping I have enough influence in Locke's office that I'll have some precedence.

The Mariner — Can you say which committees you'd like if you had your druthers?

Hedlund — There's three that come to mind. One is is Natural Resources, which has environmental concerns, possibly commerce and possibly transportation. Those three. It's doubtful a freshman is going to be put on Ways and Means.

The Mariner — Have you met Bulger yet?

Hedlund — No, I haven't and I'm looking forward to it. I stopped in his office during the campaign. He had been dancing with my mother one evening at an event in South Boston. He told her to have me stop up and say hello some time. I was up there one day and I stopped off in the president's office and he wasn't around. But there were a number of people in the district, believe it or not, who were riding around with Hedlund stickers and Bulger stickers on the same automobile. As you know, this is the Irish Riviera and there are a lot of transplanted Southie folks down here. I was just over at a gentleman's house in Hull on Veterans Day. He lived in Hull, worked a little bit on my campaign and spent some time in Southie working on Bulger's campaign. One of my best friends dated Bulger's daughter for a number of years. And I know her quite well so I do know members of his family. He's a decent guy.

The Mariner — Have you been in contact with Ambler?

Hedlund — No, and I feel badly that Ambler took some of the things personally. I noticed in the Mariner papers that a rumor was going around he was moving to Florida and he blamed that rumor on me. In fact I first heard it from a Patriot Ledger reporter and I certainly didn't repeat it. He said it was typical of the lowball tactics I employed. That bothers me that he took things personally. I made it a point in the campaign to say that Rep. Ambler is fundamentally a good man but trapped by 26 years on Beacon Hill. It was the system I was criticizing and not the individual. I was told by people in his campaign that if they were in my shoes they would have employed the same strategies. I recognize that in his 26 years he's done a lot of good for Weymouth and he's a decent guy. I'm sorry that he wouldn't look upon things in a more amicable way. I'd welcome any input from him to help carry out my job.

The Mariner — Have you talked to Bill Golden?

Hedlund — Actually, no. I got his phone number and I intend to call him and Frank Hynes today. I've got a couple of meetings in Marshfield tonight, one with a couple of selectmen, we're going to talk about the situation on Route 139. It's a safety problem when those cars back up on the Expressway. Someone one of these days is going to get nailed. That's certainly going to be one of the priorities I'm going to look into.

The Mariner— What are your plans for constituent services?

Hedlund — We will have a regular ad running in the weekly newspapers with our office number. I'll have a better handle on things once I know the makeup of my staff, but we will have a district office in Marshfield. With me living in Weymouth, I obviously am going to be quite accessible to things that are happening in the northern end of the district. I hope to have one of my staff members come from Marshfield. For the last 20 years, Duxbury and Marshfield have kind of been the forgotten towns in the district. We hope to have some presence down there.

The Mariner— When will you file your first bill? Is there any pet bill in the back of your head?

Hedlund — I don't know the specifics but I talked in the campaign about some areas of reform I think are desperately needed for the Senate, including campaign finance reform and rules reform. There's some pressure on Bulger right now, not only because of the increased number of Republicans, but because of the actions of some members of his own party. They want to see his grip loosened up. They think it's because of the negatives Bulger has that the Republicans picked up a number of seats and they're concerned for their own futures. So there may be some reforms coming without them being forced upon him through legislation. But I think the increased number of Republicans bodes well for bringing some rules reform and some openness to that body. In terms of finance reform, I will put my name on the Common Cause bill that would prohibit lobbyists from contributing to campaigns unless they're from the district. And another thing is pensions for elected officials. One of the things I heard on the campaign trail constantly was, 'We gotta limit terms.' I don't necessarily agree with that but . . .

The Mariner — Not since you've been elected.

Hedlund — No. No. No. I've pledged not to serve more than four terms and I'm going to reiterate it to you right now on tape. I think a better way to go about it is through elimination of pensions for

Town ready to buy back graves

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen agreed to buy back the first lot of unused grave sites at Monday night's meeting.

The sole surviving heir of a plot containing eight grave lots in Woodside Cemetery offered to sell the town six of the lots. According to Peter Laugelle, superintendent of cemeteries, the plot contains four contiguous lots on the south side of the gravestone, and two non-contiguous lots to the north.

Although the gravestone has been carved on both sides, Laugelle said someone purchasing the southerly lots could erect a stone at the far end. The remaining lots would be offered as individual lots.

Selectmen decided to offer to buy the lots at less than the going rate because of uncertainty whether they could be resold. Selectmen will offer the owner $300 apiece for the four contiguous grave lots and $150 for each of the individual ones.

Town meeting authorized selectmen to purchase grave lots up to $500. The lots offered for buy back were sold in 1934 for $33.75.

Money for the purchase is to come from the sale of lots account.

Selectmen told Glenn Pratt, chairman of the cemetery study committee, they wanted to buy the grave lots as a hedge against future need.

"We can't count on them turning up on an as needed basis," Selectman Jane Goedecke pointed out.

Selectmen hope more owners of unused grave lots will offer to sell them back to the town. Until the town generates a reasonable supply of lots, no change will be made in the rule prohibiting the sale of a lot in advance of a death.

In other business, selectmen:

• Appointed an interim solid waste committee to oversee the town's involvement in the regional solid waste disposal project of the South Shore Coalition until town meeting can authorize a permanent refuse disposal planning committee. Selectmen appointed Barbara Kern, Sharon Becker and Jeff Power to the temporary committee.

• Agreed to cancel selectmen's meetings scheduled for Dec. 24 and Dec. 31. No meeting will be held during Christmas week. The Dec. 31 meeting was rescheduled for Jan. 2.

• Accepted an offer by a firefighter and five other volunteers to paint the flagpole on the common in the spring. The volunteers will save the town $900.

• Decided Selectman Jane Goedecke will attend the DPW study committee interview with Peter Laugelle, superintendent of the tree and park department, scheduled for Nov. 29 at 8:45 p.m. Selectman Ned Tebbetts agreed to represent the selectmen during the interview with Stephen Wigmore, superintendent of the wire department, Dec. 20 at 8:45 p.m.

• Agreed to send a letter of support to the town of Dedham in their fight to remove an adult video and bookshop from the downtown area.

were delivered to 659 senior citizens.

The council's newsletter has grown from a circulation of 225 to 1,500.

In the course of a year, the meal site will serve up 1,640 meals, another 3,800 meals will be delivered to homebound elders and the shuttle van will make 3,900 trips to the doctor's office, supermarket and church.

"This is not an amusement program," Chittim emphasized. "If there's any recreation in here, it's for the health and well-being of seniors."

The program operates on a budget of $34,000. Chittim said that amounts to 50 cents per week per senior.

The program survives through Bryanton's fundraising skill and the 185 volunteers she oversees. According to Chittim, grants match two-thirds of the budget.

Bryanton, he claimed, is probably the lowest paid department head in town. They are seeking a reclassification that will amount to less than a $3,800 difference.

Keating and Chittim told selectmen they would prepare a fact sheet comparing Cohasset and other communities to buttress their claims.

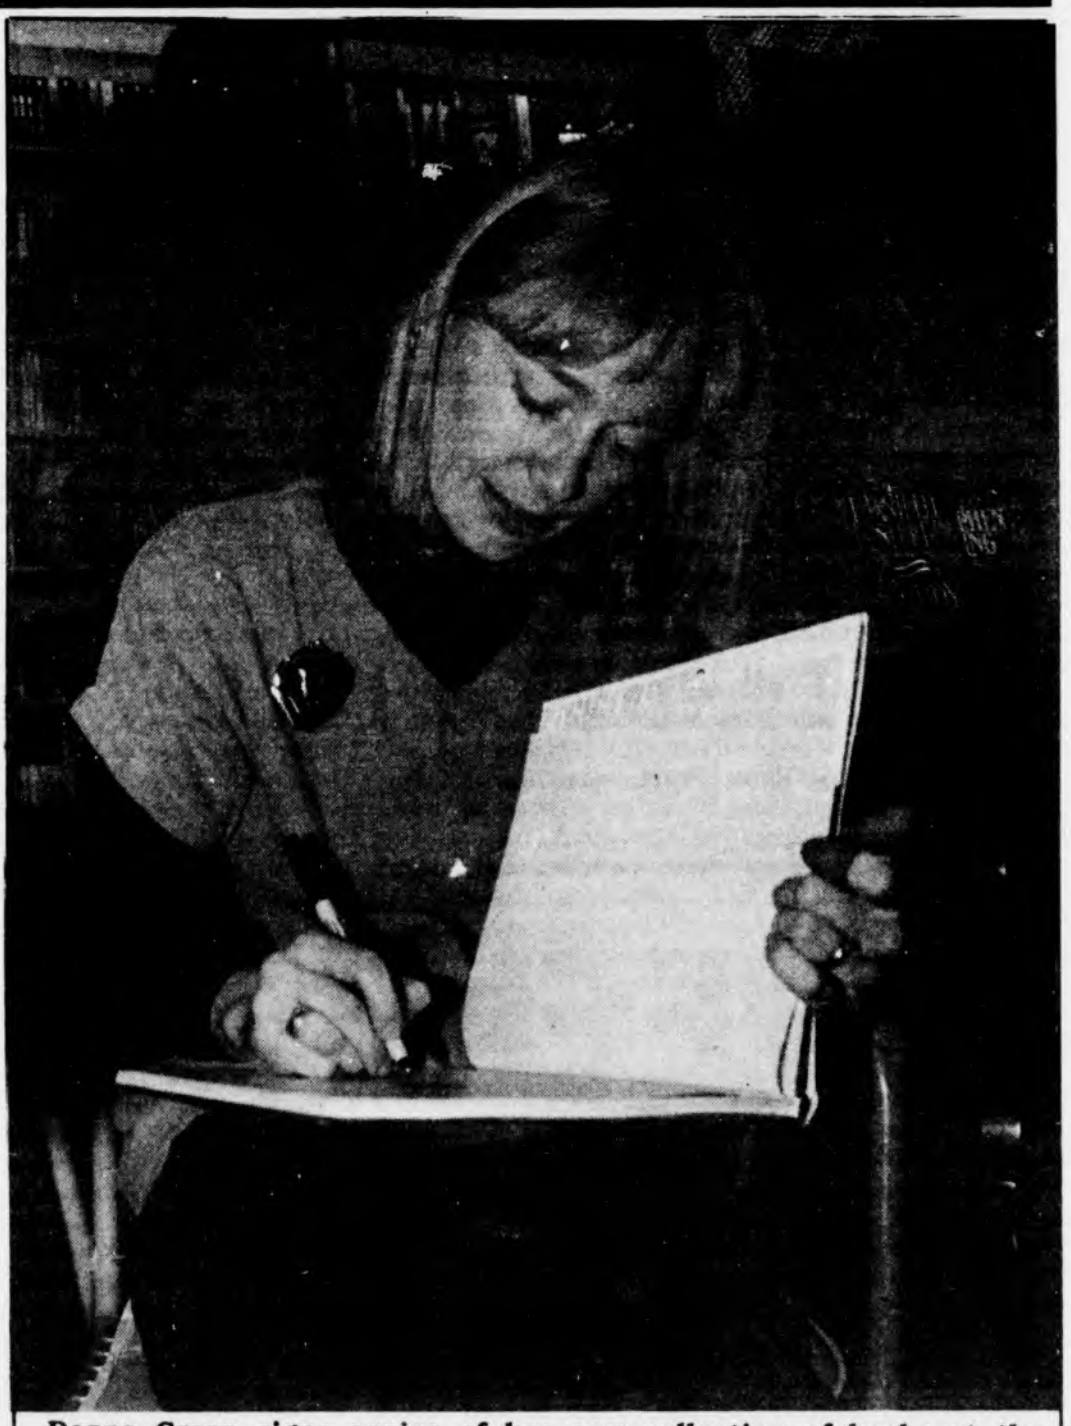
AROUND TOWN

❑ Attention Class of 1990...great idea! There is to be a breakfast on November 23 at the High School for all of you to get together and sign your yearbooks. So, be sure to bring your yearbook and get up there. At least you'll have plenty to write about, maybe it's just as well that the yearbooks came out so late last year, you'll have a mini reunion early.

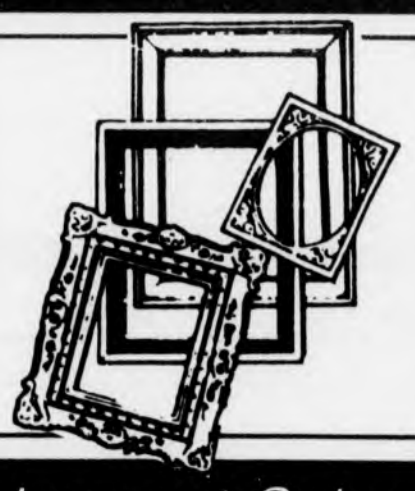
❑ Speaking about reunions, the class of CHS 1980 is holding their tenth this Thanksgiving weekend, at the Lantana. Among those travelling to be there is Kerry Salvador, she will be coming in from L.A. She has been in L.A. for six months working as an actress/waitress and is loving it. She just finished a play in which she had the female lead (sort of off the beaten path, but nonetheless credible in the acting world) and has just booked a national commercial for Pearl Vision Center...we'll all have to watch for that one! Kerry will be joined in L.A. by Beth and her Mom Jan in the spring. Beth is planning on going back to school to study for her masters in education. She'll be attending UCLA. So, the girls will all be together again, and we'll bet they are looking forward to that.



❑ Meanwhile, back on the homefront, heard wonderful news this week that probably won't surprise many after eight years. Ingrid Anderson and John Drago are getting married next summer, on July 20 to be exact. They became officially engaged on October 13. We sure want to congratulate them and wish them a long and happy life together.

❑ Did everyone see the November issue of Boston Magazine ? If not then pick it up to see the article on skiing and you'll see pictures of Jason Cameron and Rusty Starmer as snowboarding instructors at Attitash. Wonderful pix, of both of them, and what a great life.

❑ Congratulations to Daniel Kierce, a senior majoring in accounting at Nichols College. Dan is the president of the Zeta Alpha Phi Honor Society at Nichols.



❑ On Thursday, October 24 a group of concerned parents, school personnel, booster club representatives and a representative from the school committee met to discuss the dilemma created by the loss of the late bus which transports METCO students home in the evening after extracurricular activities. There was agreement among those there that the situation is intolerable and denies the students from Boston the opportunity to fully participate in what CHS has to offer. Currently Boston students are coping by spending long hours on public transportation, spending the night with host families and friends in Cohasset, getting rides from coaches and others to the T, or crowding into carpools formed by Boston parents who drive down from Boston after work in the evening. There was no doubt that these "solutions" would be short lived, and that they were taking their toll on the students and families involved. The group agreed upon steps to alleviate the problem: 1. A fund would be initiated with start up pledges from the Cohasset METCO Parents Organization, the PSO METCO Committee and the various booster organizations. 2. Money would be passed in the student activities account and earmarked for the purpose of paying for the cost of a METCO late bus. 3. The bus would begin on Oct. 29. 4. The Scituate METCO program would be asked to share the cost and benefits of the program. 5. A series of fundraisers would be organized. 6. Publicity would be arranged to notify the community of the situation, to provide information on the upcoming fundraising events, and to direct the contributions of those individuals or groups who wish to make donations to the fund. 7. Clark Chatterton agreed to be treasurer of the fund and keep track of the cash flow. 8. Pat Brown, METCO Coordinator and Joan Kovach, PSO METCO Rep would coordinate the program for fund raising and channel funds to superintendent's office, which would arrange for the use of a Cohasset School bus and driver or whatever system seemed most cost effective for transporting students from CHS to their homes in Boston. The proposed fundraisers were 1. a high school dance, organized by METCO students with the help of Brown and Charlene Williams. 2. A theatre bus trip, open to the entire community in early November to the Black Nativity production in Boston. 3. The sale and delivery of Christmas wreaths. 4. The sale of various books and tapes at PSO functions. 5. The raffle of some popular rock and roll concert tickets. ❑ Congratulations go to Kara Protulis who won a silver medal in Intermediate Ladies' Freestyle at the Champlain Valley Open in Burlington, Vermont. Keep up the good work Kara.

❑ Frank Evans of Cohasset has scored a hole-in-one at Cohasset G.C. and entered the 30th annual DRAMBUIE RUSTY NAIL HOLE-IN-ONE SWEEPSTAKES.

Evans and Gene R. Peterson, II, the golf professional who validated the entry are both eligible to win this year's grand prize in commemoration of the sweepstakes' 30th Anniversary; a one-week trip for two to Scotland, VIP tour of the Drambuie Liqueur Co. Ltd. and $1,000 cash.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Schools receive new grant

Governor Michael Dukakis has announced that Cohasset Public Schools has been awarded a $4,749 grant from the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs to expand drug and alcohol education programs as part of the federal Drug Free Schools Act.

Marianne Lee, Executive Director of the Governor's Alliance, praised school officials for their plans to use the grant money. Lee stated that the Governor's Alliance Against Drugs looks forward to working with communities in helping to develop and maintain successful programs to combat drug and alcohol abuse among students.

This grant represents the fourth year of the funding cycle under this program, and is coordinated in conjunction with the Department of Education in Massachusetts. The Governor's Alliance Against Drugs is responsible for reviewing grant applications and distributing funds to all Massachusetts communities.

CHS homecoming court

On Saturday, Oct. 27, Cohasset High School held their annual Homecoming event. This took place during half time of the Cohasset-B.C. High football game. Kara Manion and Linc Marsac were crowned Homecoming Queen and King. Members of the Court included Niffy Jackson, Jen Plante, Jen McKenna, Travis Coley, Pat Milligan and Bart Weisenfluh.

Aerobics class at CCC

Beginning Nov. 23, the new Saturday morning schedule for co-ed aerobics classes at the Cohasset Community Center is 9 to 10:15 a.m. rather than the usual time of 8:30. The drop-in fee is $5 a class.

These classes are for men and women of all fitness levels. They are taught by Normandie Nigh, director of the International Council on Sport and Exercise Safety. Nigh is also certified with IDEA and Ken Cooper's Aerobic Center in Dallas, Texas.

Nigh's evening classes are held at the Community Center on Tuesday and Thursday nights from 7 to 8:15 p.m. The classes are a combination of low to moderate impact aerobics, muscle toning work, and extended stretch and relaxation. The emphasis is on working safely and effectively while having fun.

Call Judy Volungis at 383-0088 for more information or to pre-register.

Scouts seek leaders

Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council is now on the lookout for women and men in the Cohasset area to volunteer for the Girl Scouts and Girl Scout activities. Ideal for adults, age 18 or older, who believe in providing strong role leadership for youth and who have an interest in working with girls and adults. Wide range of exciting volunteer opportunities available! No experience necessary; training will be provided. Call Jennifer Duffy at Patriots' Trail Girl Scout Council, 828-1750 or (800) 637-0070.

Seniors plan play trip

Don't miss out on the fun, the laughter, the "Shear" delight of "Shear Madness." This comedy whodunit has been playing at the Charles Playhouse for ten years, and now Cohasset Council on Aging is planning a trip in December.

As thousands of previous "Shear Madness" "witnesses" know, the play encourages the audience to become "armchair detectives" — everyone is given a chance to solve the crime.

All are invited to bring family and friends to the hilarious murder mystery on Dec. 2, at 2 p.m.

Tickets are available on a first-come, first-serve basis.

To order tickets, please contact the Council on Aging at 383-9112.

Cost of the bus and tickets will be $20, thanks to the local businesses of Cohasset for their donation toward the transportation. The bus will leave from Cohasset at 12:30 p.m.

Cohasset Gourmet Club under the direction of Anna Abbruzzese are planning a cookie swap for the servicemen in the Persian Gulf. Anyone who is interested in donating cookies can call 383-9112 or 383-9539, deadline will be Nov. 26.

PSO unveils mail order

The Cohasset Parent Student Organization (PSO) has taken an idea from the mail order/catalog retailer L.L. Bean Inc. this holiday season as the PSO prepares to unveil a most unusual fundraiser.

Holiday tree and wreath sale order forms are being circulated throughout Cohasset requesting that residents buy their holiday greens from the PSO.

The idea for this fundraiser was inspired by a high school student who questioned how he and his friends could help maintain educational services despite budget cutbacks.

Mail order sales forms have been reproduced and attached to the school lunch menus and they have appeared as inserts in local newspapers. The forms are also available at the following locations, Leo's Exxon, The Good Sport, Randy's Mobil Service Center, Riddles Market, Sea and Cheese, The Log and Line Restaurant, Cohasset Hardware, Tedeschi's Market, Cohasset News, the Cohasset Public Library and at all Cohasset Public Schools.

The PSO offers a 100% money back return on the quality of the tree or wreath purchased. They state that "if upon your inspection on Dec. 8, the quality is less than green, fresh, high density or premium grade, we will refund your money. We offer a superior product at an exceptional price."

Project Managers Beth Christoffel, John Kinchla and Helene Thornton suggest that to guarantee arrival of your tree or wreath the sales form be returned with a check payable to the PSO prior to Dec. 3, 1990.

You can pick up your tree and/or wreath on Saturday, Dec. 8 at Cohasset High School on Pond Street from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Home delivery can also be arranged for an additional $10.

All money raised from this event will be used to provide educational services to the students of the Cohasset Public School system.

Slow track yields the best results

Last week the MBTA board of directors took the Greenbush line by the horns and separated it from the rest of the plans for the Old Colony Railroad line.

We applaud the decision.

While Cohasset would certainly benefit from public transit, no one benefits from holding up two viable projects while studying the problems of a third idea.

Obviously the problems resurrecting the track through Hingham Square were slowing down the entire project.

Two phases of the design — the Middleboro and Plymouth lines — seem to please just about everyone by the owners of the L. Knife Company in Kingston.

We think it's wise to move ahead with the portion of the project that has such widespread approval.

The original rationale for using the defunct right-of-way for the Greenbush line was that federal money might be available for restoration of a line. But it has been known for some time that there is no extra federal money available for the job. The state will have to use part of its slice of the federal transportation money if it wants the Old Colony line restored.

The large number of complaints and problems involving the Greenbush branch of the railroad were sure to put the brakes on the entire project which Stephen Polechronis, project director, had hoped to get underway before the beginning of the new year.

The latest estimated timetable calls for the Plymouth and Middleboro lines to gain the needed approvals sometime early next year.

Obviously there has already been a delay.

Town official in Hingham submitted for the environmental impact report 500 pages detailing the problems with the plan for Hingham. Two separate federal reviews of the project were triggered by the fact the railroad would run through the recently created Lincoln Historic District.

Those reviews will continue. Reasonable alternatives will be studied in depth, as the federal government requires.

The separation of the Greenbush line does not mean the plan has been scrapped. What it does mean is the concerns of Hingham merchants and officials will not derail the other two branches.

According to the MBTA's own figures the difference in ridership without the Greenbush line amounts to about 5,000 commuters.

While we understand that it might be wise to spread the burden of public transit around to the largest number of communities, we think careful study of all alternatives and thorough investigation of all potential problems is the only moral route to take.

A time to send a smoke-free message

To the Editor:

The recent "Great American Smokeout" has brought attention once again to the numbers of smokers wanting to "kick the habit." Many declare they wish they never had started to smoke and may not have begun if they knew what they were getting into.

Educating young people about the hazards of smoking to prevent future lung disease is a major mission of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

The age at which Americans begin smoking is getting younger – especially among females. Currently more female high school seniors than males use cigarettes on a daily basis.

Overall, smoking costs the nation over $65 million annually in health care costs and lost productivity. The bill includes $22 billion to care for people with smoking-related diseases, including $4.2 billion in Medicare and Medicaid costs.

If young people do not acquire the smoking habit, the staggering costs and disabilities caused by tobacco smoking can be controlled. Education and legislation on all levels – national, state and local – are essential.

Massachusetts already has in place legislation prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors, and a number of local communities have recently issued even stronger bylaws or regulations. Both Brookline and Leominster have opted to eliminate coin-operated vending machines in areas where minors have easy access. Only private clubs with liquor licenses and workplaces where machines are not accessible to the general public or minors are exempted.

Not long ago Louis W. Sullivan, M. D., U. S. Secretary of Health and Human Services, proposed legislation to address the sale of tobacco products to minors. As a condition for receiving federal substance abuse block grant funds, States would be required to adopt certain laws regarding the sale of tobacco to persons under age 19.

Because federal and state legislative proposals often require much time before coming to fruition, the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association is urging citizens to support local initiatives in their respective cities and towns to control the access of minors to tobacco products.

It is possible to formulate local ordinances or by-laws in addition to supporting any state or federal legislation that may be forthcoming regarding tobacco products and minors. Your local board of health and other town or city officials are good resources as is the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association.

The voice of the public is important. Let your voice be heard to help safeguard the health of our nation's young people.

Decision '90 live cable coverage lauded

To the Editor:

To our volunteers, technical support staff and program directors, we would like to extend our sincere thanks to all those who helped make "Newsbeat 53 Decision '90" election coverage a huge success!

The viewer response and the praise and thanks from all of the candidates has been overwhelming!

Our Continental Cablevision studio in Scituate was never livelier, and the control room was filled with excitement (and a lot of wires...) as we waited for the results.

More than 50 volunteers participated in our coverage with live locations from the campaign headquarters of Bob Hedlund-Hingham, Jan O'Brien-Hanover, Norman Buitta-Norwell, Ron Wheatley-Scituate, and taped interviews from Bob Ambler and Frank Hynes.

But all of our efforts could not have been possible without great pictures from our technical support staff, led by Jim Digby. Fifteen technicians dedicated more than 100 hours of time, climbing poles, checking amplifiers and lines to our headend, all of which came to our studio control room, and then sent back out onto channel 53. Thanks!

We would also like to gratefully acknowledge Jamie's Pub/Gannett Grille for their constant support of CCTV and their terrific pizza, Ontrax Cellular Phones for their contribution of portable phones, WBZ-TV Channel 4, WATD 95.9 FM radio, and Bob Stone, news director, and our dedicated, gracious, and patient customer service representatives, who have for the past three months fielded the numerous phone calls and messages with outstanding expediency. They are an integral part of community television.

Public awareness of the political arena and local town government is ever increasing, and we at Continental Community Television will continue to try to bring to our viewers local programming efforts that are important, educational and most of all fun through the efforts of you, our dedicated volunteers.

Come and take a workshop and see how TV works!

A Thanksgiving Day feast that tasted like mud

By Mike Hardman
Mariner staff

Commentary

Coffee, hot dogs and mud.

That's what Thanksgiving means to me.

Forget about turkey and the Pilgrims.

That's someone else's Thanksgiving.

Let me explain.

Thanksgiving was always a big holiday in my family. When I was young, we would get up in the morning to get ready for the big game between East Bridgewater and West Bridgewater.

I would put on my long johns, heavy sweater and galoshes.

Downstairs, my father would have the coffee pot going. The smell would dominate the house, only to be replaced by turkey later in the day.

After breakfast, we would get into the car and head off to either East Bridgewater or West Bridgewater depending where the game was played that year.

We'd always get there early. The routine was the same; we'd watch the team get off the bus in their uniforms.

To a little kid, they would all look alike. "Would I be that big someday?"

We'd find a spot in the bleachers or on the side of the hill. By halftime, my feet would be wet. "Want to get something to eat?" my father would ask.

The answer was always the same. Yes.

"Can I have a hot dog?" I would ask the tall man behind the counter.

"Sorry, little fella, all we have is coffee and donuts."

I really wanted a hot dog.

At some point of the game, my mind would wander. I would dream about when it would be my turn to wear the blue and gold of the East Bridgewater Vikings.

I was going to be the star running back. On Thanksgiving, I would score four touchdowns and receive a college scholarship in the end zone after the game.

I would be carried off the field by my teammates. TV cameras would be pointed in my face. Sportswriters would be clinging to my every word.

"I owe it to my line," I would say. "They are the greatest."

Eventually one part of my dream came true. I did get my football uniform and I was able to play in a Thanksgiving Day game.

After watching from the bench my sophomore year and sitting out my junior year with a knee injury I had one more shot to achieve Thanksgiving fame.

I was on the kickoff team and I was hoping to get one chance to carry the football.

If I didn't get to run with the ball, I could still leave my mark with a bone-crushing hit on the kickoff team.

The game was at Battis Field in Middleboro against the Middleboro High Sachems.

It had rained for a few days and the field was covered with mud.

On the first kickoff, I sprinted downfield, but before I got to tackle the guy with the ball he fell down.

"What a wimp."

I rooted hard for my team to score so there would be more chances.

In the second quarter, we scored a touchdown and I got another chance.

This time, the runner ran away from me.

"Maybe, they've heard of me."

Reality hit. Teams don't scout third-string running backs.

After missing on my first two attempts at tackling, I wanted one last chance to run with the ball.

"Excuse me, coach. I would like to talk with you about the possibility of running with ball."

Silence.

"I know you're real busy right now, but if you give me the ball one time I'll wash your car for the rest of your life."

Silence.

In the fourth quarter, there was one more chance at stardom.

We scored again and the kickoff team was sent on the field.

It was a high kick down the right side of the field. I was on the left side, coming at the runner.

"Go for the ball."

I ran faster than before. This was my last chance.

The runner made a cut and suddenly he was right next to me.

I got him. No , I don't.

Whoosh, splash.

There he goes down the sideline. There I go into the puddle.

The mud went through my facemask. I was banging my fist on the ground. This is how it would end.

"Sorry, little fella."

Coffee, hot dogs and mud.

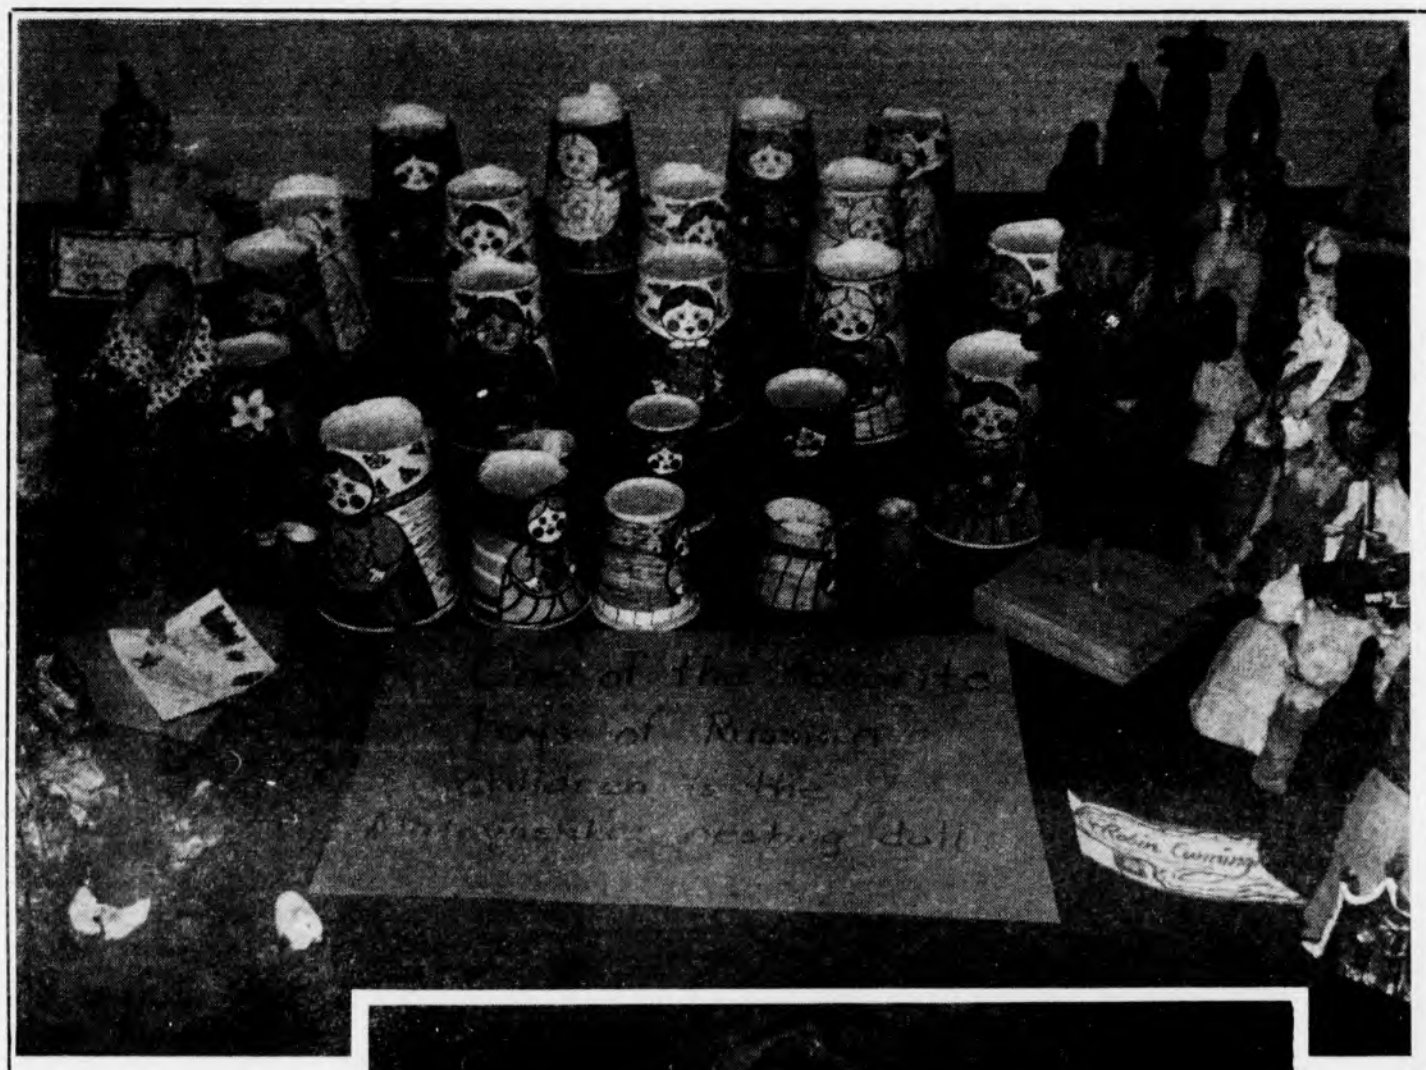
First grades write to troops

To the Editor:

The first graders of Joseph Osgood School wrote to servicemen on Veteran's Day with hopes that their pictures and well-wishes would reach them in Saudi Arabia by Thanksgiving time. They told about themselves, where they live and wished them Happy Thanksgiving with hopes that they would be home for the holidays.

After their letters were mailed, Mrs. Maloney heard that one of her ex-students had just left for Saudi Arabia with his reserve unit. So the next letters from her class will be addressed to Jonathan Howe.



If anyone in Cohasset knows of any local servicemen, especially ex-students of Joseph Osgood that would like mail from home, please let one of the first grade teachers know!

Thank you,

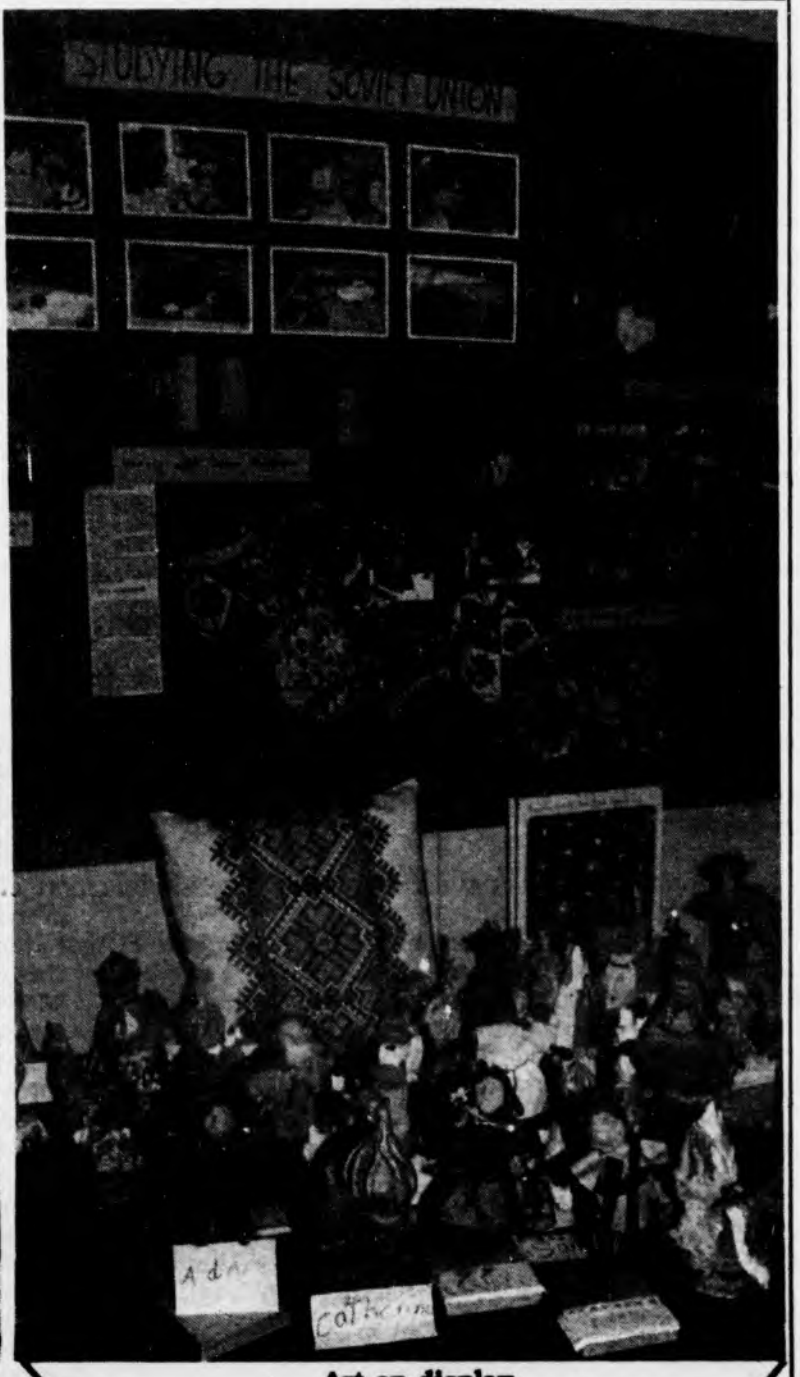
A 'Russian' tea party at the South Shore Art Center

Photos by Jodi L. Rome



Mrs. Ann Whitely, a mother of a student from Osgood School, got involved with the Russian tea party by reading a Russian folk tale to the students.

Dressed as a Russian woman, Emily Coyne was really enjoying herself during the tea party.

The children weren't the only ones to enjoy the tea party; parents and teachers enjoyed the songs, the folk tales and all the good food that was offered.

Ambulance service contract developed emergency calls factoring in both the primary and back-up ambulances.

The ambulance company would be responsible for all billing and collection. The bid specifications set a base rate of $125 plus $5 per loaded mile and $25 for oxygen.

After discussion, selectmen agreed no charge would be made for calls that did not result in transport to a medical facility.

According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, frequently the ambulance is dispatched to motor vehicle accident scenes on a precautionary basis. The town does not bill under those circumstances.

"That's a very good example of what a local service does as a matter of course," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

Selectmen also discussed the renovation progress at the police and fire station and the possibility of upgrading the telecommunications system.

According to David Chase of the police and fire station renovation committee, asbestos removal work is well underway.

The construction phase of renovations is scheduled to begin in about 10 days.

Chase added that the committee is exploring the possibility of holding a fund drive to purchase furniture to save costs.

Chase told selectmen he had heard rumors that town officials were counting on the project coming in under bid.

"There are always overruns," he warned. "It's hard to know what is behind walls. Don't spend it yet."

"We don't intend to give away any money until we finish the project," selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said.

If selectmen are looking for ways to spend additional money on the renovation project, telecommunications expert Peter Pratt, son of former selectman Burtram Pratt, suggested they redesign the project to accommodate the equipment necessary to operate an Enhanced 911 (E911) dispatch system.

Pratt said E911 may soon be a reality in Massachusetts.

When an E911 call is made, the dispatch equipment displays the name, telephone number and address of the caller. The system can provide additional lifesaving information, such as chronic illnesses, handicapping conditions or broken water mains in the vicinity.

Legislation to fund the emergency call system by charging for local telephone information calls has been proposed. Households would be charged 25¢ or less for local information calls after the first 10 in each month.

Pratt said the police and fire station will have to have a two person consolidated dispatch system. He estimated the town could purchase the basic equipment and install it for an investment of $50,000 to $60,000.

Pratt said it would be a tragedy if E911 was available but not implemented in the cities and towns as soon as possible.

"The bottom line is it saves lives," he said.

Senator-elect speaks of changing system

elected officials. Let them rely on IRAs or Social Security like everyone else. I think if you took away the lucrative pensions you'd see some turnover. George Keverian is getting out with 54 grand a year. In my mind that is totally outrageous. They like to refer to it as 'public service.' How can you call someone getting out with 54 grand a year of the taxpayer's money public service when the average Joe Public doesn't make half of that.

The Mariner— You were an outsider when you ran for the senate and when an outsider gets inside he tends to look at things differently because he now has responsibility. Have you changed already?

Hedlund — Let's just put it this way, you're a lot more humble in winning. That I recognize but I don't think I'm going to lose that so-called outsider perspective. And if I do come up and remind me.

The Mariner— Everyone concedes that taxes are necessary. It's just how much. What are your views on it?

Hedlund — Good God, I think the tax burden of the Massachusetts taxpayer is sufficiently high, if not too high. I don't think the taxpayers or the businesses in this state can shoulder another tax increase. We ought to be looking at reducing the tax burden and stimulating some business growth and consumer activity. Certainly to do that we've got to bring spending under control. We can't play it both ways like we have been. We can't go on bonding forever and incurring this longterm liability. That's the focus. Bring spending under control. I endorse wholeheartedly Weld's call to repeal the tax on services. I think that is an absolutely insane proposition. At a time when business is reeling and the consumer is already inclined not to spend money, it's the worst thing we could have come up with.

The Mariner — You're pro-life. Do you plan to advance that position in the legislature?

Hedlund — I said in the campaign that my personal beliefs are what you would call pro-life. I'm being honest when I say that they may influence my legislative actions. I don't really think it's an appropriate topic for the political arena but reality says that it will be. I can't comment unless you refer to some specific legislation. I don't really see myself as a crusader on this issue.

The Mariner — Does the 1990 election represent a Republican comeback on the South Shore or is it just a freak thing?

Hedlund — I think the Republican party is building a good grass roots effort. We saw it at the convention this year where we had a record number of delegates and activists take part in the process. I think that fired them up. We saw a lot more people out in the field working hard. That was coupled with the fact that we had some real good candidates and an anti-Democrat incumbent mentality out there because of the shape that the economy is in.

The Mariner— And you own future? Today the senate, tomorrow the world?

Hedlund — I certainly don't look beyond the two years I've got to serve. I haven't been sworn in yet and I'm just thinking about the best job I can do for the district and for the state. I campaigned as hard as anyone you've seen campaign and I can't imagine anyone doing that statewide. I cannot comprehend that. And I have no desire to.

The Mariner — People have been known to catch the desire.

Hedlund — No way. I don't look beyond serving more than four terms if I'm fortunate enough to do so and that's it.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

Did you ever wonder where family values went? They were the life savings that we traded against the dishwasher, the washing machine and dryer, the car, and the instant mashed potatoes. Do you remember why we made the trade? So we could have more time to do the things we really wanted to do. That was the slogan of the 50s and 60s. Now leisure time has become work, as one industry analyst put it.

How have things gotten so upside down? I believe it is simply that the value of people was traded for the value of things on the mistaken premise that the two were equal. Let's take mashed potatoes for instance. That's what I did last Sunday, a mountain full of mashed potatoes lovingly prepared by my sister-in-law.

Our clan had gathered for Sunday lunch. When we prepare the meal on these special days, we always take the extra steps—together. One person brings the salad, another the rolls. We boil the water; we peel the potatoes. As we work, we talk. The kitchen always seems to let us relax. We are better able to speak about the things that are on our hearts and minds.

I was thinking about the box of microwave mashed potatoes that I had left in my cupboard at home. The box has actually been there since last Christmas, except for a brief vacation at a friend's kitchen. Her parents wanted her to join the 90s and get a microwave to keep the economy going. When she decided the microwave argument had little to do with food, she gave me back my box of microwave mystery. I don't own a microwave, so the food stuff is utterly useless to me. I had thought of giving it to the food pantry at our church, until I acknowledged that I could hardly call this 1/4 lb. of potato au gratin a source of nourishment for someone who really needed to eat. It looked more like something I would put in a Barbie doll oven.

Wait a minute—put the brakes on—Where have we gotten to in our national development when we call one half a desiccated potato with cheese sauce—food? Not to mention that it is entombed in a non-recyclable plastic tub and further encased in an equally non-recyclable cardboard box that sells for $1.79, that I wouldn't give to a homeless shelter. Where is the farmer who grew this potato? Who picked the potato? What country did they come from to pick it? How many chemicals were used on this potato to bring it to harvest and then to market? Who cooked the potato? How old was it when it was finally cooked? Who cares? I care. We were supposed to be freed from the chains of work. "No more slaving over a hot stove if you buy these potatoes," we were told. I am growing to realize that I am more enslaved by these so called conveniences than I am freed by their use; I can only have the potato that way. It's expensive. There is too much packaging. This method takes time away from my family; e.g. "Son, I would love to know what you did at school. Let's talk while your meal is cooking. Let's see; that will give us 1 min. 45 secs. Then we'll clean up for 5 min. 32 secs. and then you can go to your room and do your homework." Ah, no thanks Ms. Crocker, I'll be mashing my own potatoes because other things happen while the potato water boils.

To nourish a family takes time. We can't trade that time in for anything else. Nothing will take its place; not a new car to take us away from our problems, or a microwave to speed things up. We have to make the time to be with each other and to share our stories, our dreams, and our problems. In a family, we have to have the time to be present for each other. So why not grow a garden together? When the harvest is in, why not all gather together to prepare the meal? Why not offer thanksgiving for food that nourishes the body and the soul.

Rosbach at Mormon Church

Frank Rosbach of the Stake high council will be guest speaker at the family worship hour Sunday at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 379 Gardner St., Hingham. Rosbach, who comes from No. Attleboro, will discuss: Patterning our lives after the Savior and allowing peace and harmony to reign.

Hingham Ward bishop, Dan Garrison, will conduct the sacrament service which begins at 10 a.m.

AIR SHOWS DAILY.

No, we don't have B-52 Bombers, Bi-Planes, or Boeing 747s. What we do have is fighters. Sailfish, marlin, tarpon and a host of other aquatic giants. All swimming off our shores at the Cheeca Lodge, the Florida Keys' most elegant resort.

Reopened after a multi-million dollar renovation, we offer luxurious guest rooms and villas, an unmatched array of sporting activities (by land or by sea), and the culinary delights of our award-winning Atlantic's Edge restaurant.

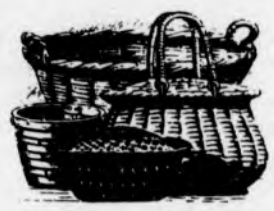
COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
THE TRIAL COURT
THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT DEPARTMENT
Norfolk Division
Docket No. 85P2347C2
NOTICE OF FIDUCIARY'S ACCOUNT

To all persons interested in the estate of Lydia M. Kanzler late of Cohasset, in said County, deceased, a person under conservatorship.

You are hereby notified pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 72 that the second account(s) of John R. Wheatley and John Clark Wheatley, conservators (the fiduciary) of the property of said Lydia M. Kanzler has been presented to said Court for allowance.



If you desire to preserve your right to file an objection to said account(s), you or your attorney must file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before the second day of January, 1991, the return day of this citation. You may upon written request by registered or certified mail to the fiduciary, or to the attorney for the fiduciary, obtain without cost a copy of said account(s). If you desire to object to any item of said account(s), you must, in addition to filing a written appearance as aforesaid, file within thirty days after said return day or within such other time as the Court upon motion may order a written statement of each such item together with the grounds for each objection thereto, a copy to be served upon the fiduciary pursuant to Mass. R. Civ. P. Rule 5.

WITNESS, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court, this thirteenth day of November, 1990.

BULLETIN BOARD

Gift shop closed at holiday

The South Shore Art Center galleries and gift shop will be closed Wednesday, Nov. 21 at noon and Thanksgiving Day, but will be open for holiday shopping Friday and Saturday, Nov. 23 and 24 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The gift shop has been expanded and gifts range from teddy bears and novelty jewelry to pottery and fine jewelry including a small selection of gold jewelry.

In addition to the gift shop, the galleries house two separate exhibits. The Bancroft Invitational Gallery hosts Frank Benson Etchings and wood carvings by Roy Black. About half of the etchings on exhibit are for sale and present a rare opportunity for collectors to make a special holiday gift. Gallery Artists of the South Shore Art Center exhibit "Small Works" in the Dillon Gallery. These pieces of art are especially priced and sized for "gift-giving." For more information, please call the Art Center during regular hours: Tuesday-Saturday 10 a.m. 4 p.m. at 383-9548.

Run for the turkeys

The Hanson Athletic Association and the Marshfield Road Runners will be sponsoring a seven-mile road race on Dec. 2 at 10 a.m. at the Hanson A.A. Clubhouse on Reed Street (off Rte. 27) in Hanson. Forty turkeys will be given away. The pre-entry fee is $6; post entry is $7.

For information call Bob Casey, after 6 p.m., at (508) 866-7820.

'Musical Holiday Party III'

Darling Productions' Quincy Center Dinner Theatre, in association with Rural Lodge AF & AM, presents its annual holiday spectacular, "Musical Holiday Party III." This dazzling show features 20 of the top singers and dancers in the area.

Written and directed by George Stevens of Braintree, Choreographer Greg Warwick of Newton and Music Director Rob Bezubka of Medford, this evening of dinner and theatre promises to be a treat for the holidays. Included in the cast are Nicholas and Geoffrey Stevens of Braintree, Sandy Keating of Weymouth, Joyce McDonough of Hingham, Brenda and Bill McColgan of Abington, Carolyn Mercier of Quincy, Kathleen Loftus, April Deford, Allysa Preston, Kristine Richards and Rachael Reef of Boston, Paul Sherman of Newton, Joe Hochkeppel of Cohasset and Rene Pfister of Somerville.

Performances at Masonic Temple, 1170 Hancock St., Quincy, are Dec. 1, 2, 8, 9, 15, 16. Price of $27.50 includes full course dinner (choice of two entrees) and show. Saturday: Social hour 6:15, Dinner 7:15, Show 9 p.m. Sunday: Social hour 4:30, Dinner 5:30, Show 7 p.m.

For reservations and information call Darling Productions at 843-5862. Ask about group rates.

At South Shore Art Center

Introduction to Origami: Holiday Ornaments with Syma for teams of parents and children (1st grade and up) will meet December 5 from 4-5:30 p.m. Make folded paper ornaments in the traditional Japanese origami technique that can be decorations for the tree or packages.

Clay Christmas Ornaments and Gifts with George Dalton for teams of parents and children (Kindergarten and up) will meet for 2 classes: December 8 and 15 from 10 a.m.-noon. Explore the possibilities for creating a range of special personalized clay ornaments for the tree or gift-giving. Bring your favorite cookie cutters and interesting objects for clay impressions, such as lace, sea shells, dried flowers, dried alphabet macaroni, etc.

Holiday Crafts with Serena Brundige for ages 4, 5 and K will meet for three classes Nov 30, Dec 7 and 14 from 4-5 p.m. Make a Christmas creche in clay for under the tree that will be a special treasure for this Christmas and those to come.

Creative Holiday Crafts with Julie Hawkins for grades K and 1 will meet for three classes Nov 28, Dec 5 and 12 from 3:30-5 p.m. This holiday workshop will focus on Christmas fun for young children by creating simple crafts and decorations. Make a gingerbread house, personalized ornaments and marbleized gift papers and cards.

Holidays Around The World with Lis Wyman for grades 1-3 will meet for three classes Nov 29, Dec 6 and 13 from 3:30-5 p.m. Take a trip to the Scandinavian countries and Mexico through art as you create your own holiday gifts and ethnic decorations. Learn about other cultures and create.

Holiday Folk Arts with Nancy Connolly for grades 4-6 will meet for three classes Nov 27, Dec 4 and 11 from 3:30-5 p.m. Explore traditional crafts from other countries while expressing your own creativity. Included will be clay and bread dough ornaments from Mexico, fiber and fabric animals and folk figures from Scandinavia and cut paper cards from Poland.

Troop #28 is going great

Troop #28 has been busy the month of October. First of the month they were off to take part in a Statewide Environmental Program Clean Sweep to clean the beaches of hazardous waste. Then they were off for an Old Colony Council Scout weekend at Camp Squanto, Plymouth.

On the third weekend they went on a five-mile canoe trip. And ending off the month with the Old Colony Council Bowlarama, where the boys bowled at the Cohasset Community Center, raising money threw a sponsorship donation program for the Council and local Troop #28.

Channel 53 schedule

November 22, Thurs-day, 5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads Musical Max, Babushkas' Doll, Cats Sleep Anywhere, What Do You Do With A Kangaroo and the increasingly popular The Day The Goose Got Loose.

November 27, Tues-day, 8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: The Plymouth Area Hospice Festival of Trees. Diana Ryan, Gretchen Buitta and Barbara Steele, three of many volunteers of the Friends of the Plymoth Area Hospice are "moving mountains" in their first Christmas Tree Festival fund-raising effort scheduled for Dec. 1 to Dec. 3 at Plimoth Plantation. Share in the boundless enthusiasm of Barbara Steele as she lovingly shows the viewers many of the attractive items offered for sale...dolls, Christmas tree ornaments, quilts, baked goods, etc. After you have seen this program you will want to attend the "Festival" and help the Hospice meet its $75,000 fund-raising goal.

Alzheimer's talk set

Sanford Auerbach, M.D., director of the Behavioral Neurology Program at University Hospital, Boston, and assistant professor of neurology and psychiatry at Boston University School of Medicine, will speak on "Alzheimer's Disease: Current Research and Diagnosis" on Wednesday, Nov. 28, at 7:30 p.m., at the United Methodist Church of Hingham, 235 North Street, Hingham.

ADSGSS is a volunteer nonprofit charitable organization dedicated to providing information and support to families dealing with the problems of Alzheimer's Disease. Meetings are free and open to the public. ADSGSS is funded by individual contributions and by a Title IIIB grant from South Shore Elder Services, Inc. For further information, call Jo Ann Mitchell at 749-5417.

Children's exchange

The Children's Exchange Consignment Shop is the latest business to join the merchants of Cohasset Village.

Located at 23 Main Street, the Children's Exchange is a resale boutique for children's clothing from newborn to size 14. Formally located in North Scituate Village, the Children's Exchange was one of the five businesses closed down by the October fire on Country Way.

For the past 11 years the Exchange has provided second-hand clothing and equipment at reasonable prices. Taken over in July of 1989 by new owners, Martha Cook of Scituate and Irene Volpe of Cohasset the business has thrived with their new enthusiasm about the resale business.

The Children's Exchange resells stylish and seasonable clothing for the consigner during a 60-day period. Prices are reduced by 50 percent after the items have been displayed for 30 days, so there is always a sale for smart shoppers.

Unique handcrafts for children including handmade toys, hand knit clothing and blankets, baby baskets, and customized and personalized accessories provide the shopper with a wealth of new gift ideas.

The Children's Exchange continues to be the South Shore UNICEF depot. The shop carries a full line of UNICEF stationery and toys, now featuring holiday cards.

With its grand reopening, the Children's Exchange introduces its full line of new cotton hosiery, unique dancewear and cloth diapering products.

The shop will now be open, starting Saturday, Nov. 17, Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., and Saturday, 10 a.m. to 1 p.m.

For more information call 383-2313.

80+ taxpayers sue over tax assessments

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

More than 80 Cohasset property owners plan to pursue their property tax abatement appeals all the way to the state appellate tax board.

According to a list compiled by the assessors' office, 82 property owners filed appeals on 87 properties. Not surprisingly, a majority of the contested valuations are for homes in Cohasset's prestigious waterfront neighborhoods.

The list of appellants reads like a who's who in Cohasset. Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Edwin Tebbetts who own homes on Nichols Road appear on the list along with pilot and real estate developer Donald Staszko and Deer Hill principal Kenneth Ekberg. Fred Quelle and Eli Manchester Jr. who organized the taxpayer group that raised the issue of disproportionate increases for waterfront properties are also pursuing their right of appeal.

The following property owners filed appeals:

Town buildings: uncommitted and under-used

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

No major changes loom in the future for the Bates building, Independence building, Government Island duplex or West Corner Fire Station.

Selectmen opted to maintain the status quo after failing to come to consensus about the fate of the buildings, particularly the Bates building.

The former town office space has been up for grabs ever since the town hall addition was built. Several groups in town are vying for use of the building.

Currently the sewer department uses some space in the basement and the Rotary Club and Veterans of Foreign Wars post hold meetings in the building in exchange for maintenance work.

Some local residents are seeking use of space in the building as a teen center. Selectmen expect a proposal from organizer Keith Knowles in a week to ten days. Other groups have proposed converting the building into affordable housing.

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle proposed maintaining the status quo. Laugelle believes the sewer department will continue to require some space and the non-profit organizations make good use of the remaining space.

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts and Martha Gjesteby favored selling the building at market rates.

"I've come to that decision reluctantly," Gjesteby said. "We need to get it off our rolls and onto the tax rolls."

Gjesteby and Tebbetts argued that the town agreed to sell off the Bates building as part of a town meeting vote authorizing construction of the town hall addition.

Although the town secured an appraisal of the property in April, Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said the information was confidential. In previous meetings, selectmen calculated the value of the building at $150,000 to $200,000.

Selectmen Diana Kornet and Jane Goedecke would prefer to transfer the property at below-market-rates for renovation into one or more affordable housing units.

Selling the property outright would preclude it from being taken over for affordable housing, Kornet warned. She and Goedecke said the cost of renovating the space would make purchase at fair

Following Mrs. Wood offers a learning experience

(Editor's note: To celebrate National Educator's Week the Cohasset school system gave parents and other members of the community a chance to spend a day observing a teacher at the junior/senior high school.)

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

It was release day and Jo-Ellen Wood, high school English teacher, was ready to whip through her regular course load and move on to an afternoon of committee meetings.

Outside her classroom students milled through the corridors. The noise level was high.

One student stopped me and asked if I were a substitute. She smiled and said "good" when I explained I'd come to observe some classes.

Wood has been teaching in Cohasset 18 years. She happens to enjoy her work. Her students happen to enjoy her. Discipline in her classes is unquestioned. She maintains order without harsh words or threats.

She said she doesn't believe the community understands what goes into a teacher's day.

Her day begins sometime before 7:30 a.m. in Room 25 in the West Wing of the high school.

The school's word for the day was "finally," which Wood pointed out follows "The Spelling Rules."

Wood's room is decorated with posters about good writing. That's the theme that pulls her varied classes together. At the front of the room is a computer on a table with rollers under the legs. Wood moves the computer out of the room during her preparation period — she uses an assortment of disks to keep up with attendance lists as well as for test development.

Wood teaches a reading class for grade 7 students, a grade 8 honors English course, an elective course in science fiction writing for grades 11 and 12 and a more basic English course for grade 8. She presides over a study that's so large it takes over the cafeteria. Then there's homeroom and Whispers and Shadows, the literary magazine that she and Colleen Lucas staff.

OCRR referendum makes spring ballot

Cohasset residents will get to vote on the fate of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony railroad restoration project in April.

Selectmen agreed to join with other towns along the existing right of way in a spring referendum on the restoration project. Representatives from Braintree, Weymouth, Hingham, Cohasset and Scituate will meet in Scituate town hall Dec. 6 at 7:30 p.m. to decide on a common ballot question.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts volunteered to represent Cohasset at the regional meeting.

Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, convened the meeting. He has proposed keeping the ballot question simple to remove any confusion about whether residents approve restoration of commuter rail service or not.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Cards help cancer victim

Marita Carpenter, whose son Joel is undergoing treatments after a three-year battle with leukemia, will be selling special Christmas cards Saturday, Dec. 1 at the Super Stop and Shop on Route 3A.

The cards, which sell at $15 for a box of 24, benefit the children's cancer unit at Boston Floating Hospital.

The cards are also on sale at the Children's Shop in Cohasset, the Feeney-Lonberg Gallery in Scituate Harbor and the Lavender Florist in North Scituate.

The cards were designed by young cancer patients at the hospital.

Incidentally, Stop and Shop recently donated 25 movie coupons and two movies "Teen-age Mutant Ninja Turtles" and "Peter Pan" for the young cancer patients.

Richard Lanza, Stop and Shop district manager, gave the coupons and movies to Mrs. Carpenter last week.

In the meantime the second VCR donated for use by the cancer patients was stolen

Sea 'N Cheese gets break

Selectmen voted 3-2 to give Sea 'N Cheese a $300 abatement on their liquor license transfer fee.

The small market faced a $600 bill for moving 50 yards from their original store and changing the form of ownership from a partnership to a corporation. Selectmen agreed that $600 would be an undue hardship with only 6 weeks left in 1990.

Sea 'N Cheese had hoped selectmen would vote to prorate the license fee. Selectman Martha Gjesteby opposed the suggestion, arguing that the store had the big holiday season to recoup any losses.

Gjesteby also argued that store owners were informed in August that they would be subject to the fee. According to Executive Secretary Greg Doyon, two other businesses faced the same transfer fee and paid at the full rate in June.

Selectmen Ned Tebbetts and Jane Goedecke agreed with Gjesteby that prorating the fee or granting a larger waiver would set an awkward precedent.

Selectmen Diana Kornet and Rocco Laugelle voted against the motion, saying Sea 'N Cheese deserved a bigger break. They contended the other situations were substantially different because they involved a sale of the businesses and the new owners had a half-year of sales to balance the transfer costs.

Correction

In a recent story about the council on aging, the Mariner incorrectly reported that the council provided meals on wheels services to Cohasset senior citizens.

The home-delivered meals program is supervised and administered by the Social Service League. The Council on Aging refers clients to the Social Service League.

Correction

Due to faulty information provided to the Mariner, the paper incorrectly credited Cohasset High School art teacher Colleen Lucas with two first places in the South Shore Art Center's Blue Ribbon exhibition.

Although Colleen Lucas won first place in the graphics division, first place for drawing/pastels went to Tom Lucas.

The two artists are not related.

A search for missing 'Wild Oats'

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

It was an odd request. Henry Heller Smith called the Cohasset Mariner not long ago asking for a story about a missing boat.

"Was the boat stolen?" the reporter asked.

"No, it's just missing," Smith replied.

The reporter didn't get the picture, so Smith offered to send an old photo and write up some of the information.

He just wanted a story in the Cohasset paper about the fact he was looking for "Wild Oats."

"Please note that our family has been searching for the past five years and that this boat holds sentimental value due to its history with our family," Smith later wrote.

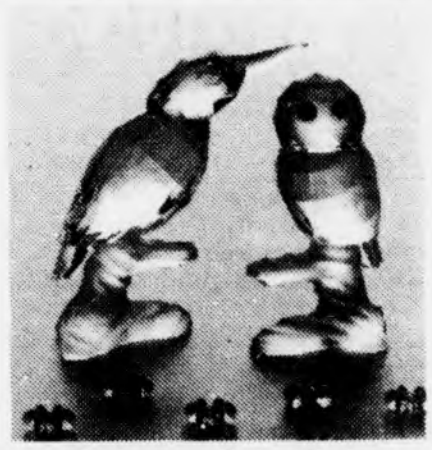
The "Wild Oats" was last seen locally about 30 years ago when it was taken to Carter Raymond's boat yard on Route 3A to be sold. Indeed, reports indicate the boat was sold to someone in the Cohasset/Hull area.

What's so special about the boat?

"Just sentimental value," Smith explained.

The boat was a 26-foot mahogany runabout with two cockpits in the front of the engine hatch.

At the time the boat was painted red below the water-line. There was copper sheathing on parts of the bottom planks for support.



"Hopefully this search will end on a happy note and we will be able to relocate 'Wild Oats' again," Smith wrote.

"Anyone with any information regarding the boat or a boat fitting the description, please write to Henry Smith, PO Box 366, Garden City, NY, 11530."

So the search continues.

Missing ship 'Wild Oats' is being sought by its owner, Henry Smith of Garden City, NY. He is asking any Cohasset resident who might know the whereabouts of the 26-foot boat to contact him.

VNA cancer team brings aid to victims

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Finding out you have cancer can be devastating, but residents of Hingham, Cohasset and parts of Scituate have a friend indeed.

Earlier this year, the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association established an oncology team to provide comprehensive, home-based care for cancer patients.

"We've always taken care of cancer patients," Executive Director Patricia Clark said. The new program was a way to tap into the expertise the VNA had developed and to develop a team approach to providing quality care.

"The impact is a pretty devastating impact," Clark said. "We try to help our patients be optimistic and at the same time realistic and accepting of their illness."

A special feature of the oncology team is that it provides continuity of care from early treatment through hospice services should they become necessary. Previously, patients needing hospice care were transferred to new providers with different caregivers.

The oncology team operates under the direction of Jo Duval. Duval is a registered nurse with special training in cancer management and treatment, home health care and hospice nursing.

Duval and her registered nurses assist the patients with chemotherapy, change dressings and other treatments. The nurses are experienced in helping with symptom control.

Patients who choose a hospice program get the kind and quality of care to support them both physically and emotionally.

In addition to providing nursing care, Duval links patients with a broad range of services. Many of those services are offered by the VNA.

In addition to the cadre of registered nurses, the oncology team includes:

- Home health aides who assist with personal care routines such as bathing, mobility assistance and other hands-on care. The home health aides provide the necessary respite for caretakers to make home-based care a successful experience.
- Homemakers provide light housekeeping services, meal preparation and do shopping.
- Physical therapists maintain body strength, flexibility and mobility.
- Social worker provides direct counseling to the patient to help them accept the disease and make long range plans. The social worker also works with family members to plan for care.

The VNA nutritionist is available to design meals easy on the palate and desirable to an appetite diminished by cancer and its treatments.

"Nutrition is essential to getting well," Clark said. A tailor-made diet can be just the ticket.

The oncology team works closely with other resources in the community. Patients can be referred to pastoral or other counseling programs to maintain emotional and spiritual well-being. The American Cancer Society provides transportation and other resources for patients.

Sometimes the oncology team provides its best gift by helping families help each other.

It can be as simple as setting up the house to make home care easier. Or by teaching a patient how to administer his own medications.

Self-care gives a patient the feeling he has more control over what is happening to him, Clark said. That often helps a patient feel less vulnerable and isolated.

"We want our patients to have a lot of control in the decisions about the kind of treatment they get," she said.

Clark also stresses that although all of their cancer patients are seriously ill, "a lot of them get better." The oncology team celebrates those successes.

They also support and grieve with the patients and families with terminal cancer.

Part of that support means being on-call around the clock. They will come in the middle of the night when a loved one dies to take care of the myriad of difficult duties that death brings.

Currently the oncology team is working with 14 to 16 patients. There is no limit and no waiting list for new patients.

This is important because so many patients are being discharged quicker and sicker from the hospital. The visiting nurses provide much of the education and training the hospitals used to do before discharging patients, Clark said.

Although the VNA accepts all kinds of medical insurance benefits, medicaid and medicare, they have never turned anyone down because of inability to pay.

Clark expects the economic crisis and rising unemployment will increase the number of patients with inadequate or no insurance coverage.

The VNA is able to offer reduced and free care through donations. Currently the agency is conducting a fund drive. People wishing to donate can send their contribution to the Hingham Visiting Nurse Association Fund Drive.

The VNA also accepts memorial donations. Those donations are used to special programs and free care.

The memorial donations also enhearten the staff.

"It affirms the good care we have given," Clark said. "It is a testimony to the staff that we get so many memorial donations."

DOVE representatives appear on Pierson

Battered and abused women and children will be discussed on Pierson to Person this week, Thursday, Nov. 29, with Marilyn Terry, Director of DOVE, Domestic Violence Ended, Quincy; Karen Wise, an art therapist; a counselor at the shelter; and two anonymous women who will tell their stories.

DOVE is the only not-for-profit shelter for abused women and their children on the South Shore. In addition to the shelter, DOVE has a hotline, provides individual counseling, has peer support groups and is a strong advocate for women's rights.

Pierson to Person is hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson, and is broadcast live each Thursday evening, 8-9 p.m., on Channels 3 and 53 in Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell, Scituate and Hanover.

Creating Christmas fantasies at CCC

A special workshop at Cohasset Community Center on The Victorian Wreath and Christmas Tree will have a date change to Monday, Dec. 3 from 10 a.m. to noon. You will create beautiful Victorian Christmas fantasies for gift giving and home decoration. You will be able to choose your own color scheme from peach, mauve, or pink. We encourage a week in advance registration for this class. All materials are provided and the cost of this class is $50 for the Victorian Wreath and $55 for the Victorian Tree.

"The Function of Pain"

Pain is important to your well-being. It is nature's early warning signal. A message relayed through your nervous system that tells you when something is wrong. As such, pain is merely a symptom and not the cause of most health problems. Therefore, the sensible approach to health is not to merely turn off the pain (or treat the symptom). But rather to find the causes and correct them.

Rail referendum planned

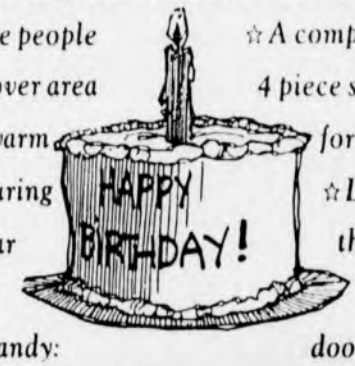
Hynes' question merely asks, "Do you support the restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony Railroad?"

Tebbetts advised adding "on a basis that is environmentally sound and such that costs not covered by fares would be paid for by some form of taxation."



Selectmen agreed with Tebbetts that residents must be aware that fares only cover a percentage of the operating costs of the railroad. The remaining expenses must be picked up by taxpayers in one form or another, Tebbetts said.

Selectman Diana Kornet emphasized that selectmen were not telegraphing support for the restoration project, merely giving residents of the towns the right to vote on the project after hearing all the pros and cons.

Selectmen remain undecided on several buildings market rates prohibitive for a non-profit group.

Goedecke has had conversations with Habitat for Humanity, a volunteer group that builds and renovates housing for low income individuals.

Converting the building to affordable units may not be feasible if the state Department of Environmental Protection won't grant a waiver from sewerage restrictions. The town is under strict controls on the amount of sewerage that can be processed at the treatment plant.

Selectmen agreed to ask the groups currently using space in the building or proposing use to provide detailed information about the costs they are willing to assume in exchange for the space.

Goedecke said she wanted to see written proposals from the groups laying out the costs and responsibilities they would agree to be bound by. Goedecke wants all costs associated with the building shifted onto the organizations using it.

"We promised the building wouldn't be a burden on the town when we committed to the town hall addition," Kornet added.

Selectmen agreed to hold on to the land the West Corner Fire Station stands on. Although the building is in extreme disrepair, selectmen do not plan to put any money into repairs.

There are no plans in the offing for the Independence building either.

One of the apartments in the duplex on Government Island is apparently vacant. The tenants in the unit were ordered to vacate the premises by the end of November after falling seriously in arrears on the rent.

Selectmen do not plan to rent out the unit while they determine whether they have the authority to sell the building and land.

According to Laugelle, the building is also in need of interior and exterior repairs.

Selectmen did approve a transfer of $300 from the reserve fund to pay for an emergency delivery of more than 250 gallons of fuel oil to the vacant apartment. Doyon was instructed to explore the feasibility of draining the water pipes and leaving the unit unheated through the winter months.

Selectmen also agreed to provide Harbormaster Irv Gadow with a key to the apartment so he can keep an eye on the property.

In other business, selectmen:

• Appointed Robert J. Murphy to the Insurance Committee.

• Scheduled interviews for two police officer positions for Monday, Dec. 3, beginning at 8 p.m. All four candidates were taken from the Civil Service reemployment list.

Following Jo-Ellen Wood provides good education

Incidentally, Wood and Lucas have developed a seminar for schools on the South Shore to focus on the production of high school literary/arts magazines. The seminar happens from 1 to 4 p.m. Friday, Dec. 7, at Cohasset High School.

Money is a problem for the literary magazine. But then money is a problem for the whole school system.

Study halls have increased in size radically this year as changes in course offerings leave students who might have wanted home economics, shop or foreign languages with extra time. The home ec and industrial arts department was down-sized during last year's budget planning. Scheduling problems increase as the teachers' availability decreased.

The bottom line is students who wanted those courses may have ended up in one of the mega-studies.

School committee decided this fall to try offering foreign language every other day for grades 7 and 8.

Jo-Ellen Wood

The students end up with additional studies.

Wood's grade 8 honors class holds 29 students.

Does she mind the number?

"I'd rather have that class large. They can handle it. There are other students who need more individual attention."

Her reading class for grade 7 has nine students. She feels they need more of her attention.

Indeed, sitting through the honors class is a study in organized chaos. Ideas flow. Wood doesn't repeat directions. Students attend to the project at hand.

The class began with a simple vocabulary test. Mariner readers can delight to know my vocabulary stood the test. It was reassuring to know I could go back to high school and succeed.

As the test continued, a chorus of voices chimed in to finish the teacher's favorite sentences.

It is clear, this class understands the importance of "The Spelling Rules."

Cohasset Historical Society offers gift ideas for the holidays

Cohasset's history is the subject of several items of interest offered by the Cohasset Historical Society this holiday season. Carried at the Society's Museum Shop last summer and still available are four books portraying the history of this New England small town.

Among books about Cohasset's unique past are the two town histories; Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's Narrative History of the Town of Cohasset, volume 1, dating from 1898, and Burtram Pratt's Narrative History, volume 2, dating from 1956. Together these volumes cover the history of Cohasset from its beginning as a small farming and fishing village to its modern role as a suburb of a major city. Both books were written under the auspices of the Committee On Town History. The Bigelow volume had been out of print for many years, but recently has been made available again in a reprint by the Historical Society. Together the Bigelow and Pratt "Narrative Histories" are the definitive history books of the town, and both are carried in stock by the Historical Society. A third book, detailing the lives of many of Cohasset's 19th century world-travelling Shipmasters is E. Pomeroy Collier's Cohasset's Deep Sea Captains. Written by the son of Cohasset's most illustrious Sea Captain, Capt. James Collier, Jr., this unusual volume provides thumbnail biographies of more than 50 sea captains who called Cohasset their home. The Collier book has been reprinted in paperback form by the Historical Society and remains available from the Society. An informative newcomer to the Historical Society's book selection is Cohasseter Barbara Conte's fascinating Coloring Book of Cohasset's History, recently printed through a special arrangement with the author. The coloring book illustrates Cohasset's history from its discovery by Capt. John Smith in 1614 up to modern time, and has an informative set of picture captions written by Miss Conte. Coloring Book of Cohasset's History is sure to appeal to all ages, and makes a fine holiday gift item. Some of the Historical Society's books relating to Cohasset's history are available at selected shops in Cohasset, and all are available directly through the Society.

These and other unique items are available through the Cohasset Historical Society at its headquarters, the Caleb Lothrop House, Summer Street, Cohasset. Please contact the Society at 383-6930 for further information.

VoTech teachers win 13% raise

By Mary Ford
Mariner staff

The teachers' union at South Shore Regional Vocational High School ratified a three-year contract Wednesday guaranteeing teachers a 13 percent pay raise over three years.

Teachers will receive four percent raises for the next two years and a five percent raise the third year.

Those teachers who have been at the top step for at least a year will receive an additional two percent pay increase, Regional School Committee Chairman Robert Molla said.

For VoTech teachers, there are eleven steps for years of service, according to treasurer, Robert Kelly.

Teachers with 11 or less years of service receive an automatic six percent increase for each step reached. For example, for the first year of the contract teachers, who have been at the top step for more than a year, will receive four percent plus two percent; and teachers who are still in the step system receive six percent plus the four percent contractual increase.

Molla said the school committee was pleased that the contract had finally been settled. Negotiations between the school committee and teachers union have been going on for about a year.

'GLAD IT'S OVER'

"We're glad it's over," he said. "Nobody's happy so it must have been good."

The school committee unanimously approved the contract Nov. 20.

The teachers union ratified the contract Nov. 21 with a 39-5 vote, said union president, Carl Sousa.

Sousa said the teachers gave contractual concessions on sick-day buy-back clauses and on salaries for night-school teachers, which have stayed the same.

The contract settlement follows two stormy months when relationships between the teachers and school committee became testy.

A state mediator was called in after contract talks broke down Sept. 27. The stalemate occurred when the school committee negotiating team did not support an agreement (previously reached with the union team) in open session with the school committee.

This action prompted the union to file a charge of unfair labor practices with the Dept. of Labor. The union filed another charge of unfair labor practices following the alleged intimidation of a union member by a member of the administration.

Soon thereafter, teachers began working to rule by not entering the building until a minute before they were contractually obligated to be at their teaching stations. Teachers were also leaving the building by 2:45 p.m.

ARM BANDS, PICKETING

Teachers also wore red arm bands and performed informational picketing before school.

This activity prompted a student walkout on Nov. 2 when about 100 students left the building in protest.

The teachers also presented grievances to the school committee concerning a lack of telephone in the faculty room of the Abington campus and being required to monitor the halls for a few minutes before and after the student lunch period.

Union President Sousa, said the teachers were "glad things are back as they should be.

"It's been a long, hard fight," he said.

State mediator Jack Mark worked with representatives from the school committee and teachers union to help both parties reach a settlement.

Trees run foul of by-law

Zoning problems on Route 3A resurfaced in the form of Christmas tree sales at various locations. Building Inspector Robert Egan will be asked to enforce the bylaws regarding display and sale of the trees.

Resident Robert Davenport said trees were being displayed in violation of the bylaw requiring a 50-foot setback.

"Right now, some (Christmas trees) are on state property. What's going to be done about it?" he asked.

Christmas tree sales in the parking lot at Cohasset Plaza II may not violate town zoning bylaws that say no parking spaces may be used or taken up by displays of trees.

According to selectmen, vacant stores in the plaza mean the plaza has more parking spaces than required under law. The plaza can legally use the excess parking spaces for display purposes.

AROUND TOWN

Alix White, center, Mariner columnist, enjoys an art opening in Boston recently.

❑ Tom Wigmore, Commander of the Sons of the American Legion, is requesting the names of Cohasset individuals that are now in Saudi Arabia. The Sons of the American Legion wish to acknowledge their presence. Please contact Jim Sheerin at 383-0007 or the American Legion Post at 383-9657 and leave a message. They thank you in advance.

Speaking of Tom, we want to wish him a belated Happy Birthday! Hope it was a great one Tom, and here's to many more!

❑ Be sure to tune in to Channel 3 or 53 this Thursday night (Nov. 29) to watch the Pierson to Person show. Battered and abused women and children will be discussed with Marilyn Terry, Director of DOVE, Domestic Violence Ended, Quincy; Karen Wise, an art therapist; a counselor at the shelter; and two anonymous women who will tell their stories. DOVE is the only not-for-profit shelter for abused women and their children on the South Shore. In addition to the shelter, DOVE has a hotline, provides individual counseling, has peer support groups and is a strong advocate for women's rights. Pierson to Person is hosted by Wigmore A. Pierson, a great host who does a super job! Next week (Dec. 6) will feature a panel discussion including Cohasset High School Senior Jennifer Plante, and Cohasset residents Harriet Partridge and Sumner Smith discuss issues of interest to both senior citizens and our young people. That promises to be interesting, stay tuned.!

❑ Derek Bugley swimming for the Bernal Gator Swim Club (Harvard University) recently competed in the U.S. 10 and under two-day meet at Gloucester Cape Ann Y. He won medals by finishing 3rd in the fifty yard breaststroke and 5th in the 50 yard backstroke. He also placed eighth in the 100 yard breast and 100 yard freestyle, 9th in the 50 yard freestyle and 11th in the 100 yard backstroke. He looks forward to his next competition in Brockton on December 3rd and 4th. Be sure to let us know the results, Derek, and we wish you well.

❑ Good news from Bob and Claire Collins (they used to live on Cushing Road, are now in Chicago, but they will be back). They are grandparents. Their daughter Susan, CHS class of 1983, and her husband Robert had a baby boy Sam Dalton Hayes. Sam weighed in at 8 lbs. 13 oz. and from all reports is adorable. Susan, Roger and Sam live in Norton Mass., another reason for Bob and Claire to move back to Cohasset as soon as possible.

❑ Don't forget that this Saturday, Dec. 1, is the Village Fair. It's great fun, and a super chance for you to purchase anything from baked items, to boutique items, to things for the kiddos, or the secret room for the kids to purchase Christmas presents for you. Of course good old Santa will be there, ready to listen to all of the wishes that the children have. You have a chance to see the beautiful Christmas decorations and purchase a lovely wreath for your front door. There is also a doll raffle, a snack bar, and a dinner that evening. The books and "white elephant" tables are reason enough to go, don't miss it.

❑ We hope that Burt Pratt is continuing to feel better and better, and that he gets his new knees working real fast. Burt is in Braintree Rehab as this is written, trying to do just that. Get home soon Burt, so that you can keep an eye on our town for us.

❑ The PSO sure has come up with an idea that will help everyone. It is a fundraiser under the direction of Beth Christoffel, Helene Thornton and John Kinchla and is it timely. They are selling balsam trees or wreaths, and they want you to "mail order" yours. The sales forms were in last week's Mariner, or they were attached to the school lunch menus, and they are at many locations located throughout town. They are guaranteed to be fresh, and you can pick them up from 9 a.m. -4 p.m. at the High School (or, they will deliver for a ten dollar fee). Sizes and prices are all on the form, just check the one you want and mail the check. All proceeds will be used to provide educational services to the students of the Cohasset Public School System, so do your part.

❑ We hear that Babe Trott has been moved back to the Carney Hospital, and hope that she is feeling better as she reads this. Get home fast.

❑ That's the news for this week, please call me with your latest tidbit, we all love to hear it.

❑ The search is on' Needed are racing skis, to be used until Feb. 4. Karolin Wegner, a senior at CHS and an exchange student from Germany, would love to be on the Cohasset High Ski Team! She has everything but skis and is looking for a pair of racing skis 175 or 180. Please call the Sandells if you can help Karolin at 383-0486.

Selectmen veto sidewalk fees

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen vetoed a proposal to build sidewalks in town with money raised through betterment fees charged to sidewalk abutters.

Glenn Pratt broached the idea to selectmen. According to Pratt, the need for sidewalks comes up every town meeting only to be defeated due to lack of funds.

We can probably identify six streets with heavy use by pedestrians that need sidewalks, Pratt said. Forest Street appeared on everyone's priority list.

Pratt said the impact of Proposition 2-1/2 on the town's budget meant the town had to get creative and think of alternative ways to pay for things. Under state law, the town can raise 50 percent of the costs through betterment assessments.

Selectmen suggested this solution would be less than palatable to taxpayers and property owners.

"The way the economy is today and how much people are paying in taxes, I don t know how much more we can put on them," Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said. "I wouldn't have the nerve to ask anybody to pay 50 percent."

All five selectmen agreed with Pratt that sidewalks were necessary to protect the safety of pedestrians, particularly children walking to bus stops.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby argued that construction costs should be shared by anyone using the sidewalks. Because it is a safety issue, she raised the possibility that funds might be available through "obscure state accounts that can be tapped."

"I'm totally against betterment charges," she said.

Selectman Jane Goedecke also said the cost should be borne by the town, not through betterments.

"This is a perfect use of a debt exclusion," Goedecke said. "It's not a must-do, it's a quality of life thing. Everyone should share the cost."

Selectmen said they would ask Highway Surveyor Harold Litchfield to provide them with a priority list for sidewalk construction with approximate costs.

Laugelle said the highway department could construct the sidewalks at minimal cost if they had the time.

Pratt suggested giving the highway department an additional worker in order to free the department to tackle special projects like sidewalk construction.

He argued the money the town could save may well cancel out the cost of salary and benefits.

Selectmen also reviewed the status of plans to improve the intersection of Beechwood and King streets.

Resident Kenneth Ingber prepared a lengthy letter addressing the latest proposal by Norfolk County engineer Al Downs. Ingber and the selectmen continue to oppose the engineer's recommendation to take down several trees and a split rail fence in order to improve sight lines at the intersection.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon said he had not received Downs' response yet.

Goedecke asked about the town's potential liability if they did not adopt the recommendations of the county engineer in redesigning the dangerous intersection.

Doyon said court arguments would hinge on whether the intersection was safer because of the reconstruction, even without acting on all the recommendations of the engineer.

"It would be like hiring an attorney," Doyon said. "You hire him for his professional opinion and expertise. You don't have to take his advice."

Fine work!

Selectmen are putting the town's ambulance work out to bid.

We happen to think that's a good idea.

We think the selectmen acted with courage and good judgment in beginning the whole process of preparing the bid specifications.

For some time now the town government structure committee has been talking about the ambulance service as being too costly.

Listening to the arguments raised by that committee, it's been hard to justify an ambulance within the fire department.

We understand there are emotional issues involved here. We are talking people's livelihoods when we talk about making a change this fundamental. The only way the town would save money is by reducing the work force within the fire department.

The service is necessary.

But the town budget only stretches so much. And other cuts — in the number of educators for our increasing school population or in other already strained services — aren't any easier.

In a perfect world, we wouldn't be faced with these tough choices. We would have the money we need to educate our children well. We would have the money to pay town employees enough to live well. We would have the resources to support recreation, the senior citizens. We would have the money required to take care of our public safety.

But the world is not perfect. Town money is limited. Peter is often robbed to pay Paul. Hey, many of us run our private finances on the same financial principles.

We might suggest that the selectmen could send out a request for ambulance proposals (RFP) in addition to preparing detailed specifications that would encompass the town's bottom line standards. In the current economy, the town could be surprised by a good offer.

The town government study committee recently suggested the old Emergency Medical Services Committee should be reactivated to deal with whole ambulance issue.

We happen to think that sounds like a wise idea.

The committee — composed of medical professionals — was formed six years ago. We happen to think the advice of medical professionals is exactly what is needed to deal with the whole issue of the ambulance.

Recently F. Roy Fitzsimmons, chairman of the town government structure committee, asked selectmen a series of questions about the ambulance service.

The questions addressed the quality of the town's present ambulance service, such as:

- are all full time fire fighters, call fire fighters and police personnel certified as first responders?
- are supplies being disinfected after each patient is transported?
- does the current ambulance system identify one EMT-D on each shift to be responsible for the presence and proper functioning of supplies and equipment used in direct patient care?
- does a certified expert in infection control or infectious diseases review our procedures?
- do we recruit volunteer registered nurses and physicians to lend particular expertise in medical training sessions?
- is there a formal mechanism in place for either initial or periodic evaluations of the skills and performance of a fire fighter/EMT?

As far as we know the questions — for the most part — remain unanswered. Maybe a committee of medical professionals would know the answers. We feel certain such a committee could get the answers.

The view from Jerusalem Road to Straits Pond is picturesque in any season.

Sending the Christmas spirit to troops

To the Editor:

The letter from P.F.C. Brian E. Curran in the Nov. 1 issue of the Mariner, reminded me of a marvelous, thoughtful program that was once conducted by Cohasset's George H. Mealy, American Legion Post.

Each year, at Christmas, the Legion sent a card, with a small stipend enclosed, to each Cohasset man and woman who was then serving on active military duty somewhere in the world. I, along with many others of Cohasset's sons and daughters was the grateful recipient of some of those cards. I especially remember the ones I received while spending Christmas in Korea and Vietnam.

I believe Selectman Rocco Laugelle was then the Legion Commander and the signer of one or more of the cards which I received.

For the serviceman or woman away from Cohasset, often for the first time in his or her life, it's nice to be remembered by Cohasset because all of us, in all wars, in all remote areas of the world, certainly remembered Cohasset and how privileged we were to have been born and raised there.

In Belleau Wood, Guadalcanal, Pork Chop Hill, Saigon, Grenada, Panama and now, the Saudi Arabian Desert, there are no Pleasant Beach, Whitney Woods, Lily Pond, Carillon Concerts on the green common, or Thanksgiving high school football.

But every Cohasset man and woman who ever set foot on those or other far flung battlefields, have spent a lot of time thinking wistfully of those and other Cohasset pleasures.

I have been stationed in the Middle East and I have seen those God forsaken deserts — miles and miles of sand and sun broken only by flies, fleas and camel dung. Short of actual combat, I can't think of any worse place for a soldier to be stationed.

I hope Cohasset will respond to PFC Curran's letter, as you did for me during my soldiering days. Cohasset is very special to its native servicemen and women, and they have always been special to Cohasset. My guess is, they still are. I know, from experience, that Brian and any other Cohasset man or woman in, or on the way to, Saudi Arabia, will welcome hearing from friends at home. As an airborne trooper, he is way out there on the cutting edge and deserves the support of all of us.

Sincerely,
William F. Sullivan

Plaza works to fix problem

To the Editor:

I was greatly distressed to read Alison Cohen's article on the front page of the November 1st issue of the Mariner, headlined "Cushing Plaza Might Close". As Managing Agent for the Plaza and a representative of the owners, I wish to set the record straight. Regrettably, before composing her piece, Ms. Cohen did not speak to me or any of the owners of the Plaza to verify her facts.

The problem with an article of this type is that it could be damaging to the very hard work of local business people like the Peter's family, who have just opened a beautiful new market at Cushing Plaza; Betsy Detweiler, who has a booming success on her hands at Buttonwood Books; and Bruce Compton, who has recently opened a compact disc store in the Plaza. In view of their efforts and the efforts of all of our 26 business owners, we felt that it was important to set the record straight.

The owners of Cushing Plaza have worked very, very hard over the past several years to solve the septic problem with which the Board of Health is justifiably concerned. We have spent literally hundreds of thousands of dollars engaging engineers and consultants to fashion the best solution to the problem of high ground water at the Plaza.

After several years of investigation, our consultants, GZA, have determined that building an interceptor drain around the plaza is the best solution to lowering the ground water and solving the problem. We are now seeking the required permission from the State Department of Public Works and neighbors of the Plaza to go ahead with this plan, and we are confident that we will reach a satisfactory solution shortly. The information contained in the article that we were negotiating with the DPW, and that we have an agreement with the town to fix the problem, is correct, but gave the false impression that we have not been doing our part in meeting the deadlines in the settlement plans. Nothing could be further from the truth.

The settlement plan specifically recognized that we had to monitor results after each phase of the project was done. The settlement plan also recognized that we require the permission of other parties in order to move forward with certain phases of the project. Specifically, the plan recognizes that we require permission of the Wetland's Commission, The State Department of Public Works and abutters of the project.

I think it is important that the citizens of Cohasset recognize that the owners of Cushing Plaza care very deeply about the community and about solving the problem of high groundwater. We have spent over $100,000 a year for the past several years to make certain that water conditions at the Plaza are constantly monitored. We remain committed to finding a satisfactory solution and to implementing that solution as quickly as we possibly can.

Sincerely,
Paul L. Rosenberg

There has been great confusion about plastic recycling at the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF). What is really accepted? How should it be prepared? Why can't we throw any plastic in the blue bin inside the Transfer building? In a recent interview, Bill Courier answered many of our questions. He is president of Recycling Services and our plastics' vendor.

Cohasset Agrees
CARE
to Recycle Everything

"Keep it simple," he urges. "We only granulate jugs: HDPE=resin #2, opaque and colored, and PETE=resin #1. This constitutes 85% of consumer plastic.

"We do not granulate anything else; not yogurt containers, butter tubs or plastic bags, and not toilet seats or hair curlers. That is because all these items are made in a different way than the milk, water and detergent jugs."

"Each recycler must clean their jugs with a little water. This is simply a matter of courtesy. "I don't know if you've ever smelled a warehouse full of sour milk," said Courier, "but it's pretty unpleasant." Take off the lid and throw it away. The caps are made of an entirely different resin from the jug. This will also encourage each recycler to rinse out the residue.

Rinsing is so easy. Simply take a little water (approximately 2 Tablespoons) and swish it around the bottom of your jug. If it's milk, use cold water. Hot water binds the milk fat to the jug making the residue impossible to remove. Detergent bottles use slightly more water. Fear not faithful recycler. Simply pour the soapy residue in a convenient squirt bottle (I use a shampoo bottle), and squirt the soap on your tough stains. This also eliminates the spot & stain remover you currently buy.

Having rinsed the inside of the jug, the last thing to remember is to keep the outside clean. "Sand and dirt will wear out the very sharp blades on the granulator," said Courier. "If the recycler is going to compact the jugs, simply squeeze them. Don't step on them, that's where the sand and dirt get picked up."

Finally, motor oil jugs cannot be recycled because of the oil residue: it is hazardous waste.

Many home recyclers are disappointed that all plastics can't be recycled. Our previous plastic vendor led us to believe that this was possible. As recently as last month I led you to believe that all #1 and #2 resin containers were recyclable. They are not at the present time. I am sorry for any inconvenience that this may have caused you.

If you have containers made of resins #1 or #2 that are not recyclable at the RTF, why not write to that company that is making all the recyclable claims all over the container and find out who their plastic vendor is. That's what I'll be doing with some of my yogurt containers. They make such a big deal about being recyclable that I can hardly find the word "yogurt" on the presently non-recyclable container.

All sports teams deserve equal support

Letters

To the Editor:

I've been known to write a letter or two to your newspaper! Its usually concerning some subject regarding law or taxes. Not this time.

I waited two weeks for your sports writer to acknowledge the existence of the Cohasset High School Girls Soccer Team. He never did, he got the boys team, the field hockey team, and the football team.

I'm not a sports writer but I followed this outstanding team all season (obviously since my daughter Kathleen is a member). They accomplished many milestones in 1990. They qualified for the State Tournament for the first time in seven years. They tied an Abington team they had only lost to since Kennan Startzell took over as coach. They finished with a record of 10-7-2, including the playoff loss to a very strong Sacred Heart (Kingston) team.

The seniors should at least be acknowledged for their devotion and development: Kara Manicon, Carrie Meile, Katie McNamara, Nicole Barry, Ellen Schramm, Chrissie Martin, Sophie Redfield, Rebecca Jordan, and Melissa Rousseau.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
John E. O'Brien

(Editor's Note: We need the help of the coaches and players to provide information. We are happy to print submissions.)

A few weeks ago, Mr. Shutz and Mrs. Magoun's 5th and 6th grade team travelled to Plimoth Plantation. This began their research on the Pilgrim's and the Wampanoag Indians of 1620-1627.

Next they painted backdrops and brought in props to make the scenery look authentic. After many rehearsals, they videotaped it for cable, had classroom visitors, and the last presentation was for their parents on Tuesday, Nov. 20.

After the presentation, they had a big turkey feast served by the children. There were about 150 parents and grandparents in attendence. This was the 18th annual Thanksgiving presentation for the 5th/6th grade team.

Natalie Cheel, Lindy Holway, Courtney Goff, Caroline Wells, Jessie Sandell, Justin Green, Kathleen McRae, Emily Collins, and Bob Meehan attended the special feast.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

CHS hosts debates

Cohasset High School hosted Round I & II of the South Shore Debate League's 1990-1991 year on Wednesday, November 28, from 2:30-7 p.m. More than 120 debaters in grades 7-12, from seven schools in southeastern Massachusetts were involved.

"What is particularly exciting is that this is the only activity that we know of in which students from parochial, public, private, city and suburban schools gather to test and hone their skills," explains Thomas O'Neil, faculty advisor to the Cohasset team. Schools fielding debate teams in this league are Tabor Academy (Marion), New Bedford High School, Somerset High School, Foxboro High School, Bishop Feehan High School (Attleboro) and Norton High School, as well as Cohasset.

The 1990-1991 Resolution is: That the U.S. government should significantly increase space exploration beyond the earth's mesosphere. Whether they agree or disagree is not the question—debaters must learn to present their arguments, pro and con, in a concise, logical manner thereby developing their communications skills. "Important tools in any field," O'Neil said.

Interested persons are urged to contact O'Neil at Cohasset High School, 383-6100 or Beth Christoffel, 383-6929.

PSO news...

A balsam tree or wreath has special meaning to those that celebrate the holidays; and our thoughts at this time of year are towards helping others and gift giving.

It is in that spirit, that we suggest this unusual idea. We request that you "mail order" the purchase of your holiday tree and/or wreath from the PSO this year.

We offer a 100 percent money back return on the quality of your tree or wreath. If upon your inspection on December 8, the quality is less than green, fresh, high density or premium grade, we will refund your money.

We offer a superior product at an exceptional price. To guarantee your tree or wreath please fill out the enclosed coupon and return it with a check payable to the PSO prior to December 3.

You can pick up your tree and/or wreath on Saturday, December 8 at Cohasset High from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Home delivery is also available for an additional $10.

Project Managers Beth Christoffel, John Kinchla and Helene Thornton suggest that to guarantee arrival of your tree or wreath the sales form be returned with a check payable to the PSO prior to December 3.

Curious shoppers will find trees on display at the following sites: the Joseph Osgood School, the Deer Hill School, Cohasset High School and in the Village, between Tedeschi's Market and the Cohasset Central Market.

You can pick up your tree and/or wreath on Saturday, December 8 at Cohasset High School on Pond Street from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Home delivery can also be arranged for an additional $10.

All money raised from this event will be used to provide educational services to the students of the Cohasset Public School system.

In a major off-season deal, Red Sox Relief Pitcher, Dennis Lamp has agreed to "pitch" for the Cohasset Parent School Organization (PSO) as Honorary Chairman of the Holiday Tree and Wreath Sale.

As Honorary Chairman, Dennis expects that his sales team will have a spectacular season, however all tree and wreath customers should remember that tree and wreath sales order forms and checks or money orders must be returned to the PSO, PO Box 30, Cohasset MA 02025 by December 3, 1990.

Buying a Christmas tree in this fashion is no different than buying it from a nursery, garden center or other retailer. Basically, the shoppers that arrive earliest on December 8 get the best selection from among the trees ordered in their size range. The PSO is selling trees from 4 feet up to 12 feet tall. The price of the trees are $24 for a tree 4 to 5 feet tall and $48 for a tree 10 to 12 feet tall.

To reduce the financial risk and to guarantee the success of this fundraiser, the PSO decided to take an idea from mail order/catalog retailer L.L. Bean Inc. this holiday season.

Holiday tree and wreath sale order forms are being circulated throughout Cohasset requesting that residents buy their holiday greens from the PSO.

Mail order sales forms have been attached to the Osgood and Deer Hill school lunch menus and they have appeared as inserts in local newspapers. The forms are also available at the following locations. On Route 3A: Leo's Exxon, The Good Sport, Randy's Mobil Service Center, XPRESS Printing, Roberts' Market and Aveni Cleaners. At Cushing Plaza: Sea and Cheese, The Children's Shop, Cohasset Cycle Sport, Buttonwood Books and Toys and Party Etc. In Cohasset Village: The Children's Exchange, The Log and Line Restaurant, Cohasset Hardware, Tedeschi's Market, Cohasset News, the Cohasset Community Center, the Carriage House Nursery, the Cohasset Police and Fire Station, the Cohasset Public Library and at all Cohasset Public Schools.

On Dec. 1 there will be sales people at both the Cohasset High School Gym and at the Deer Hill School Gym from 8:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. A table will be set up to take orders.

A Christmas tree has been donated to the Village Merchants Association and will be decorated by the school children prior to the Village Fair on December 1. A sales representative will also be on site to take orders. The tree will be located in the open lot between Tedeschi's Market and the Cohasset Central Market.

The PSO offers a 100% money back return on the quality of the tree or wreath purchased. They state that "If upon your inspection on December 8, the quality is less than green, fresh, high density or premium grade, we will refund your money. We offer a superior product at an exceptional price."

Recreation department offers Loon Mountain trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first Ski trip of the year will be on Sunday, Dec. 16, to Loon Mt. This first, early-bird trip will again be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club. The cost for this trip is $38 per person, and $28 per person for the Beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson, equipment rentals. For the $38 non-beginner package you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners are $13, and you should bring your rental money with you the day of the trip, in cash.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before as for $28 you will be fully outfitted and given a lesson as well. For seasoned skiers, you will be provided the opportunity to get an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Thursday, Nov. 29. To register you may call the recreation department office, at 383-6791, however, payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and that must be paid at the recreation office, 1st floor Town Hall, or mailed to us along with a parental permission form.

Cable schedule for week

November 29, Thursday, 5:30 p.m., Children's Corner: Bob Detwiler reads Dr. Seuss' Oh the Places You'll Go; Slugs; Possum Come a Knockin' and selections from If I Were in Charge of the World.

December 4, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m., Bob Detwiler's Journal: Norwell Church Hill Methodist Minister Steve Harvester tells how and why he became a "Teller of Tales," how this art form can be learned by others and why this form of expression should be encouraged in our society.

December 6, Thursday, 5:30 p.m., Children's Corner: Many of Bob Detwiler's viewers who are familiar with Chris Van Allsburg's magical Polar Express and Wreck of the Zephyr should enjoy Bob's reading of his newest book Just A Dream. Also read on the program is Barbara Cooney's latest book which she has authored and illustrated, Hattie and the Wild Waves. Ms. Cooney, one of America's most beloved illustrators has over 100 books to her credit including the award winning Ox Cart Man.

December 11, Tuesday, 8:30 p.m., Bob Detwiler's Journal: "The Importance of the Secondary School Accreditation Process." Back for a return visit is Pamela Gray-Bennett, Associate Director of the Commission on Public Secondary Schools of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. Joining Pam in the discussion are Meg Gallagher, principal Cohasset H.S. and Bob McIntyre, principal of Hull H.S. With both Cohasset and Hull coming up for accreditation, this program is particularly relevant for citizens of these two towns.

Wreath committee chairman Jean Manganero and Madeline Hargardon put the finishing touches on wreaths that will be sold at the Cohasset Village Fair.

Mary Reardon and Doris Gould ready wreaths for the 50th Annual Cohasset Village Fair by creating ornaments and decorations.

Early Christmas at LDS

Hingham and Cohasset residents are invited to experience the magic of Christmas early this year at a special Christmas devotional service broadcast by The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and the Mormon Tabernacle Choir at the LDS chapel, 379 Gardner Street, Hingham, on Dec. 2 at 8 p.m.

The service will originate from church headquarters in Salt Lake City and be broadcast live over a satellite network to over 3000 churches in the United States and Canada. It is intended for the entire family and will include Christmas messages from officials of the church as well as traditional Christmas music by the Tabernacle Choir.

Cohasset Village Fair set

Crowds of shoppers for hand-crafted gifts, attic treasures, goodies and a good time will descend on the buildings around Cohasset Common on Saturday, Dec. 1, as four local churches present the 50th annual edition of the Cohasset Village Fair from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.

All the familiar features of a church benefit event, enlarged by the work of volunteers from four congregations, will be offered to satisfy the interests and needs of young and old who have made this a traditional season-opening event. The four churches working together and sharing the proceeds of the Fair are the Second Congregational, St. Stephen's Episcopal, St. Anthony's Roman Catholic, and Panagia Greek Orthodox.

While most will wait for the opening of the Town Hall doors at 10 a.m., early-bird shoppers for wreaths may purchase these decorative items in advance, beginning Wednesday, Nov. 28, in the vestry of the Second Congregational Church where workers under the direction of Jean Manganaro and Merle Graham will be assembling the wreaths daily. Although some may be sold in advance, Mrs. Manganaro promises there will be plenty left for Saturday.

Some of the stand-by events will be in their usual locations this year while others will be moving to new sites, but all within easy access. Renovation of the Congregational Church has progressed to the point where the Bargain Bazaar will again be in the vestry and will be joined by the book tables which Chairs Helen Hooper and Betty Enders say will be overflowing with an exceptional store of fine volumes.

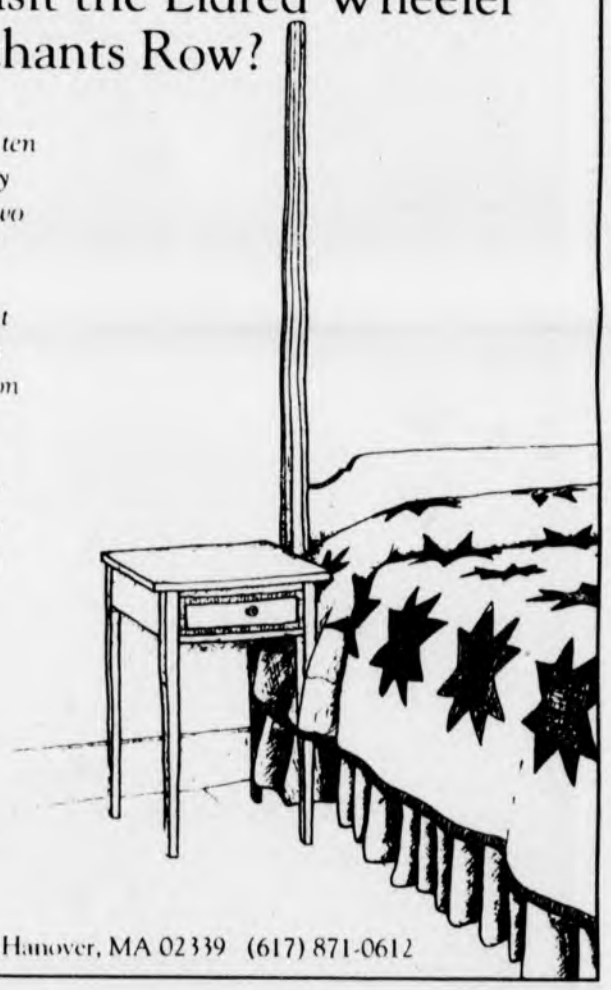
The Community Center will house the Chowder Bar that Ralph and Susi Coley and helpers will be operating, and also Santa Claus whose appearance has again been negotiated by Craig Muir. There, too, will be activities for children arranged by a young people's group from St. Stephen's Church.

The Town Hall, as always, will be a major focal point of activity with the Boutique as a major attraction, but also presenting plants, grabs, raffles, baked goods and cheese.

Ham Tewksbury, and his team of Don Pratt and Roger Nast who have established the cheese table tradition over many years, report that a particularly fine offering of sharp Vermont cheddar will be on sale.

The raffles, too, are presenting an especially wide range of prizes this year. Chris and Rose Kierce, co-chairing the raffle, report gift certificates or articles donated by the Red Lion Inn, Chart House, Kit & Kaboodle, Liquors Unlimited, Sea 'n Cheese, Cohasset Hardware, Noble's Camera, Cohasset Jewelers, Colonial Pharmacy, Flemings, Leo's Exxon and the village Texaco station. As chairs, too, of the necessary transportation function, the Kierces also acknowledge the loan of many tables by Kimball's Motel.

The Doll Raffle, also in the Town Hall will draw scores of young ladies and their mothers. June Simeone will present 50 dolls, all dressed distinctively by parishioners of the four churches, and will distribute these by way of an unusual "double raffle" in which participants buy a lollipop and then discover whether they have also purchased a winning ticket.



Lodged in St. Stephen's Church "on the rock", will be the Secret Room for child shoppers. Linda McCarthy and Kathy Pratt will present hundreds of moderately priced gifts which children can buy for family members and arrange, with the help of church young people, to be attractively gift-wrapped, ready for the tree.

St. Stephen's will also be the scene of the wind-up Village Fair Dinner, which chair Debbie Becker says will be a real community effort. The food, featuring a chicken specialty, will be from the kitchens of restaurateur and Cohasset resident, Arthur Roebuck, and will be served by young people under the direction of Ann Mitchell and Sharon Moody. Some of the hors d'oeuvres are being donated by Sea 'n Cheese, and the wine by Curtis Liquors.

The Common itself will be the setting for two of the Village Fair features. Under a canopy across from the Town Hall, Bob Moody and a staff of helpers will operate the popular Snack Bar, dispensing hot dogs, hamburgers and hot and cold drinks. Nearby Ed and Kathy Brennock will be inflating and selling the colorful balloons which give the event a festive air.

Annette Sawchuk heads the Village Fair organization in this its 50th year, and her Central Committee includes Debbie Anderson and Susan Cameron as other representatives from the lead Congregational Church; Chris and Rose Kierce from St. Anthony's; Nancy Swatek from St. Stephen's; and Debbie Casey from Panagia Greek Orthodox Church. Treasurers are Letitia Jordan, Claudia Story, and Deanna Mulligan. Elaine Davis heads up the necessary purchasing and procurement function.

Chiropractic for Health

by Dr. Debra M. Tranberg & Dr. Susan Emmer

CHRONIC STRAIN

Ligaments are tough bands of connective tissue that connect bone to bone. Because they are relatively inelastic, ligaments will tear if stretched. It is very unusual, however, for back pain to be caused by a ligament tear or sprain. It is more likely that chronic strain to ligaments will cause back pain. This condition often results from improper posture over a long period of time. For instance, those who constantly hunch over their desks at work could effect a change in their spinal ligaments. The ligaments at the back of the joints of the spine would stretch, while opposing ligaments would shorten. As the ligaments adapt to the posture in which they are incorrectly held, the joint that they support would fail to function properly. As a result, pain would emanate from the misalignment.

If you have been experiencing such difficulty, a call to DR. DEBRA M. TRANBERG, SCITUATE HARBOR CHIROPRACTIC, 80 Front St., Scituate, 545-7388, and DR. SUSAN EMMER, CHIROPRACTIC & FAMILY WELLNESS CARE, 87 Sohier St., Cohasset, 383-1330, is in order. Discover, as many others have, that it is not necessary to live life enduring such pain. Chiropractic applications offer a natural approach to addressing the source of such problems and providing the relief you desire and deserve. By appointment. Workers Comp. cases and most insurance plans accepted.

P.S. Chiropractors' main concern lies with finding the reason for and correcting misalignments of the spine.

All cars need titles

Effective Nov. 26, Massachusetts will join 42 other states in requiring application for a title when registering all passenger vehicles regardless of age. The recent legislative mandate removes an exemption from titling for passenger vehicles 10 years or older.

Extending the title requirement protects buyers of older cars from possible fraud, according to Registrar of Motor Vehicles Robert M. Hutchinson, Jr.

Public notice

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS THE TRIAL COURT THE PROBATE AND FAMILY COURT NORFOLK DIVISION DOCKET NO. 90P2752E1

Estate of CHARLES L. SMITH JR. NAMED IN THE WILL AS CHARLES LLEWELLYN SMITH JR. late of COHASSET In the County of NORFOLK

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above - captioned matter praying that the last will of said decedent be proved and allowed and that CHARLES L. SMITH, III, named in the will as CHARLES LLEWELLYN SMITH, III of SAN FRANCISCO in the State of CALIFORNIA and JEPTHA H. WADE of BEDFORD in the County of MIDDLESEX be appointed executors named in the will without surety on the bond.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Dedham on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on December 12, 1990.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving the specific grounds therefore, within thirty (30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 16.

Witness, Robert M. Ford, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Dedham, the ninth day of November, one thousand nine hundred and ninety.

Living Life

By Dr. Michael McFadden
Special to the Mariner

Happy Thanksgiving Everyone! The holiday seasons have arrived. Airports, bus terminals, train stations and the highways have been very busy for the past few days and will be again before the weekend is over. College campuses have emptied out. Everyone is going home.

Thanksgiving and the ensuing holidays of Hanukah, Christmas and New Years is a time for reunion, a time to reminisce about the past, a time to think about the future. This is a time for living life to the full, living it abundantly and radiantly. This is a time for human beings to be fully alive and fully human, a time to be in touch with their deepest selves, their ultimate realities, a time to give thanks to God and to each other. To do this, one must be aware, sincere and temperate.

Recently, someone gave me a copy of Tips For Responsible Social Hosting by Thomas Prugh, printed in Alcoholic Health and Research World. I would like to reprint them here for the holidays as guidelines for living life fully:

GUIDELINES FOR SOCIAL HOSTS

• Do your best to establish and maintain a tension-free atmosphere. Guests should not have to drink in order to relax.

• Have food available before and during alcohol service, but avoid salty foods that promote thirst. High-protein foods, for example, chicken, shellfish and meatballs are best at slowing the absorption of alcohol.

• Do not have an open bar. Deemphasize alcohol by putting the bar someplace out of the way. Serve your guests yourself or hire someone to do it. In either case, measure the alcohol carefully and use light doses.

• Have an attractive variety of nonalcoholic beverages on hand and make them at least as easily and prominently accessible as the alcoholic drinks. If you are serving mixed drinks, be aware that noncarbonated mixers retard the absorption of alcohol into the blood stream while carbonated mixers speed it up.

• If the event is a dinner and drinks affair, keep the drinking period short and have hors d'oeuvres available throughout.

• Don't push drinks. Respect your guests' right to refuse drinks. Make sure that nonalcoholic beverages are available during dinner as well as before.

• Never serve alcohol or allow it to be served, to a guest who seems to be intoxicated.

• Stop serving alcohol at least an hour before the party is over.

• If, despite these precautions, a guest drinks to the point of impairment (not necessarily drunkenness) and you are not certain he or she will be driven home by a sober companion, then drive the guest home yourself, arrange for a taxi, or put him or her up in your home for the night. Never let a guest drive away intoxicated!

GUIDELINES FOR GUESTS

• Support and cooperate with your host's or hostess' efforts to make the event safe and pleasant for all.

• Do not hesitate to exercise your right to refuse drinks or to avoid alcoholic beverages altogether.

• If you choose to drink, moderate your intake. If you arrive with a group, arrange for one member to take responsibility for doing the driving. That person should not drink alcohol on that occasion.

• Be aware that, while most people can metabolize about one standard drink every hour (a standard drink is one 12 oz. can of beer, 5 oz. of wine, or 1.5 oz. of spirits), metabolic rates vary. In general, women are more readily affected by alcohol than men are, because of lower body weight, different tissue composition, and other factors.

• If a woman is pregnant or nursing, the safest decision for her and her baby is not to drink.

• Party-goers taking medication should be aware that many drugs - both prescription or over-the-counter - can interact with alcohol to produce unpleasant or even dangerous side effects. If in doubt, consult your physician or pharmacist.

Say YES to life and live it abundantly one day at a time. Life is the greatest gift we have ever received. Live it well. Happy Holidays!

(Dr. McFadden is the Director of Pastoral Care for Hospice Community Services of VNA, Dedham. He is a marriage and family therapist, a certified addictions counselor and a member of the Cohasset Alcohol and Drug Committee.)

Santa and Mrs. Claus to attend breakfast

The Community Center Nursery School will host A Winter Holiday Breakfast featuring Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus on Saturday, Dec. 8 from 9 to 11 a.m. The breakfast will be a continental style buffet with homemade muffins, donuts, fruit salad, coffee, and juice. Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus will arrive to sing some holiday songs with the children and be available for picture taking. Tickets will be sold in advance. Children $2, adults $3, call 383-0088 for reservations.

The Pre-School puppet show at Cohasset Community Center for children will feature The Shoemaker and the Elves on Friday morning, Dec. 7, from 10:30 to 11:15 a.m. Join Pat Boylan and her puppets as they enchant and stimulate the imaginations of the children. Admission is $2 per person at the door.

Bowling classes are offered for children in Grades K through third at Cohasset Community Center on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday afternoon beginning December 11. Kids learn how to bowl and keep score at the Center's four-lane candlepin bowling alleys. Classes will meet for 12 weeks and the cost is $36.

To register for any class or workshop please call the Center at 383-0088.

Holiday concert soon

The Broad Cove Chorale will present a program of music for womens' voices and harp at St. John the Evangelist in Hingham next Friday, Dec. 7, at 8 p.m.

The twenty women from all over the South Shore and their director, Margo Euler of Hingham, have been rehearsing A Ceremony of English and Spanish Carols for several weeks.

Soccer season feasts for finale

By John Brister
Special to the Mariner

Cohasset Soccer wrapped up its 1900 season November 19 with its annual soccer banquet. The banquet took place at the Chart House, and all J.V. and varsity players attended. This meeting gave a chance for players to reflect on the season and for coaches to award players for their efforts on and off the field.

The award ceremony began when Steve Endris, president of the Cohasset Soccer Club, presented Larry Schultz with a special award, honoring him for his years of service to Cohasset soccer, and thanking him for his many contributions.

Then J.V. Coach Rich Chamberlain introduced his team, speaking about each players' achievements during their highly successful 13-0-2 season.

The team stats complimented the players further, as they scored a total of 65 goals against opposing teams, and limited goals scored in their own net to 8. Coach Chamberlain credited the small number of goals against the Skippers to a tight defense and an outstanding goalkeeper.

Chris Goodman, who allowed only six goals and achieved six shutouts. Bill Jordan led the offense, and with 14 goals and six assists, earned the title of leading point scorer. Joe Andrade, however, also scored 14 goals, and because six of them were game-winners, he received the nomination of most valuable player.

Ben Chittick received the J.V. Mr. Hustle award, and Coach Chamberlain gave special thanks to Jessica Pyfrom, scorekeeper, who faithfully attended the games, keeping an accurate stat book all season long.

Varsity Coach Alvaro Ibanez then gave recognition to his team, addressing in particular the ten graduating seniors, whom he acknowledged individually, stating that they will be sorely missed in the upcoming seasons. They were: Steve Almeida, Bill Baird, Travis Coley, Doug Drysdale, Linc Marsac, Ollie Nouveaux, Jake Powell, Josh Stevenson, Bart Weisenfluh, and Bob Whittaker. Coach Ibanez then nominated his players for specific awards. As All Stars, Ibanez named: Travis Coley, a versatile player utilized in the midfield and backfield, Linc Marsac, the team's high scorer, Josh Stevenson, a wing with good ball-handling skills, and Bill Baird, backbone to the Skippers' defense. To Steve Almeida, Ibanez gave a Players' Award, recognizing him for his care and understanding of both his teammates and his coach. Tim Brister, a freshman, received the award of Mr. Hustle, and Bart Weisenfluh was named Most Improved Player. As Most Valuable Players, Ibanez commended Linc Marsac and Travis Coley. Finally, Bill Baird received the Coach's Award.

To conclude the banquet, Coach Ibanez designated two captains for next year's team: Ryan Cibelli and Joe Gagliano. Although the team will miss the ten Skippers graduating in the spring, it should continue to thrive, achieving winning seasons as the talents of the J.V. are brought up to varsity level.

CHS soccer player kicks into action in a game during the past season.

VFW unveils plan to honor war dead

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset residents who gave their life on the field of battle may finally have their names inscribed on an honor roll, thanks to the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Austin Ahearn asked selectmen for approval to go forward with plans to install gray granite and bronze honor rolls at the veterans' memorial by the harbor for wars from the Revolutionary War through Vietnam. Each plaque will contain 40 names.

"We don't want to build any more after that one," Ahearn said.

Selectmen enthusiastically endorsed the project, contingent upon review and approval by tree and parks superintendent Peter Laugelle.

"It's a marvelous idea," selectman Diana Kornet said.

"I've been hoping for something to happen," selectman Martha Gjesteby added.

According to Ahearn, the VFW has been working on the project for three years.

"The next point is to try to raise some money," he said. "It's not going to cost the town anything."

The VFW plans to raise the funds themselves to construct and maintain the honor rolls. The building inspector has already approved the plans and builder James Rosano has been contacted, Ahearn said.

The site plans call for having three beach plum trees removed. The trees stand 10-12 feet high. Ahearn promised to transplant the trees. He also mentioned the possibility of transplanting the rosa rugosa, or beach rose, plants at the site and replacing them with planters.

"This would not block any view of the harbor," selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle added.

CHS writing lab gets nod

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

A writing lab — filled with computer terminals and appropriate software — heads the list of items on the school systems five-year capital outlay plan.

The lab with its carpets and required electrical renovations would cost about $40,000, according to School Superintendent Steven Hart.

The other items on the school system's capital needs plan aren't glamorous. They include plans for new carpet at the Osgood School; repair of the boiler at the junior/ senior high school; new energy-efficient windows at Osgood School, replacement of the glass block and the junior/senior high school, renovations in the auditorium at the high school, renovation of the Sullivan gym at the high school and replacement of the windows at Deer Hill School.

In discussing the capital outlay budget Monday night, school committee made no firm decisions but leaned toward altering the administrations plans somewhat.

The writing lab will cost $40,000, according to projections.

Students assessment scores prove curriculum works

Assessment test scores, released recently, put Cohasset schools at least 100 points ahead of the state average and slightly above comparable school districts.

The tests were administered to all students in grades 4, 8 and 12 at the end of the last school year.

The tests, which are state-mandated, cover reading, math, science and social studies.

"The purpose of the assessment programs is to assist schools in reviewing their curriculum and to improve instruction while the purpose of the basic skills test is to identify and assist individual students who are deficient in basic academic skills," School Superintendent Steven Hart explained.

The last assessment tests were given in 1988. At that time the school system's overall score was about 40 points lower than the current results.

For grade 12, the results showed Cohasset students 200 points above the state standard in math.

"It is interesting to note that their highest score was in mathematics," Hart said. "An area where there has been some concerns about the strength of the program."

He pointed out that the increase in the figures is so great that it is considered "educationally significant."

Other grade 12 scores were: 1430 in reading, the state average was 1300; 1470 in science, the state average was 1300 and 1440 in social studies, while the state average was 1300.

In 1988 the grade 8 reading score was 1350. This year the score was 1420, an 80 point increase. State average was 1310.

Other grade 8 scores put Cohasset students at 1490 in math, with the state average at 1310; 1430 in science with 1310 for the state, and 1420 in social studies with the state at 1310.

For grade 4 reading was 1430, with the state average at 1310; math was 1420 with 1310 for the state; science was 1410 with 1310 for the state and social studies was 1420 with 1310 for the state.

Hart said he thinks it is certainly a possibility the establishment of the junior high reading program created a positive influence on the reading scores for grade 8.

Wigmore Pierson, local cable host, gains national attention

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

Before the United Nations Security Council last week voted to allow the use of force against Iraq if it does not leave Kuwait by Jan. 15, local cable television host Wigmore Pierson of Cohasset knew what the vote would be.

Britain, Canada, Colombia, Ethiopia, France, Finland, the Ivory Coast, Malaysia, Romania, the Soviet Union, the United States and Zaire favored the resolution.

Cuba and Yemen opposed it, and China abstained.

It's not that Pierson, host of the "Pierson to Person" talk show which airs on Continental Cablevision's Channel 53 at 8 p.m. Thursdays, is omniscient.

But he, along with his program's executive director, Bob Belliveau of Scituate, had just attended a two-day seminar in Washington, D.C., sponsored by the Department of State.

It was Pierson's second seminar, but for Belliveau, it was an eye-opening experience, listening to advisors who have the ear of the President and rubbing elbows with television network producers and journalists for metropolitan newspapers throughout the country.

The seminar speakers were "very senior State Department officials," individuals who are specialists in political affairs, the Persian Gulf, global economics, the Soviet Union, arms control.

And there were experts on East Asia and the Pacific, the Near East and South Asia, Africa and the Western Hemisphere.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Taxpayers get more time

The first half of fiscal 1991 real estate taxes are due Tuesday, Dec. 18. Postmark dates will not be accepted. Payments received after 4:30 p.m. on the due date will be subject to interest at the rate of 14 percent from the date of mailing.

There will be no exceptions.

Anyone who has not received a tax bill should call the treasurer-collector's office at 383-9900, ext. 113.

Although the treasurer-collector's office is usually closed to the public on Wednesdays, it will be open Wednesday, Dec. 12 to process tax payments for people who want to pay in person. The office will resume its regular Wednesday schedule and be closed to the public on Dec. 19.

Collector's office hours are Monday-Wednesday, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Thursday, 8:30 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Friday, 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Liquor licenses change

Selectmen approved changes of managers on local liquor licenses at Monday's meeting.

William F. Taylor of Marshfield was appointed manager of the Cohasset Golf Club until a permanent manager can be hired. The golf club is closed for the season. The directors expect the new manager will be on board before the club reopens in the spring.

R. Perry Collins, Jerusalem Road Drive, took over the position of manager at Cohasset Plaza Liquors. Donald Staszko was the previous manager.

Finally, selectmen approved William M. Craig as manager of Papa Gino's Restaurant.

Board to set raise policy

Selectmen voted to table a request for a step rate increase for a town employee.

Selectman Jane Goedecke said she did not want to vote on the raise until she had had an opportunity to discuss the request with the department chairman and review the employee's annual evaluation report.

Selectman Diana Kornet took the matter one step further.

Kornet said the board needed to set clear criteria for awarding step raises rather than treating them as automatic raises.

Evergreen blues

The topic of Christmas tree sales made its annual appearance at the selectmen's meeting Monday night.

Every year, some merchants run afoul of town zoning bylaws.

"Selling the trees is not the problem," town counsel Richard Henderson said. "Selling them in a place where they can't do it is."

"They should sell them like I sell them or like other people sell them," Robert Davenport of Sohier Street said. "That is legally."

Henderson said the town had a practice of not enforcing the bylaw if the sellers agreed to apply for the appropriate permits. If denied by the zoning board of appeals, the process took longer than the Christmas tree season.

"Even if we seek criminal enforcement, that takes 20 days," Henderson said. Henderson said the only way to eliminate sales in a timely fashion is by seeking a preliminary injunction in Superior Court.

Establishing a clear policy with precisely drawn regulations and a stiff fine for every day in violation might also curb the practice, Henderson suggested.

"Personally, I don't want to see the town go after people selling Christmas trees," Henderson added. "I don't want to spend the money on it."

"Make the law enforceable or change the law," Davenport said. "Come to Cohasset. You can do anything wrong you want to for 30 or 60 days."

Mosquito policy set up

Selectmen decided Cohasset needs a committee to establish a policy for mosquito control. Selectman Martha Gjesteby volunteered to serve as liaison to the new committee.

The board of health suggested the town needed to take a position on spraying in advance of any need next year. Considerable controversy erupted during the summer over the malathion spraying after several cases of eastern equine encephalitis were diagnosed on the South Shore.

Selectmen proposed a five-member group, but agreed to be flexible on the number if more residents volunteer to serve on the new committee.

Anyone who wants a position on the committee should contact Executive Secretary Greg Doyon.

Town to unload old desks

Selectmen declared old office furniture and equipment from the police-fire station surplus property. They authorized Executive Secretary Greg Doyon to dispose of the property as he sees fit.

The property will be offered to other town offices and boards. Anything remaining will be available to the public.

The renovation fund includes money for the purchase of replacement furniture and equipment.

Surplus goods include four desks, 14 chairs, a conference table and a copy machine. All of the property is in fair to poor condition.

Village celebrates this Saturday

After months in the planning, the Village merchants are ready with plans for "An old fashioned Christmas" celebration in Cohasset Village.

The celebration will take place Saturday, Dec. 8.

Specific details are still being firmed up but most of the Village shops plan to offer simple refreshments throughout the day. Some are offering chances or free samples. Most of the plans run from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m.

But Santa will be at a breakfast at the Community Center from 9 to 11 a.m.

The Village Pet Supply will have Santa on hand from 1 to 3 p.m. to pose for photos with pets — the charge is nominal.

Hingham High School's Choral Spectrum, under the direction of Dr. Paul Cappers, will perform at 2 p.m. at South Shore Art Center.

From 2 to 4 p.m. hors d'oeuvres and hot drinks will be served at the Red Lion Inn.

At 4:30 p.m. the Children's tree (on the lot next to Tedeschi's) will be officially lit for the season. The community is invited to hang decorations on the tree from 11 to 4 p.m.

Throughout the day, donations of canned goods for the needy will be accepted at Tedeschi's.

The historical museums will be open.

Among the other shops participating in the day are: Aegean Fare, Kit & Kaboodle, Children's Exchange, Cohasset Hardware, the Bread Shop, Designers Creations, Liquors Unlimited, Flemings, Cards & Shards, Colonial Pharmacy, J. Holt Thayer, architect and Village Gourmet.

Board urges support of troops

Selectman Diana Kornet wants Cohasset to join with other communities in remembering Americans serving in the Persian Gulf. Currently, four Cohasset residents are serving in the Gulf or are on their way.

Kornet suggested Cohasset residents use yellow ribbons on Christmas wreaths and trees.

Residents are also encouraged to send letters and packages to servicemen and women serving in Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield. It takes about 10 days to deliver a letter and a bit longer for a package, according to people participating in letter-writing campaigns.

According to official guidelines, notes should be kept light and humorous.

Suggested items for packages include potato sticks or canned snacks, peanut butter and crackers, dried fruit, non-meltable candy and microwave popcorn.

Powdered drink mixes to mask the flavor of bottled water are popular items.

Batteries, music tapes, sunscreen and bug repellant are always in demand.

Cookies should contain margarine rather than butter, and chocolate chips, M&Ms or anything that could spoil in the heat should be omitted.

Forbidden items include pornography or "sexy" photographs, magazines or reading material; religious items and books, and alcoholic beverages.

Bates Building eyed for new youth drop-in center

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset is no mecca for teenagers. With no mall, no movie theater, no malt shop, there's just no place for kids to congregate.

If he can find a Christmas angel, Keith Knowles wants to change all that. Knowles has been working with recreation director Jack Worley on a plan to renovate the Bates Building for use as a youth drop-in center.

Knowles said a youth center would be compatible with the Rotary Club's existing use of the town-owned building on Elm Street.

Knowles estimates it will cost $40,000 to renovate, equip and operate the center for the first year. He set the operating budget for subsequent years at no more than $30,000. The biggest expense would be salaries for supervision of the program.

That is not a lot of money when you consider that the town raised $30,000 to build the Osgood playpark.

"That's an indication of what this town is willing to do for its children," Knowles said. He hopes they are as willing to provide meaningful resources for its teens as it does for the tots.

Knowles, Worley and the teenagers in town see a tremendous need for a teen center. Knowles conducted a survey at the high school to get a sense of the support for a center and what teens thought it should be.

With rare exceptions, the students overwhelmingly endorsed the concept.

"I think a youth center would be one of the best ideas Cohasset has had," one student wrote. "Teens need somewhere to "hang" instead of hanging down at the square. There wouldn't be any trouble."

Another high school student wrote, "I think it's really great people in Cohasset are thinking about the kids of the town. Thank you very much."

The students were very clear that they wanted a center that would be restricted to use by teens.

Most students agreed that the center should have clear rules outlawing alcohol, drugs, rowdy behavior and vandalism.

That aside, their ideal center contains video games, pool tables, television and VCR, stereo and a snack bar.

"Don't make it nerdy," a ninth grader wrote.

Knowles thinks the center can be the best of both worlds — a positive environment for teens and a fun place to go. The key is providing enough supervision to keep things operating smoothly and letting the teens be as autonomous as possible.

"We can use college students from some program to staff the center," Knowles said. He envisions four or five college students sharing duty.

The students said they also want to be involved in operating, fundraising and maintenance of the center.

Having them participate is essential.

Knowles wants the teens to be an integral part of the entire process, including the planning process and the board of directors.

"If the kids are not actively involved, then the center will not be successful," Knowles said. "I'd like to see participation, hopefully a major amount of involvement of the kids in fundraising. I think they should raise a percentage of the annual operating budget."

Selectmen gave Knowles time to draft a proposal for the building, but they are anxious to make a decision on the fate of the building.

Currently, selectmen are split on the best use of the building. Two selectmen want to sell the building outright at the fair market value, two want to see it turned over to a non-profit organization, most likely Habitat for Humanity, for a nominal sum. They want the building renovated into two units of affordable housing. The fifth selectman prefers maintaining the status quo.

"We're working against time now," Knowles said. "We have a unique opportunity to get an existing building in a perfect location. We will never have this opportunity again and the need will not go away."

Knowles said he needs to have the money in place before he can expect the selectmen to buy into his project.

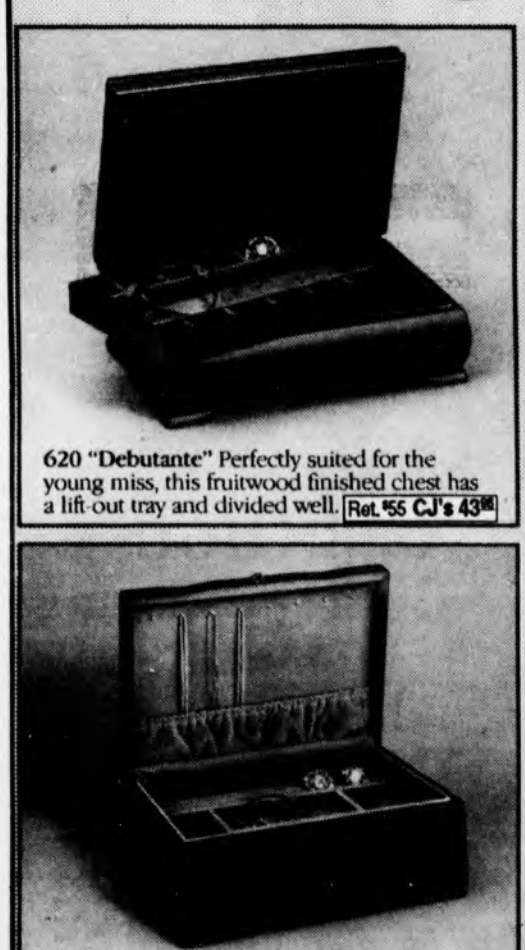
"The selectmen want a self-sustaining program," he said. "I agree with that. That's the way it should be."

Worley looked into the possibility of securing state or federal money for the project. Knowles said he found there is no money at the state level and the federal money is earmarked for inner city programs.

Knowles believes he can find money in grants and charitable trusts, but he doesn't have the luxury of time. That's why he's looking for an angel.

"I'm looking for a person or people to come forward and say, 'this is a great idea," Knowles said. He thinks it would make a perfect memorial gift, one that could bear the name of the honoree.

"We have a de facto youth center now, the beach," Knowles said. "It's no cost — until the first kid gets killed driving down Margin Street or Atlantic Avenue."



An old time Christmas

Members of the Cohasset Historical Society and their friends are invited to a Christmas season open house at the Society's Caleb Lothrop House, 14 Summer Street, Cohasset from 2 to 4 p.m. this Sunday, Dec. 9.

"An Old Fashioned Childrens' Christmas" will be the theme of the decorations in the 1821 Georgian house. Featured will be toys and other memorabilia from the Society's historical collection of early Cohasset family belongings. Refreshments will be served in keeping with the season.

Capital outlay plans for schools

"The need to develop writing skills is necessary for all students regardless of their academic or vocational skills," the plan states. "The use of a computerized writing lab would in our opinion improve greatly the writing skills of students."

School Committeeman Ralph Kidder said he would rather see the project done over two years to allow some of the other repairs to move up on the timetable.

The boiler repair, at a cost of $15,000, was slated for fiscal 1993.

"Presently only two of the three boilers at the junior/senior high school are in operation," the backup data states.

"If the remaining small boiler were to malfunction, it would require the constant use of the larger less economical boiler."

Kidder said he would like to see the boiler repair moved to fiscal '92.

School Committee member Nancy Sandell pointed out that Bill Kite of the English department had told the committee the writing lab could be constructed in phases.

The carpet at Osgood, which is worn and buckling, is scheduled for replacement in five phases, according to the plan. The first phase would be accomplished in fiscal '92 handling three classroom at a cost of $15,000. After the first phase, four rooms would be done each year at a cost of $10,000 a year.

The school system's plans will be finalized over the next few months and discussed with the capital budget committee in January.

Meanwhile the school administration is looking into the need to install a grease trap for the high school cafeteria.

Cost of the project is estimated at about $5,000, according to Sewer Commissioner Edward M. Guild, who would like to see the work accomplished as soon as possible.

Guild told the committee Monday that the high school violates the grease trap requirement.

The committee asked that a professional from the sewer department come and observe the under-sink grease trap and discuss the possibility of waiting until the money can be appropriated.

Coalition pushes for referendum on rail

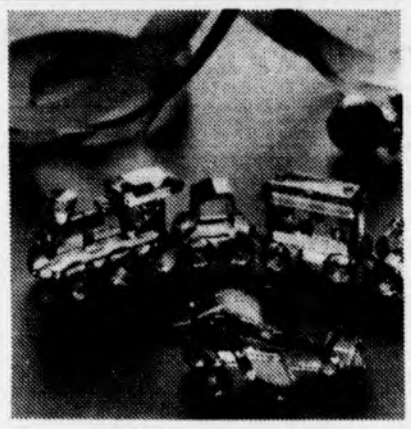
By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Officials from the 10 South Shore Coalition member towns will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday Dec. 6, to draw up a referendum on the proposed restoration of the Greenbush line of the Old Colony Railroad.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, an advocate for commuter rail, told the coalition last week that placing a question on the ballot would put the power in the hands of the people.

William Weld's election as new governor and the Massachusetts Bay Transit Authority's (MBTA) recent decision to separate the Greenbush line from the rest of the proposed $561 million restoration project has sent opponents and proponents into a scramble for public support.

Weld has promised he would not force the rail on the South Shore if it wasn't desired by the majority of the public.



He suggested a "plebiscite" of a non-binding referendum to get voters' opinions.

Hynes said he plans to follow through with that proposal and is pushing for South Shore towns to adopt a uniform ballot question.

Voters need to send a message to the new legislature and governor, Hynes told the coalition.

Board interviews police department prospects

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen interviewed three candidates for the two police officer positions open in town. No decision was made pending receipt of the police chief's recommendations.

All three candidates have prior experience. Following layoffs, their names were placed on the civil service re-employment list.

Joseph C. Comperchio Jr. is a resident of Weymouth and a former Weymouth police officer. He also has experience as a military police officer.

Comperchio was assigned to regular patrol duty in Weymouth. He said he was interested in developing greater expertise in drug enforcement and juvenile law enforcement.

His interest in juvenile work stems from an assignment working with merchants in the Columbia Square area assisting merchants deal with juvenile loiterers.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts asked Comperchio under what circumstances he would fire his gun or use another weapon.

"When my life or the life of another is in danger," Comperchio replied. He said he would not fire a weapon if it was a matter of someone committing a crime that did not involve a life-threatening situation.

Comperchio wasn't concerned about boredom transferring from Weymouth to Cohasset.

"I can always make my own work," he said.

When asked what his long-term career goal was, Comperchio answered, "Maybe be chief someday. Everyone dreams about that."

Lorri Ann Landrigan also served on the Weymouth police force and lives in Weymouth. She is working on a bachelor's degree in criminal justice which she hopes to complete in June.

Landrigan was one of seven women on the force. She told selectmen she experienced no problems with her fellow officers.

Landrigan described her strengths as being well-organized, having the ability to deal well with people and being a hard worker.

When asked about her weaknesses, she paused for a long time before answering.

"I guess being a little more tactful," she finally answered.

Landrigan was assigned to general patrol duty. Much of the time she was assigned to the beach area of Weymouth.

She has a particular interest in drug enforcement, juvenile work and domestic violence.

Landrigan told selectman Jane Goedecke a large part of her experience with youth offenders stems from her beach area patrols and underage drinking.

Generally, she said, juveniles would run off when the police approached. Landrigan said in those situations she would confiscate and dispose of the alcoholic beverages.

If a youth was drunk and belligerent, Landrigan would arrest him. Other children were taken home to their parents.

Her methods of dealing with domestic violence varied according to the situation. Sometimes talking with the parties sufficed, she said.

"It all depends on whether violence is involved," she explained.

Landrigan told Tebbetts police officers are trained to only use reasonable force in subduing a suspect. She said she would draw her gun only if she was in fear for her life.

Landrigan told selectmen her future plans included continuing her education and seeking promotion within the police department.

Her career goal?

"Chief, of course."

The last candidate was Shellee Lynn Peters of Braintree.

Peters was a member of the Canton police force before being laid off.

After her Academy training she took a course in rape investigation. It is an area she wants to specialize in. Peters told selectmen she has developed a rape investigation procedure to ensure that "the case is pretty much foolproof."

She also enjoys working with juveniles, conducting accident investigations and would like to qualify as an EMT.

The most important and interesting part of police work is working with people, she said. She particularly enjoyed working with elderly Alzheimer's victims and a runaway teenager.

Peters said her strength lay in her ability to talk to people and convince them to alter their course of behavior.

"I like people," she said.

After giving it some consideration, Peters identified her weakness as "using humor in the wrong spots some times."

"I can put my foot in my mouth and get the other one in beside it," she joked.

Peters' career goals include more schooling and training as an EMT.

If hired by Cohasset, Peters plans to stay on even if recalled by Canton.

"I have to go with people who want me. I will stay," she said. "I'm loyal."

VFW plans honor roll of town war dead

Ahearn hopes the garden clubs in the community will work with the VFW in beautifying the site.

Ahearn said the honor rolls at the memorial would not supplant plans by the Sons of the American Legion to restore the temporary honor roll that was constructed in 1919.

The only other memorial stands at the intersection of Highland Avenue and North Main Street. Ahearn said it was constructed by the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1902.

The first honor roll to go up at the memorial park will honor those who served in WWII, followed by a tablet for WWI casualties.

As money becomes available, honor rolls are planned for Civil War, War of 1812 and Revolutionary War caualties.

Constructing the honor roll for the Korean War and Vietnam will be a challenge.

Ahearn told selectmen neither the federal government nor the state have the names broken down by towns. The VFW has been working with Mary Jeanette Murray and Gerry Studds with limited success. They hope Senator John Kerry, a Vietnam veteran, will have greater luck trying to identify Cohasset's casualties.

"They could find the fellows to go, but they couldn't record where they lived," Ahearn lamented.

Ahearn promised the honor rolls would be 100 percent accurate when they are installed.

Meet the Peter Pan of Osgood School

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Marie Price is Cohasset's version of Peter Pan. But when she heads for the second star to the right and straight on to morning, she winds up in Osgood School instead of Never Land.

"I don't ever want to graduate from kindergarten," Price said. Although she's taught all the early elementary grades, kindergarten is her special love.

The diminutive teacher makes school a magical place for Cohasset's littlest schoolchildren. They know she's special because she makes them feel so very special.

"Kindergarten is a children's garden," she said. "Everything grows with love and care."

Making children feel good about themselves is a big part of her kindergarten routine.

Each child in her class gets to spend a week as "The Very Special Child of the Week." On the first day of the week, the child brings in 3 pages of photographs. The photographs are used as the backdrop for telling about themselves and their family and friends.

Not only does the child feel special, but they get experience talking in front of a large group.

During the week they get to wear a special crown and a white satin sash with glitter. Glitter is very big among the kindergartners.

Every day the special child gets to choose a different person to hold the flag, take attendance, or

Joseph C. Comperchio Jr. is a resident of Weymouth and a former Weymouth police officer. He also has experience as a military police officer.

Comperchio was assigned to regular patrol duty in Weymouth. He said he was interested in developing greater expertise in drug enforcement and juvenile law enforcement.

His interest in juvenile work stems from an assignment working with merchants in the Columbia Square area assisting merchants deal with juvenile loiterers.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts asked Comperchio under what circumstances he would fire his gun or use another weapon.

"When my life or the life of another is in danger," Comperchio replied. He said he would not fire a weapon if it was a matter of someone committing a crime that did not involve a life-threatening situation.

Comperchio wasn't concerned about boredom transferring from Weymouth to Cohasset.

"I can always make my own work," he said.

When asked what his long-term career goal was, Comperchio answered, "Maybe be chief someday. Everyone dreams about that."

Lorri Ann Landrigan also served on the Weymouth police force and lives in Weymouth. She is working on a bachelor's degree in criminal justice which she hopes to complete in June.

Landrigan was one of seven women on the force. She told selectmen she experienced no problems with her fellow officers.

Landrigan described her strengths as being well-organized, having the ability to deal well with people and being a hard worker.

When asked about her weaknesses, she paused for a long time before answering.

"I guess being a little more tactful," she finally answered.

Landrigan was assigned to general patrol duty. Much of the time she was assigned to the beach area of Weymouth.

She has a particular interest in drug enforcement, juvenile work and domestic violence.

Landrigan told selectman Jane Goedecke a large part of her experience with youth offenders stems from her beach area patrols and underage drinking.

Generally, she said, juveniles would run off when the police approached. Landrigan said in those situations she would confiscate and dispose of the alcoholic beverages.

If a youth was drunk and belligerent, Landrigan would arrest him. Other children were taken home to their parents.

Her methods of dealing with domestic violence varied according to the situation. Sometimes talking with the parties sufficed, she said.

"It all depends on whether violence is involved," she explained.

Landrigan told Tebbetts police officers are trained to only use reasonable force in subduing a suspect. She said she would draw her gun only if she was in fear for her life.

Landrigan told selectmen her future plans included continuing her education and seeking promotion within the police department.

Her career goal?

"Chief, of course."

The last candidate was Shellee Lynn Peters of Braintree.

Peters was a member of the Canton police force before being laid off.

After her Academy training she took a course in rape investigation. It is an area she wants to specialize in. Peters told selectmen she has developed a rape investigation procedure to ensure that "the case is pretty much foolproof."

She also enjoys working with juveniles, conducting accident investigations and would like to qualify as an EMT.

The most important and interesting part of police work is working with people, she said. She particularly enjoyed working with elderly Alzheimer's victims and a runaway teenager.

Peters said her strength lay in her ability to talk to people and convince them to alter their course of behavior.

"I like people," she said.

After giving it some consideration, Peters identified her weakness as "using humor in the wrong spots some times."

"I can put my foot in my mouth and get the other one in beside it," she joked.

Peters' career goals include more schooling and training as an EMT.

If hired by Cohasset, Peters plans to stay on even if recalled by Canton.

"I have to go with people who want me. I will stay," she said. "I'm loyal."

VFW plans honor roll of town war dead

Ahearn hopes the garden clubs in the community will work with the VFW in beautifying the site.

Ahearn said the honor rolls at the memorial would not supplant plans by the Sons of the American Legion to restore the temporary honor roll that was constructed in 1919.

The only other memorial stands at the intersection of Highland Avenue and North Main Street. Ahearn said it was constructed by the Daughters of the American Revolution in 1902.

The first honor roll to go up at the memorial park will honor those who served in WWII, followed by a tablet for WWI casualties.

As money becomes available, honor rolls are planned for Civil War, War of 1812 and Revolutionary War caualties.

Constructing the honor roll for the Korean War and Vietnam will be a challenge.

Ahearn told selectmen neither the federal government nor the state have the names broken down by towns. The VFW has been working with Mary Jeanette Murray and Gerry Studds with limited success. They hope Senator John Kerry, a Vietnam veteran, will have greater luck trying to identify Cohasset's casualties.

"They could find the fellows to go, but they couldn't record where they lived," Ahearn lamented.

Ahearn promised the honor rolls would be 100 percent accurate when they are installed.

Meet the Peter Pan of Osgood School

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Marie Price is Cohasset's version of Peter Pan. But when she heads for the second star to the right and straight on to morning, she winds up in Osgood School instead of Never Land.

"I don't ever want to graduate from kindergarten," Price said. Although she's taught all the early elementary grades, kindergarten is her special love.

The diminutive teacher makes school a magical place for Cohasset's littlest schoolchildren. They know she's special because she makes them feel so very special.

"Kindergarten is a children's garden," she said. "Everything grows with love and care."

Making children feel good about themselves is a big part of her kindergarten routine.

Each child in her class gets to spend a week as "The Very Special Child of the Week." On the first day of the week, the child brings in 3 pages of photographs. The photographs are used as the backdrop for telling about themselves and their family and friends.

Not only does the child feel special, but they get experience talking in front of a large group.

During the week they get to wear a special crown and a white satin sash with glitter. Glitter is very big among the kindergartners.

Every day the special child gets to choose a different person to hold the flag, take attendance, or

❑ Must begin this by saying a fond farewell to Tom (Legz) Nelson, who is headed back to the Chicago area to be with his family. We sure will miss you Tom, you have made your way into many hearts...a great man, we wish you luck, health and happiness!

❑ Happy belated birthday to Laura Pompeo, and may this year bring you everything that you are searching for! This is going to be your year!

❑ Another Pompeo birthday is right around the corner, and when you see Roger be sure to wish him a happy one! It's a biggy, and he needs all the congratulations that we can muster! Seriously, have a happy one Roger!

❑ With Christmas shopping at the top of all priority lists, Cohasset has good news. Many will remember the Children's Exchange that was the victim of a fire in North Scituate last fall, well they have relocated in our village! They are at 23 South Main Street, and they carry children's fashions and unique handcrafts at affordable prices. It is a consignment shop especially for the children, and they have wonderful clothing that is in top-notch shape. Just about anything you can think of is there, be sure to go in and take a look. Holiday hours are 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Mon.-Fri., 10 a.m-1 p.m. Sat., and Sunday, 1-4 p.m.

And, the Cohasset Consignment Shop is featuring Career nights at the shop. To help the working woman, the shop will be open for consigning and sales on the following Thursday nights: December 6, 13 and 20; January 3, 10, and 17. The hours will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Be sure to take advantage of this time, it's a great idea.

❑ The American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay has developed a Community Action Group, which provide the Red Cross with insight into community needs, attitudes and opportunities for how the Red Cross can respond to the needs of the community or cluster of communities. The South Area has formed CAGS in four South Shore towns, Cohasset, Hull, Scituate, Norwell and Westwood, to increase awareness of Red Cross in their respective communities. The people from Cohasset who have volunteered to be members of CAG are: Joan Buckley, John Cibelli, Shirley Cibelli, Jane Corry, Robert Costello, Clifford Dickson, Lydia Hill, Helen Pratt, Alfred Odermatt and Peggy Stoughton. If you are interested in receiving additional information about this, contact Jackie Gardner at 331-6999.

❑ Congratulations go to Kenneth and Mary Snow on the birth of their daughter, born on October 3 at Quincy Hospital.

❑ Congratulations are in order for David Foster, a student at Newbury College who was recently named to the dean's list.

❑ If you think you are busy this month, you can just imagine what it must be like in Larry and Linda Shultz's house this month! Their oldest son, Bobby, who everyone remembers from his CHS days, is being married on the 29th of December to Jennifer Lynne Tews in Minnesota! We will all be thinking of you all, and cannot wait for news of the wedding when you return. Good luck, and happy scheduling.

❑ Received a brief note from Ellery Clark this week, to let us all know that he has decided to enter the National Senior Olympics 1,500 meters race walk in Syracuse, New York this summer. Just keep training Ellery, we all know you can win it.

❑ On Thursday, Dec. 20 at 3:30 p.m. at Symphony Hall in Boston there will be an afternoon with the Boston Pops Orchestra. It will be held to raise funds for the Jimmy Fund of Dana-Farber Cancer Institute to support research and treatment for adults and children with cancer. The Boston Pops Orchestra will play a special Christmas Concert performance, with John Williams conducting and Ken Coleman performing a special narration of "T'was the Night Before Christmas." Tickets are $75, $60 or $40 and are on sale at the Symphony Hall Box office, or by calling the charge line at 266-1200 or by sending a check, payable to "Jimmy Fund" and sending them to Jimmy Fund, 94 Station St., Suite 625, Hingham, MA 02043. Indicate the number of tickets, price, and to whom the tickets should be mailed. Include a self-addressed, stamped envelope. For more information call Mary-Ellen Maich at 383-6553.

❑ That's the news for this week, but there should be a lot around so be sure to keep me informed.

CHS detectives test the water

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

They clambered over rocks, scrambled down embankments and ventured into the waters of the Gulf River, Bound Brook and Pegram Brook to scoop up water samples.

When the waders held the bottles up in the sunlight, the water samples ranged from clear to champagne-colored. Lurking within the water were colonies of fecal coliform bacteria that can't be seen with the naked eye.

The water hunters - all high school students – were hot on the trail of water pollutants in the Gulf River. Cohasset High School marine biology teacher James Franey recruited these student volunteers, who receive no school credit for their endeavors.

"It just sounded interesting," Marisol Perry said. Kate Barrett seconded that sentiment. Both girls volunteered this fall. Perry is a freshman at the high school and Barrett is a sophomore.

Linc Marsac was one of Franey's first group of volunteers. He's been wading in the water since the summer. Marsac's interest began while he was enrolled in Franey's marine biology course. A senior this year, Marsac is interested in pursuing a career in environmental affairs.

Patty Tolini, another long-term volunteer, is using her participation as a topic for her college application essays.

Although they take the work they are doing seriously, they enjoy themselves in the process. Their most recent field expedition was no exception. Laughter and good-natured teasing seemed to be the natural order of things.

These four students are only a handful of the teens who are giving something back to their community.

All summer long, 13 students worked to identify hot spots along the river system. They found five places where the fecal coliform counts were unusually and regularly high. This fall a new crop of volunteers joined up with some returning "old" volunteers to monitor the hot spots and to try and establish reliable baseline data.

The current volunteer pool numbers about 16.

The students are working alongside members of the Gulf Association, Inc., the board of health and the water department to pinpoint the sources of pollution that threaten the Gulf River.

Health agent Joseph Godzik oversees the project and selects the sites to be tested. John Pereira, laboratory director for the water department, conducted the water sampling training and supervises the laboratory work done by the students.

In July, the Gulf Association applied for a grant from the Massachusetts Bays Program to support the testing program. The Gulf River Water Testing Project won a grant of $500, the maximum amount possible from the action grants program.

In making the grant, the Massachusetts Bays Program wrote, "The committee found your proposed project both inventive and well thought-out, and the Town budget gets ready for tough times

Town departments are beginning work on budgets for the coming fiscal year and already the word is out that there will be no "extra" money.

Arne Gjesteby, chairman of the town's advisory committee, has asked for level-funded budgets.

Gjesteby believes that the only way around a need for level-funded budgets would be an override.

Will the voters who have rejected past attempts to override Proposition 2 1/2 accept an override this year?

Who knows. But the best guess in a down economy is: No.

There are people out of work, coping with reduced income, trying to pay increasing fuel bills — people who are going through everything all the department heads are experiencing.

Can those people afford the finest public safety efforts?

And what about the schools?

Can we afford to let class size increase further? Can we afford to ignore the growing school population?

Last year the school committee sought a budget that the townspeople failed to fund.

The lack of money ended up meaning some teachers were reduced to parttime. And this reduced industrial arts and home economics courses, as well as creating an increase in class size.

It's time to say that the cuts have gone far enough in the school department. Indeed, we believe the cuts have gone too far.

This week school committee began talking about the budget.

The school population is beginning to experience an increase at the secondary level. The numbers at the elementary level have been gradually climbing.

We don't believe the town can afford to level-fund the school department. Education is a priority.

Our children deserve our support.

If education wins an increase, does that mean cuts in some other town service?

Probably.

We don't think there is any real fat left in the town budgets. After years of dealing with Proposition 2 1/2, most of the departments have trimmed the expenses that were easy to cut.

There are hard decisions ahead.

For instance, while we aren't hot for the idea of dumping the town's recreation department, we do think the agency could be made totally self-supporting.

Self-supporting is the way to go whether the recreation commission decides to raise fees or run a few fundraising projects. The $15,000 saved in recreation won't do much — but each $15,000 saved will help the other all effort.

Yes, it's time for hard decisions.

Owners of exiled dog upbraid court

To the Editor:

We often wonder why our court system does not work. Those who have had experience with our expedient and ever so efficient judicial system know that the two aforementioned words are a direct antithesis of the way the system does work. We all complain that our prisons and jails are overcrowded, that the system does not punish in equivalence with the crime committed, if it succeeds in punishing at all.

So, our prisons and jails are overcrowded and our judicial system is bogged down with thousands of criminal cases...So why is the town of Cohasset retaining a lawyer and spending taxpayers' money to kick two harmless dogs out of town??? Good question. I do believe it would interest our taxpayers to know just how their dollars are being spent. You remember those two dogs, Jasmine and Amos, the dynamic canine duo who have "wreaked havoc on the Town of Cohasset". Of course, I am sure there are many readers who say, who??, Jasmine and Amos who?? These dogs have been featured in cartoons in the Cohasset Mariner and were the subjects of several articles written by Alison Cohen. At the rate these two dogs are going they should have their own talk show. So just exactly what did these dogs do? What crime did they commit? After all the case against them went all the way to Quincy District Court before a judge, and has taken three court appearances and two days of court time. I admit the dogs, when they were puppies were a nuisance. They did get free a couple of times. But isn't it interesting to know that they always went directly to Mrs. Ritcey's house on 32 Brewster Road. Of course, that wouldn't have anything at all to do with them being fed by Mrs. Ritcey. Oh, Mrs. Ritcey loved them when they were puppies and commented to me on "how cute they were." Then they grew up and became a nuisance. I have given away the larger male dog Amos and he is quite happy in his new home and attends obedience school weekly. Jasmine, the smaller (45 pound) female dog is completely docile and lives at home with me in Cohasset.

I have had not one citation from Dog Officer William Quigley in the past three months. Mrs. Ritcey has moved out of town, so why is the town continuing to spend tax dollars to evict a dog from the town and order the owner to give it up — so that Officer Quigley can do what — kill it, put it to sleep. My dogs were in violation of the Leash Law, and I have been cited accordingly by the town dog officer. But it does not end there, and it does not end with Mrs. Ritcey.

The dogs are no longer a nuisance to Mrs. Ritcey. So who is pursuing this, who is pushing this through the court system, who has made it his personal interest to see that these dogs are killed? Dog Officer William Quigley — a true animal rights activist. It was suggested at the first court hearing that the case be continued for six months without a finding. Town Council member, Mr. Henderson, was willing to meet this agreement, that is until Officer Quigley interjected and convinced Mr. Henderson that these dogs were vicious and a menace to society. Have these dogs ever bitten anyone, you ask? No! Have they ever caused physical harm to anyone? No! What have these dogs done? They have run free and violated the Leash Law, they have trespassed on Mrs. Ritcey's property and story has it that Amos took a ball from Mrs. Ritcey's grandson. What Mrs. Ritcey once described as "cute, playful puppies" have been portrayed by Officer Quigley as "vicious, rabid dogs". It seems that Officer Quigley has made this his personal cause and crusade. Officer Quigley has done everything in his power to continually harass me. I was ordered by Judge Whitman of Quincy District Court to surrender both Jasmine and Amos to Officer Quigley by 4 p.m., Tuesday, Dec. 4 or I will be in contempt of court. So, tomorrow I will be another "criminal" in one of our overcrowded jails. I guess Officer Quigley just won't let sleeping dogs lie. But, remember this taxpayers, you have helped every dog have his day in court, and I only hope you will help finance the appeal. Your comments on this matter would be appreciated.

Respectfully,
Margaret L. Lincoln

16th birthday party was a great success

To the Editor:

I wish to thank all of you for being so well behaved at Meka-Mari's 16th birthday party. You received many accolades from all of the adults present as to how well you behaved and how you all mingled and had fun together. This includes the Scituate contingent, headed by Kristen McLaughlin. That included P.J. Doyle, Mark Gorman, Paul Murphy and Brian McLaughlin. Meka-Mari's neices and nephews, John-Paul, Craig and Leigh Laugelle, Jerry and Kyra Lea Cogill and Angela Laugelle were also present. Last but not least, Jen McKenna, Amanda Spenlinhauer, John Murphy, from Cohasset, and Evan Spencer, from Brookline, were all in attendance. Super comments came from the staff and customers at the George H. Mealy Post #118, Jay Fiori, D.J. (he'll never get over Barry Manilow and the Beach Boys), and Peter Laugelle who graciously bartended, although he was seen on the dance floor an awful lot.

To all who asked, that super, super food everyone was so excited about was prepared by Rene's Catering Service from Scituate.

As I said before, this is the best class Cohasset has had. It can only be compared to C.H.S. '71, for the camaraderie, fun and spirit. Keep it together and you'll go far with your dreams.

Much Love,
Margaret J. Laugelle

Holiday depression can dim yuletide spirit

By Steve Metcalf
Special to the Mariner

The Christmas season holds a special place in everyone's heart. For me it is no different.

After Thanksgiving, as we enter the Christmas season, I find myself returning to the memories of my youth. Granted, there have been years when getting the Christmas spirit was elusive.

When the weight of personal problems, insecurity over the future, sickness and deaths, have taken their toll. But usually these concerns slowly melt away as December wears on. Ultimately the Christmas spirit finally takes hold.

The memories of my youth, of family gatherings, of gift giving and getting and the anticipation of Christmas Day are a powerful medicine, a cure for the pressures of adulthood.

There is something about sparkling lights and the bushy aroma of a Christmas tree that instantly transports me back to the optimism and memories of my youth.

Christmas, after all, is really about the wonders of a birth. It reminds me of the potential that all human life possesses. It reminds me that everyone has the ability to surmount incredible odds and live a life that profoundly touches the spirit of all men if they make that choice.

Sometimes I get caught in the artificial glitter and razzle dazzle of today's Madison Avenue image of Christmas. I forget that true happiness can only be generated from within one's heart.

I see my failure to teach this truth in my children. Innocent victims of our society's constant assertion that happiness and inner peace can be achieved if you can afford to buy it.

Each Christmas I am reminded of an experience that touched my heart and has forever changed my life. It was a gift freely given me by a nameless child. A gift of such incredible value that no person on earth could ever buy it.

Lacking any other suitable volunteers and in light of my girth I was enlisted to play the part of Santa at Brant Rock's Community Christmas Party. Reluctantly I accepted the task and was whisked to the Union Chapel for Santa's grand arrival in the back of a brightly decorated Ford pick-up.

Hundreds of anxious children infested the chapel door as I gently pushed my way through. A large chair had been set up in front. Santa's place of honor. I clearly remember two things about my walk to that chair. I remember my concern that my Santa pants were constantly falling down and I remember the piercing sad brown eyes of a young girl standing apart from the others.

Looking into her young eyes I was immediately transported back to my Santa days. Back to a time when this guy I called Santa could make my Christmas dreams come true.

Without words, this young girl's eyes also conveyed a burden that no child should have to endure. Yet I recognized hope within the despair as if I, as Santa, was her only option. An option she was willing to take despite having been disappointed on countless occasions before.

I took my seat and settled into the task at hand. One by one, child after child, I was given the opportunity to share in each Christmas dream. I saw fear transformed into anticipation and anticipation transformed into excitement.

I received smiles and countless thank yous and I saw my sad brown-eyed girl quietly, slowly, patiently getting closer to the front of the line.

What goes through the mind of a child? I can only guess or perhaps experience fleeting memories in my dreams. I do remember the season however, the joy and excitement, cold winter days, the dull scratch of ice beneath my skates, my tongue stuck to the frozen chrome frame of my Flexible Flyer.

Most of all I remember my youthful optimism. The belief that one jolly old elf could answer my wildest dream, and as I watched this brown-eyed stranger approach I briefly anticipated a want list that included dolls, stuffed animals or a crisp brightly-colored new dress.

By my best guess I placed her age at around eight. A wonderful age. Innocent of the world and world problems, free of the weights we place on our youth and enveloped in the spirit of the holiday fantasy. An age when princes and princesses still live, where unicorns gallop across flowing fields of daisies and evil is always defeated by the gallant hero.

Despite her age I detected a youthful maturity and sensed an adult concern cloaked within the sparkle of her eyes. Surely, I thought, she must be hesitating in order to be sure that she would not forget anything on her Christmas list.

I encouraged her request and was rewarded with a simple response. A response that has profoundly affected my life ever since.

I came to understand the sadness projected in the expression of her eyes. I came to understand why she patiently waited her turn in self-imposed isolation and silence.

You see, she did not come to Santa for herself. She came to ask the good old elf to bring some small Christmas morning joy to her younger brother and sister.

She came because in her youthful optimism she believed that Santa could provide what she could not provide herself. She came because in her innocent youth she desperately wanted her family to experience the story book joys of Christmas that had obviously eluded her family during Christmases past.

Her humble request was simply "Please bring a gift to each member of my family."

I was struck by the sincerity in her voice. I was overcome with emotion as I held back my tears. Surely, I asked, "You must want something for yourself?" Without hesitation she replied, "All I need is a warm winter jacket," and then smiling at me she said, "This one is cold."

Other children followed this girl but I did not see or hear them. My soul reminded me that one person can make a difference, that one person can make a difference if they make that choice. She was gone and I found myself wishing her wish to the Santa of my youth. Regretting my inability to fill this child's simple request.

Somewhere in this world, perhaps Marshfield, perhaps another town, there lives a girl around 16 years old. A girl in high school.

A girl who through her simple innocent request changed my vision of Christmas forever. That child of eight lives in my memory. Her optimism and faith in the little old elf never fails to remind me that the spirit of Christmas represents more than presents, brightly wrapped gifts and glittering lights.

The spirit of the Christmas Season moves me to renew my concern and compassion for all mankind. So do the carolers singing "Peace On Earth Good Will Towards Men."

The lights of Hanukkah usher in holiday season

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

When the sun goes down Dec. 11, the light from candles will wink and flicker in windows around the world. That night and the seven successive nights, Jews everywhere will celebrate a miracle in a holiday known as Hanukkah.

In recent years, Hanukkah has been commercialized into a gift-giving spree, but its roots go deep into the struggle for religious freedom.

The historical underpinning for the holiday lies in the rule of Antiochus, a Syrian king, over Judea and his attempts to Hellenize the country.

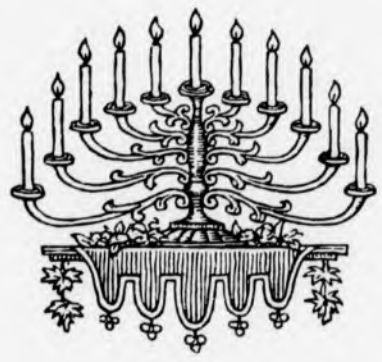
Being ruled by a foreign power was nothing new. Judea had been conquered by Alexander the Great. After his death, Judea was alternately ruled by Egypt and Syria. What finally drove the Jews to revolt was Antiochus' desecration of the Temple in Jerusalem and his attempts to force the people to worship Greek gods.

In 167 B.C., the Maccabean rebellion began. The Jewish rebels fought with sticks, stones and farm tools against swords, javelins, spears and elephant-borne troops. It took three years of guerilla-style fighting before the Maccabees were able to overthrow the Syrians.

On the 25 of Kislev, the Jewish month that corresponds to November and December, the Maccabees reclaimed the Temple that Antiochus had destroyed.

They rebuilt the altar, planted new trees in the courtyard, hung new curtains for the holy ark and relit the menorah which was supposed to burn continuously.

When the Temple had been cleansed and rededicated, the Maccabees decreed an eight-day celebration of thanksgiving. The holiday was known as Hanukkah, or 'rededication.'



The miracle of the lights may or may not be true.

The tale is told that after the Temple had been cleansed, the people went to light the menorah that is supposed to burn continuously. Unfortunately, there was only enough oil for the lamp to burn for one day.

This was a tragedy because it takes eight days for more oil to be prepared. Unaccountably, the oil burned for eight days.

When Jews celebrate Hanukkah, they do not celebrate the tremendous victory the Maccabees won. They do not celebrate the reclamation of political freedom. Hanukkah celebrates the rededication of the Temple and the right to worship God in the way you want to.

Because that is a very great gift, it is a very happy celebration. Candles are lit in a special candlestick used only during Hanukkah in memory of the miracle.

Each night, an additional candle is lit until there are eight candles ablaze on the final night. Over the course of the holiday, 44 candles will have been lit.

Hanukkah is celebrated in the home rather than in the synagogue. Because freedom is sweet, the holiday is celebrated with blessings, songs, games and visiting friends and relatives.

The most common game associated with Hanukkah is the dreidel game.

A dreidel is a four-sided top. Each side has a Hebrew letter written on it. The letters stand for the first letter of each word in the phrase Nes gadol hayah sham, which means "A great miracle happened there."

Each player spins the dreidel. The letter showing when the dreidel stops tells the player what to do.

If the nun ( ) is showing, the player does nothing. If the gimmel ( ) turns up, the player takes the pile. A he ( ) means the player gets half the pile, while a shin ( ) demands that something must be given to the pile. Some rules say the shin means half of what the player has must be given. Other players use more charitable rules and only ask that one token be put in the pot.

Tokens are commonly nuts, raisins or shiny pennies .

The foods most frequently associated with Hanukkah, potato pancakes called latkes and doughnuts called sufganiyot, are cooked in oil to recall the miracle of the oil that burned for eight days.

The poor are given food, money and candles to enable them to celebrate the holiday, as well.

Exchanging gifts is a recent addition to the holiday celebrations.

Originally, teachers, students and children were given Hanukkah gelt, or money, to spread light and joy, encourage studying and, some rabbis say, to hasten the coming of the Messiah. Because gift giving is a part of the culture Jews found themselves a part of in Western Europe and the United States, they adopted the custom.

Cinnamon-Apple Latkes

Cinnamon-Apple Latkes

2 eggs
2 tablespoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
1/3 cup water
3 cups chopped cooking apples
3/4 cups unsifted flour
1 teaspoon grated lemon peel
1/2 cup sugar
Vegetable oil

Beat eggs until light and foamy. Mix in the 3 tablespoons of sugar, salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon and water until blended. Stir in chopped apple, flour and grated lemon peel, mix well. Heat about 1/8 to 1/4 inch depth of vegetable oil in heavy skillet. For each latke, drop about 1/4 cup apple mixture into hot oil. Flatten slightly. Fry on each side until golden brown. Add vegetable oil as needed to keep proper depth for frying. Drain the latkes well on paper towels. Combine 1/2 cup sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon to make the topping. Sprinkle cinnamon-sugar mixture over hot latkes. Serve immediately.

Kindergarten turkey day

Thanksgiving in kindergarten

Mrs. Moody's students have learned many things about how the New World was settled. They mapped out the Mayflower's voyage and compared it to Columbus' voyage. They built the Mayflower, the Plimoth settlement, and a Wampanoag village out of blocks. They made Indian beads from class-made play dough and strung them with macaroni. They made Indian headdresses, Pilgrim hats, collars, and cuffs. Other activities included poems, songs, and literature all based on the theme; settling the New World. They ended the study with a feast. They made butter and served it with saltines, cornbread, and cider. All foods were representative of the contributions made by both Indians and settlers.

Students attend conference

A group of Cohasset H.S. girls recently attended "Women in Technology Day" at Wentworth University. The girls attended seminars on careers involving a background in mathematics. They received t-shirts, notebooks, and pens as souvenirs. Attending were Meka-Marie Laugelle, Carrie Cosme, Marisol Perry, Leanna Adams, Alyson James, Ann-Margaret Grew, Nicole Haefner, Julie Cox, and Alyson Gallant with teachers Margaret Lee and Maureen Lolumiere.

Living Life

By Dr. Michael J. McFadden
Special to the Mariner

"Life is difficult," to quote the famous Psychiatrist, Scott Peck, in the first line of his book, The Road Less Traveled. He goes on to say that once this fact is accepted, then life ceases to be difficult. I guess I haven't fully understood this difficult concept except in my head. I must confess that in my gut I writhe and do not know what to say when I am confronted with the tragedies, difficulties and distresses of life. At these crossroads, living life becomes a real challenge. How to respond is the question.

Before the Thanksgiving holidays, Mary, a nurse friend of mine, had to deal with a tragedy. Her 14-year-old son, Stephen and a companion were riding a small motor bike when an accident occurred. The companion was killed instantly; Stephen lingered on in the hospital brain dead. Mary and her family had to make the decision to turn off the life support systems. Why did this happen? Why did God permit this to happen? What kind of a God would allow such things? Why? Why? Why? We keep asking the questions and none of us has the answers. But I can say this: that the God I have come to know would have been the first one to cry when Stephen died - would have been the first one to hold Mary's hand and cry with her. This God would be the first one to say "I am sorry that you have to go through all this suffering - I wish it were not so...but it is, and I will help you, I will support you, I will sustain you...I will be with you."

Mary will be coming back to work this week in the midst of her tears and suffering. She must go on living life with all its difficulties and perplexities. No words that we can offer will penetrate the depths of her grief and anguish. But she will go on. From the little I know of Mary, I sense and feel a deep reservoir of strength that will give her the courage to do what she needs to do and be who she needs to be. I only hope that my colleagues and I will be there to help support her and sustain her and be with her and her family in the challenges they are facing in living life. The tragedy had happened - the rest of the story is yet to be told. Mary and her family are the story tellers.

Someone had defined life as "that which happens to us while we are making other plans." This is true up to a point. Many of the events and experiences of life are beyond our control. We do not plan them, purpose them or produce them. They just happen. But these do not constitute life - they are only a part of it, and not even a major part at that. What happens to us is not unimportant; the more important part is how we respond to what happens to us.

We need to examine that thought because with the passing of years just about everything happens to us. Your life, if it is anything like mine, is like a dragnet cast into a lake that collects all kinds of things. Your life and mine has had good fortune and bad, success and failure, trouble and triumph, joy and sorrow, sickness and health and yes, even death itself. But surely we are aware that all of these events have changed us somewhat. Success has reeked havoc on some of our lives; failures have saved others of us. I remember being "let go" of a position some years ago and being angry and hurt about it. Today I am grateful that the man fired me; otherwise, I'd be still back there "picking potatoes." The events, though often tragic and hurtful, as in Mary's case, are not nearly as important as the response we make to them. In the years I worked in a rehabilitation hospital, I knew two young women, Janice and Kathleen who were injured in separate automobile accidents. Both of them were paralyzed from the waist down. That is what happened to them. But that is only part of the story. Janice decided that life was unfair, and therefore, not worth the living. She gave up, crawled back into her shell and became increasingly bitter and cynical. She wouldn't talk to anyone and kept feeling sorry for herself. Kathleen in the beginning felt the same way - she was always in tears. But those tears gave her the energy to move on to something new. One day she said to me: "Mike, I can't use my legs, but I still have a good mind and good hands. I'll show the world what I can do with those." She went to school, prepared herself for a vocation, eventually marrying and becoming a mother, and still proving today that a radiant and useful life can be lived in a wheel chair. I've never heard from Janice. I hope as I write this that she has done the same.

At times it seems that we are just the pawns and playthings of life. Events, over which we have no control, come crashing in upon us. Never forget, my friends, that "these things that happen to us" are not the whole story. Like Paul Harvey, we tell the rest of the story by the way we respond to living life.

Ledger lays off 40 as ads decline

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

Layoffs announced Nov. 14 by management of the Quincy Patriot Ledger are being fought by at least one union in the newspaper — the Editorial Association.

A grievance was filed recently by the Editorial Association challenging the way the layoffs were planned.

About 40 employees were given notice that they would be let go by the end of the month. Twelve are full-time people on the news staff, 10 are from circulation. The rest of the layoffs are scattered among the other departments.

It was the first-ever layoff of news personnel at the paper which has been existence more than 150 years. There are 700 employees at the paper which is located at Crown Colony on the Quincy/ Braintree line.

"We are very concerned," said Richard Cameron, union president. He was on vacation when the layoff notices were issued.

"We don't agree that the names on their list are the people who will be laid off if there is a layoff," he said.

While Cameron had no further comment immediately, it is known that the layoff list was not drawn according to seniority.

Another 13 people were laid off at Memorial Press Group, MPG, which is owned by the same corporation, George Prescott Publishing Co. that owns the Ledger. The MPG layoffs were also attributed to declining advertising revenue. MPG is not unionized.

K. Prescott Low, publisher of the Ledger, was unavailable for comment.

Low was quoted recently in the Ledger as attributing the layoffs to falling advertising lineage.

"For the first nine months of the year, the Ledger's overall advertising lineage was down more than 16 percent from the same period in 1989. Particularly hard hit were auto, real estate and help wanted advertising," the Ledger reported.

"This reflects what is happening throughout the Northeast. We are operating in a down economy and there does not appear to be any quick fix in sight. So we adjusted our budget to get our costs in line," Low was quoted as saying.

Pat DeGiso, the Ledger's general manager, said no further layoffs are planned.

"But we have no way of knowing what the future has in store for business. We don't have a crystal ball. Some people are forecasting a turnaround. Realistically, we don't expect it overnight.

"We expect 1991 will be another down year," DeGiso said.

Meanwhile, the paper issued a letter recently to its employees who are over 55 years' old, vested in the company retirement system and have 15 years' employment to offer the option of an early retirement.

The key in the offer is whether an employees age plus years of service equals 70.

DeGiso said the option will not result in callbacks of the 40 employees who are being laid off.

"It will help us in the future," he said.

"We don't know if one person will take it or whether there will be 20."

Employees who were sent the letter have 45 days to decide whether they will elect the early retirement and accept the financial inducement which varies.

There are 38 employees who meet the qualifications of the program, according to a spokesman for the paper.

The 12 news personnel given notice recently included: Tom Glynn, an editor who has been with the Ledger more than 20 years; Steve Murphy, an editor who has been with the Ledger 25 years; Tracy Thomas, a Weymouth town reporter; John Chaffee, a Plymouth town reporter; David Rose, graphic artist; two photographers, John Bohn and Marta Lavandier; Bob Barrett, a news writer; three copy editors — Diane Daniel, Wendy Lee and John Oudens, and one librarian. Ten of the 12 are members of the union grieving the action.

In the layoffs at MPG, seven staffers were from the Cape Cod papers and six from the Plymouth office, which is responsible for operating the Reporter papers.

Mormon bishop will speak

Francis A. Madsen, President of the Massachusetts Boston Mission, will speak at a "fireside" Sunday at 7 p.m. at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Hingham Ward located at 379 Gardner St. in Hingham.

As mission head for a 3-year period, Madsen directs the efforts of some 200 young men and "sister" missionaries who serve voluntarily and without pay for a period of 1 1/2 to 2 years.

do the milk runs. Price said the children discover new friends in the class.

On the last day of the week, there is a "I am very special" party. The special child and his parents prepare a treat and invite anyone they wish to the party.

Sometimes there are parents, brothers, sisters and grandparents. One memorable party included the family puppy.

The parents are invited to share special memories about their child. The party ends with the child choosing the songs and games that will be played.

Holidays are favorite times for the youngsters. Halloween and Valentine's Day stand out as the very best of the holidays as far as the children are concerned.

For Halloween they make glitter covered cats and pumpkins. Thanksgiving crafts feature pilgrims, Indians and turkeys.

"They all love to be Indians," Price said.

Winter brings more holiday fun.

"We make life-size Santa Clauses with a lot of cutting and pasting and cotton balls," Price said. "The cotton gets stuck to their hands."

The also make Christmas or Chanukah candles for gift giving (this is supposed to be a secret, so don't tell them we told you).

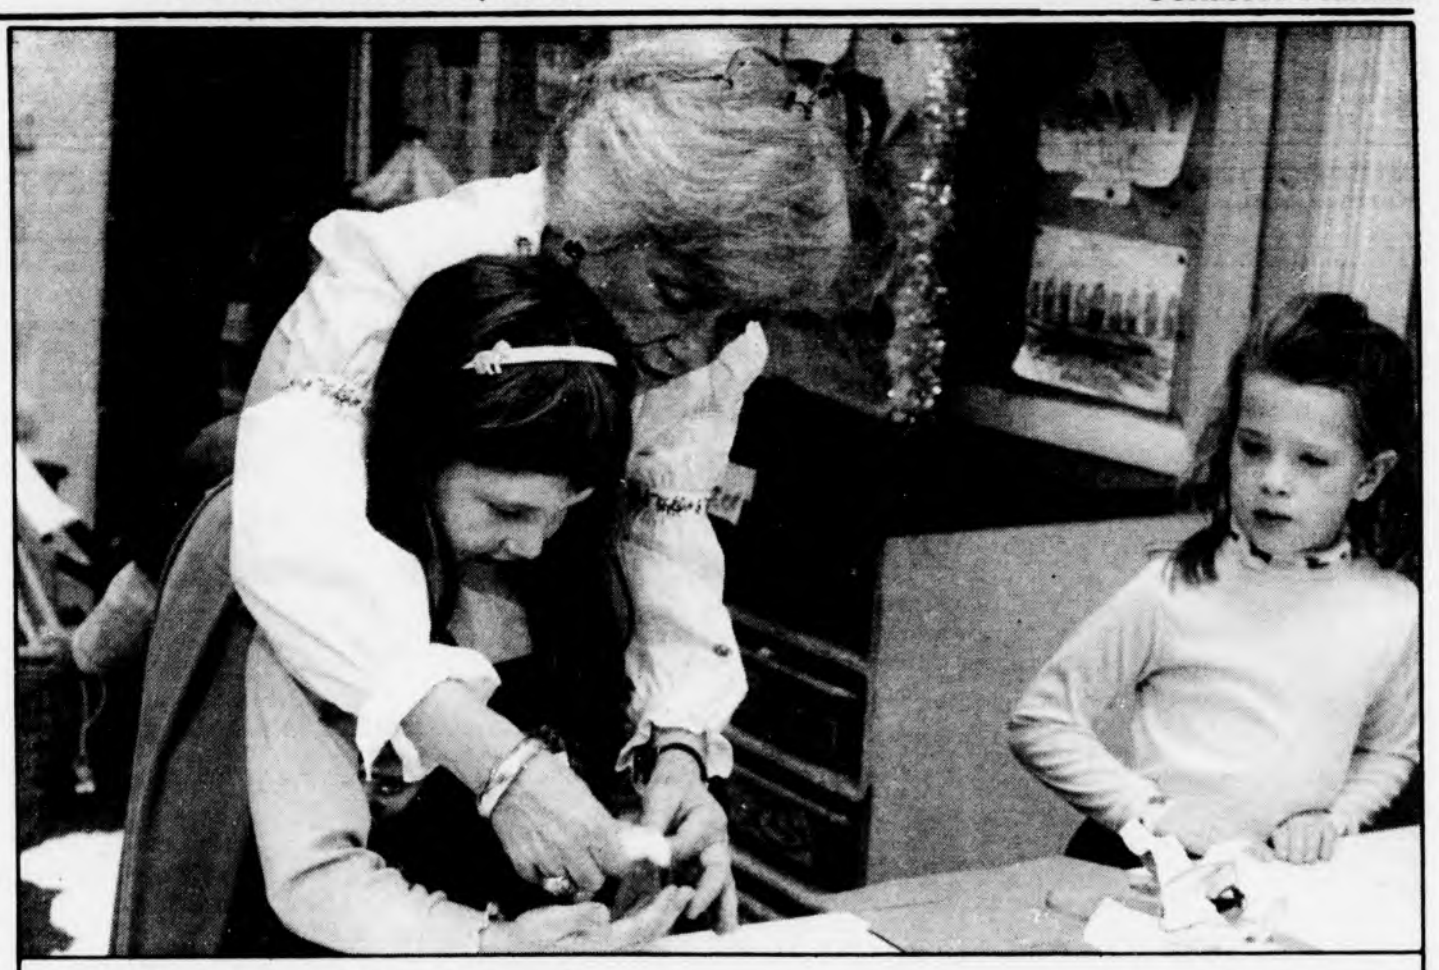
The children bring in candle stubs, old red crayons and add it to the paraffin. It takes about an hour-and-a-half for the wax to melt down. Then the children walk around and around the long table, repeating dipping their string in the wax until it turns into a candle. The final touch is to role it in glitter.

"They do love the glitter, " Price said.

Before the children start to dip their candles, Price has them estimate how many dips it takes to make a candle. It is, she said, a way of sneaking math into fun activities.

"They start at six dips and go up to 120," Price said.

In case you wonder, it takes an average of 25 to 30 dips.



The children also plan a musical production for their families.

The fun doesn't end in December.

"Valentine's Day is a blast," Price said. The children make valentines for every child. On the appointed day, they go around the circle delivering the valentines they've made. The delivery takes these non-readers a fair amount of time, but they love every minute of it.

Price loves to show the children how special they are, but she takes no credit for herself. She singles out her colleagues and parents for praise.

"It couldn't happen without them," Price said.

Marie Price helps a student at Osgood.

(John Stobierski staff photo)

But when Price was laid up following hip replacement surgery last spring, the children wrote her letters, drew her pictures and let her know that Mrs. Price is a very special person for all time.

One suspects she couldn't wait to heal up and get back to the business of tending her kindergarten.

Thinking and doing, solving problems and learning math and language are child's play in Price's room.

Seeing parts of whole and recognizing patterns get the children ready to read and add. They create their own big reading books and love to graph everything.

"The children have a great command of the language," Price said. The school curriculum seeks to capitalize on the curiosity and imagination of the children.

If Price's room is any example, the Cohasset system is chock-a-block with wonderful art work and stories and children who can't wait to share what they think and feel and imagine.

And Marie Price will be right there in the middle of it, encouraging and loving the children through every step of the process.

Pierson enjoys working in news

"This conference was a 'sources said' seminar, said Belliveau.

And just to make sure everyone attending the conference knew the ground rules, the State Department's public affairs bureau handed out fact sheets:

"Ground rules for attribution should be established at the beginning of conversations between Department officials and reporters.

"Normally, government officials take the initiative to determine the ground rules.

"Ground rules can be mixed — information on background, some on the record — but each time, it must be made clear at the outset.

"The discussion should proceed only after both parties are clear on exactly how the reporter can use or attribute information.

"Over the years, the following ground rules have been developed and are adhered to by reporters who cover the Department regularly:

"• On the record — information may be quoted directly and attributed to the official by name and title.

"• Background — attribution is to State Department of administration officials, as determined by the official. The officials may be paraphrased or quoted directly.

"• Deep background — no attribution is permitted and no direct quotes. The reporter may use the information to help present the story or to gain deeper understanding of the subject, but the wisdom is his, not his source's.

"• Off the record — the information may not be used in any form whatsoever and is meant only for the education of the reporter."

"What they were giving us was background information . . . of events that were taking place,' Belliveau continued.

"A good example, is what's happening in the Soviet Union (beyond) what we see in Time magazine or on the news wires.

"These people were giving us details of what is happening in the Baltic States, what will happen with the severe food shortages three months down the line, the political ramifications that are possible or are not possible because of the food shortages, what will happen if the Soviet Union goes to hard corrency.

"It's not a lot of detail, but (the information) augments what's happening in the news."

Pierson has had an abiding interest in foreign affairs ever since he served with the Peace Corps in Peru in the middle 1960s.

Later he was Massachusetts chairman for Partners of the Americas, volunteering, before he was asked to go to Washington and work for the program.

Partners of the Americas was an outgrowth of the Alliance for Progress started by President John F. Kennedy.

"Partners paired states with Latin American countries in an effort to encourage cultural and educational exchanges, student exchanges and sports exchanges to develop people's understanding, Pierson explained.

"That was an opportunity that interested me greatly. And I speak Spanish."

Pierson said the State Department had invited him to the seminar because he had had Barry

Wigmore Pierson and Robert Belliveau

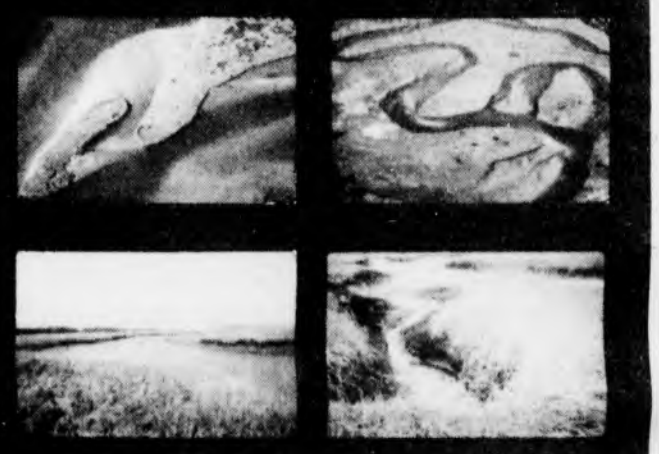
Daniels, a negotiator for the U. S. Disarmament Agency, as a guest on "Pierson to Person."

Pierson has continued his contacts within the State Department and is hoping to have several guests come to Scituate for the program.

Belliveau said Daniels had been in Boston for a speaking engagement and then drove out to Scituate for the talk show.

Among the guests Pierson wants to interview is the Assistant Secretary of State for the Pacific Rim — China, Japan, Australia and New Zealand — an area of dynamic economic growth.

"And I would be interested in Eastern European Afairs and the coming down of the Berlin Wall. There is tremendous dynamic potential for economic development there."



Pierson said he would like to host the German desk officer who is overseeing te unification of Germany . . . to discuss the challenges facing Helmut Kohl.

"And, obviously, the Russian desk officer to discuss whether the Soviet Union is going to survive as a union. That's a very valid question and will have a tremendous impact on the world.

"Within the next couple of weeks, (some of these individuals) will be assigned to visit New England," Pierson said.

The most interesting aspect of the seminar was "to get the inside views of our foreign policy managers, (to hear) their perceptions of issues that affect peace and war in the world and get their views off the record, to have them say what cannot be said" without otherwise badly affecting foreign policy, said Pierson.

Bank of Boston donates $5,000 for Milliken-Lillard field

Bank of Boston officially opened a new branch Dec. 5, at 380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. To celebrate its move into the community, Bank of Boston presented the Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field with a $5,000 contribution to kickoff their fundraising campaign.

The Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field is an organization of individuals and businesses who are working to develop three new all-purpose playing fields adjacent to the present facilities located behind Cohasset High School. By increasing the number of playing fields, the community will service the hundreds of Cohasset youth participating in soccer, field hockey and other field sports. This effort is being driven by the Friends' President, Wayne Sawchuk of National Abatement Services; Vice President, Dan Leahy of Kimballs by the Sea; and Treasurer, Bob Moody, also of National Abatement Services.

"Bank of Boston is pleased to be in Cohasset and is eager to provide a broad range of banking services to residents and businesses in the community," said David Foley, newly appointed Cohasset branch manager. "We are very excited about our involvement with The Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field. We look forward to working with them by providing volunteer support in addition to our contribution."

Wayne Sawchuk, president of The Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field said, "We welcome Bank of Boston to Cohasset and commend the bank for recognizing the importance of our effort. In the past there has only been enough space to play three games at once. When the work is finished that number will double."

In addition to the $5,000, Bank of Boston will act as the depository for the fundraising effort. Contributions can be sent directly to Bank of Boston, Cohasset and should be made out to "Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field."

Also on hand for the presentation were members of Cohasset High School Athletic teams and Cohasset Executive Secretary Gregory Doyon.

Bank of Boston's new full-service branch will offer a complete line of retail and commercial products and an ATM and Night Depository. The branch will be open Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., Wednesday, 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. and Saturday, 9 a.m. to noon.

The First National Bank of Boston, New England's oldest and largest banking company, is the principal subsidiary of the $37-billion asset Bank of Boston Corporation. Among the Corporation's other subsidiaries are Casco Northern Bank, N.A., in Maine: Bank of Boston Connecticut; Rhode Island Hospital Trust National Bank: and Bank of Vermont.

Coalition pushes for referendum on Greenbush branch of rail

rect" ballot question "as immediately as possible" to voters is the best way for their input to be dutifully considered, he said.

On Dec. 6, representatives from 10 South Shore towns will meet at Scituate Town Hall to discuss the proposal.

Alexander Macmillan, the chairman of the Hingham historical commission and an outspoken opponent of the restoration, said he had trouble with the "simple" questions voters are being asked to consider for "complex" issues.

Hynes argued that even if voters were uninformed when they voted in 1985, they now have been exposed to a host of information on the restoration.

Selectmen representative Gerry Dwight said the Scituate board of selectmen wanted a simple, uniform question placed on the ballot. He urged member towns to work toward that goal.

The coalition voted to endorse Hyne's wording for the referendum. Hingham voted against the motion; Dwight was present but did not vote.

Hingham selectman Edna English said she voted against the motion because the wording was too "concise" and to "constrict the matter was unfair."

"To strip it of the important facts stripped the question of any weight," she said.

Hynes said he hopes to get the questions on ballots in Hingham, Weymouth, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield, Duxbury, Hanover, Norwell and Rockland.

In 1985 a non-binding referendum on the restoration showed the majority of voters supported plans for the revival of the commuter rail service.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

The holiday gift giving season is upon us, and all of Santa's elves at the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF) are getting ready—writing their list and checking it twice. I stopped in at Santa's recycling workshop to see what tips I could pass along.

1. Order extra dumpster for corrugated cardboard. Corrugated cardboard is only made of sandwiched layers of cardboard. The single layer cardboard is called paperboard and is not recyclable. It needs to be thrown in the trash.

2. Order extra trash dumpster for non-recyclable trash. As consumers and taxpayers, the trash end product of Christmas can be greatly reduced, reused, or recycled.

Here's how:

Packaging: Use scrunched up newspaper in mailing packages instead of polystyrene "peanuts." Reuse the "peanuts" that you presently have. They will last for generations.

Wrapping paper: This can be reused year after year if you don't use tape. You can also make your own using plain paper and stamps or crayons. You can also purchase recycled paper.

Presents: Finally, if you don't like the neon argyle socks and stuffed tiger, put them in the Boutique or Salvation Army bin.

3. Make arrangements for chipper for Christmas trees. Remind everyone that all decorations and tinsel should be removed before leaving trees off at the RTF. How about eliminating tinsel from the tree and buying reusable garlands, or making garlands?

I also stopped for my visit with Santa at the Village Fair this past weekend. He said that he was so pleased to hear the boys and girls asking for reusable gifts. There was an increase in requests for reusable/rechargeable batteries for instance. That means that parents are getting the message that disposable batteries are hazardous waste. It's much easier and cheaper in the long run to get rechargeable onces.

Another gift idea Santa had for me was gifts that give. Many non-profit groups have catalogs. Part of the cost of the item is a donation to that group.

"This is a busy season for me," said Santa, "but I work with the environment not against it. You can too," he informed me as he looked over his spectacles at a guilt-ridden face," simply by the products that you buy, use and throw away."

Parenting film available

Eight VCR films on parenting teen-agers are now available at the Paul Pratt Library due to the Social Service League.

The tapes all run for 30 minutes.

Bag recycling offered

C. Fredrick Fawcett, President of Dependable Cleaners headquartered in Quincy, has announced a recycling service in each of its thirteen locations.

Dependable Cleaners will accept the return of the plastic packaging materials in which cleaning is delivered to its customers. In turn, Dependable will send the plastic to its supplier for recycling.

"We're environmentally sensitive," Fawcett said. "We have been operating an internal recycling and conservation program at our cleaning plants. It has been extremely successful starting with a simple cardboard recovery; now we're expanding it further."

Fawcett also said that the firm will accept the return of hangers for re-use. "All we ask is that the customer make an effort to untangle them as much as possible."

The company makes the recycling process particularly easy for its most frequent customers Fawcett said. Most of their frequent customers use Dependable's VIP Express bag drop-off system. "All our VIP Baggers need to do is include the old poly (plastic) and hangers in their drop-off bags and we'll do the rest."

As a gesture of sincerity, Fawcett said his locations will accept the recycling of plastic and hangers from customers of other dry cleaners too.

Making lace gifts

Make a beautiful holiday gift. Learn to make a fabric and lace covered album for holiday gift giving, just like the ones you have seen at craft shows. Students receive step by step instruction, enabling them to apply this creative skill to future projects. The fee includes the price of materials. This workshop will meet on Monday morning, Dec. 10 from 10 a.m. to noon. The cost is $25.

PSO news

We have placed our first order! Stephen Hart has picked a Mac Classic 2-40. The Mac Classic 2-40 is just being introduced so we are really at the advantage. It promises to be as good as the SE System which was our original goal.

We'd like to remind everyone to save and turn in your slips when doing your holiday shopping because the campaign only runs until December 29.

We'd also like to thank everyone for their participation and please keep up the good work. We're on our way now to our next order of another computer and some software. So please, keep those slips coming in. Thank you everyone.

Early release day

Dec. 6 will be an early release day in the Cohasset Public Schools for Joseph Osgood and Deer Hill Schools only. There will be no afternoon kindergarten sessions and other students will be dismissed according to the following schedule: Deer Hill School, buses depart: 12:40 p.m.; Joseph Osgood School, buses depart: 12:50 p.m.

Lunch will be served in all schools.

This early release day has been approved by the Cohasset School Committee for parent conferences.

Student Council news

By Patricia Tolini
Special to the Mariner

On Friday night, Dec. 7, there will be a ninth grade semi-formal. It will start at 7:30 p.m., and will be at St. Stephan's Church. Hope all who attend have a good time.

The week of Dec. 10 starts the opening of Cohasset High School's winter sports. Here's wishing all the teams a great season!

Second quarter warning notices will start coming out on Dec. 10.

Dec. 13 is an In-Service Day for all schools.

On Dec. 21, Cohasset Student Council will be putting on a Christmas Party. It will be going on during both first and second lunch at the high school.

There will be a Student Council meeting on Dec. 6, during third period.

Moku-Hanga at Deer Hill

During the month of November, Deer Hill students studied the technique of Moku-Hanga (Japanese Woodblock Prints).

Woodblock carving originated in China and Japan. Originally, Hanga was used to decorate religious objects or to print announcements of village festivals. In the course of time it developed into a major art form. It was first introduced to the Western world as wrapping paper for tea chests.

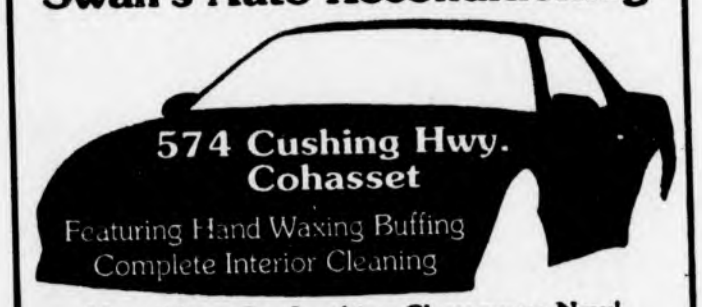
In order to imitate this art form, each student had to create his own "woodblock" out of a styrofoam tray. By using a pencil, students first sketched a design or picture, then etched the design into the styrofoam by pressing firmly with the pencil. Next students applied black paint to the "woodblock" with a roller. Then they printed the design. Examples of the finished product can be viewed in the corridors of the school.

Thank you to the many volunteers who helped with this month's program.

Soccer registration set

Registrations for spring soccer were accepted last Saturday, November 17 at the Deer Hill School. Over 200 Cohasset soccer players assured themselves a position on one of the Cohasset teams by submitting their registration on Saturday. All Cohasset children and students ages 6 through 19 (in 1991) are eligible to play.

A maximum of 18 players will be allowed per team. Placement on a team will be according to the player's registration date. Late registrations will be returned if there are no available openings on a team.



Registrations can still be submitted through December 15, 1990. Forms may be obtained from the recreation office, first floor Town Hall, and school offices. The fee for the 1991 season will be $30 for the first family member, $25 for the second, and $20 for each remaining family member. Check should be payable to "Cohasset Soccer Club." Please mail the completed form and checks to 46 Black Rock Rd., Cohasset. A late fee of $5 will be added to all registrations submitted after December 15.

Math league adds wins

On Nov. 8, the students in grade 8 participated in the first continental math league test for the year. Several students did very well on this test.

In the Pythagorean Division, which is given to honor students, Corinna McMackin had a score of 6. Other students doing real well were Molly Pease with 5 points, Jessica Connor, Dawn Meehan, Alissa Sexton, Jeremiah Stevenson and Dean Volungis with 4 points.

Dogs are center of controversy

They say every dog must have its day, and Jasmin was no exception. The labrador owned by Andrew Spalt and Margaret Lincoln had her day in court Dec. 3.

Jasmin's owners were appealing a decision by selectmen banishing the dog from town. The Quincy District Court upheld fines levied for violations of the town's leash law and the selectmen's order of banishment.

Lincoln responded to the order by fleeing the court with Jasmin.

Spalt and Lincoln were ordered to surrender Jasmin and another dog originally involved in the complaints by 4 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 4.

As of Wednesday afternoon, the dogs had not been surrendered and Animal Control Officer William Quigley signed papers fwith the court to have the owners charged with violating the court's order.

Selectmen banished the dogs after finding the owners repeatedly failed to comply with guarantees that the dogs would be restrained and their yard fenced in. The dogs had repeatedly run free and were frightening a two year old resident of Brewster Road.

Spalt voluntarily sent one dog, Amos, to live in Barnstable in early September. According to the Barnstable dog officer, Amos has been no trouble in his new community and is enrolled in a dog obedience class with his new owner.

Selectmen directed town counsel Richard Henderson to file a motion asking the judge to amend the order as it pertains to Amos. The town sees no reason to find a new home for Amos since he is doing well in Barnstable.

If Jasmin is surrendered, Quigley will place the dog with an organization that arranges adoptions.

"I definitely do not want to have the dog put to sleep. I want her to find a good home out of town," Quigley said.

The court also ordered the owners to pay $260 worth of fines for leash law violations by Dec. 15.

Gulf testing focuses on the river

vote to fund it was a unanimous one."

The Massachusetts Bays Program established the action grants to encourage groups and individuals to take action to protect the fragile marine environment.

Unseasonably balmy weather allowed the testing program to continue late into November. Under normal conditions, the water would have gotten too cold for the coliform bacteria to be detectable.

Initial testing in the summer covered the Gulf River and its tributaries in Cohasset and Scituate. Consistently high coliform counts in Bound Brook and Pegram Brook sites led the project directors to concentrate their testing in those areas in the fall months.

High levels of fecal coliform bacteria usually indicate some form of organic pollution, often from failed septic systems.

When the fecal coliform count at a bathing beach exceeds 200, the health department closes it. In July, the testing sites in Bound Brook near the Mordecai Lincoln mill and Pegram Brook where it crosses South Main Street ranged from 248 to 1,800.

John Hartshorne, vice president of the Gulf Association, explains that these test results are only preliminary findings and have little scientific validity at this stage of testing.

"We're in the shake-out phase," Hartshorne explained. Still, he said the "hot spots" have exceeded 400 consistently.

Watching the students conduct the tests for fecal coliform colony counts is fascinating.

The water samples are taken every Monday. The student volunteers are broken up into teams that rotate responsibility for the testing.

After they gather the water samples in sterile bottles, the bottles are placed in a cooler and returned to the water department's laboratory.

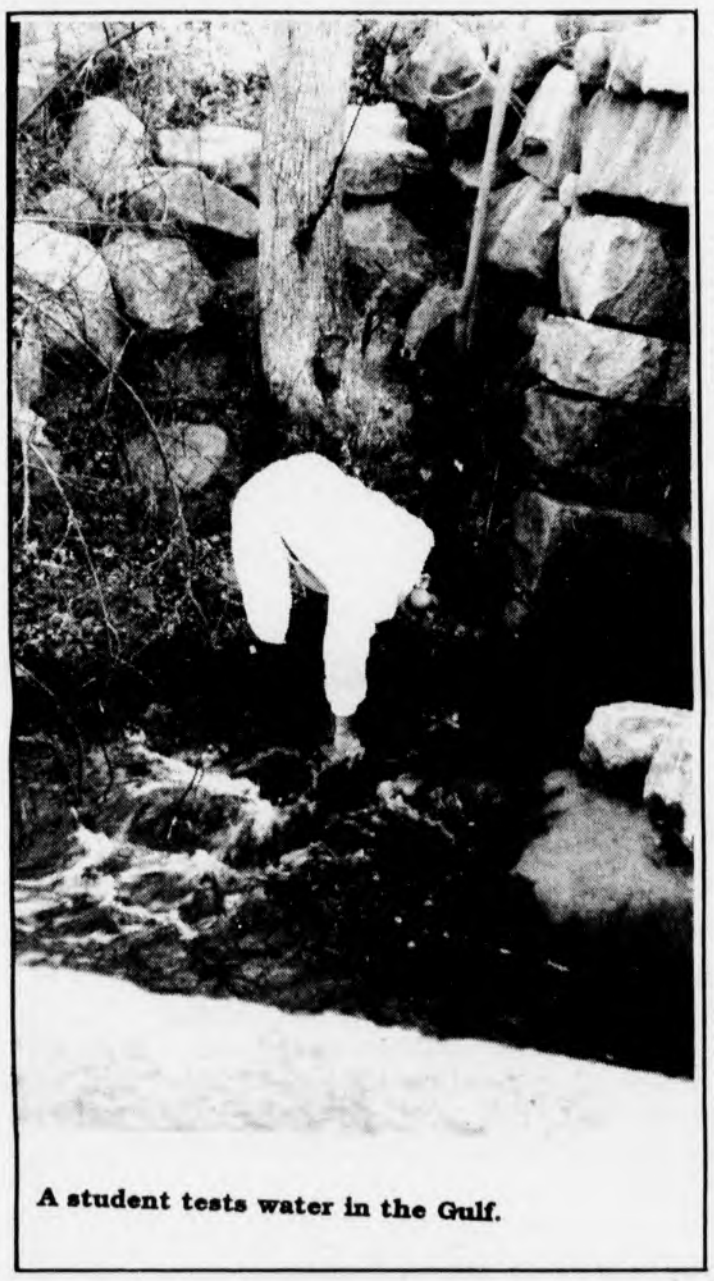
The students saturate a small disc with a growth medium, filter each water sample through a disc and place it in a petri dish.

The dishes are placed in an incubator where they are kept at a precise temperature overnight. The next morning the discs are "read."

The discs have a grid design. The colonies appear like ditto marks pencilled on the discs.

According to water department employee Ted Graham, finding 12 dots on a disc would indicate a relatively low count, 25 to 30 would be serious.

"Earlier samples had 40 to 50," he said. That means you probably don't want your children puddle-jumping in the brooks.



Although the chilly temperature of the water now running through the brooks precludes any further testing this year, the students will be back in the water in the spring.

This year the focus has been Cohasset, but the Gulf River and the brooks flow through Scituate, too.

"It is our hope to get Scituate in on this, too," Hartshorne said. "Particularly in the high school." Member of the Gulf Association, on Scituate side as well as the Cohasset side of the river, have a big stake in the project. They live along the river, go boating on it and desperately want to see it crystal clear and purer than the driven snow.

Students work on the Gulf River project.

Loon Mountain is first recreation ski trip

The Cohasset Recreation Department's first ski trip of the year will be on Sunday, Dec. 16, to Loon Mt. This first, early-bird trip will again be done in conjunction with the Massachusetts Ski Club.

The cost for this trip is $38 per person, and $28 per person for the beginner package which includes transportation, novice slopes lift ticket, lesson and equipment rentals. For the $38 non-beginner package you are provided with transportation and full-mountain, (except gondola) lift ticket. Rentals for non-beginners are $13, and you should bring your rental money with you the day of the trip, in cash.

This trip is ideal for those who have never skied before as for $28 you will be fully outfitted and given a lesson as well. For seasoned skiers, you will be provided the opportunity to get an early start on the ski season.

Because this trip is being conducted through the Mass. Ski Club, early registration will be required. Arrangements and payments must be made by Thursday, Nov. 29. To register you may call the recreation department office, at 383-6791, however, payment is the confirmation of your reservations, and that must be paid at the recreation office, 1st floor Town Hall, or mailed to us along with a parental permission form.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations for ski lessons on Monday and Tuesday, Nov. 26 and 27, from 2:30 to 4 p.m., both days, and Thursday, Nov. 29, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m., at the recreation office, 1st floor, Town Hall.

The cost for the five weeks of lessons to be held at the Blue Hills Ski School will be $80 per person. There are five, 1 3/4 hour sessions. Parents must register children as a release form must be signed. Checks are to be made payable to: Town of Cohasset.

Lessons are scheduled to begin on Thursday, January 3. The fee covers lessons and transportation to and from Blue Hills. Equipment rental is $8 per session, payable in full ($40) at the time of registration. Classes are offered for all levels of instruction, however, participants must be 7 years of age at the start of classes. Buses will leave from the Town Hall parking lot at about 3:15 p.m., and return at about 6:45 p.m. Parents who wish to go as volunteer chaperones may sign-up during registration.

BULLETIN BOARD

Indoor golf lessons set

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are jointly sponsoring winter indoor golf lessons, scheduled to begin on Wednesday evening, from 7 to 8 p.m., Jan. 9, at the Cushing School, Aberdeen Drive, Scituate.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting each Wednesday evening, from Jan. 9 to Feb. 6 and should demand dictate; flexibility to offer more than one class exists. The cost for the program is $50 per person, and golf clubs will be provided for lessons to those individuals who may require them.

Instructing will be Chuck Young, area golf pro, who has taught at the U.S. Golf Academy and throughout the midwest and west, as well as being a Pan Am Tournament player. Classes will be structured in groups, but size will be limited, allowing Mr. Young to afford as much individual attention to each person, as necessary.

To register for this unique program, which makes an ideal Christmas gift, call the Cohasset recreation office, at 383-6791.

Consignment shop hours

To better accommodate the working woman, the Cohasset Consignment Shop will be open Thursday nights in December and January for consignments and sales.

Andrea Merrill, shop manager, said the shop will be open Dec. 6, 13 and 20 and Jan. 3, 10 and 17 from 6 to 8 p.m. Consignors are limited to 10 items of winter clothing and 20 bric-a-brac items. The shop is located in Cushing Plaza off Route 3A.

More volunteers are needed for these expanded hours and Merrill hopes that some working women will be willing to volunteer on one of these nights.

Four women opened the shop as a thrift store in 1935 to provide area residents clothing at a reasonable cost and to help fund the Social Service League of Cohasset. Even today the league, a non-profit social service agency serving Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Norwell and Scituate, gets a third of its income from the shop.

The shop now carries only seasonal clothes in perfect condition, in current styles and freshly cleaned. Furs are a popular item and it is not uncommon to find a full-length mink coat selling for a fraction of the cost. This fall Merrill took over more than 500 square feet once occupied by Bildner's gourmet food store and has filled every inch of the new space with merchandise.

In recent years, working women repeatedly requested that the shop be open at night as they are unable to consign during the shop's regular consigning hours, which are Monday through Friday from 10 to 11:30 a.m. Merrill said she wants to offer better service to these women by expanding the hours the shop is open. If the evening hours are a success, Merrill said she will open the shop again in the spring for six nights beginning in mid-March.

For additional information or to volunteer, please call the shop, 383-0687.

Santa hosts breakfast

Santa and Mrs. Santa will host a Holiday Breakfast for children and parents sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center on Saturday, Dec. 8, from 9 to 11 a.m. Breakfast will be continental style with a buffet of homemade muffins, doughnuts, fruit salad, coffee and juice.

During breakfast, Santa and Mrs. Santa will arrive and lead children in a medley of holiday songs. They will also pose with children for keepsake photos of this event.

Tickets are still available at the Center, but must be reserved in advance. Children are $2, adults $3. Call 383-0088 for reservations.

Channel 53 schedule

Channel 53

THURS., DEC. 6

5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: Many of Bob Detwiler's viewers who are familiar with Chris Van Allsburg's magical Polar Express and Wreck of the Zephyr should enjoy Bob's reading of his newest book Just A Dream. Also read on the program is Barbara Cooney's latest book which she has authored and illustrated, Hattie and the Wild Waves. Cooney, one of America's most beloved illustrators has over 100 books to her credit including the award winning Ox Cart Man.

TUES., DEC. 11

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal... "The Importance of the Secondary School Accreditation Process." Back for a return visit is Pamela Gray-Bennett, Associate Director of the Commission on Public Secondary Schools of the New England Association of Schools and Colleges. Joining Pam in the discussion are Meg Gallagher, principal; Cohasset H.S. and Bob McIntyre, principal of Hull H.S. with both Cohasset and Hull coming up for accreditation. This program is particularly relevant for citizens of these two towns.

THUR., DEC. 13

5:30 p.m. Children's Corner: In recognition of this special holiday season, Bob Detwiler will read, Hanukkah, The Festival of Lights, The Snow Lady, Norwell resident Jan Brett's latest, The Wild Christmas Reindeer and The Polar Express by Chris Van Allsburg.

TUES., DEC. 18

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal: "Christmas Children's Book and Toy Suggestions." Bob listens while wife Betsey and daughter-in-law Kathie, proprietors of Cohasset's Buttonwood Books and Toys talk about their respective specialties. They have brought well in excess of fifty books and toys to show our viewers. This program was inspired by the morning TV network shows with their Christmas gift suggestion.

Lamplight puppet show

The Cohasset Community Center will sponsor a performance of the Boston Lamplight Puppet Theatre, directed by Professional puppeteer, Marcia Littlefield on Sunday, Dec. 23 at 2 p.m. The performance is entitled "A Berry Berry Christmas."

The program is age appropriate for pre-school to eight years. Tickets are available at $3. Call the center at 383-0088 or send a stamped self-addressed envelope to obtain tickets.

Cancer Society benefits from Webb's golf tournament

A check for $3,404.98 has been presented to the South Shore Unit of the American Cancer Society representing the proceeds of a recent golf tournament organized by Webb's Pro Fitness Health Club, Norwell, in memory of a prominent South Shore attorney who succumbed to the disease.

The tournament was organized by Amy Webb, manager of Webb's Pro Fitness, and Bill McPhee of Pembroke, administrative assistant to Judge Albert L. Kramer of Quincy District Court, as a memorial tribute to the late Attorney Richard W. Barry of Quincy, who died of cancer earlier this year. It was held Oct. 22 at the Pembroke Country Club, with 144 golfers participating. Winners were a threesome of Ronnie Shone and Joe Hayes of Scituate and Greg Webb of Norwell.

The South Shore Unit of the Cancer Society carries on a program of information, public and professional education and patient service in the communities of Braintree, Cohasset, Hingham, Hull, Milton, Norwell, Quincy, Scituate and Weymouth.

Cohasset Mariner

Vol. XIII, No. 11 | Thursday, December 13, 1990 | 1-800-649-6661 | 50 cents

The celebration of an old-fashioned Christmas in Cohasset Village brought a crowd to the Community Center.

Taxpayers attack assessing work

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

More than 50 people turned out Sunday night to find out what they could do about the high cost of owning property in Cohasset.

Before they left, they were urged to find new blood to run for assessor.

"For years we had no problem in our assessments," Eli Manchester, said. "If we had some different assessors, we wouldn't have this problem."

Manchester decried the fact that the revenue side of town affairs "is in the hands of three people accountable to no one."

The Concerned Citizens of Cohasset held the meeting to explain the joint appeal they filed with the State Appellate Tax Board. The group has hired an attorney, Philip Burling of Foley, Hoag & Eliot, to represent them on a contingency fee basis.

Currently 40 people are members of the Concerned Citizens group. They hope to expand the number further to strengthen their position and share the up front costs of the appeal.

According to members Fred Quelle and David Weltman, although the attorney agreed to handle the case in exchange for one-third of what is won over the three-year period covered by the revaluation, it does not include such expenses as a private appraiser.

Quelle said it became clear during negotiations with the assessors and the firm that did the revaluation work that hiring an independent appraiser was essential.

"We were told 'you fellows don't know how to assess property. You get a good appraiser in here and we'll sit down and talk with him," he said.

The group estimated an appraiser might charge as much as $25,000.

Graham retires after 40 years

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

Dorothy Graham, the secretary for the board of assessors since its creation 40 years ago, will be leave her post at the end of the month.

Graham said she has no immediate plans for her retirement other than to "rest a while"

Her life of service to the town began when she worked as a secretary for the selectmen's office.

She said that at the time the board "wore three hats" and also handled town assessments.

As times changed and the town grew, Graham left the selectmen's office to help with the creation of the board of assessors that is in place today.

Graham gave "personal" reasons for her retirement. Her brother died last year leaving her in charge of his estate.

COHASSET'S WEEK

Sunday openings trimmed

Selectmen reconsidered a previous decision allowing liquor stores to open the Sundays before Christmas and New Year's Eve from noon to 12 p.m. In a 4-1 vote, selectmen trimmed the hours to noon to 6 p.m.

"This is in deference to the people who think we shouldn't have granted them at all," Selectman Martha Gjesteby said in proposing the cutback. "There should be some respect for the Sabbath."

Selectman Diana Kornet concurred with the reduction in hours, saying she was concerned about the snowballing effect it was having on merchants who felt they had to keep those hours in order to compete.

Selectmen felt it was fitting that the liquor stores keep the same kind of Sunday hours as other merchants in town who routinely close between 5 and 6 p.m. on Sundays.

The sole dissent came from Chairman Rocco Laugelle.

"I'd go for the hours they're allowed to go," he said.

Inside story on ambulance

With the bids for private ambulance service due to go out soon, Selectman Diana Kornet promised fellow selectmen the inside story on one man's experience with private and public ambulance services.

According to Kornet, she has been discussing the issue with a man from Cape Cod who served the whole Cape with an emergency medical service. "The whole Cape was absolutely delighted with his service," Kornet said. "Then he was wooed away to a private ambulance company."

Kornet said he left the company after three months extremely disappointed with the operations and quality of the private ambulance company which she declined to name.

Kornet told them the full details would be available at an upcoming meeting. She hopes Cohasset can benefit from his experiences and insight.

"We like local control," Kornet said, "but we shouldn't reinvent the wheel."

Kornet said the regional Advanced Life Support ambulance service committee would issue a report soon.

Kornet on yellow ribbons

Martha Gjesteby was the selectman who suggested Cohasset join with other communities and support soldiers, sailors and marines in the Persian Gulf.

Although Selectman Diana Kornet heartily endorses sending letters and packages to armed forces personnel, she said she does not like the notion of yellow ribbons.

Reception for CHS artists

A reception for the Cohasset High School art students was held Wednesday evening, Dec. 5, at Cohasset Music. The new CD and tape store at Cushing Plaza has designated a section of space to be used as a gallery to display visual artwork for the Cohasset art students. A number of the program's artists from grades 7-12 exhibited their works as part of the gallery's first show. Dozens attended the reception.

The work included in the show ranges from still life color theory painting by grade 7 students to landscape watercolors by Art I students; silkscreen prints by Art II students; self-portraits by art majors; and illuminated manuscripts by history of art and music students.

Cohasset Music owner Bruce Compton said of exhibit organizer Colleen Lucas, Cohasset High School Art Director, "Colleen has been wonderful in putting together this collection. Thanks to her cooperation, our first show is on the board."

Lucas said that students commented on the art and artists in the gallery very positively. "It was an eye-opener to hear students' comments like, "I didn't know Simon Payne was an artist!" or "Wow – Tica can draw!" Some students are known for their other strengths, and this is an opportunity to showcase their artistic talents."

Compton can identify with some of the frustration of the young artists in finding a place to exhibit their works with any regularity.

"Ordinarily, they are lucky to be able to find a public place to exhibit their works once or twice a year," he said. "The South Shore Arts Center has held an admirable policy in recent years of displaying the school art periodically, but the students need added frequency to become recognized. Here, there should be plenty of those opportunities for the talented artists."

Lucas said, "Having members of the community like Bruce Compton who are so supportive of the art program at Cohasset High School is fantastic."

The C.H.S. art exhibit will remain on display through the season.

Students whose works are in the show include: Melissa Rousseau, Kevin O'Donnell, Dan Silvia, Earle Bestick, Jake Powell, Tica Soares, Christa Ansbergs, Jon Hunter, Chris Bartow, Nicole Peterson, Alyson James, Eri Sakamoto, Simon Payne, Christopher Henderson and Brian Thompson.

Also, Nicole Haefner, Michael Kasameyer, Dan DeMichele, Karolin Wegner, Cecilia Candida, J. Gaston, Renee Prisble, Jacob Powell, Joe Clemens, Jerome Marion, Marissa Gallant, Jen Plante, Andrew Ross, Kara Manion, Michael Cisneros, Erin McAllister and David Cullihane.

1058th on cable TV

Continental Cablevision has obtained videotapes of members of the 1058th Transportation Division of the National Guard who are serving in Operation Desert Shield and will televise them next week.

Program director Robert Belliveau said a film crew from WGGB-TV, Channel 40, in Springfield followed the unit from the parade route from Hingham to Westover Air Force Base and then spent nearly a week with the men and women from the unit in Saudi Arabia.

Morri Goodman, news director at Channel 40, already has aired a six-part series on his newscast as well as a half-hour special, Belliveau said.

In addition, there are Christmas messages included in the programming.

Continental will cablecast a two-and-a-half hour program Monday, Dec. 17, from 4:30 to 7 p.m. on Channel 53 and again on Tuesday, Dec. 18, from 9 to 11:30 a.m. on Channel 53.

Deer Hill 5th grader shines

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Mazoe Barkon is a little girl with an unusual name and a big talent. Like a Fourth of July sparkler, she's bright, exciting and fun to be around.

The Deer Hill fifth grader shone in last year's Boston Children's Theater production of "Winnie-the-Pooh." Barkon played Baby Roo. She also was part of the street children's chorus in "Really Rosie." This year she plans to audition BCT's "Wizard of Oz." Barkon hopes to win the role of the Scarecrow.

"I like the things the Scarecrow gets to do, the songs and the motions," Mazoe said. It's easy to imagine this bouncy and cheerful girl as the Scarecrow.

More immediately, people can see Mazoe in "Black Nativity" at the Boston Opera House.

Black Nativity tells the story of the birth of the Christ child through traditional carols, gospel songs and origingal music. It features two dancers in the role of Mary and Joseph, an adult chorus and a children's chorus. All together, there are about 170 performers in the production.

Mazoe recently learned she would have five solos during the performance.

Cohasset residents can enjoy a wonderful production, get to see Mazoe and support the METCO program by signing up for the PSO's matinee trip to "Black Nativity."

Proceeds from the Dec. 17 trip are dedicated to preservation of the late bus that enables METCO students to participate fully in after-school programs at the school.

One of the METCO students who uses the late bus is Mazoe's brother, Paris Cook. Paris, a 10th grader, plays on both the football and basketball teams. Paris is just one of many METCO students enriching extra-curricular life in Cohasset and rounding out their own education in the process.

Other students include athletes Ray "Sugar Ray" Jones, Shawn Burgess, Dorian Bryant, Jared Hardwick, Kywon Edwards, Sheldon Morgan, Claudine Johnson and Adrienne DeVaughn; cheerleader Michelle LeMar; theater performer Keri Richards and video aide Oronde Allie.

And then there are all the budding stars coming up through the ranks, like Mazoe.

Performing comes naturally for Mazoe. She's been doing it for as long as she can remember.

"When I was younger, I used to always perform in front of my family," she said.

Her mother and grandmother encouraged Mazoe. She has taken dance lessons for the past six years, including tap, ballet and gymnastics. She also took voice and acting lessons.

One of the nicest things about Mazoe is how unspoiled she is by her experiences. There is no prima donna about her – she simply bubbles over with excitement about everything that is going on in her life.

She hopes her career extends to work in film. Photographs of Mazoe are included in a book, Faces International, that goes to producers, directors and casting specialists.

When she isn't acting, Mazoe favors reading, science and swimming. She just finished reading The Song of the Smoggy Stars which she highly recommends.

In case you've been wondering about her name, Mazoe is an African name her father gave her. The name means "mother of all." Mazoe shares the name with her aunt.

Remember that name. You're sure to hear it again.

Reservations for the "Black Nativity" matinee trip must be made by Dec. 17. For more information or reservations, call Clark Chatterton at 383-0560, Joan Kovach at 383-6358, Dayle Dickinson at 383-0892 or Susan Pile at 383-6088.

RTF remains unfinished, unpaid

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen voted to pay another $3,000 of the money withheld from Sciaba Construction pending completion of unfinished work at the transfer station. They also authorized payment of up to $1,000 to the project consultants if the Board of Health concurs.

The Transfer Station Study Committee recommended release of the money after receiving a letter from Sciaba certifying the connection the study committee questioned was structurally sound and that the warrantee was unaffected by a change in the construction of a corner of the station.

The town continues to hold back an additional $2,200 pending installation of a baffle, complete installation of a panel the committee claims is only partially affixed and painting some scratches.

Town counsel Richard Henderson believes it is unlikely that Sciaba will return to complete the remaining items on the punch list.

According to Henderson and Anson Whealler of the Transfer Station Study Committee, the construction company contends that the scratches were made by the town and the panel was properly affixed.

The company claims they purchased and left the materials for construction of the baffle on the site and were willing to do the work originally designed.

Whealler said the problem arose when a different type of trailer was used at the site, requiring a change in baffle design. The parties failed to come up with a mutually-agreeable redesign before the construction company moved on to the next thing.

Whealler confirmed that the steel for the baffle was on the site, but said he believed some of it had disappeared.

Henderson held out little hope that the matter would be resolved any time soon.

SEA, the consultants on the project, have continued to push Sciaba to complete the items on the punch list, Whealler said.

According to Whealler, the town held back $2,500 from SEA's contract pending Sciaba's completion of $10,200 worth of punch list items.

Whealler said the town has paid out $8,000 for completion of punch list items to date. He told selectmen he thought it was only fair to release some money to SEA as a result.

On the other hand, he said, he wanted to continue to hold back a significant amount of money to encourage SEA to continue to prod Sciaba to complete the work.

"I'm not unhappy with the work SEA has done with the punch list," Whealler said. "I just want to leave enough in the kitty."

Whealler recommended payment of $1,000, but suggested that the Board of Health have some input into the amount released.

In other business, the selectmen:

• Approved a change of manager on the liquor license held by With Richard, Inc. Selectmen unanimously approved Yong S. Doucette as the new manager.

• Agreed to limit after-hours work in town hall by employees in attempt to conserve heat and electricity.

• Approved a step rate increase for Sandra Murray, secretary to the building inspector.

Hingham's commuter boat faces service cuts

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

A 20 percent reduction in commuter boat service was approved last week by the MBTA's advisory board, a move that could eliminate as many as four daily round trips as well as stalling expansion and renovation plans slated to begin next year.

MBTA spokesman Peter Dimond said the advisory board made a line item cut of $325,000 from boat service that will take effect when the new fiscal year begins in July.

As a result of the cut, Martha Reardon, a principal with Harbor Consultancy International, has asked selectmen to call for a public review of the decision.

The specific impact on boat service the cut will have has not yet been determined, Dimond said, speculating that off-peak routes would be the first casualties.

He said the MBTA will make an effort to make service cuts with the least impact possible.

In a summary statement presented to the MBTA's board of directors, the finance committee recommended a cut of $343,818 from the authority's local service subsidy. Local service includes ferry service, independent bus routes, and programs such as The Ride, a service that provides transportation to disabled customers.

The committee blamed falling ridership and a failing economy for the cuts.

The report said boat ridership is 22 percent below expected levels, with an additional decline of 8.5 percent over the next year.

The committee disagreed with an MBTA plan to bolster ridership by increasing service, and proposed a cut in service commensurate with the drop in ridership.

"One year ago the advisory board approved funding for commuter boat ridership that has proven overly optimistic," the report said. "In the fall of 1989, the FY91 subsidy per passenger was figured at $3.50. The fall-off in patronage has pushed the current subsidy to $5.20 a person.

"The state cannot afford any further increase. It is clear that in tough times not enough commuters can afford to subscribe to this luxury commute to support the proposed level of service at reasonable cost to the taxpayer."

A planned $10 million expansion of site parking and renovations in terminal platforms could fall to the wayside now that the cut has been made.

Mary Ann Ward, a Hingham resident on the advisory committee, fought to restore the money cut from MBTA general manager Thomas Glynn's requested budget of $3,176,604.

Ward's proposal gained support from representatives of Quincy, Marshfield, Canton, Cohasset, Scituate and Randolph, but was soundly defeated by the majority of the committee.

Ward said boat service has managed to keep an 85 percent capacity on peak runs. She suggested cuts in service would primarily affect off-peak runs.

She said she was hopeful the cuts would not drastically hurt the boat's effectiveness and suggested it would likely lead to vendors being forced to consolidate services.

Ward took exception to the committee's statement that the service is a "luxury" mode.

RR referendum bogs down

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Cohasset and Hingham dashed regional hopes for a simple, uniform referendum question in favor of the proposed restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony line.

State and local officials failed to convince the two communities to join forces during a regional selectmen's meeting held in Scituate Thursday night.

Hingham selectmen Edna English and Kevin Costello contended that the referendum question is premature. They want to wait until all the studies are completed and more financial data is available before voting on the issue.

Costello added that the question may well appear on Hingham's ballot, but it is unlikely to be the simple question supported by Scituate, Norwell and Weymouth.

"It remains to be seen what we in Hingham will do," he said. "The question will probably be specific to our concerns in Hingham.

Selectmen from Scituate, Norwell and Weymouth supported language that simply asks whether residents favor restoration of the Greenbush line along the existing right of way.

Hingham officials and residents have been outspoken in their opposition to the Greenbush restoration because of fears of environmental impact on the historic district. The existing right of way passes through the center of Hingham and in extremely close proximity to homes of historic significance.

Hingham's vocal opposition triggered additional environmental studies that will not be completed until after construction has begun on the Plymouth and Middleborough lines of the Old Colony restoration.

"Our concerns are serious enough to be federally mandated," English told representatives from Scituate, Cohasset, Norwell and Weymouth.

English said the town also questions the financial underpinning for the project.

Environmental and financial concerns led Cohasset to amend the basic question to read "Do you favor restoration of the Greenbush branch of the Old Colony railroad on a basis that is environmentally sound and on a basis that, in the aggregate, costs not covered by fares would be paid for by some form of taxation?"

Cohasset selectmen Ned Tebbetts said he offered the amendment to make sure that taxpayers had the kind of information they need in order to make an informed decision.

Tebbetts said financing of public transportation is not well understood by most people. He added that the MBTA is heavily subsidized by state and local communities.

State Rep. Frank Hynes, D-Marshfield, and state Sen. William Golden, D-Weymouth, argued the amendment is unnecessary.

"There is no public transit system that does not get some form of subsidy," Hynes said.

Tebbetts' fellow selectman, Martha Gjesteby, added that it was not possible to have public transit without subsidies. Gjesteby is Cohasset's representative to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council.

Given the growing gridlock on traffic heading into Boston from the South Shore, Gjesteby worried that failure to develop adequate public transit would isolate the region more and more.

Hynes and Golden argued that the simple language of the ballot question did not preclude vigorous local education and debate on the issues.

"If you're opposed to the restoration, fight it like hell, defeat it in your town and that will send a message," Golden said. "It's time to call the question."

AROUND TOWN

❑ Time for a birthday wish so here we go . . . A very happy birthday goes to Kara Manion, have a great one!

❑ Tom Wigmore has earned a round of applause from us this week! As most people know, Tom works for the state, MDPW-district 7. He earned a certificate of recognition for his dedication and conscientiousness displayed during the past year, and it was his hard work that earned him this honor.

Tom was recognized by his supervisor or co-worker as "an outstanding employee and because he is helping to achieve the highest goals of state service." Tom's hard work has "maintained the high degree of professionalism which the Department prides itself on in serving the citizens of the Commonwealth."

Congratulations Tom, we are all proud of you and your efforts.

❑ Most people are aware of the Student Council Store that they run at the high school . . . they do a super job, and supply the students with many "extra needs" that they may want or need. Well, they need your help if you can give it to them. Their refrigerator conked out last week, and they really need one to help keep their store going. If you have an old one that you can donate to them, please call the high school at 383-6100. They will be more than happy to take it off your hands, and will transport it to the school.

❑ Hats off to the PSO and John Kinchla, their Christmas tree venture was a resounding success. Everyone who purchased their tree through this fundraiser was thrilled with them! The only unhappy people were those who saw how lovely the trees were, and didn't take advantage of the sale. Be sure to take advantage of the sale next year, it isn't only the PSO that benefits, you'll get a great tree. We sure are happy to report that everything went so smoothly, the only bad thing about the day was that it poured.

Paulina Rosanno who works at Cohasset Colonial Pharmacy stands in the rain Saturday to decorate the Christmas tree for the merchants holiday celebration. Rain dampened the turnout.

❑ Congratulations to Norman and Carolyn Swain on the birth of their daughter who was born on Dec. 3. We are happy to report that all is well, and that Danielle is especially happy to have a baby sister. Happy holidays to you all, they surely will be fun and busy.

❑ How about that Steve Myers. Steve, the son of Dotty and Tom Myers, is really making a name for himself in the swimming world. In a recent swimming meet against Springfield College, Steve, a junior at U-Mass Amherst took second place in both the one and three meter diving competition. Last week, against Brown University, Steve took first place in both the one and three meter events. Steve, his family believes, got most of his early training on the Border Street Bridge. Keep up the good work Steve, we are all proud of you and your swimming prowess.

❑ It is time to wish another Pompeo a happy birthday, this time it is Holly. Holly is spending this semester in Spain, but she will be home in time for Christmas. Anyway, she'll certainly have a memorable 21st birthday in Spain, wish we could all be there to celebrate it with you Holly.

❑ Happy birthday greetings to Dorothy Bates, who is at home to celebrate it. Her big day is the 12th, and we hope it is a very happy one.

❑ This week begins the star of winter sports for CHS, be sure that you get involved. Everyone has a favorite sport, go to a game or two and cheer our girls and boys on to victory. There are a lot of promising teams this season, and your cheering will make them even better. Have fun.

❑ The football team received sad news last week, when Coach Phil Pisano announced his retirement from his position as head coach. Coach "P" has been part of the football program for many years, and he certainly will be missed. Those are big shoes to fill, Phil was respected and loved by his players and their families. We wish you well Phil.

❑ That's the news from here, be sure to remember to call with your event.

Drop-in center given a deadline

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

Selectmen gave proponents of a drop-in youth center in the Bates Building two months to line up the financing to renovate and operate a center.

At the present time, the fire department is using the building while renovations are being made at the fire station across the street. Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle estimated the fire department would be using the building for at least two or three months.

"But we would like to make a decision on what direction to go before the fire department moves out," Selectman Diana Kornet said.

Selectmen have been debating the fate of the building ever since the town vacated it after completing the addition to town hall.

Options for the building include selling the building at fair market value, turning it over for conversion into two units of affordable housing or maintaining it as town property for use by town departments and non-profit groups like the Rotary Club and Veterans of Foreign Wars. The selectmen are split on the fate of the building.

Keith Knowles, chairman of the drug and alcohol committee, proposed the drop-in center as a way of meeting a long-standing need among town youth.

Knowles said a center for teenagers to "hang out" has been needed for the past 20 years and would continue to be a need for at least the next 20 years.

Knowles showed the selectmen a stack of 600 questionnaires filled out by students at the junior/senior high school. The students overwhelmingly supported the project with the exception of some seniors, he said.

Knowles hopes the town will donate the building or turn it over for a nominal sum.

"The location is ideal and so is the size," he said.

Although Knowles has been working closely with recreation director Jack Worley on the proposal, he has come to the conclusion that the program is better off incorporating as a separate entity.

Although there are some advantages to running the teen center as an adjunct to the recreation department, Knowles said they are offset by the ability to accept grants from foundations and conduct fund-raising campaigns.

Preliminary studies indicate it will take approximately $15,000 to renovate and equip the building. Knowles is assuming a heavy contribution of labor and materials.

"I get the sense of a lot of support for this from senior members of the community right down to the kids," he said.

Knowles estimated it would take another $25,000 to run the program. Worley told him he could save money and have more dependable coverage by splitting the salary among four or five college interns, perhaps from one of Northeastern's co-op programs.

Knowles wants to raise the start-up money before undertaking the renovations.

He has reason for some optimism about raising funds locally.

Following articles in the local newspapers, Knowles said he received many calls of support. Some even offered contributions.

"My hope was for one individual to come forward," he said. He still thinks it is possible to find a Christmas angel, perhaps in the form of a memorial bequest.

Selectman Jane Goedecke promised selectmen would do their part by providing Knowles with detailed information about the limitations and guidelines on town support for a youth center. Knowles was particularly interested in liability insurance coverage as well as maintenance and repairs on the building.

Knowles expects to complete his feasibility and financing explorations by mid-January.

Town war dead honored at last

We want to commend the Veterans of Foreign Wars for their decision to finance a special honor roll for the town's war dead at the harbor.

We also appreciate the proposal put forward by Austin Ahearn that the project stop with the Vietnam War.

We endorse the ending of warfare. We hope national and international leaders will accept the plan.

Fortunately, selectmen endorsed the proposal without dissent or debate.

While the VFW plan for the granite and bronze plaques would cover the names of the town's war dead from the Revolutionary War through Vietnam, the Sons of the American are continuing their plan to restore the temporary honor roll at the harbor that dates back to 1919.

Ahearn has promised the honor rolls will be accurate despite the difficulty of dealing with the federal government. Apparently the problem is that records for the dead of both the Korean and Vietnam wars are less than complete.

The names of the war dead for both those wars are known. But records were not kept to record the towns.

We are sure the townspeople can help provide the historical material needed to develop this list. We are sure the memories of the dead of the Korean and Vietnam War have not been erased by the passing of years.

Life support shown

This week we have another commendation to award — this time to the Cohasset firefighters. All but two have successfully completed a course to provide defribrillator training to go along with their basic medical knowledge as Emergency Medical Technicians, EMTs.

It's reassuring to know that the men on the town ambulance have the skill and the equipment to provide some advanced life support services.

Fire Chief Daniel Brock said the training is complete for all but two of the firefighters assigned to his department.

The piece of equipment, designed for use by EMTs rather than paramedics, simplifies the procedure through computerization.

The defibrillator has been on-line since Oct. 1 and in that time it has already been used twice.

We're glad to know the fire department is working to bring the most modern methods to its work.

Happy Holidays

COA looks for increased focus on elderly

Letters

To the Editor:

At a time when this country is experiencing economic difficulties, we have just witnessed one of the most expensive political campaigns in history. Candidates spent millions of dollars to get elected to a single office, while thousands of citizens are searching for the bare essentials — food and shelter. So, we wonder whether our priorities are in order. It is sometimes difficult for us in Cohasset to understand poverty. We are inclined to take a dim view of those who cannot participate in the social activities and style of living we are accustomed to in a town such as ours.

Make no mistake, a number of people in Cohasset are feeling the sting of the present economic squeeze and others who are very concerned about their security for the future. Businesses already experiencing declines, are expected to contribute more generously to various charities and fundraising projects.

Soon the town department heads will be summoned before the advisory board for instructions on preparing their budgets for the 1992 Fiscal Year. These instructions, which will include the usual warning of the financial circumstances of the town, will be followed by most department heads. While close scrutiny of all budgets is necessary, voters should not be blind to the need for growth in some areas.

Twenty-five years ago, the federal government sounded the warning that this country should update its planning and focus more on the needs and problems of the elderly. Evidence already exists that the elderly are living longer, and bulging birth rates of the 1940's and 1950's will soon be showing up in our senior population. Currently, there are more than — 200 — more seniors in Cohasset than in the entire school system. The Cohasset Council on Aging has in place right now the programs and services that can accommodate this influx of new seniors. We hope that the townspeople will endorse our efforts to provide adequate service to our seniors by supporting our budget for the coming year.

My best wishes and thanks to our many volunteers and all our seniors for a happy and blessed holiday season.

Gerard Keating, Chairman
Council on Aging

Lung disease causes preventable deaths

To the Editor:

It's time for all of us to take lung disease more seriously.

The third-leading cause of death in the United States - lung disease, including lung cancer - is also one of the most preventable. The great maestro Leonard Bernstein may have blessed us with his wonderful music for many more years, if his life had not been cut short by emphysema and lung cancer, related to his heavy smoking.

Disturbing statistics indicate that every year more people die of lung disease, including lung cancer, than cocaine, heroin, alcohol abuse, suicide, auto accidents, homicide and AIDS combined. Yet, 49 million Americans continue to smoke, thousands of our senior citizens are not immunized against the health threatening effects of flu and pneumonia, and more and more children and adults are dying needlessly from asthma.

The mission of the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association is the conquest of lung disease and the promotion of lung health, but we cannot do it alone. Many of the lung disease related deaths in our community can be prevented through widespread public education. We need more people to quit smoking, to have our high risk population immunized against flue and pneumonia, and to help those with asthma learn how to successfully manage this disease.

People in our community should take preventative measures against lung disease today, before it affects them or someone in their family.

Pamphlets offer help with the winter's chill

By Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray
Special to the Mariner

This winter promises to be a hard one for many families in the community. Falling temperatures and rising fuel costs may leave many in the cold. However, help is available.

I am making available to all citizens of the district a pamphlet regarding fuel assistance and weatherization programs in the Commonwealth. The pamphlet is distributed by the Citizens Energy Corporation, a non-profit organization working with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Fuel Assistance Program. Detailing eligibility and other factors involved in the granting of fuel assistance, the pamphlet tells how the program works and gives numbers of who to call in your area. The pamphlet gives information of other programs that may provide additional assistance beyond fuel assistance and programs regarding weatherization in the home and how to increase the efficiency of your oil burner. Also provided by the pamphlet are helpful hints on how to save energy within the home and how to make for a more efficient household.

These pamphlets will be available at the libraries within the district, Cohasset, Hingham and Hull.

The cold weather is here, and I urge anyone in the district needing help to pick up a copy of this pamphlet. Help is available. Best wishes for a warm and healthy winter.

In spite of selectmen's concern about the ducks in the Common pond, a few neighbors actually appreciate them.

Holiday cheer without any punch

By Ruthann S. Turner
Special to the Mariner

Although the number of Americans killed in alcohol-related crashes has declined from 46 percent in 1982 to 39 percent in 1989, still half of all holiday traffic fatalities are alcohol-related. The American Automobile Association, in launching its "First A Friend – Then A Host" campaign, stresses the importance the party host plays in keeping intoxicated motorists off the highways.

"AAA believes responsible hospitality includes insuring that all party-goers are able to function competently as motorists after the party ends," said T.J. Andre, AAA staff director of public and government affairs. "Those who entertain in their homes do not have the experience or the formal training to professionally monitor or control excessive drinking. We believe that the host is responsible – certainly as a friend – to discourage excessive drinking by all guests."

The "First A Friend – Then A Host" campaign approaches the problems through the hosts, since it is they who provide the drinks. Those planning holiday parties can help keep their guests from becoming a statistic by following some basic guidelines:

• If alcoholic drinks are going to be served, have plenty of non-alcoholic beverages available and "advertise" their availability.

• Never force drinks on guests and watch for those who are overindulging.

• Slow down those who are drinking too much by engaging them in conversation and encouraging them to eat.

• Put away the alcohol early and serve plenty of food, coffee and dessert. Protein-rich and starchy food helps minimize the absorption of alcohol in the bloodstream. Avoid highly seasoned or salty snacks, which stimulate thirst.

• Provide several shot glasses around the bar so that drinks may be carefully measured. Inexpensive one-ounce spouts may also be purchased and placed on bottles. Never offer to mix a "double" or "stiff" drink.

• If you're serving an alcohol punch, make it with a a non-carbonated base such as juice or tea. Alcohol is absorbed by the body much faster when carbonation is present. This pertains to mixed drinks as well.

• Remember that a 12-ounce bottle of beer, a five-ounce glass of wine, and a one and one-half ounce "shot" of liquor (mixed or straight) all "pack the same punch" per drink, as they all contain the same amount of alcohol.

• Many prescription drugs also react adversely when mixed with alcohol. Serve a wide variety of beverages that include soft drinks, coffee, tea, juices and an alcohol-free punch.

• Organize a carpool or arrange for designated drivers. If guests have had too much to drink, offer to drive them home, call for a taxi or have them stay overnight, but do not let friends who are impaired try to drive home.

"AAA believes that the "First A Friend – Then A Host" campaign is an excellent reminder that 'Friends Don't Let Friends Drive Drunk,' " said Andre. "Alcohol is a known factor in one out of every two traffic deaths in the United States. If we can save even one life as the result of this campaign, we will have been successful."

Sen. Bill Golden considers his options

By Marilyn Jackson
Mariner staff

Bill Golden won't say yet what he will do in January after his six-year stay in the state Senate comes to an end.

He's keeping his options open.

An attorney by profession, the Weymouth Democrat points out he hasn't been practicing law for five or six years.

"In 1984 I thought I would be a citizen legislator (representing the Norfolk-Plymouth District) and continue to practice law.

"But I quickly found I could not serve two masters and entered into a buyout agreement with my partners," he said.

Asked whether he had received any requests to join a major law firm, he laughed.

"Let's say I have been flattered with a wide variety of invitations.

"Law is not my only option."

What about politics?

"There's always next season," he quickly replied.

After Golden lost his bid for the lieutenant governorship in the September Democratic primary, he and his wife, Paula, took a long vacation, returning home two weeks ago..

His wife had resigned from the Seat Belt Coalition last winter to devote her time and energy to her husband's campaign. She worked full-time without pay, he said.

"We'll both be looking for jobs," quipped Golden who was sporting a beard but was undecided how long he would keep it.

They traveled 'cross country by car to California to visit her family. On they way home, they stopped at Oberlin College in Ohio, where their son, Brigham, is a senior and captain of the lacrosse team, and at Brown University in Providence, where their daughter, Bethany, is a freshman.

Campaigning for the lieutenant governor's post had been a long ordeal for Golden had announced his candidacy long before Marjorie Clapprood or Nicholas Paleologos were mentioned as contenders.

"I wasn't surprised," he said of his loss. "Whenever you run for a statewide office, it's a long shot, especially if you never have run before.

"And, absolutely, I have no regrets. I'm proud of the incredible work by the staff and the volunteers throughout the state.

"I think I did well the first time out. Both opponents did an excellent job, and she had the best ad of the campaign.

"All three of us worked very hard, but I don't think the electorate knew who we were in any in-depth way."

When Lt. Gov. Evelyn Murphy abruptly pulled out of the gubernatorial race eight days before the primary, Clapprood's popularity skyrocketed as the only woman running for statewide office on either the Republican or Democratic ticket.

One of the newspapers had had Clapprood and Golden separated by a four-point difference, while another said the two were eight points apart, he said.

So when Clapprood's points jumped by 15 just two days after Murphy quit, "I thought the polls were wrong.

"But the next day when they jumped another five points, I knew I was in serious difficulty."

Even though he won't be in public office much longer, Golden will continue to work on several issues near and dear to his heart.

"I'm determined to do everything alive to get the Greenbush line restored," said Golden who recently hosted a meeting at his home for commuter rail proponents.

"All is not bad news," he said, referring to the decision of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority's board of directors to separate the final environmental review of the Greenbush line from the other two Old Colony lines — Plymouth and Middleborough — so that engineering, design and construction can proceed.

The MBTA's consultant, Sverdrup Inc., will conduct an estimated $350,000 study to review alternatives to bring ing the tracks through Hingham's historic district.

"The Greenbush line is not dead and gone away . . . Greenbush is on the right track.

"A few people" — whom he described as "well-meaning individuals with self-interests and an exaggerated fear of the impact" of the train — "are putting up very determined resistance which is adverse to the interest of the general public, which will force delays and additional expenditures . . .

"I am hopeful (the Old Colony) will be restored.

"This project is not going to come around again.

"It's either restore it now or condemn the present citizens of the South Shore and the future citizens of the South Shore to perpetual gridlock adverse to the economic environment.

"Whether I am in the Senate or not . . . I want to make sure the South Shore receives its share of transportation dollars and investment and not be left out as it has been in the past."

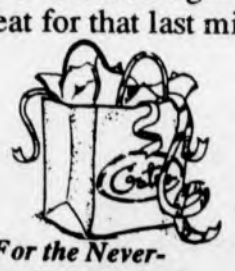
Golden said he would remain involved in safety issues surrounding the Pilgrim nuclear power plant in Plymouth too.

"More and more, there is a clear basis for concerns that many have voiced.

"I continue to have grave concerns that it is unsafe. Its operation exposes the public to health and safety dangers, and we should be seriously consider an immediate shutdown and address the long-term decommissioning of the plant and the continuing problem of disposing of the radioactive waste.

"Every pellet of fuel spent is still on site since the plant first went into operation in 1973, and there is no change in the understanding of how it will be disposed of," he lamented.

In addition to Pilgrim, Golden is concerned about the $ 3 billion court-mandated Boston Harbor cleanup, an 11-year project instigated as the result of his filing a federal lawsuit in 1982 as Quincy solicitor.



"One of the things I am working on right now is trying to reach an agreement with the Massachusetts Water Resources Authority and avoid a lawsuit regarding their rate structure which we contend it illegal," he said.

Golden, along with the National Toxics Campaign, filed a notification of intent to bring suit last summer under the Clean Waters Act, alleging the agency does not adequately charge for the cost of disposal of toxic waste.

"A polluter who dumps a gallon of hydrochloric acid into the drain is charged the same rate as someone who pulls the plug in a sink of a gallon of dishwater.

"It's unfair, and it's illegal. (Without change) we're never going to reduce the levels of toxics in the system to the point where we have sludge suitable for composting or effluent without contaminating the marine environment with deadly chemicals."

A founder of Save the Harbor/Save the Bay, Golden said the work schedule for the Boston Harbor cleanup should be adjusted so that top priority is given to "combined sewer outflows" which occur in some places even when it is not raining.

Outgoing Sen. William Golden

Furthermore, Golden said he fears that the MWRA ultimately will build a sewage treatment system which will continue to harm the environment.

Gov.-elect William Weld has indicated he would consider something less than secondary treatment, a process which would further reduce the amount of contaminants dumped into the ocean.

He charged that the MWRA could spend millions for an outfall pipe and would simply be polluting on a grander scale.

"And, with the economic crisis we are experiencing, every expenditure has to be justified.

"If the MWRA doesn't credibly spend (its funds), there will be a groundswell to reduce the present environmental standards," he asserted.

On Golden's immediate agenda is the Nov. 26 Senate session where the legislators will address the service tax, scheduled to go into effect Dec. 1.

"I'm hopeful it will be repealed," he said. "I've never been a strong supporter of it."

And, he will be working to see his hate crimes reporting bill passed.

This proposal would identify whether a crime was committed because of bigotry and hatred so that legislators in the future would have some statistics to rely on in developing a public policy against such offenses and writing law calling for specific penalties for such crimes.

Meanwhile, he will be meeting with his successor, 29-year-old Republican newcomer Bob Hedlund, also from Weymouth.

"I'll clearly indicate my concerns and priorities to him which may be very different . . . 180 degrees different . . . and make an effort to explain (my priorities).

"It's enormously important, especially during this very difficult period for the state, to have cooperation, not confrontation, on all levels of government.

"There must be cooperation between the public and the private sector and between state and local government.

"Government needs to listen carefully to the electorate and engage the electorate in dialogue . . . It's not enough to turn with the winds of public opinion.

"Government has not done well to respond. There has been a tremendous arrogance."

Since the primary and the general election, Golden has been winding down.

"It's very nice to wake up and have a cup of coffee with my wife and have part of the day for myself and family."

He said he owes his family some time.

"I remember we were going to celebrate our 20th wedding anniversary with a trip to the Virgin Islands and leave on a Thursday morning when the Senate president announced there would be a session Thursday, Friday, Monday and Tuesday.

"I had never been to the Caribbean, but I cancelled the trip at great expense. We lost the deposits.

"That Thursday we didn't take a single vote, and the president announced that the Friday session would be cancelled. Then on Friday, he announced the Monday session would be cancelled, and on Monday, the Tuesday session was cancelled."

That was more than two-and-a-half years ago, so maybe it's time for that trip to the Caribbean, he mused.

Sandblom gets on team

Peter Sandblom, a junior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, was a member of the 1990 White Mules football team this fall. The team, finishing the season with a 3-5 record, captured its third consecutive Colby-Bates-Bowdoin championship.

Sandblom, a graduate of Cohasset High School, saw both defensive and special teams action this season. He punted 56 times for 1,821 yards, performed the kickoff duties for the team and kicked two field goals of 29 and 40 yards. He also had a total of 33 tackles, one interception, one forced fumble, and one blocked field goal for the defense.

Sandblom, a history major, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Sandblom of Cohasset.

Hartwell captains at Colby

Jeff Hartwell, a senior at Colby College in Waterville, Maine, captained the varsity golf team and helped them win the CBB championship this year. The team was also successful at the Bowdoin Invitational, winning a sudden death victory.

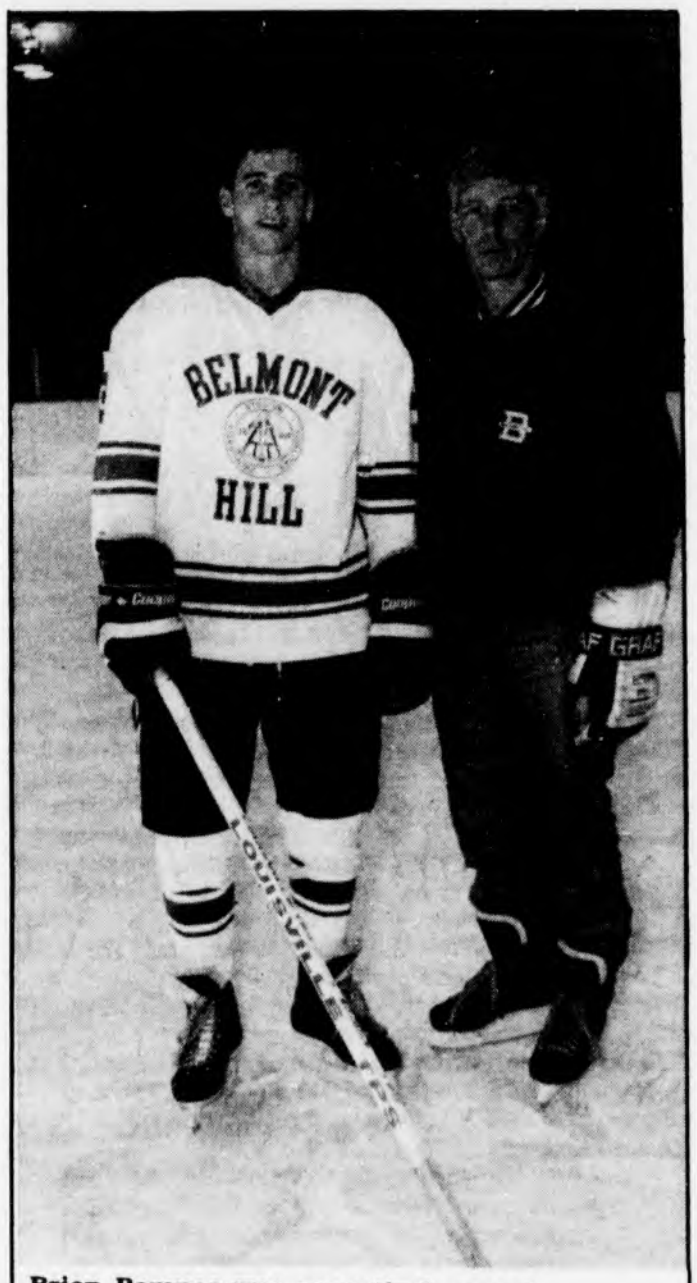
Hartwell, a Cohasset native and a graduate of Cohasset High School, played in the number one spot for the White Mules and showed excellent leadership qualities throughout the season.

Hartwell, an economics and government major, is the son of Mary Hartwell of Cohasset.

Froio has 52 tackles

Paul Froio, a sophomore at Colby College in Waterville, Maine was a member of the 1990 White Mules football team this fall. The team, finishing the season with a 3 5 record, captured its third consecutive Colby-Bates-Bowdoin championship.

Froio, a graduate of Cohasset High School, had a total of 52 tackles for the White Mules defense.



Froio, an undeclared major, is the son of Agnes Froio of Cohasset and Dr. Ralph Froio.

Taxpayers attack assesing

"We want to bring the town to a position where they must negotiate," Quelle told the crowd.

The appeal filed by the Concerned Citizens focuses on the revaluation as a whole rather than individual properties.

Quelle analyzed the revaluation street-by-street and came to the conclusion that the appraisers disproportionately increased values on land in the waterfront areas while reducing assessments on commercial properties.

One example Quelle cited involved the sale of Hugo's restaurant to Chart House. According to Hugo, the restaurant was valued at $2.3 million, but sold for $2.68 million.

Although townwide increases averaged 60 percent, Quelle said commercial property, as a group, had increases 10 to 20 percent lower than residential property.

Quelle contends the extra tax dollars being paid by the hard-hit property owners along the waterfront neighborhoods are going to benefit businesses in Cohasset.

"The tax bills dropped for all businesses," he said.

The taxpayers group argues property in all areas of town should not have increased in value more than the 60 percent median increase reflected by actual sales on a community-wide basis.

Quelle's analysis revealed that average property assessments on Nichols Road, Beach Street, Atlantic Avenue, Joy Place, Gammons Road and the section of Jerusalem Road between Main Street and Forest Avenue increased between 72 and 97 percent.

Along the remainder of Jerusalem Road, property assessments rose 76 percent over the 1986 assessments. Pond Street also suffered a disproportionately high assessment, he said.

The disgruntled taxpayers believe they are subsidizing other taxpayers to the tune of $236,000.

Dan Cotton, 27 King Street, asked whether the 1986 valuation was based on fair market values or if the current revaluation was an attempt to redress prior inequities.

"Does the tide rise at the same rate all over town," he asked, "or are the waterfront properties more valuable than moderate-priced areas?"

The Concerned Citizens responded by saying that sales of properties in the contested areas did not increase above a factor of 1.6.

The fair cash value is not at the core of their legal argument, they said. They are focusing on the disproportionate nature of the assessments.

Advisory Committee Chairman Arne Gjesteby asked what the impact would be on the town budget if everyone who was over-assessed wins.

If the court orders abatements, the town has to pay them whether enough money has been set aside for that purpose or not, according to Weltman.

Gjesteby worried about the consequences whether Cohasset chose to cut the budget or borrow the money to pay the abatements.

"It all comes from the taxpayers," he said.

Residents who believe their property was disproportionately or incorrectly valued must file for an abatement. The forms are available at town hall and through the Concerned Citizens group.

Property owners claiming a disproportionate assessment can use a "Rider A" form prepared by the Concerned Citizens' attorney. All other information required on the application is contained on the tax bill.

Weltman explained that the form must be turned in, along with the first-half payment of the property taxes on or before 4:30 p.m. Dec. 18.

Weltman cautioned would be applicants that a postmark date was unacceptable. He urged property-owners to make their payments by hand.

Taxpayers should give the town clerk two copies of the abatement application and have them date-stamped by the clerk.

"The assessors have three months to act on it," he said.

If the assessors deny the request for abatement or fail to make a decision within three months of the date the taxes were paid, the property owner can file with the Appellate Tax Board in Boston.

"Then you sit around and wait for a trial date," Weltman said.

Weltman thinks the case is unlikely to go all the way to court.

"The assessors will see the light," he said.

Graham retires ...

Chairman James Lagrotteria thanked Graham for her many years of service.

"On behalf of the board of assessors we thank you for your dedicated service. We are behind you 100 percent. Thank you for your years of support"

He promised he would help make Graham's retirement "happy and fun filled."

"We haven't heard the last of this," he told her. "You have nothing to be ashamed of. You have certainly given more than was ever asked of you over all these years."

Lagrotteria said he would ask the personnel board to consider hiring a temporary secretary to start immediately upon Graham's retirement.

He said the board already has more than 130 requests for abatements and exemptions. The deadline for filing requests for abatements is Dec. 18; the board then has 90 days to act on those requests.

"(The state mandated deadline) doesn't give us a lot of time to look for a replacement," Lagrotteria said.

He said immediate temporary help would keep the board from becoming overwhelmed by abatement requests.

"Rather than take the first person through the door or not look closely at the abatements, we should hire an experienced temporary person and concentrate on hiring a replacement once we are out of the crunch of abatements," he said.

"There is no time limit for replacing Dot, but there is a definite limit by state statute on acting on abatements. I don't think I know any other solution."

Slow Drains?

You'll never have a slow running, or clogged drain again!

The secret? Clean drains don't run slow. Slow drains, or periodic clogs, are signals that a thick layer of "gook" is choking your pipes. This gook coats the entire length of your pipe- from sink to sewer, or septic.

Conventional drain openers cannot remove this build up. Even a small tunnel through the waste lets them flow through the pipe, leaving the gook behind!

Now, with just a few minutes each month, you can easily clean out your pipes like new... and KEEP them clean with Plumb Clean. Its totally unique formula clings, and penetrates deep into the gook. That allows it to liquefy even years of build up. Plumb Clean will clean the entire length of your pipes. It will make your drains run like new, when used as directed. This penetrating action is so revolutionary, Plumb Clean is money-back guaranteed!

Save Money. A 1 lb. container of Plumb Clean holds up to 41 drain treatments. Even if drain openers could fix slow drains, you would have to buy over 10 quart bottles to get the same number of treatments. Plumb Clean costs about 35¢ per treatment. We don't know of anything that cleans drains for less.

Safety. Conventional drain openers are dangerous chemicals. They can injure eyes on contact. They can release deadly vapors, in some situations. Some, may damage your fixtures. Plumb Clean will not burn skin, or eyes. It will not release harmful fumes. When used as directed, it is 100% safe for people, and of course for all plumbing.

So, if your drains are signalling you, get safe, guaranteed Plumb Clean today! Available at:

Recreation commission reports on its year

It is with distinct pleasure that the report of your recreation commission is submitted, as we enter our fifteenth year of full-time operation and service to our community.

During the last financial year, Fiscal Year 1990, (July 1, 1989 through June 30) the recreation commission served 6,128 individuals with a wide spectrum of services designed for all aged residents. Most services are now provided via 100 percent financially, self-supporting systems, reflecting no direct costs to taxpayers. At this juncture only four children's/youth programs are conducted with budgeted monies, all other services must generate 100 percent of the associated costs of any given service.

While approximately $20,000 of budget money was expended for the operation of the four programs and issuance of beach stickers, those activities generated $45,274.25 for the General Fund only. General Fund revenues are important to all residents, as those monies are collectively applied towards offsetting the tax rate the following Fiscal Year. To allow for a more finite perspective, the F.Y. 1990 recreation budget of $60,349.30, generated a total cash flow of $89,422.25, of which $45,274.25 went to the General Fund, hence, back to taxpayers. Further, for the $15,015 budget replacement deficit, over $200,000 worth of services were provided for residents. The $15,015 deficit, the difference between the recreation budget and revenue deposited in the General Fund only, translates thusly: The F.Y. 1990 tax rate was $9.60, accounting for a total tax levy of $9,123,493.44. $15,000 is .16 percent of the tax rate, making our cost one penny and one half cent (1.5¢ cash cost to each taxpayer). Naturally, we are pleased with our low financial impact upon taxpayers and high yield of services ratio, however, especially impressive, are the reasons that have manifested this situation, which remain particularly satisfying. Community interest, participation and support, are the three factors dictating the ratio of service vs. cost, as it has been via community participation that these equations exist year after year.

Participation comes in many forms aside from just activity attendance levels. While the level of program/activity participation remains exceptionally high, it has been participation in other areas, that remains impressive and vital. Volunteerism, indicative of a number of community attributes, continues to be extremely high level, allowing for many far-reaching, acute impacts regarding our services, certainly, but also impacting the general quality of life in our community. Volunteers offer not only time, but specific levels of expertise and efforts, that could not otherwise be provided for. This sort of participation denotes interest and support, as much as any other form of participation. Extraordinary, are the numbers of residents, both adult and youth, who give freely of their services.

Especially during the past three years, a remarkable level of support and interest has been provided via still another means of participation. That is donation and gift. Currently, the recreation commission can offer some events/activities only because of private donations, supporting specific services. Summer band concerts, for one example, have been financially accommodated for, for the past two years, through the generosity of the South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., coupled with a matching grant from the American Federation of Musicians. The Annual Easter Egg Hunt, for another example, is sponsored fully by numerous donations from residents, civic and business organizations and business establishments of Cohasset and volunteer help.

Philosophically, the recreation commission wrestles constantly with the conflicts that can manifest between the concepts of 100 percent financial self-support and equal access of all residents, to all services, at all times. It is the role and duty of public recreation, to insure equal and universal access of residents to all leisure and associated services. To account for accessibility of this degree and magnitude, it remains essential to keep per capita fee charges as low as possible on one hand, while retaining the capability of reducing, or waiving fee charges upon request, on the other hand. Allowing for this fundamental, philosophical condition, can generally cause conflicts with the concepts and abilities encountered with achievement of absolute financial independence. The recreation commission expends much effort towards these considerations and insurance on behalf of the best interests of all residents.

The recreation commission has apparatus, areas and facilities to oversee and maintain, with little to no means to support this function. It has been through the continued auspicious of numerous town departments and organizations that repair and maintenance can be facilitated. We are especially grateful and indebted to the Tree, Park and Cemetery, Highway, Wire and School Departments for their continued efforts on our behalf and on behalf of residents. Our capability to purchase or lease both either equipment/supplies/materials, or facilities, is extremely restricted and it has been via the continued cooperation of the School Department, Cohasset Soccer Club and Cohasset Basketball Boosters Club that we have been able to provide well beyond the level depicted by our financial ability. It has been because of coordinated and cooperative efforts of numerous organizations, town departments, and residents that much can be accounted for.

Volunteerism begins at the top and the seven-member, elected recreation commission volunteer their time, effort and expertise as well. The focus of concern of the commission is serving the best interests of all residents. From this one, basic premise, all matters are deliberated and policies established. Recreation commission meetings are held at least once monthly, posted 10 days prior to the meeting date whenever possible and all meetings are open to the public. An invitation, universally exists, to residents, or groups of residents who might wish to attend any meeting. It is through direct input, feedback and community involvement that we are best able to serve.

Cohasset Agrees CARE to Recycle Everything

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

"Prepare ye the way of the Lord." That's what I sing as I clean, cook, and shop during this busy holiday season. I tend to lose sight of what I'm doing and why I'm doing it. I find singing this song works best when done at the top of my lungs as we did during "Godspell" at Cohasset High.

I was halfway through washing my kitchen floor with vinegar and water (this is my new discovery given to me by a reader, and it works better than any soap that I have ever used). I stopped for a minute. This silence caused quite a stir with the children and pets who were looking at me from the window. They had been shipped out to play so I could clean. "Prepare ye the way of the Lord.' What does that really mean?" I wondered. "How do we do that? Hmmmm, I guess the only way to do it is one step at a time."

Think what our community has done to trash for example. It's nothing short of a miracle. We passed mandatory recycling. We turned our trash into cash, through avoiding the cost of disposal and getting a small return on many of our items. Many of you have taken advantage of this column's trash reduction tips and non-toxic alternatives. We have changed the way we shop to change the way we dump. This is evident at the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF). It is taking just a little longer to fill the trash trailer than it used to.

Our trash responsibility starts at home and work, but it doesn't end there. The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has a new ad campaign on the MBTA asking us to report illegal dumping. "Toxic waste kills. So if you know a company that pollutes our environment call us," the advertisement tells us and urges, "Go ahead, report the Scum."

By calling 556-1000, you will reach the Environmental Strike Force. This agency, started in May 1989, brings together police, the Attorney General's office, and the DEP to investigate and to prosecute major environmental criminals. You may call anonymously or give your name and number. All calls are followed up. If it's a small, isolated case, the information is given to the local Board of Health or Conservation Commission. If it's a big case, the Strike Force handles it.

"If it's a big case, we go undercover," said Anne Kelly, director of the Strike Force unit of the DEP and the Attorney General's office. "The more information you can give us the better. Don't be vague," she urges. "It's just like reporting any other crime: Who?, What?, When? Where?, How much?, phone numbers, and names."

When enough information has been gathered, the case ends in a civil action or a criminal action. The ad campaign on the MBTA, for example, was a result of a $35,000 fine levied against that authority for illegally discharging oil-contaminated water into Town Brook and Black's Creek in Quincy.

The state Strike Force was started to bring together agencies that formerly worked separately on the same issues. The Strike Force is highly trained.

"Somerville thought so much of this idea," said Kelly, "that they started their own strike force. I recommend that for all localities."

Bank supports community

Bank of Boston officially opened a new branch Dec. 5, at 380 Chief Justice Cushing Highway. To celebrate its move into the community, Bank of Boston presented the Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field with a $5,000 contribution to kickoff their fundraising campaign.

The Friends of Milliken-Lillard Field is an organization of individuals and businesses who are working to develop three new all-purpose playing fields adjacent to the present facilities located behind Cohasset High School. By increasing the number of playing fields, the community will service the hundreds of Cohasset youth participating in soccer, field hockey and other field sports.

Other RR lines gain steam

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

On Dec. 15 the MBTA will host a preview of the planned Middleboro and Plymouth lines of the Old Colony restoration.

Governor Michael Dukakis and invited guests will tour the two lines, which are currently undergoing final reviews.

MBTA officials recently separated the two lines from the controversial Greenbush line of the restoration project so they would not be affected by lengthy environmental reviews that line will undergo.

Meanwhile, members of Back On Track, a pro-rail organization that has championed the return of commuter rail service are buoyed by recent endorsements of the proposed Old Colony restoration.

According to member William Grimes, the group solicited and won rail endorsements from the Sierra Club, the American Automobile Association, and Greenpeace.

He said each of the three groups have sent recommendations to Environmental Affairs Secretary John DeVillars calling restoration of rail service "an environmentally sound alternative to increasingly congested roadways."

In a letter to Grimes, Blossom Hoag of the Sierra Club said on Nov. 15 the executive committee of the Greater Boston Group voted to support all three Old Colony lines.

She wrote that the recommendation is "consistent with national Sierra Club transportation policy which calls for the revitalization and modernization of rail passenger service."

"We wish your group success in reestablishing commuter rail service along the South Shore," she wrote.

Mark Sommer, an atmosphere and energy campaigner for Greenpeace, wrote that he was "anxious to add" his organization to the list of Greenpeace supporters.

"The alarming scientific consensus on the escalation of global warming, and the present tinderbox in the Persian Gulf underscore the urgency for utilizing transportation alternatives to the automobile," he wrote.

He said the restoration would decrease dependence on fossil fuels and reduce the emission of pollutants.

"I would also urge you to specifically restore rail service along the Greenbush line," he wrote.

"This line was once the most travelled of the Old Colony lines, with close to 4,000 people taking the train on a daily basis before it was shut down. The population of the South Shore has tripled since then, and given the steep increase in gasoline prices and the rise in traffic congestion, there is ever reason to believe the ridership is there.

"It would be a shame if the state chose not to take advantage of the opportunity to restore the Greenbush line as well as the other Old Colony lines."

Dwight Conant, general manager of the American Automobile Association, told DeVillars his organization supports all three lines of the Old Colony Railroad.

"With the Central Artery project moving close to the construction phase it is more important than ever to get moving on projects to provide for alternative modes of transportation into and out of Boston," he wrote.

Grimes said his group, pleased by the endorsements, is now seeking recommendations from other environmental and historic preservation agencies.

He said the endorsements show that rail service is needed for the South Shore despite local objections he dismissed as motivated by "money."

He said opponents have hid behind environmental complaints and these new endorsements will bring the real issues into the open.

"Some of (the opponent's) points deserve consideration, but many are off-the-wall," he said.

"This idea of using environmental issues to support selfish interests I find very offensive. There is simply not much to it. The Gulf crisis has brought us to our senses again that we need solid mass transit."

Opponents of the rail project have collected endorsements from the Conservation Law Foundation and The National Trust for Historic Preservation.

BULLETIN BOARD

Auditions for spring show

Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions for "Cheaper by the Dozen," a dramatization by Christopher Sergel of Frank and Ernestine Gilbreth's book of recollections of their famous father and mother raising their brood in the 1920s.

Roles for five adults, ages 3 to 50, and 11 children, ages 5 to 17, are available. Auditions will be held Sunday, Jan. 6 at 2 p.m. and Monday, Jan. 7 at 7 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Show dates are March 8, 9 and 10. Scripts may be checked out at Paul Pratt Library in Cohasset.

Holiday program plans

The Cohasset Recreation Department will offer a school, holiday vacation program at Deer Hill School, for children aged 3-12, on Monday, Dec. 24, and again from Wednesday, Dec. 26 through Friday, Dec. 28. This year, a program will be offered the day prior to Christmas as a convenience to both children and parents.

This program must be conducted via the Recreation Revolving Account Fund for 100 percent Self-Supporting Services, as no budget money exists for this program. The per capita fee charge is $50 for the first child and $40 for all subsequent children in a family, for the four-day program that will meet from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Checks must be made payable to the town of Cohasset, and you may register by calling the recreation department office at 383-6791, prior to Wednesday, Dec. 19. Per day charge, per child, is $15.

Included in the program content will be low-organized games, team sports, arts and craft projects, movies, library trip, tournaments and competitions, bowling, outdoor activities should weather permit and a pizza party finale on Friday. Ted Carroll will coordinate this program. Early registration is advised, as space will be limited.

CCC holds registration

The Cohasset Community Center is conducting registration for the Winter Session. Courses and workshops for all ages — young children to adults are available. Here's your chance to do away with the winter doldrums for the entire family.

For Youth and Teens

Youth and teens can keep themselves busy throughout the winter months with the diverse courses and workshops available to them at the Center.

Jan. 23: A Babysitting Course will be taught by RN Linda Farrag commencing on the 23rd for a four-week period. Children aged ten and over are eligible for enrollment. This course will teach the babysitter many safety, practical and entertaining tips to make his/her job more effective. The class meets on Wednesday afternoons from 3:30 to 5 p.m.

Dec. 5: International Cooking with Ann Gallagher for children ages 7 through 12 will be offered for the winter session. Children will learn how to prepare their favorite dishes from many countries. The class will meet for 10 weeks on Thursdays from 4 to 5:30 p.m.

Jan. 28: Spanish for Kids, taught by Marilyn Sandonato for ages 6-10 will begin Jan. 28 for an eight week session. Children will learn the rudiments of conversation and begin naming things in Spanish to build vocabulary. The class will meet on Monday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m.

Jan. 28: Nature Nuts — an exploration of nature through discovery, exploration and observation of nature through hands-on investigation will meet on Thursday afternoons from 4 to 5 p.m. This is a ten-week course.

Jan. 11: A Teen Dance is held on the second Friday of each month. The next dance is scheduled for Friday Night, Jan. 11 from 7:30 to 10:30.

'Cheaper by the dozen'

Cohasset Dramatic Club will hold auditions for "Cheaper By the Dozen," a dramatization by Christopher Sergel of Frank and Ernestine Gilbreth's book of recollections of their famous father and mother raising their brood in the 1920s. Roles for five adults, ages 30-50, and eleven children, ages 5-17. Auditions Sunday, Jan. 6, 2 p.m. and Monday, Jan. 7, 7 p.m. at the Cohasset Town Hall.

Show dates are March 8, 9, 10. Scripts may be checked out at Paul Pratt Library, Cohasset.

New courses at the CCC

The Cohasset Community Center will keep your children busy for the winter months with many interesting courses.

A gymnastics sleepover for girls with Ruthann Sargent will begin the activities during Christmas vacation. Girls ages 7-12 can join their friends for a night of fun "camping in" in the Community Center with Ruthann. The girls will enjoy gymnastics, bowling, contests with prizes, videos, making popcorn, and bedtime stories. Doughnuts and juice are served in the morning for breakfast. Space is limited.

Kodaly Music classes with Lynne Ingraham will start up again. The classes offer musical experiences which are exciting, challenging and fun, while providing children with the tools to create their own music. Classes begin the week of Jan. 14 and meet on Tuesday and Friday mornings.

For Kids Only Playgroup for children ages two years nine months to 4 years with Ann Gallagher will begin on Jan. 7. Children who can function comfortably in a playgroup without a parent present will enjoy all the fun. Class size is limited to eight children.

Tiny Tot Chef for children ages 3-5 will meet on Wednesday and Thursday mornings for a 10 week session. Taught by Barbara Dadomo and Ann Gallagher, the class for the pre-schoolers will allow them to experiment in the kitchen with simple and nutritious recipes. The classes will start the week of Jan. 9.

Pre-School Science and Nature for children ages 3-5 will also meet on Wednesday and Thursday mornings for a 10 week session. Children will enjoy nature walks on a nice day and work on nature projects and crafts indoors during colder or inclement weather. Classes will start the week of Jan. 9.

Unicorns at First Parish

A vigorous, earthy energy pervades the major new piece entitled "Winterfest" which has been written for the Unicorn Singers by Ray Fahrner, a Boston composer and conductor.

The Singers, directed by Margo Euler, will perform this and several other pieces for chorus and brass quartet, including Daniel Pinkham's much-loved "Christmas Cantata," at their "Winterfest" concerts held at two area churches next weekend: Saturday, Dec. 15, at 8 p.m. at Old Ship Church in Hingham, and Sunday, Dec. 16, at 4 p.m. at First Parish in Cohasset.

This annual musical event is a joyful occasion for all, as many exciting carol arrangements are sung by audience and choir together. Both Unitarian and Universalist parishes are donating all proceeds of these performances to Renewal House, which provides shelter, advocacy and counseling for battered women, rape victims, adolescent mothers, and women who have been evicted from their homes.

Tickets to either performance are $5 and are available by calling the church parish houses (749-1679 for Old Ship; 383-1100 for First Parish in Cohasset).

Alzheimer's group meet

The Alzheimer's Disease Support Group of the South Shore, Inc. (ADSGSS) will hold an open discussion meeting for caregivers and family members on Wednesday, Dec. 28, at 7:30 p.m., at the Hersey House, 229 North Street, Hingham.

The meeting, which is open to the public, will provide an opportunity for participants to share helping and coping strategies for dealing with the problems and challenges of Alzheimer's Disease. Topics may include physical care, safety measures, eating in restaurants, holiday considerations, "sundowning" and creative activities. Participants are encouraged to invite a relative, friend, neighbor or co-worker to join them for an evening of information and support.

MILESTONES & AWARDS

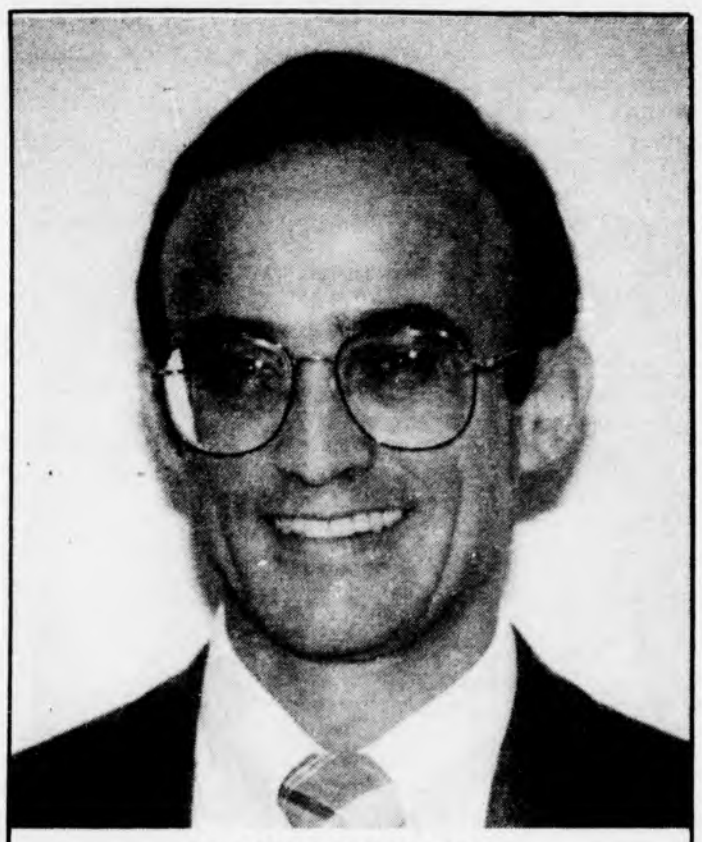
Kern honored as 'hero'

Barbara Kern of Cohasset has been selected as a local hero by the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, "The Healthy Lung People."

She will be honored at a reception at the Pillar House in Newton on December 4. The Pillar House was one of the first restaurants in the country to offer totally smoke-free dining.

"Barbara Kern is a local hero who has devoted extraordinary efforts to protect our environment," said Joe Godzik, president of the Lung Association who recommended her for the honor. Godzik is also the health agent for Cohasset.

Kern's interests are in tackling the problems of pesticides, solid waste, and poisoning from lead paint.



As a volunteer she is working with a group of concerned people to encourage state agencies to issue an environmental impact statement about mosquito control. And she is on the Citizen's Advisory Committee to the state's Pesticide Board. With the state department of public health she is working to write regulations to implement the new state law about preventing poisoning from lead paints. As a volunteer she is also working with the state department of environmental protection to address the problem of solid waste.

A past president and executive director of the Mass. Association of Health Boards, she organized the association as an umbrella group to serve local elected and appointed members of boards of health in the state. She also encouraged boards of health to adapt bylaws to restrict public smoking.

A former chair of the Cohasset Board of Health, she is also a member of the town's committees on watershed protection, hazardous waste, and recycling.

The local hero program of the Lung Association honors people who are committed to protecting our environment and whose efforts promote lung health.

Nominations for local heroes can be sent to the Norfolk County-Newton Lung Association, "The Healthy Lung People," at 25 Spring St., Walpole, 02081.

Dr. Michael Anderson

Anderson joins SSH staff

Cohasset resident Michael Jon Anderson, MD, a specialist in general internal medicine, hematology and oncology, has joined the medical staff at South Shore Hospital in association with Drs. James R. Everett and Albert L. Sullivan.

A board certified physician in all three specialties, Dr. Anderson earned his BA and MD degrees at Yale University. He served his internship and residency in internal medicine and fellowship in hematology and oncology at the U.S. Naval Hospital in San Diego. He also served fellowships in hematology and bone marrow transplantation at Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in La Jolla, California, as well as Brigham and Women's Hospital and Children's Hospital in Boston.

He has taught medicine at Harvard Medical School, Georgetown University School of Medicine, and the Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences of Bethesda, Maryland. For the past two years, Dr. Anderson has served as head of medical oncology at the National Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Maryland and a faculty member of the National Cancer Institute of the National Institutes of Health, also in Bethesda.

Dr. Anderson is a member of the American Society of Clinical Oncology, Christian Medical Society, Washington Blood Club, American Society of Hematology, and a fellow of the American College of Physicians.

He lives in Cohasset with his wife Sheryl and their two children, Thomas and Charles.

O'Flanagan directs League

Margaret O'Flanagan, a graduate of Boston College School of Social Work, has been appointed as the LICSW social worker for the League. O'Flanagan replaces Carolyn Housman.

O'Flanagan has a broad background and experience in all phases of her profession. She will be available as of Dec. 1 to help any age person or organization needing assistance.

Sceery art show opens

Mara H. Sceery of Cohasset will present her own art show as part of the senior requirements for a bachelor of fine arts degree from the New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University.

The daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Robert T. Sceery, Sceery is a graduate of the Commonwealth School in Boston.

The New York State College of Ceramics at Alfred University is a statutory unit of the State University of New York (S.U.N.Y) system. One-third of the actively working ceramic engineers in the United States were educated at the College.

NEW LIEN PROVISION ON ESTATES OF MEDICAID RECIPIENTS

A new law imposes an automatic lien on the estates of all people dying in Massachusetts on or after Jan. 1, 1991, for the amount of any Medicaid coverage received by the decedents after the age of 65. This will greatly increase the state's ability to effect Medicaid estate recovery, which may help the state budget. Unfortunately, the law creates severe problems for people trying to convey real property.

The state has long had the right to recover its medicaid expenses paid out for people 65 and older from their estates. But it has never been very effective in pursuing such recovery. The legislature took a first step towards improving its methods last year by adopting new probate procedures which gave the Department of Public Welfare special notice provisions and its own period in which to bring a claim against the estates of people dying on or after Jan. 1.

This new law (which can be found at M.G.L. Ch. 118E, Sections 16C and 16D) goes a significant step further. It provides the Department of Public Welfare with an automatic lien similar to the estate tax lien. However, this lien is much more complicated because it contains certain exceptions and deferral periods. For instance, payment may be deferred as long as there is a surviving spouse, a child under 21, or a blind and permanently and totally disabled child surviving the decedent. In addition, there will be no lien if the Medicaid recipient had long-term care insurance meeting the requirements of the Massachusetts regulations governing individual policies. Finally, the lien expires 10 years after the date of death or after the end of any deferral period.

No regulations have been issued to date. So it is not at all clear how this provision will operate. Among others, the following questions remain to be answered:

* What comfort will conveyancing attorneys require concerning whether decedents received Medicaid or whether a deferral period existed?
* Is the Department of Public Welfare prepared to certify that specific decedents did not receive Medicaid after the age of 65? Or that they carried sufficient long-term care insurance?
* Will all personal representatives of estates of people 65 and over have to request a determination of the amount due from the Department of Revenue just to make absolutely certain that nothing is owed by the estate?
* Will the cost of administering this program be justified by the revenues earned?

For more information, please call the SHINE coordinator, Pat Ryan at 383-9112.

Reading fun at Deer Hill

By Marjorie Murphy
Special to the Mariner

The response was overwhelming to an invitation to diverse members of the community to participate in Barbara Bush's "Reading is Fundamental." Mrs. Bush is an enthusiastic supporter of RIF, a program which has been ongoing at the Deer Hill School in Cohasset for the past three years. In previous years, to encourage children to pursue the joy of reading, students and staff have wreathed the interior of their school with garlands, containing the titles and authors of books each has read. Another year, there were flags for each grade level, which were moved along the tiled floor, thereby designating the numbers of books read by students and educators.

This year in order to reinforce the concept that reading can bring pleasure, as well as being informative, young and old alike, community members were invited to participate in a reading aloud program at the Deer Hill. These individuals brought their favorite book, which they read to groups of fourth, fifth, or sixth grade students, and shared the pleasure and joy which they found in these stories. Initially, some of the guests were reluctant to participate, but as they recalled the books of their childhood and subsequent years, they realized how positive an experience this would be.

The staff and students truly appreciated the enthusiastic response of the Reading Guests! Their book choices were wonderful, and their readings gave great pleasure. For a group of fourth graders, this project is still continuing. Polly Logan, who read Longfellow's Paul Revere's Ride, brought with her a Revere Bowl, into which students put their names. Then, three children's names were drawn, and these students received books on Paul Revere. All of the children involved received guides of Paul Revere's home in Boston, and a copy of the Longfellow poem. Mrs. Logan indicated she will be returning on Evacuation Day in the spring to reward the grade 4 student who has read the greatest number of books in the interim. Among the many volunteer Guest Readers, was a personal emissary of the First Lady, Susan Bush. Many thanks to all those involved.

Weddings and engagements

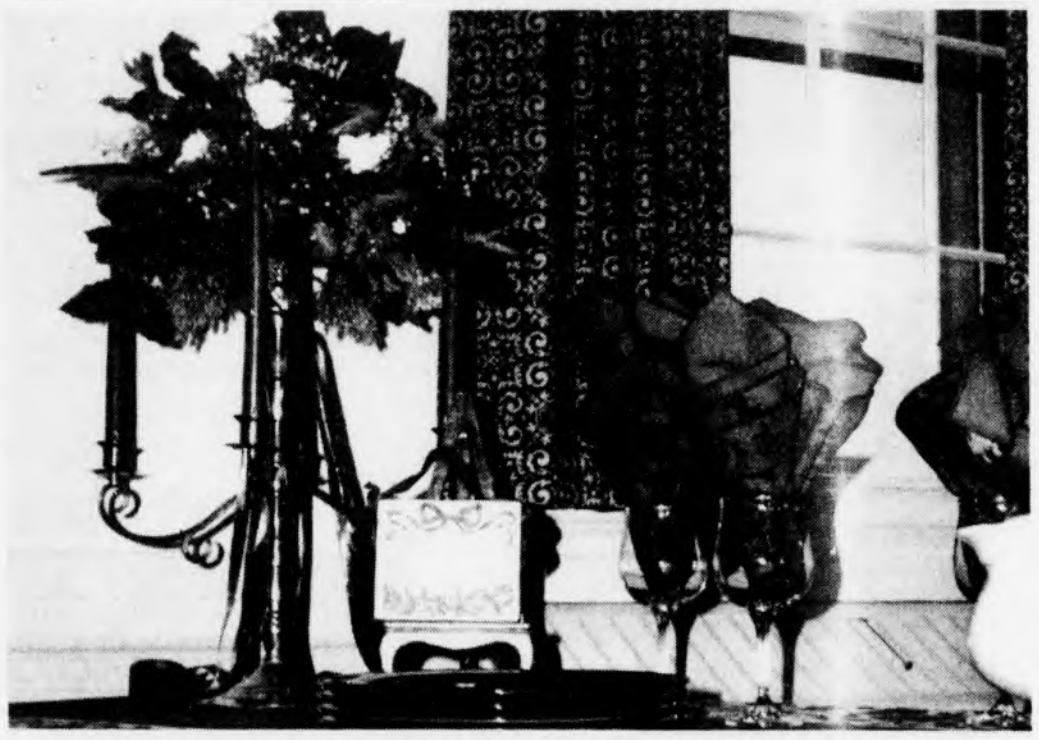
Mr. and Mrs. George Watts

Miss Cowie marries Mr. Watts

Anne B. Cowie, the daughter of Mr. Jack B. Cowie, Ridgefield, Conn. married George B. Watts, III son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Watts of Cohasset, MA., Oct. 13, at St. Matthew's, Wilton, CT. Rev. Stephen Parker officiated at the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by Jack B. Cowie. Maid of Honor was Delinda Cowie, Ridgefield, Conn.

Bridesmaids were Jennifer Watts, Boston, MA, Claudia Jean, Boston, MA, Heather Fleming, Wilton, CT.



Jack Cowie, III of Norwalk, CT. served as Best Man. Ushers were Thomas Toal, Old Greenwich, CT., Ed Csapo, Fairfield, CT., Jamie Jean, Boston, MA.

The bride is a graduate of Wilton High and Southern Conn. State University and is employed at Butcher & Singer in Rowayton, CT.

Her husband is a graduate of Guilford High and attended the University of Connecticut and is employed at Goodway Tool Co. in Stanford, CT.

A reception was held at Wilton Riding Club in Wilton, CT.

After a wedding trip to Bermuda, the couple will reside in Norwalk, CT.

Elegant table settings were featured at the Cohasset Garden Club's recent Christmas flower show at St. Stephen's Church.

'The Three Wisemen' are now on display in London, England, in a Christmas flower show competition. The collage was created by Mrs. Robert L. Littlehale, member of the Cohasset Garden Club, from various dried plant materials including the petals of carnations, chrysanthemums, artemisia and marigolds. Mrs. Littlehale's collage was selected by the Garden Club of America for the competition.

COHASSET'S WEEK

What's open, what's not

On Christmas Day, Tuesday, Dec. 25, businesses, retail stores, supermarkets and liquor stores will be closed.

Banks, stock markets, federal, state, county and municipal government offices will be closed, as will be schools and public libraries.

There will be no general mail delivery, but in some communities, local post offices will offer Santa Express Mail, providing arrangements were made ahead of time.

Taverns and bars can be open, and convenience stores and newstands may be open for part of the day.

Taxi cab service coming

Cohasset residents will have a taxi service to call their own soon. Selectmen unanimously approved a request for a taxi cab license by Thomas Gately Jr. of Hingham.

Cohasset has had no taxi service for 10 years. The only comparable service is a limousine rental business.

Gately told selectmen he wanted to expand his existing service in Hingham into Cohasset.

"I get a lot of regular calls from Cohasset," he said. "And things are not that good in Hingham. I want to branch out."

Gately plans to use one cab to serve the town. He said he will target the senior citizen market.

"I offer them customized service. I wait on them hand and foot," Gately said.

He said his company will charge $2.30 for the first mile and $1.60 for each additional mile. Gately plans to charge $42 or $43 for a trip from Cohasset to Logan Airport.

Police jobs offered

Selectmen accepted the recommendations of police Chief Joseph Kealey and offered two vacant patrolmen positions to candidates laid off from other police departments.

Shellee Lynn Peters of Braintree accepted the offer, but Joseph C. Comperchio declined. Both candidates interviewed with other towns, Doyon said.

Peters will join the force after completing a physical examination and other pre-employment requirements. She was a member of the Canton police force before being laid off.

Peters told selectmen during her interview Dec. 3 that she had additional training in rape investigations and had developed a rape investigation protocol to ensure that "the case is pretty much airtight."

She also said she enjoyed working with juveniles, Alzheimer's victims and conducting accident investigations.

Peters said her goals included additional schooling and training as an Emergency Medical Technician.

As of Wednesday, Police Chief Joseph Kealey and Executive Secretary Greg Doyon were unsure whether selectmen would offer the other vacant position to the third candidate interviewed or reopen the hiring process. Selectmen do not meet again until Jan. 2.

Budget reviews begin

Departments under the control of the selectmen submitted level service budgets to the selectmen.

Selectmen sent the budgets that were both level service and level funded to the advisory committee for comment. They agreed to study the remaining budgets between now and their next meeting scheduled for Jan. 2.

Selectman Ned Tebbetts said holding the line on services in the coming fiscal year would be costly. According to information he garnered during a meeting with the advisory committee, the difference between level services and level funding is expected to reach at least $500,000.

"In just the budgets under our control alone there is a substantial increase, in the aggregate, over last year's budget," Tebbetts said.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby suggested Executive Secretary Greg Doyon prepare a second set of budgets on a level funding basis for comparison purposes.

The others argued it would be a waste of Doyon's time.

"For me, it's enough to have the amount that was allocated for the current fiscal year," Selectman Diana Kornet said. "It's our decision what we think should go down."

Selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle said it would be sufficient to have Doyon suggest areas to cut without preparing separate line item budgets.

Owners won't give up dog

Margaret Lincoln and Andrew Spalt have decided to fight for their right to keep Jasmin, the Labrador retriever the court ordered exiled from Cohasset.

According to town counsel Richard Henderson, Lincoln and Spalt have hired animal rights attorney Steven Wise of Fraser & Wise to pursue an appeal from the court's order.

Henderson said a hearing has been scheduled Jan. 2. Wise is expected to argue that the court illegally deprived Spalt and Lincoln of their property when they ordered them to surrender the dog for adoption out of town without a jury trial.

Wise most recently fought to prevent the New England Aquarium from transferring the dolphin Rainbow to the Navy for underwater demolition training.

Holiday tree sale succeeds

Sue McNamara picks up her tree with the help of Danny Christofel.

The P.S.O. Holiday Tree and Wreath sale was a resounding success. P.S.O. President Kathy Walsh said that the sale exceeded her expectations. " The concept of guaranteeing a fresh, green, dense and premium tree or wreath or your money back was apparently well received."

"Our initial reaction to the mail order idea was skepticism," explained Beth Christoffel, a member of PSO's fundraising committee. "But after John Kinchla explained his idea further, we decided that his idea was excellent. All we really wanted buyers to do was tell us what height tree they thought we wanted and help finance the wholesale purchase — this minimized the risk for the PSO in a new fund raising venture. We guaranteed participants that if they didn't like the selection when they got here, they'd get their money back. Whole families came to make their choice, and the trees were super."

"This was a small but successful beginning," according to Project Coordinator Kinchla. "We arrived at the wholesalers on Friday, just as they were unloading a trailer with balsam trees from Nova Scotia. You couldn't get fresher trees than ours. And, I think everyone had a good time selecting their pre-ordered tree."

Special thanks go to a big crew of school, parents, students, friends, teachers, administrators, organization and area businesses of the school who made this fund raiser such a success. "It was especially gratifying that so many different people came forward and offered their time and effort," said Helene Thornton, PSO Fundraising co-chairman.

Connie Afshar, coordinator for Metco efforts, was pleased with the results and the cooperation, too. "Proceeds from the sale of the wreathes benefited the Metco late bus fund, which helps the students participate in activities and sports throughout the school year."

Tree sales benefited the PSO's Curriculum Enrichment Programs at Osgood, Deerhill and the Junior/Senior High schools.

The choice: Override or service cuts

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

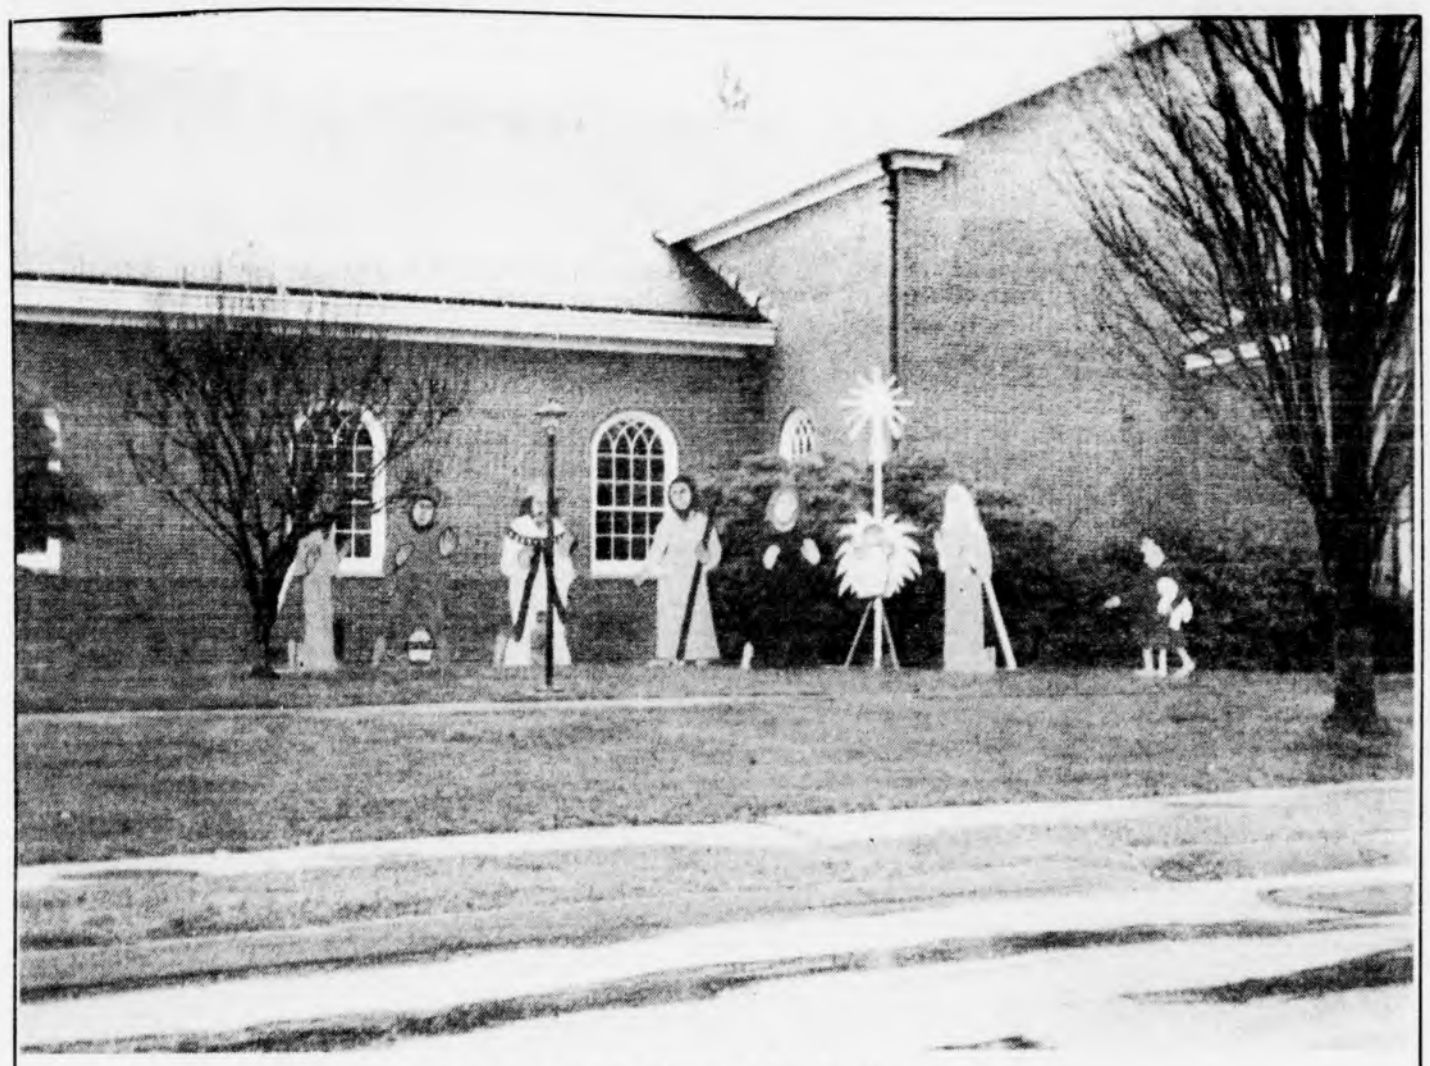
As far as the advisory board is concerned, if Cohasset wants to maintain the current level of services, residents will have to ante up for an override or make some major changes in town.

The advisory board sent selectmen a no-nonsense letter outlining some of the options they see for the town. The menu of cuts includes everything from selling off the duplex on Government Island to using a cleaning service in town hall instead of a janitor.

Selectman Diana Kornet was not thrilled with the letter.

"There are a lot of opinions in there," she said. Kornet particularly objected to recommendations that the selectmen sell off the Bates Building, Independence Building and the duplex.

"It's not their responsibility," she said.



Kornet is on record as favoring transfer of the Bates Building for conversion to two units of affordable housing by Habitat for Humanity.

The advisory board listed seven areas of potential savings. In addition to the sale of town-owned buildings, they suggested substantial savings were possible in the fire department.

The board included statistics compiled by the state Department of Revenue with their letter. According to the data, Cohasset spends more than twice the amount similar towns spend on fire and ambulance service.

The fiscal 1989 budget for Cohasset's fire department was more than $1 million. Of the 16 towns considered similar to Cohasset, only Norwell came close with a $523,752 outlay.

The advisory board also noted that the fire department has nearly depleted its overtime budget with six months left in the fiscal year.

The nativity tableau at St. Anthony's Church.

The harbor department was also the subject of advisory board scrutiny and recommendation.

The board noted that the harbor department has overspent its budget for casual labor and night patrols. They suggested the department could keep its budget in the black by closing down during the winter months.

Other recommendations centered on pooling secretarial duties for departments under the selectmen's jurisdiction, establishing a policy controlling use of town vehicles for non-official purposes and changing the telephone system at town hall.

The bottom line, according to the advisory board, is that selectmen must take control of town spending if they want to avoid an override or deep slashes in town budgets.

Hedlund hit for Rockland taxes

By Eleanor Powers
Mariner staff

State Senator-elect Robert L. Hedlund of Weymouth owes the town of Rockland $3,448.30 in delinquent real estate taxes.

During his campaign, Hedlund made fiscal responsibility in, the legislature a campaign issue. Earlier he had been a coordinator for the Citizens for Limited Taxation rollback petition.

The Weymouth Republican, who will represent the Norfolk and Plymouth district — Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Duxbury, Cohasset, Scituate and Marshfield — is late in paying both installments on his fiscal 1990 bill. The first payment was due Nov. 1, 1989, and the second payment was due May 1, 1990.

By law, towns must publish delinquent real estate tax notices in local papers 21 calendar days before placing a lien on the property.

If he makes payment within the 21 days, Hedlund must also pay 14 percent interest, according to the town clerk's office. After that, the account is turned over to the town treasurer and charged $1.37 per day, according to the treasurer's office.

Hedlund's 2.8-acre site at the corner of Pleasant Street and VFW Drive, is billed as three separate parcels and contains an uncompleted commercial building and parking lot. It was assessed this year at $627,700.

Hedlund has owned the property since September 1988, according to the assessors office.

Theresa Buffum, the town's municipal real estate attorney, said Hedlund has never been late on payments before, but she placed a legal notice in the newspaper Dec. 13, rather than including it with a second group of notices which will be published in January, because she knew Hedlund's bank has begun to foreclose the mortage on the property.

On Sept. 19, the Weymouth Savings Bank, posted a legal notice in the Weymouth News and Gazette, indicating it had initiated foreclosure proceedings against the Rockland property and another Hedlund commercial property at 44 Woodrock Road in Weymouth.

Hedlund does not owe taxes on the Weymouth property, according to Weymouth Tax Collector Sulo Soini.

William McNulty of the Dedham law firm of Nash, Monahan & McNulty, legal counsel for the Weymouth Savings Bank, said last week he could not comment .

The 29-year-old Hedlund, who owns a truck repair business in Quincy, said Tuesday that he hasn't paid Rockland because he is "at dispute" with his bank over the Rockland property.

Hedlund would not say what the dispute is about, but he said his long-standing relationship with the bank changed for the worse after the death of bank President George Thompson more than a year ago.

"There has been a disagreement with the bank from that point on," said Hedlund.

Asked what his dispute with the bank has to do with not paying his taxes to the town, Hedlund said, "Whatever my situation is with the town of Rockland, it all relates to what is endemic to what those involved in the building trade are up against" in the current economic climate."

During his campaign for the vacant Senate seat against state Rep. Robert B. Ambler, D-Weymouth, a 26-year House veteran whom he defeated, Hedlund was quoted in one of his press releases as saying, "One-party dominance has resulted in the fiscal chaos that we're now experiencing.

"It is essential, now more than ever, that we elect fiscally responsible Republican legislators to both the Senate and the House."

Last week Hedlund said there had been "no mismanagement on my part or lack of fiscal responsibility" with the Rockland property.

The senator-elect said the experience would help him as a legislator because it puts him in touch with what is happening to people all over the state.

Hedlund said he still hopes to finish what he began and eventually see retailers move into the Rockland building. Construction ceased on the building in the fall of 1989, he said.

Hedlund said he hopes to pay the town back taxes within about 30 days. He thinks he will settle his affairs with the Weymouth Savings Bank within that time, although he is uncertain of what direction discussions will take.

AROUND TOWN

❑ Private Gregory Knowles, USMC, completed basic training at Parris Island, South Carolina, on Dec. 14. Before returning to Camp LeJeune, North Carolina, for advanced infantry training, Greg will be at home in Cohasset until Dec. 26. Following Infantry Training, he will be assigned for specialized training in motor transport. We sure wish you the best Greg, keep in touch so that you can let us know what you are doing and where you will be!

Gregory Knowles

❑ On the subject of the services, you will love to hear what James Hills, an eighth grader at CHS did for our men in Saudi Arabia. James had an English Assignment and wound up making a video tape for the troops in Saudi Arabia. He made a 28 minute video, all things included that he thought they would like! He included messages from the local folks, Christmas Fair scenes, Hingham carolers, lots of humor and even the star Spangled Banner was included. Won't the men over there get a thrill out of the video, and won't they appreciate his thoughtfulness and his talents! Great job, James everyone is proud of you. Merry Christmas!

❑ Congratulations go to Renee Prisble this week, she deserves it. Renee is a ninth grader at CHS and she was one of fifty young artists from all over Massachusetts to win the International Youth Arts award. Renee is part of the Young at Arts Program at the Wang Center and her work will hang at the Wang Center for a month then hers will go with the rest to Amsterdam! Quite an honor in itself. Renee was awarded a certificate for her art work, and we all applaud her.

❑ Another CHS student made the news last week, Barbara Lagrotteria. For the second year in a row, Barbara was named to the Patriot Ledger All Scholastic Field Hockey team. she was a three year varsity starter, a captain for the last two of them. This is the second year that she has made the All scholastic team, and she made the South Shore League All-star team for three years, this year being voted the best player in the League. Besides all of these things, Barbara has been the Student of the Month at CHS, is an honors student, peer educator, and a member of the yearbook staff. Wow.

❑ By now most must know that Burt Pratt is home and doing well after his lengthy ordeal this winter. Well, we're all glad that you are back, and we know that you'll soon be dancing to the jazz tunes that you like so much.

❑ Speaking of swinging, we hear that the George H. Mealey Post held a gala affair for the elderly at 60 Elm last Saturday night. There was a wonderful turkey dinner, chats with Santa, goodies, etc. The one thing that everyone had was FUN.

❑ We want to wish Dorothy Graham a happy retirement as she leaves her duties as secretary of the Board of Assessors at the end of this month. She was truly a dedicated worker for our town, be sure to tell her so when you see her retiring around town.

❑ Here's hoping that Al Livingston is out of the hospital as he reads this. Al and Helen have gone to Florida for their winter sun and fun, and he is now in a hospital for observation. Many will remember that Al had a scare in association with his heart before he left, but it turned out fine then, and hopefully will this time too.

❑ We already wished Holly Pompeo a happy birthday, it is this week. Now we wish her a happy homecoming because she'll be getting off the plane next Monday after her semester in Spain and everyone is so excited to see her they can hardly wait.

❑ Be sure to check this week's issue of the Mariner, the Winter sports schedule will be printed. Get involved with one or all of the teams, you'll be glad and they will be happy to have your support.

❑ Here's hoping that Babe Trott, who is a patient at South Shore Hospital, is soon home and feeling as fit as a fiddle.

❑ Charles F. Dolan III, the son of Marie Dolan of Cohasset, and the late Deputy Chief Joseph Dolan was among the 196 graduate and undergraduate students who were awarded degrees on Oct. 15 from Western New England College.

Dolan III received a bachelor of science in law enforcement degree from Dr. Beverly W. Miller, President of Western New England College.

Dolan has served as a Metro Police Officer for the past eighteen years and is currently assigned to the motorcycle unit in South Boston. Officer Dolan has begun study for a master's degree in criminal justice at Anna Maria College.

❑ Congratulations to Philip R. Miles who is a now a senior lecturer at University College, a division of Northeastern University. He teaches courses in Accounting and Cost Accounting. Mr. Miles lives on Fair Oaks Lane.

❑ Scott Fone ran a marathon recently, and he came in in the top third of the pack. Scott is really doing well with his running, we applaud him.

❑ It's time to congratulate Dawn Meehan again. For the second time this year Dawn won first place in a synchronized swim meet. The meet was held at Wheaton College. Dawn is an eighth grader at CHS,a cheerleader, and a great student. Where does she find the time to do it all? You are certainly to be commended Dawn, everyone is proud of you and your efforts.

❑ That's the news from here for the week, just be sure to remember to call with all of your Christmas news (there should be a lot), we sure want to hear it.

Have a very Merry Christmas.

Funds approved for harbor ramp

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

In a 3-1 vote, selectmen approved a request from the harbor department to transfer $4,803.50 from the reserve fund to cover cost overruns in the float and ramp repair project. But selectmen also admonished Harbormaster Irv Gadow not to wait until a project was finished to come looking for money in the future.

Gadow explained that the project to repair and rebuild floats just expanded under its own momentum.

A ramp needed repair after a youth hit it and they discovered the ramp on the fisherman's float had deteriorated beyond repair after they began the job.

"Everything we touched turned out to be a bag of worms," Gadow said.

Gadow also hired casual labor to work on the project because he couldn't accomplish the work alone and needed the tools that the person he hired brought along.

Executive Secretary Greg Doyon told selectmen that he supported the transfer.

"The timing is unfortunate, but the money is very, very well spent," Doyon said. "A lot of the labor was volunteered at no cost to the town."

Gadow was also able to acquire a considerable amount of construction materials by donation or barter from the Coast Guard, according to selectmen Chairman Rocco Laugelle. Gadow estimates that he saved $8,000 on materials that way.

Selectman Martha Gjesteby was the lone vote against the transfer.

Gjesteby said she had spent more than an hour in the town accountant's office reviewing the harbor budget.

"I have a lot of questions," Gjesteby said. Gjesteby said she was concerned about the overruns in the budget for casual labor and night patrols in July and October as well as the deficit in the building maintenance account.

Gjesteby told Gadow she wanted him to come to selectmen for authorization before incurring the debts.

"I just don't like this at all," she said. "You do a wonderful job of keeping the harbor safe, but we're on a really tight budget."

Other selectmen emphasized their appreciation for the work Gadow had done.

"I just want to be on record as saying Irv has done a great job," Selectman Ned Tebbetts said.

Tree and Park skips committee for funding

Cohasset selectmen appreciate a bargain as much as the next town – so much so that they authorized tree, park and cemetery Superintendent Peter Laugelle to spend money not yet approved and transferred by the advisory committee.

Laugelle came before the selectmen to ask for their approval of a transfer from the reserve fund to replace a 12-year-old air compressor.

The department uses the compressor to clean out air filters and inflate tires on the department's trucks and mowers, he said.

Laugelle told selectmen the compressor was beyond repair. Although the going rate for a replacement compressor is $700, one of the three suppliers Laugelle checked with has it on sale for $545.

The problem, according to Laugelle, is that the sale ends Dec. 31 and the advisory committee is not

Our holiday wish list

There's a Christmas tradition at the Mariner — something started long before the Cohasset Mariner was a gleam in David Cutler's eye.

It's a tradition of giving, tempered with a goodly dose of humor.

The Mariner has long enjoyed the privilege of publishing a Christmas gift wish — gifts we wish we could give.

There are some gifts anyone would choose to deliver — simple gifts like peace and love, which we would be happy to distribute in equal measure to all our readers.

Other gifts require some thought.

To Tanna Kasperowicz, we offer the chance to once again work 75 hours a week.

To Jim Hamilton, we send only admiration.

To Katherine Keogh, we send our hopes her second Christmas is filled with joy. To her parents, Louise and John, we send a package of energy.

To Alison Cohan, we wish we could provide the chance to interview the Old Goats.

To Joe Mont we send a one-time opportunity to write a localized version of "Moby Dick."

To the Ledger's Molly Hochkeppel, we offer a peak at our theories on the Elvis mystery.

To Assessors Chairman James Lagrotteria, rising property values.

To Bill Quigley, a regional animal shelter.

To School Superintendent Stephen Hart and the members of the school committee, a blank check to operate the school system in the way they feel will best serve the children of town.

To Rocco Laugelle, a copy of the complete works of Aristotle.

To Selectmen Jane Goedecke and Edwin Tebbetts, a chance to run for the post of assessor.

To Martha and Arne Gjesteby, medals for long and faithful town service.

To Diana Kornet, a more flattering nickname.

To Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, we send a super, high-tech stove, equipped with the ability to turn out magnificent meals in minutes.

To Christy Mihos, we send nomination papers for the upcoming town election.

To Bob Hedlund, we offer a piece of advice — go to law school in your spare time in Boston.

To Harbormaster Irving Gadow, a new Coast Guard cutter.

To T. Gerard Keating, his own senior center.

To Roy Fitzsimmons, a Matchbox fire truck and ambulance so he can have a fire department on a scale he approves of.

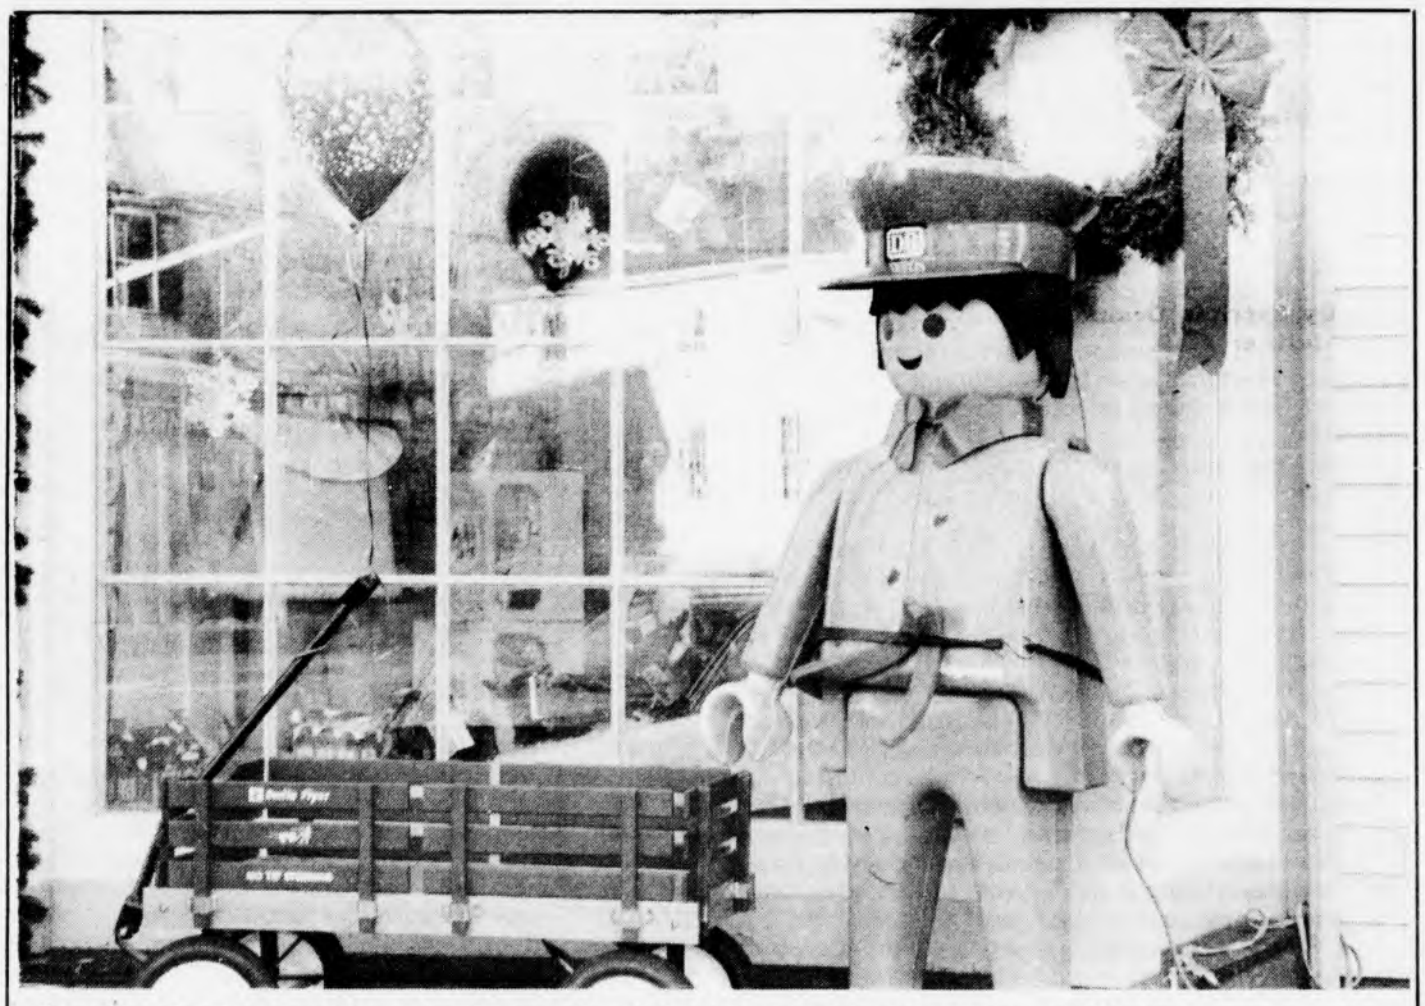
To the mosquito control commission, gold-plated flyswatters so they can march as a drill team in a mummers' parade.

To Amos and Jasmin, a home on the range and a recording of "Don't Fence Me In" by Gene Autry.

To the planning board, a clock on Route 3A. Then they can truly turn back the hands of time.

To Jack Worley, a white Christmas so he can sell his ski trips.

To Harold Litchfield, a green Christmas so he won't have to ask for more salt, sand and plowing money.



We wish we could give all our advertisers a guarantee of preferred treatment, after all they pay the bills.

We wish could give our staff a swank office somewhere along Route 3A, zoning permitting.

We wish we could give the skateboarders an off-street ride.

We wish could give the local economy a shot in the arm.

To everyone who is waiting for a reservist to come home, we send our prayers for a speedy resolution to the Mideast turmoil.

Kornet's comments on ribbons criticized

Letters

To the Editor:

Yellow Ribbons, what do they mean? To some probably nothing, but to many they symbolize a safe return for servicemen serving in the Persian Gulf. This is in response to "Kornet on Yellow Ribbons", (Thursday, Dec. 13). I was very upset at the fact that Selectman Diana Kornet "does not like the notion of yellow ribbons." Well too bad! I am not from Cohasset, but I work in town. I am a resident of Marshfield and I am proud to say that my town joined together as a community on Saturday, Dec. 8 in front of the Town Hall to tie yellow ribbons and put red, white and blue lights on a Christmas tree in honor of the men and women in the Marines, Air Force, Navy and Army. From my town we have 30 men and women serving in the Persian Gulf – we have 30 ribbons on that tree with a name on each one, one which has my fiance's name on it.

If Selectman Kornet so "heartily endorsed sending letters and packages to the Armed Forces personnel" than what can a few yellow ribbons, symbolizing a safe return for our servicemen putting their lives on the line to defend our country, hurt???

It would mean very much to me to see yellow ribbons hanging in Cohasset, but I am sure it would mean more to the people who live in Cohasset who have loved ones and friends in Saudi Arabia, to see these ribbons tied around trees, mailboxes, telephone poles, or even a Christmas tree on the Town Common.

Thank you,
Melissa Poulin

Community thanked for school support

To the Editor:

A great big thank you to the whole community of Cohasset from the Jr./Sr. High School library for the wonderful gift of the Macintosh Classic Computer which will be coming soon to the library.

Thanks to everyone's generosity in saving and turning in their Stop & Shop receipts. We have received the computer grant from Stop & Shop and Apple Computer Co. in the "Apples for Students" program.

Now we will be able to provide the "Work Station" for the laser disc player for students in all 3 schools which I mentioned in a recent Mariner article.

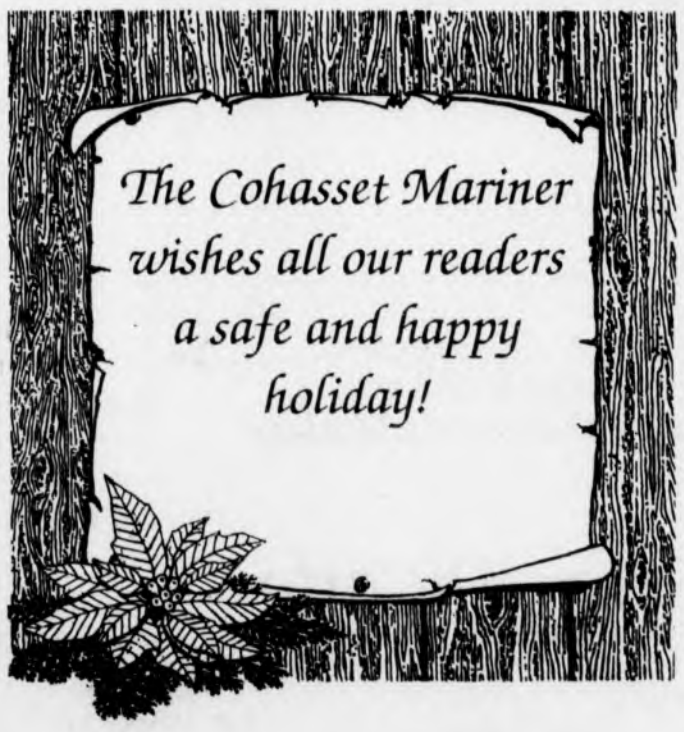
Sincerely
Susan McFadd

T official tries to explain boat cuts

To the Editor:

The commuter boat has been a major success story since we began providing the service in 1985.

After four years of growth averaging 30%, ridership has declined in recent months.



This year the MBTA budget actually proposed expanding the service to add a late night trip to expand market reach and mitigate further losses.

Unfortunately the Advisory Board, made up of the 78 cities and towns, voted on November 30 to reduce funding for the commuter boat service.

Members of the Advisory Board from the South Shore fought to restore the funding but were unsuccessful before the full Board.

Regrettably, therefore, we must now seek ways to reduce service to implement this budget cut.

'Tis the season for early deadlines

By Patricia Desmond
Mariner staff

'Tis the season to be merry. And even the Mariner staff gets a chance to take a break over the Christmas holidays.

The Cohasset Mariner is actually produced in a spiffy new office in the industrial region of Marshfield. The green-tinged concrete and steel building houses the press, the computers, the cameras and most of all the staff.

It's why we use an 800 number on the paper's flag. The idea is to encourage calls and letters from the community. It's an idea that's been working for more than 10 years now.

Even in a dismal economy, people in Cohasset expect certain standards from local journalism. There are certain goals we reach for.

One of the goals that's important at the Mariner is to look at life in a positive way. Having fun and producing good work aren't either/or kind of propositions.

So it was on Dec. 14 the people who take responsibility for everything at the Mariner office from the deliveries to the billing gathered together to celebrate the holidays.

The entire building was decked out in outlandish ornaments for the affair. Free pizza's were the top prize in an office-wide decorations contest.

The production workers — graphic artists who design the pages, as well as typesetters who pound Macintosh computers — won the contest for the second year in a row. The production area used a country Christmas theme — lots of boughs, a few evergreen trees pilfered from the forest nearby, gobs of red bows and Christmas carols jingling in the background.

It was tasteful.

On the second floor in the editorial department, tacky was the word of the day. The editors and reporters chose to go with a "Blue Christmas" in keeping with an overall Elvis theme that someone thought would be humorous.

After the judging, Mariner publisher David Cutler was heard to say he thought the Elvis theme was the best.

Well, it was the only piece of true humor in the day.

One of the reporters later complained that the "Blue Christmas" cassette was played 27 consecutive times.

An editor was said to have asked the complaining reporter why he hadn't finished decoding the police log — as she turned the tape on "one more time."

Decorations for the blue Christmas were provided through the private donations of the staff.

Laurie Kaiser, South Look editor, brought great heaps of blue garlands and blue satin balls. But her height kept her from stringing the stuff from the ceiling.

Marilyn Jackson, Scituate editor, as well as editor of South Shore Business Journal, provided a suitable gold lame outfit for Kaiser to wear. No one was allowed into the editorial department without wearing something ornate and tacky — to keep the theme alive.

Jacqui Adams, who handles graphic design of South Look and the Cohasset Mariner (in other words, she's part of the tasteful production crew), did manage to get into the theme park despite the fact she wore normal street clothes.

Reporter Joe Mont was late, having planned to start his day at noon at Hingham High. Mont arrived wearing a blue tuxedo jacket, sunglasses and hair Elvis wouldn't understand. Mont understands it, however, and that's what's important in a world where creativity is valued.

Anyway, the point is: the people of the Mariner are only now beginning to recover from having taken an afternoon off work in the height of the season.

Next Monday afternoon and all day Tuesday, the Mariner will be closed so families can celebrate Christmas day. Deadline for the next paper, which actually goes to print on Dec. 26, is Friday, Dec. 19 at 5 p.m. The paper will be in the mail Dec. 27.

The same Friday deadline holds true for the following week's issue. We get a halfday on New Year's Eve and all of New Year's Day off.

Happy New Year, Merry Christmas, Peace and Love.

Selectmen approve $$$

scheduled to meet again until early January.

"To save $150, I'm willing to take a chance," Selectman Ned Tebbetts said.

Tebbetts was joined by selectmen Diana Kornet and Rocco Laugelle. Selectman Martha Gjesteby voted against the motion.

Gjesteby was troubled by the notion of spending money before the advisory committee authorized the transfer. She also asked if it might be possible for Laugelle to use compressors already owned by the highway and water departments.

Water department chairman Ron Goodwin advised against trying to save such a small sum of money.

"By the time you were done schlepping it around the three departments, you would have spent that much in man-hours," Goodwin told the board.

In other business, selectmen:

• Appointed Sgt. Brian Noonan acting chief of police for the week Chief Joseph Kealey is on vacation.

• Renewed alcoholic beverage, common victualler and entertainment licenses held by the Red Lion Inn, KoKo Island and Aegean Fare.

• Renewed the limousine and auto dealer licenses held by Coastal Auto Sales.

• Granted Cohasset Dramatic Club permission to hold rehearsals in the town hall auditorium on Mondays and Wednesdays for their production of "Cheaper By the Dozen." The town reserved the right to pre-empt rehearsals, if necessary.

• Appointed Dr. Mark Friedman of Aaron River Road and Dr. Charles Gainor of Sohier Street to the mosquito control committee.

Train wreck dashes Old Colony preview plans

By Joseph Mont
Mariner staff

A preview party to applaud the MBTA's progress in restoring commuter rail service has been postponed following last week's collision of two trains.

Governor Michael Dukakis had invited guests to attend a Dec. 15 preview of the MBTA's restoration of service along the Old Colony Railroad.

Dukakis decided to postpone the event after a Dec. 12 accident in Boston's Back Bay Station injured more than 260 people.

According to MBTA officials, shortly before 8:30 a.m. a 200-ton Amtrak "Night Owl" train from New York with 190 people jumped its rail and slammed into the rear of an MBTA commuter train out of Stoughton with more than 900 riders.

The "Jaws of Life" had to be used to extricate passengers from the crumpled trains. Rescue efforts were hampered by over 1,500 gallons of diesel fuel that spilled and burned, filling the station with dark acrid smoke, witnesses said.

So far there have been no fatalities related to the accident. Six people were critically injured and most others were treated for minor injuries and smoke inhalation.

Stephen Polechronis, project manager for the Old Colony restoration, said no alternate date has been set for the preview party.

"We felt it would be inappropriate to have a celebration of commuter rail service so soon after the accident," he said.

The MBTA is moving forward with its preparation of final draft reports for the Middleboro and Plymouth lines of the railroad restoration. Proponents plan to have these reports submitted for approval by the end of the year.

Polechronis said work on the Greenbush line, the proposed third line of the restoration, has been put on hold while the MBTA complies with federally mandated reviews of historic and environmental impacts.

He said the line's separation allows his team to commit its energy on the other two lines of the project while it works out the details of the third.

The Greenbush line of the restoration has drawn jeers from Hingham town officials and abutters as being a negative impact on the aesthetic, natural and historic resources of the town. Some residents of Cohasset and Quincy have also started to organize opposition.

Supporters of the project say the restoration is necessary to alleviate commuter problems on the South Shore and point to glowing recommendations from the Sierra Club, The American Automobile Association, and Greenpeace the proposal has received.

This spring residents of eight South Shore towns will vote on a non-binding referendum question designed to indicate their feelings on the rail restoration.

The towns of Hingham and Cohasset may not participate in the uniform regional ballot question, but may offer alternative questions of their own, according to Edna English, chairman of the Hingham board of selectmen.

Resident angered over EMT violations

Selectmen received a letter from resident F. Roy Fitzsimmons about an incident involving Cohasset's ambulance.

Fitzsimmons wrote that he had observed the ambulance with one person in it run a red light and make a stop at a local doughnut shop on Sunday, Dec. 9.

"What kind of response would have been given in an emergency? Would he have had to go all the way back to the station to pick up another EMT before he could have responded?" Fitzsimmons wrote. "Why is a Town Emergency response vehicle being used to make coffee and donut runs?"

Although Fitzsimmons wrote as a private citizen, he is chairman of the town government and structures committee that has recommended privatizing the ambulance service. The town is soliciting bids from private ambulance companies to see if it is more cost-effective.

The committee also raised the possibility of moving to a call firefighter force.

According to Fire Chief Daniel Brock, the ambulance did not go through a red light. Brock said stopping at the doughnut shop was poor judgment on the part of the ambulance driver, but the safety of residents was not compromised because Cohasset's EMTs carry radio equipment at all times.

Brock told selectmen in case of an emergency another EMT would have met the ambulance at the scene.

CCC offers winter fun

The Cohasset Community Center has new winter courses for the entire family to get involved in through the long winter months.

A special puppet show for children all ages will be presented at the Community Center on Sunday, Dec. 23 at 2 p.m. The performance is a production of the Boston Lamplight Theater. Tickets are $3 per person and are available at the Community Center or by calling the Center at 383-0088.

A new boy's gymnastics class is being offered for 6 and 7 year olds at the Community Center. The class will run for 10 weeks beginning Wednesday, Jan. 2, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. The cost is $50 for members and $60 for non-members.

Girls ages 7-12 can join Ruthann Sargent for a gymnastics sleepover on Thursday evening, Dec. 27. The cost for this fun filled evening is $15 per child. Children must be registered in advance as space is limited.

A new bowling class for children in grades K-3 will meet on Wednesday afternoons from 3 to 4 p.m. The children will learn how to bowl and keep score. The cost is $36 and the class will meet for 12 weeks. A pizza party and trophy will climax the session.

The Deer Hill Bowling League will be starting up again on Friday, Jan. 4. Call to reserve a place.

For Pre-Schoolers the Community Center has a For Kids Only Playgroup for children ages 2 years 9 months to 4 years old. For children age 3 to 5 a Science and Nature class, a Tiny Tot Chef class, and Kodaly Music class will be starting again in January.

The puppet show for the month of January will feature "The Princess and the Dragon." Designed especially for young children, the puppet show comes alive on Friday morning, Jan. 4 at 10:30 a.m. Admission is $2 per person at the door.

Celebrate a birthday with your child's favorite activity at the Community Center. We will provide the activity while parents provide the cake and ice cream, snacks, and decorations. Choose from a bowling party, a gymnastics party, a gym dandy, or a craft party. All parties must be scheduled in advance.

Youth and Teens can keep busy with courses such as Babysitting, International Cooking, Spanish For Kids, Nature Nuts, and a new class which will teach Study Skills.

Adults have a wide variety of courses to choose from. Beginning in January there will be Ballroom Dancing, Bridge, Yoga, Tai Chi, Planning For Retirement, A Computer Course, Sweater Samplers, and our popular ongoing Aerobics classes.

The adult "Frosty Frolic Dance" will be held on Saturday evening Jan. 26 (please note the date change from the 19th). Chase away the winter doldrums and dance the night away with us at The Community Center.

To register for any course or workshop call the Community Center at 383-0088 or stop by and see us.

Recycling rules for RTF

Only brown, unwaxed, corrugated cardboard should be placed in the cardboard bin at the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF). All gift boxes, shoe and pizza boxes, wrapping paper and packing material go into the trash bin in the blue building.

Only newsprint goes into the newspaper bin — no plastic bags or any other type of paper.

Only rinsed glass free of caps and rings can be recycled.

Residents' cooperation is appreciated at this time of increased holiday trash disposal.

The 1990 green RTF permit expires at the end of the year; new 1991 permits are sold at the RTF during regular operating hours. Remember to bring both registrations if two cars are being registered.

RTF will accept trees

Through the cooperative efforts of the Tree and Park Department and the Recycling Transfer Facility (RTF) personnel, Christmas trees will be chipped at the Cedar Street RTF. Schedule for acceptance and chipping is from 7:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Friday, Dec. 28, also, Jan. 2, 4 and 7.

No commercial tree sellers are allowed.

No wreaths will be accepted.

No brush at this time.

Please assure no tree stands, nails or wires are attached to the trees for the safety of the chipper operators. Place only in area designated by the RTF supervisors.

St. Stephen's Episcopal

The twelve days of Christmas will be celebrated at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, 16 Highland Avenue, Cohasset, with worship, music and a church school play.

Christmas Eve services will be a 5 p.m. Family Holy Eucharist and an 11 p.m. Festal Holy Eucharist. The worship will be accented with special music at 10:30 p.m.

The Christmas Day service will be held at 10 a.m. St. Stephen's Day, Wednesday, Dec. 26, will be celebrated with a Eucharist at 9:30 a.m. Worship on the First Sunday after Christmas, Dec. 30, will be the Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m. and Christmas music.

Epiphany, Sunday, Jan. 6, will be celebrated with Holy Eucharist at 8 and 10 a.m. A special evening prayer service will be held at 5 p.m.

The Church School will present a pageant of the three kings presenting their gifts to the Christ child and receiving the light of Christ given to all the world. The service will end by carrying candles into the night and singing carols accompanied by the 57 bell carillon. All are welcome.

Indians come to life at Deer Hill School

It is Omri's birthday. One of the gifts he receives is a plastic Indian. Although not too excited, he politely thanks his friend Patrick for the gift. He also receives a cupboard, which he finds to be a great place to store his new Indian. What happens next can only be described as a child's dream come true, as the students at the Deer Hill School were treated to the Actors Theatre of Maine production of "The Indian in the Cupboard."

Ably assisted by Deer Hill students Hillary Lamp, Bobby Morgan and Boomer Gaston, AToM presented Lynne Reid Bank's story of Omri, a young boy whose toy cowboys and Indians come to life. He shares his wonderful secret with his friend Patrick. But when Patrick and Omri bring their "living" toys to school, what begins as great fun and adventure soon becomes a great responsibility. They must figure out how to provide food and warmth for their new friends, and they must try to keep the cowboy "Boone" and the Indian "Little Bear" from fighting with one another. Ultimately, they must decide whether or not it is right to keep Boone and Little Bear in a time and place where they do not belong.

A teacher's guide was given to all teachers, which included suggestions for pre and post production activities and areas of discussion.

After having the story read to them, Patricia Sullivan's fourth grade class wrote stories in which they turn a toy into the real thing. They will also be comparing the book to the dramatization, and exploring the questions that arise when certain situations in the story are changed.

The play also provided a wonderful opportunity for Jean O'Malley's fourth grade art class. All of the Deer Hill students have recently completed a unit on drawing people and action, which involved painting a skeleton in motion and then painting bodies over the bones. The fourth grade turned their skeletons into characters in the book and created an illustration that showed some part of the story.

Some of these drawings, and those of the fifth and sixth grades will be on display at the Paul Pratt Library and the Deer Hill School. This production was brought to the Deer Hill School by the PSO Curriculum Enrichment Committee.

'Black Nativity' seats

There are still seats left for the theatre trip on Sunday, Dec. 23. The bus leaves the town hall parking lot at 2:30 p.m., but join us first for holiday treats at St. Stephen's Walton Rodgers Hall at 1 p.m.

Send your ticket order to P.O. Box 30 now. Tickets for treats, bus and performance are: $25 adults; $20 seniors; $20 first child; $15 subsequent children with an adult.

Grade 3 eats with seniors

Students in Mrs. Alcott's Grade 3 class had lunch with the Senior Citizens at the Parish House on Tuesday, Nov. 13. After introducing themselves, the children entertained with two patriotic songs followed by a Thanksgiving song. After eating lunch, the children and seniors read the Ghost Eye Tree to each other in small groups. Following this activity, they constructed paper turkeys. On the feathers, the seniors and children recorded something for which they are thankful. At the conclusion, they shared their thoughts with the whole group. Delighted with the new friends they had met, the children returned to school with happy hearts having experienced one of true meanings of Thanksgiving, friendship.

Girl Scouts go a-caroling

On Thursday, Dec. 20 from 4 to 5:30 p.m., all Daisy, Brownie, Girl Scouts and their families and friends are invited to go Christmas Caroling. It will begin at the Christmas Tree nest to Tedeschi's and will include stops at the Senior Citizen Housing and the Police and Fire station.

Hot chocolate and cookies will be served at St. Stephen's after the caroling.

Holiday greetings were brought to Marie Price's kindergarten by Santa with help from Jo-Ellen Wood's grade 8 students

Red and green are the old round guy's favorite colors

Dear Rachel,

Thank you for the beautiful picture and wonderful letter. The picture is even in my favorite colors, red and green.

It must be a lot of work to take care of an eight week old puppy. I've been watching you very closely all year, and you've been a good girl. I'm very sorry to hear you've had the chicken pox, but they'll probably be gone before Christmas.

Just yesterday, while I was on my way to ask Rudolph to lead my sleigh if it was foggy out this Christmas, I noticed that the elves had decorated one of the trees outside. Can you guess what they had decorated it with? They had decorated it with cookie cutters from Mrs. Claus' kitchen! I went into the workshop to explain to them that Mrs. Claus needed her cookie cutters to make Christmas cookies, and that they would have to undecorate their tree. They were very disappointed when they heard this, so I taught them how to make their own ornaments. Merry Christmas!

Love,
Santa

As told to Jessica Connor

Santa letters were compiled with the help of grade 8

Dear Taylor,

I hear that you and your brother have been good this year, and that you like to help your mom bake cookies. Mrs. Claus makes cookies for the elves all through the holidays. I'll tell you a story of one day near Christmas when Tammy, an apprentice elf, helped Mrs. Claus bake cookies for the busy, working elves.

Tammy was very clumsy, and the elves didn't like to work with her because she sometimes accidentally dropped toys on the floor. Mrs. Claus saw this and told Tammy to help her bake cookies. When Tammy got to the kitchen, Mrs. Claus showed her what to do and worked beside her. The recipe called for 8 cups of sugar and 4 tablespoons of salt. Tammy accidentally put in 8 cups of salt and 4 tablespoons of sugar. At the end of the day, when the elves stopped for their cookie break, they found that the cookies tasted like salt, and they were very mad at Tammy. She ran up to her room and wouldn't talk to anyone for the rest of the day.

In the middle of the night, she went down to the kitchen to show the elves that she could bake a batch of the best cookies they had ever tasted. Tammy worked very carefully all night, and did not make a single mistake. When the elves came down to breakfast, they smelled the wonderful scent of baked cookies. They each had a cookie with their breakfast and wondered who had baked them. Tammy said that she had made them, and the elves all apologized and praised Tammy for her great cookies. She became a full-fledged elf, and has almost never made a mistake since that day.

Thank you for your wonderful letter and picture. I liked them very much.

Merry Christmas!

Love,
Santa Claus

Another great and original reindeer story developed

Dear Alexis,

I have heard that both you and Derek are champion swimmers. That is wonderful for a girl in kindergarten!

I'm going to tell you the story of when I almost missed Christmas. It was very close to that magical night, Christmas Eve, and all the elves and I were very busy. I stared longingly at the little puffs of snow falling from the gray sky, wishing I could go for a sleigh ride with my wife, Mrs. Claus. Finally, around four-thirty on Christmas Eve, the elves and I had finished all the work we had to do. I went into the kitchen where Mrs. Claus was reading the list of good boys and girls.

"Dear," I said to her," how about a sleigh ride with Rudolph pulling?"

"Well, Santa, it's getting rather dark. How about going tomorrow?" Mrs. Claus questioned my offer.

"Don't worry, honey, we'll be fine," I reassured her. Let's go now."

Mrs. Claus reluctantly got her coat and outer wraps and met me outside where Rudolph and my shiny red sleigh were waiting. I helped her climb up to her seat, and I led Rudolph into the hushed woods. We had been in the sleigh a very long time and were having a lovely time when Mrs. Claus suddenly exclaimed," My goodness, what time is it, Santa? Look how dark it is!"

Glancing at my watch, I saw that it was seven-thirty! "Okay, Rudolph," I steered to the north, "let's go home."

Instead, he looked at me and said, "Why, Santa! I thought you knew the way! I didn't pay attention to our route."

Mrs. Claus gasped. "Santa, what will we do? You're expected in Cohasset in a half-hour!" I got a good idea then. "Rudolph, fly straight up."

The reindeer did as he was told, although he looked to be in pain. When we were above the trees, I spotted the house right in front of us.

"Rudolph, fly!" I yelled. "We're going home."

We reached the house at ten to eight, right on time.

Okay, Alexis, be a good girl, and I'll be at your house in a few days.

Love,
Santa Claus

Santa praises the expertise of a wonderful swimmer

Dear Cristina,

How are you? That's great! Guess what! You're on my list of good children. Isn't that exciting?

I have a funny short story about a ballerina. I'm sure you'd love to hear. It happened a long time ago, way before you were born. It was about a week before Christmas. The elves were very busy making toys. One elf, Patty, was making a ballerina for a little girl named Elizabeth who loved ballet, just like you. Anyway, while Patty was whittling away at the doll, she began to hum part of the ballet, "The Nutcracker," and the doll turned into the Sugar Plum Fairy. The Sugar Plum Fairy began dancing around the workshop, turning all the toys real! Patty rushed off to get me. When Patty returned with me, all things that were once toys were now real.

"Stop!" I commanded. Everything came to a halt.

"Sugar Plum Fairy, could I speak to you for a moment?" I asked.

"Of course," the Sugar Plum Fairy answered, leaping towards me.

"The elves have worked very hard making all these toys. It would be a shame if they all stayed real because all the work would be wasted. Besides, what would we give to all the children?"

"Oh, I never thought of that," she mused. "What do you want me to do?"

"Would you turn all the toys back the way they were?"

"Sure, but only Patty can turn me back."

"How can she do that?"

"All she had to do is hum the whole 'Waltz of the Sugar Plum Fairy' because that was the part of 'The Nutcracker' she was humming when I came to life."

"All right, could we start this now?"

"I'll start right away."

Then she danced off and changed all the toys back and leapt upon the workbench. Patty started humming and poof! The Sugar Plum Fairy returned to her doll-form.

"Phew! What a relief!" everyone shouted. I better go now because there is still a lot to do before Christmas Eve.

Merry Christmas! Love,
Santa Claus

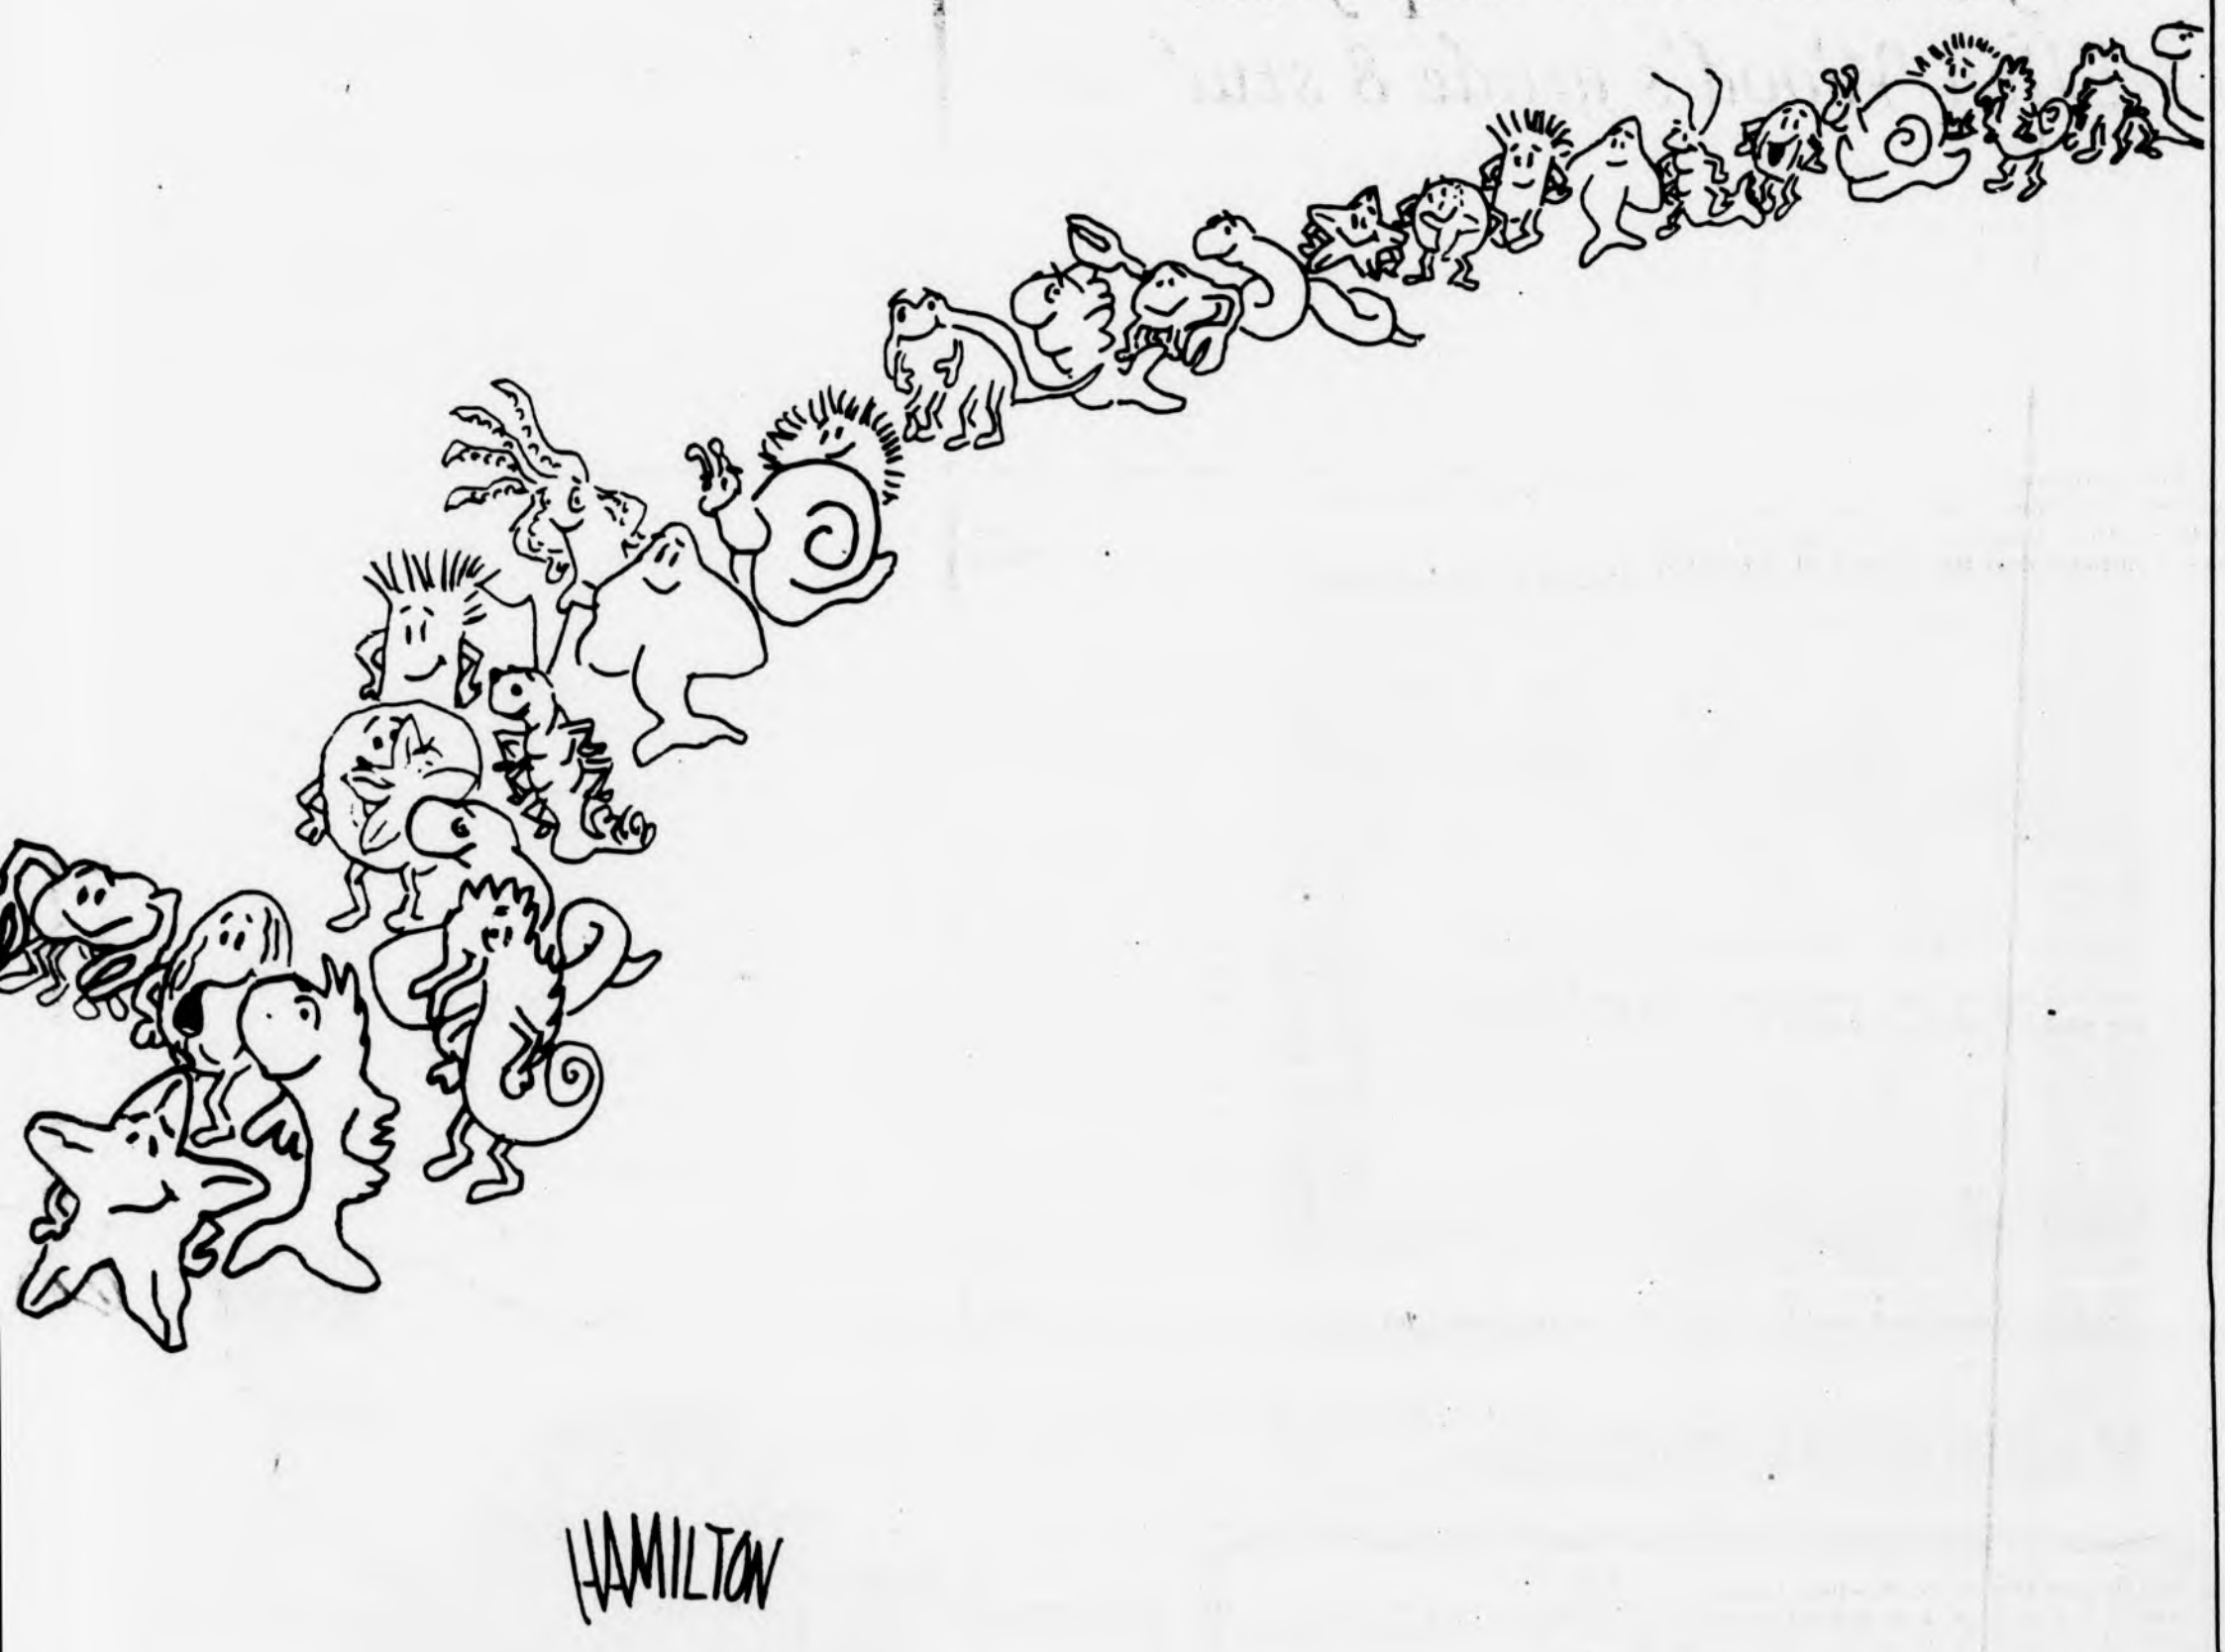
Chanukah story

Dear John,



John, I'm very happy to hear from you, and since you told me about Chanukah in your letter, I'd like to tell you a heartwarming story about a family in New York.

The Silvermans were a happy family that had everything they needed. They had a cozy house, a lovely cat, and two beautiful children, Jeff and Barbara. The two children loved Chanukah, they loved to play with dradles, but their favorite part was opening presents. Jeff and Barbara's parents said that they should always remember what Chanukah was really about. Of course, they said, "yes," and went right on opening presents. Next year Jeff's parents told him there would be no presents that year. Of course, Barbara and Jeff were very sad, and they asked why there would be no presents. Their parents said it was because daddy had been fired. So, things were very sad in the Silverman's house, and when the first day arrived, the first thing that happened was the electricity got turned off because they couldn't pay the bill. Miraculously, the lights and the heat stayed on. And, for all the 8 days of Chanukah the lights and the heat stayed on. And every day there were presents for the children outside the door of the house. And right after Chanukah ended Mr. Silverman got rehired by the old company and things were all back to normal.

Well, John I'd like to tell you stories all day, but I have to go now. Happy Chanukah!

Love,
Your friend

Santa seeks chocolate chip cookies, his favorite

Dear Meggy,

Merry Christmas! I just love children when they write to me and say that they like me. I feel very happy. Thanks.

This morning was very busy while I was eating breakfast, which is Cheerios and orange juice, Elmer Elf ran inside. He was so noisy he made me spill milk all over myself! I'm still trying to get than spot out. Anyway, he pulled me to the workshop. Now, it's very cold at this time of the year, and I didn't have time to put a coat on. I shivered the whole way there.

The workshop was in a frenzy. All the elves started to talk to me at once.

"Elmer, what's wrong?"

"Susie and Derek broke five toys," he tattled.

Susie and Derek began to cry. They moved away and I could see five broken dolls. One was talking without any breaths, and the other four wouldn't stop crying.

I walked over to the dolls and picked them up one by one. When I hugged each of them, the talking one stopped talking, and the crying ones smiled.

"See what a little love can do?"

"Yes," they chorused.

Mrs. Claus was writing a list nearby. She looked extremely worried.

"What?"

"I left out a name, and I don't know whose it is," she admitted.

Mary Elf, the bookkeeper, looked over the list. She put on her glasses twice.

"I think it's Meggy Flynn from Cohasset, but I don't know if she's been naughty and nice."

"Let's see it," I said. "Oh, I remember her. She's been especially good this year." I handed the list back to my wife.

I have to bake some cookies now, so I'm afraid I'll have to go.

Love,
Santa Claus

P.S. Don't forget to leave some cookies for me. Chocolate chip ones are my favorite! I also like milk.

Ballerina and the elves attract Santa's attention

Dear Laura,

I know that you have been a very good girl this year! I know that you have been very nice to your brothers and sister. Chris, Jamie, and Lisa are very proud of the accomplishments that you have made this year in Mrs. Price's class. I know Lisa is going to be getting her license soon! That's good. She will be able to drive you around.

I was just thinking about a story about a young reindeer that was just learning to pull my sleigh. Her name was Rhonda the Reindeer. She has a bright, bright pink nose. She resembled my leader, Rudolph, very much. She was his daughter. Rhonda was having trouble at first, because she wasn't big enough. But, because she was Rudolph's daughter, I had to give her a chance to try. After she practiced every day, she was ready for Christmas Eve. Rudolph and Rhonda led my sleigh on Christmas Eve proudly.That was a great Christmas! I know this Christmas is going to be even better because I am coming to your house. Hope you have a great Christmas!

Love always,
Santa Claus

BUSINESS BRIEFS

McNabb hired for advice

McNabb Associates, a Cohasset-based environmental public policy consulting firm, has been retained by Corporate Conservation, Inc. of Cambridge to advise Corporate Conservation and its clients regarding significant public policy developments which impact paper recycling.

Corporate Conservation develops and implements office paper recycling programs for Massachusetts businesses, according to President Matthew Costello. "Many businesses are finding that separating and recycling their office paper can have a significant positive effect on their financial bottom line, as well as benefiting the environment by helping preserve trees and scarce solid waste disposal capacity," said Costello.

Corporate Conservation clients include General Electric, Harvard University, and Fidelity Investments.

McNabb Associates advises clients regarding legislative and government actions which affect their interests. Among others, he represents the Massachusetts Health Officers Association and Walden Forever Wild at the Massachusetts State House.

"Legislative and regulatory action can have significant consequences for many businesses and interest groups," said John K. McNabb, Jr., President. "We help them keep track of pending government action and to protect their interests when relevant decisions are being made," said McNabb.

Locals attend convention

Premiere Funding, a mortgage consulting firm based in Cohasset, recently sent two executives to the 1990 annual convention of the National Association of Mortgage Brokers, held in San Diego, California. At the convention, many of the controls and safeguards that have been instituted in the mortgage industry were discussed.

The attendees were Richard Lahar, Premier Funding President, and Mary Fairman, Vice President. Lahar, who resides in Quincy, and Fairman of Cohasset said that they were encouraged by the positive attitude of the mortgage brokers and lending institutions that participated in the show.

"Most everyone felt that the real estate market has nearly bottomed out here in New England and Massachusetts," said Fairman, founder of Premier Funding. "In addition we met with a number of lending institutions out West and in the South that are very eager to provide mortgage money in this state. It certainly isn't necessary to limit your mortgage search to the local area."

Harrington wins Lamb job

Harrington Associates of Braintree, has been appointed marketing and advertising agency for the Lamb Insurance Company of Braintree, Hingham and Cohasset. The agency has launched a program of radio, newspaper and direct response advertising to reach businesses and the general public throughout the South Shore area.

SCHOOL NOTEBOOK

Math team is victorious

Seventh grade students are participating in the Continental Mathematical League again this year. Students who were top scorers in the Euclidean contest in November were: Rebecca Kohler, Brian Thompson, Edward Hamilton, Michael Coates, Tammy Maitland, and Jason Murphy. Top scorers for December were: Edward Hamilton, Brian Thompson, Katie Anderson, Beneta Johnson, Melissa Weier, and Matthew Morris. In the Pythagorian contest the following students were high scorers for November: Abby Pease, Erin Devine, Ryan Sawchuck, Jessi Flynn, David Marr, and Robin Ordelheide. High scorers for December were: Lily Faulhaber, Danielle Nohe, Abby Pease, Erin Devine, Caitlin Connolly, and Ryan Sawchuck.

AFS applications accepted

Applications are being accepted now for participation in the AFS Intercultural Programs being planned for Summer 1991 and the school year 1991-1992. As an international nongovernmental, nonprofit organization, AFS arranges home stay programs for students throughout the world. "AFS feels that applicants should be between the ages of 15 and 19," explains Penny Redfield, Cohasset co-chairman. Information is available at Cohasset High School through faculty sponsor Jack Buckley or by contacting Judy Dwyer, 383-1654.

Additionally, members and friends of the AFS program in Cohasset gathered Sunday (Dec. 9) evening in an informal holiday party. The local group, just like others around the world, is composed of secondary school students, young adults, families and volunteers from all walks of life. Through a wide range of exchange and language programs in which participants live and work or study together, AFS confronts individuals with a world larger than themselves. Participants also gain a more profound cultural understanding of other societies which is essential to the achievement of social justice, peace and harmony in a world of diversity.

The AFS idea originated with American Field Service volunteer ambulance drivers who served in World Wars I & II. Following the war, they established an international exchange program for secondary school students as their peacetime contribution to humanity. In 1947, 52 students from 11 countries came to the U.S. to live with families and attend school. To date, more than 160,000 students have lived with host families in more than 80 countries around the world.

Cohasset families have long been active in AFS. More than 40 students and numerous families have participated in varying degrees. Often, a family's active interest begins when they volunteer to serve as a host family for a weekend visit from an AFS participant, as students are in the area. Often times, it graduates to full participation. However, it need not be more than an interest in extending a hand of friendship to a person from abroad, or a willingness to learn more about other cultures and societies by sharing information with others.

Currently, Patricia (Tica) Soares from Portugal is living with Jack and Sue McNamara and their family. She arrived in late August and will live in Cohasset until next June. At the same time, a Cohasset High School senior, Melissa Christoffel, is living with a Soviet family in Donetsk, Ukraine, Soviet Union.

Last summer, four Cohasset High School students participated in the AFS program. The four are Rebecca Jordan, who went to Portugal; Doug Moe, who lived in Austria; Sophie Redfield who traveled to Venezuela; and Andrew Ross who was 'down under' in Australia.

Apple program ends soon

In addition to the count down to Christmas and the New Year is the count down on the Apples for the Students campaign which ends on Dec. 29.

Our good news to everyone as we mentioned in our update a few weeks ago was that we ordered a Mac Classic 2-40. This computer was a major purchase and promises to be a terrific addition to our schools. Now with some more good news — we have collected enough to place our second order.

As the deadline approaches, we'd like to remind everyone that every slip counts that is dated prior to Dec. 30. So please, when shopping at a Stop & Shop or at a Bradlee's save those slips. We have two weeks after Dec. 29 to collect the slips. Even if you are on vacation remember, when you get back to turn them in and we will still be able to make them count on our last order.

Cohasset High Varsity Gymnastics Update

The Cohasset High School Varsity Gymnastics team competed against Norwell on Monday, Dec. 10, at Norwell. Cohasset took its first loss of the season 114.51-102.15.

Coach Ruthann Sargent feels with one senior, two juniors, 2 sophomores, 3 freshmen, and the rest 7th graders that the future years look very promising.

On the uneven bars Cohasset's Noel Roma placed first,Tara Gallagher second, and Nicole Haefner, third.

Moving over to the beam freshman Marnie DeMichele placed first, teammate Tara Gallagher second, and Junior Erin Sutherland third.

Running over to the vault sophomore Tara Gallagher first, sophomore Erin Sutherland second and Junior Lynda Hague third.

To wrap things up on the floor exercise Gallagher placed first, second Junior Erin Sutherland, and a tie for third Junior Lynda Hague and Senior Noel Roma.

Next meeting is Monday, Dec. 17, at Cohasset at 7 p.m.

Cohasset Community Center Gymnastic Program

Any students enrolled in the Cohasset Centers Gymnastics Program please note the following: If there is no school for the Cohasset school system, then there will be no gymnastics that day. Snow days will be made up at the end of the session.

Students take in BSO

Over 190 high school students, teachers, and chaperones attended and enjoyed "Rhapsodies and Dances" at Boston Symphony Hall on Nov. 30. This special program was one of a series of youth concerts held by the Boston Symphony Orchestra. It was available to the students at a reduced rate, thanks to the generous assistance of the Cohasset Arts Lottery Council through the P.A.S.S. grant program and the PSO.

Memories of Kuwait before the invasion

(Editor's note: The situation in Kuwait has touched many families here.)

By Suzanne Dias
Special to the Mariner

When I first arrived in Kuwait, it was a little pearl of a country on the edge of the Arabian Gulf. I spent my first four or five weeks there hunting marbles, which had been left by groups of boys and then exposed by the never-ending housing excavations. I was alone most of the time in a huge, sparsely furnished house with no t.v., radio, or phone, nor immediate English-speaking neighbors; I was not allowed to drive yet. Three of my children were whisked away each morning at the crack of dawn on a hot little bus to their school, leaving me and my three-year-old to entertain ourselves until my kindergarten son arrived home. We quickly learned to go on treasure hunts around the construction mounds, seeking marbles. We eventually collected over 300. Probably finding these marbles kept me from losing mine.

There was space, clean-washed sky, Gulf waters, and desert. Not the desert of the 50's movies, with huge shifting sand dunes. It was flat, scrubby, colorless and endless. In contrast, Kuwait City and its environs abounded with 5-star hotels, which also served as country clubs for expatriates. Even with dim memories of a stay at the Waldorf Astoria during my childhood, I had never beheld anything like the lavishness of the Kuwait hotels. In the dining rooms were huge gourmet spreads, with imported luxuries, kiwi fruits, Gulf shrimp, all served in exotic surroundings. Security guards dressed like men from the Arabian Nights. And the high-priced shops featuring designer clothes and Godiva chocolate, and the pools, private beaches, work-out rooms. Another world.

Driving around, we always saw large numbers of BMW's, Porsches, Ferraris, block-long limos, and the occasional Lamberghini. Sometimes they were simply abandoned by the side of the road, after suffering minor accidents. There were always more where they came from. The stores on High Street in the main shopping district featured major luxury items, priced in dinars (1 dinar was worth $3.50 at the time). I remember a huge cut crystal pineapple, priced somewhere around 900 dinars; we used to go by the store to stare at it, like tourists in front of Old Faithful.

In contrast there were the souks (marketplaces). Here was teeming, shuffling humanity from many countries, out to buy and sell. The souks were comprised of shops, malls and outdoor sheds full of wares, being pushed by sellers from India, Pakistan, Iraq, Lebanon, Sri Lanka, the Bedouin tribes. Prices were down to earth, and bargaining was a useful skill to have.

After a fairly extended adjustment period, I found Kuwait to be welcoming, and the Kuwaitis themselves hospitable in a reserved way. It was not easy to get to know them one on one, but there were people from surrounding Arab countries, Indians, Europeans, Philippinos and Americans. We never lacked for social life. It was particularly fascinating to see the Bedouin women, until we got used to it. Some were totally hidden behind long black dresses and veils, with not a feature to be seen; others had two rectangular eye slits cut out of their veils. My youngest daughter referred to them as "covered ladies." We also became accustomed to seeing men in public places praying on their mats, and learned not to stare at them. Since Moslems do not care to have pictures taken, I would try to get around it by posing the children near some exotic group of people, and making a big to-do about their smiling and waving. I think the Arabs knew what we were up to, but no one ever complained.

It was a way of life I had not known before, and probably will never know again. I had leisure time to sit on the beach or by the pool with the children, and enough money to cover all our needs, and even eat out sometimes. My children wet their toes in the Islamic culture, making friends from all over the world, learning their customs, observing their fast during Ramadan (even drinking fountains were shut off at school), and hearing regularly the calls to prayer issuing from the many mosques. I visited a Palestinian friend, and learned to brew Arab coffee, and a little about the Koran, and how Arab meals are prepared. I had new experiences, like making my own wine in plastic trash cans, and folding a pound of bacon in my husband's trousers to pass unseen by customs inspectors checking our suitcases.

The Kuwaitis were good hosts. There was a free national clinic near my house. Although some of the bureaucrats were arrogant and difficult when we had to go through the hassle of getting drivers' licenses, visa extensions, etc., we were treated courteously for the most part. The blazing hot day I got lost in a suburb and my car broke down, I received more than courtesy. A Kuwaiti gentleman let me into his home to use the telephone. His mother fed my children and even helped interpret in Arabic when I called the repair service. We could not exchange a word between us, but it was not necessary.

I have been asked fairly often what I think of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. I feel deep sadness at the thought of what was my home for over a year and a half ravaged by Iraqui soldiers. I remember our Arab friends and hope they are safe. I picture the ruin of the fairy tale hotels and stores, the beaches, and beautiful homes, with their lush little gardens hidden behind blank, sand colored walls.

I do not claim to have any answers to the crisis. From my own perspective, based on a nodding acquaintance with Arab culture, it is essential to negotiate a way for Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait without losing face with other nations. Very difficult. It brings to mind the Arabic word "inshallah" (may God so will it). I believe it is up to the Kuwaitis themselves to decide if their government wants a change. I also believe the key to removing Hussein lies in the consolidation of Arab opinion against him, combined with the pressure being brought to bear by the rest of the world. Like all of us, I feel the only way out is a peaceful resolution of this crisis. Inshallah.

Parents should check wish list for safety's sake

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

While Santa checks his list, wise parents will double check their kids' holiday wish list for safety's sake.

All too frequently, what should be child's play turns out to be a lethal weapon.

Some of the hottest toys of the season made the 19th annual "10 Worst Toys of the Year" list released by Edward Swartz, an attorney specializing in personal injury cases.

Every year, an estimated million children are injured and "no less than a couple thousand die", Swartz said.

Swartz wants to put an end the body count.

If Ghostbusters, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, Batman and Bart Simpson are big with your kids, you better watch out.

The Real Ghostbusters Ecto Goggles and Ecto Popper Toy Weapon features rigid plastic goggles and a projectile toy.

Swartz said the goggles represent a threat because the exterior section "fits exactly in the eye socket," representing a threat in collisions between children.

Although the game features soft foam balls that can be "popped" a distance of six feet from the weapon, it wouldn't take the average child long to discover the weapon will fire hard objects as well as the soft ones.

The game is marketed for ages four and up.

The latest accessory for the Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles is a a Pizza Thrower. This vehicle features a projectile weapon that fires multiple hard plastic discs.

A package insert warns "Never Look Directly into the Pizza Oven Launcher (front of vehicle) when unit is on. Do not point or shoot pizza discs at people or animals."

The manufacturer recommended this item for children four and older.

Batman also gets a projectile weapon accessory in the form of a Batmobile rocket launcher. It fires two concealed plastic rockets.

Although the package states the toy meets or exceeds all safety requirements of the product safety code, Swartz warns that any toy featuring a hidden firing mechanism presents a serious hazard to children. An object fired from the rocket launcher can cause suffocation if swallowed or cause external injury.

Swartz said the rigid fins on the vehicle may cause injury if a child falls on the toy.

The manufacturer suggests this toy is appropriate for children five and up.

Bart Simpson's Hang Arounds pose a danger of a different kind.

The Hang Around, also known as a wind sock, is a 13-inch nylon "doll" designed to be hung as a decoration or accessory. The package suggests hanging it from the handle bars of a two-wheel bicycle.

Swartz warns that the doll could easily become entangled in the moving parts of the bicycle. The cords that "hang" the doll pose a risk of strangulation.

The list also singles out "Kaboom the Balloon Busting Game" for contradictory instructions that increase the risk of a serious eye injury or choking incident.

The box also warns purchasers: "Not Recommended for children under 3 — Small Parts Included."

Inside the throwaway package containing the balloons to be exploded as part of the game warns: "Do not give balloons to infants or children under 3 years old. Young children could choke on, or be suffocated by a whole balloon or piece of a broken balloon. Keep balloons away from eyes."

The object of the game is to inflate balloons with an air pump mechanism until they burst. The package shows two children playing the game.

Swartz points out the irony of the package illustration in light of an additional warning on the balloon package that reads: "Adults should inflate balloons and supervise their use with children under six (6) years."

Parents should be aware that this game presents a major risk of choking, suffocation or an eye injury by a bursting balloon or piece of a broken balloon.

Other games and toys and the possible hazard they pose are:

• Voice Changer Megaphone. Loud sounds produced by this toy could cause ear damage or hearing loss.

• Crazy Hammer and Crazy Axe. Although advertised as soft, these deceptively heavy toys with the built-in screaming sounds distributed by Fine World International Trading Corp. could cause serious injury. The package warns: "When play this toy please don't hit toward human or the things which are easy enough to be broken." (sic)

• Honey Pot Bear. This adorable bear with heavy crockery pots strung on a removable cord looped around his neck poses a risk of strangulation or impact injury.

• Motorized Attack Force Weapon Set. The set containing a rigid plastic knife, realistic replica pistol and machine cap gun to equip the budding terrorist poses threats of hearing loss, eye and bodily injury.

• Assorted Small Wooden Toys. F.A.O. Schwartz sells this package of charming French miniatures that can be swallowed easily by small children. Several of the toys have loop-like strings that pose strangulation risks as well.

• MP5K Crossbow Target Game Set. Swartz called this toy "nothing more than a commercially-made zip gun." It consists of an elastic band firing mechanism, darts and cardboard targets of humans. Although the package suggests that you should never point the crossbow at any person or pet, it features an illustration of a person being hit directly in the face by the darts.

Although these ten toys were singled out by Swartz, they represent only a handful of the dangers in the toy shop. The toys on Swartz's top ten list merely demonstrate the categories of risks in the marketplace.

"The standards that are out there are minimum standards that were foisted on the American public by a toy industry that doesn't care," Swartz said.

Swartz considers Fisher Price's Little People, miniature figurines that are sold separately or included with various play sets, one of the biggest dangers for unwary parents and tots.

These figures, aimed at children as young as two, can be swallowed and block the air passages. Swartz said five children have died and many more been brain-damaged from accidents involving the toys.

Fisher Price responded to the deaths, injuries and law suits by adding a cautionary note on their packaging. Swartz considers that a national scandal.

He believes the company should redesign the figurines so they are too roly-poly in shape to fit into a young child's mouth.

Even a rag doll can present a threat.

A life-sized baby doll made Swartz's second string for at least three reasons.

The doll comes packaged in a plastic bag that doesn't bear a warning about the risk of suffocation if a child plays with it. The child-sized dress worn by the doll is made of highly flammable material and the doll has a removable rope around its neck.

"This doll is not full of love, it's a potential booby trap," Swartz warns.

Until the United States adopts a more stringent toy safety code, parents need to educate themselves and their children and become cautious consumers.

So open those boxes and check out those parts. You can always substitute another toy, but your children are irreplaceable.

Holiday concert on cable

Continental Cablevision will broadcast the Plymouth Philharmonic Orchestra holiday concert to cable viewers in Norwell, Hanover, Hull, Scituate, Hingham and Cohasset, on Channel 53 at 10 p.m., Dec. 20, and 7 p.m., Dec. 21.

The concert was taped Dec. 8 at Memorial Hall by a television crew comprised of program directors and community volunteers from both Continental and Harron Cable television.

The holiday program includes the Philharmonic's performance of Handel's "Music for the Royal Fireworks" and Tchaikovsky's "Nutcracker" ballet, and Opus 71, with the Children's Repertory Ballet Co. of Hingham.

The program was produced by Arthur Ducharme of Hanover in cooperation with Donald Roine, Hanover program director for Continental Cablevision, and Denise Figura, program director for Harron TV which serves Pembroke, Plympton and Halifax.

Kindergarten is a gift that lasts past the holidays

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

It's mighty hard to get down and stick to business when you're excited — and the 23 children in Sharon Moody's kindergarten classroom are definitely excited.

After all, jolly old St. Nick is due to fly over Cohasset any day now.

For all their excitement, these bright and beaming children are working hard.

The one thing they want people to know is that kindergarten isn't just playing. There is serious stuff happening in the sunny classroom that looks out on Sohier Street.

And since children's real work is play, they are learning even when they are playing.

One of the ways the children are learning they can read is by writing. Moody has a stack of journals and story books the children are creating. In the beginning their stories are mostly pictures with letters that stand for words.

Before long they create a phonetic language to convey the meaning of their artwork.

Some days the children are just into numbers and fill page after page with numbers.

Whether the lesson is reading, writing or arithmetic, language is the key that unlocks the mysteries. Everything is based on language.

Moody creates activities that match the visual — written language — with oral language. She copies out poems in large letters on huge paper and uses bright colors to identify key words.

Even children who are sure they can't read yet can identify the word Christmas when it is printed in bright red or Chanukah when it is printed in gold.

And if there is one thing they love to recite, it's holiday poems and songs.

They sing about candles flickering in menorahs, dreidels spinning and Santa and reindeer — and life seems just perfect to them.

Messing about with crayons and markers and glue and bits of yarn and buttons is perfect, too.

Moody lays out a whole buffet of wonderful materials for them to choose from.

"I'm not going to decide the directions, you are," she tells them. "You can use Christmas colors or Chanukah colors, glue sticks or Elmer's glue, buttons or discs."

And there are staplers and scissors and magic markers and paper punches — such a delicious array of options.

"Or you can have free play," she tells them.

And the children are off and creating.

Steven Cianciarullo makes a wonderful picture that is destined for a place of honor on the refrigerator. Martha Henderson creates ornaments to hang on the family tree.

Others choose to play house or create a city. One little boy discovers a world of words when he presses Silly Putty on a newspaper.

Over and over again he comes to Moody with a new impression from the newspaper.

"What does it say, what does it say?" he asks.

And finally it's time for large group. They come together to share poems and songs and tell each other important things.

With the Osgood School Christmas singalong scheduled for Friday, Dec. 21 at 9:45 a.m., there are lots of songs to practice. And then there are holiday thoughts.

Their thoughts aren't about what they want Santa to bring them. They like the rituals and routines of family life and the special times that come in December.

David loves to come down and see what is hiding in his Christmas stocking. Johnny is excited because somebody from North Carolina is coming to his house.

"It's an aunt," he says.

For Evan, the best part of Christmas is that everybody in his family comes and joins together. He counts off the people who will gather around his table and share a feast, 14 people in all.

He's happiest that his Nonie will be there and there will be mashed potatoes to eat.

Meredith gets to celebrate Christmas and Chanukah. She shares a special activity book of Chanukah games and stories.

As they share the special things they look forward to, they are getting another gift. This one doesn't come dolled up in ribbon and wrappings and you can't buy it at the toy store.

In the middle of all the hubbub, these children are learning that they can read, they can write and they can solve any problem that comes along. It's really just a matter of paying attention and believing in yourself.

Believing in yourself is probably the best gift you can get in kindergarten.

Come to think of it, it's the best gift you can get anywhere.

Extraordinary Arts and Crafts in an Out of the Ordinary Setting...

SENIOR CORNER

By Kathy Bryanton

Many people have been asking. What are the fuel assistance guidelines? What are the maximum payment allowed? What amount of assistance do people really get? The answer follows:

The 1990 - 1991 income eligibility and maximum benefits table is as follows:

Households Size	$525 Minimum	$285 Asst.	$150 Asst. Maximum
1	$7,850	$9,420	$10,990
2	$10,525	$12,360	$14,735

NOTE: (1) households in public housing whose heat is included in rent are not eligible. (2) Families in public or subsidized housing who pay for heat and receive a utility allowance (primarily section 8 and chapter 707) are eligible but only for 1/2 the otherwise applicable benefit level.

FOOD STAMPS ELIGIBILITY:

Household size: (over 60)	maximum allowable net income
1	$524 monthly
2	$702 monthly

Benefits vary from $10 to $105 per month depending on financial/household situations.

All applications for all Cohasset residents who feel that they might qualify are to call the Council on Aging Office at 383-9112, on Tuesdays or Wednesdays 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and ask for Sue Connolly.

You may also call South Shore Community Action at 1-508-746-6707 with fuel assistance questions. For food stamp questions you can call Mrs. Burke at 335-6000.

NOTICE OF HOLIDAY PROGRAM SCHEDULE:

The Council on Aging Office will be closed on Christmas Eve 12/24/90, Christmas Day, 12/25/90 and New Years Day, 1/1/91. Please call and make transportation arrangements early. Also, there will be rides available to church on Christmas Day. Call Marion Smith at 383-0431 and she will arrange for you to be picked up for Mass.

There will be no classes at the Senior Center from Dec. 24, 1990 to Jan. 4, 1991. All classes will resume on Jan. 7 through 11.

Happy holidays to all our friends from the board members of the Cohasset Council on Aging!

SAFETY FIRST:

The Cohasset firefighters Local 2804 are offering to senior citizens nine volt batteries for battery operated smoke detectors. If you would like the firefighters to replace the smoke detectors batteries, please call the fire department at 383-0616. They are happy to help!

PROJECT BREAD:

Mrs. Dorothy Bryanton's arts and crafts class held at the Senior Center on Tuesday mornings decorated spoons for Santa's Kitchen — Project Bread in the month of November. The ladies were very creative, and some unusual and beautiful ornaments were delivered to downtown crossing on Dec. 1. Because of their efforts $1,000 will be donated to help feed the hungry in Massachusetts. Those who attended were:

Mary Gaudet, Mary Migliaccio, Stella MacDonald, Jeanette Dickson, Anna Grassie, Ruth Cox, Mary Andracchio, Ann Leonard, Helen Murphy, Margaret Casey, Virginia Anderson, Shirley Laidlaw, Olga Sawchuck, Eileen Kurtz, Pauline Keating, Elizabeth Abell, Enna Reid, and Mary Grassie.

BAD WEATHER POLICY:

The Council on Aging would like to remind all seniors, that when the foul weather forces the closing of the Cohasset school system, all council programs will be cancelled. The shuttle bus will not run, luncheons will not be served, and programs will not meet. Please listen to W.J.D.A. 1300 AM the first thing in the morning if you have any questions, they will announce all cancellations.

SUES NEWS

The Council on Aging initiated an outreach project this fall designed to ascertain the needs of Cohasset residents, age 80 and over. Any individual in this age range should contact Sue Connolly, Outreach worker, to provide them with information on services and programs available and to determine if there are any services to help when you are in need! Please call Sue at 383-9112 on Tuesdays or Wednesdays, 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Due to the holiday, the deadline for the December 27th issue is Friday, December 21st at 5 pm

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS LAND COURT
42731 Conf.

To the Town of Cohasset, a municipal corporation, located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Florence R. Stoddard, Kathrynne L. Cummings, James Shipsky and Nan Shipsky, all of said Cohasset; Pilgrim Cooperative Bank, a duly existing corporation, having an usual place of business in said Cohasset; Catherine Hardwick, Abby C. Griggs, George Hardwick, Samuel Hardwick, Elizabeth A. Lemieux and Mary A. Richardson, all residences unknown; or their heirs devisees or legal representatives; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Stewart S. Sargent and Eileen F. Sargent, both of Grantham, in the State of New Hampshire; to confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded and described as follows:

Northeasterly by Doane Street, 58.00 feet;

Southeasterly by land now or formerly of Florence R. Stoddard and Kathrynne L. Cummings, 30.00 feet; and Southwesterly and Northwesterly by land now or formerly of Stewart St. Sargent and Eileen F. Sargent, 58.00 feet and 30.00 feet, respectively.

The petitioners deny any rights of way as referred to in deed recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1014, Page 631, and seeks to have the same eliminated.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

If you desire to make any objection or defense to said petition you or your attorney must file a written appearance and an answer under oath, setting forth clearly and specifically your objections or defense to each part of said petition, in the office of the Recorder of said Court in Boston (at the Court House), on or before the twenty-first day of January next.

Unless an appearance is so filed by or for you, your default will be recorded, the said petition will be taken as confessed and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

WITNESS, JOHN E. FENTON, JR., Chief Justice of said Court, this thirteenth day of December in the year nineteen hundred and ninety.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

PORTFOLIO 50: 6 month CD.*

7.60% Annual Rate

7.87% Annual Yield

Assumes renewal for 6-month term at same rate and monthly compounding which can be obtained if you maintain certain other accounts and have a combined banking statement. Rate subject to change. Applies to CDs from $2,500-$100,000.

If you haven't turned 50, we're sorry, but this ad is not for you.

That's because at Bank of Boston the only way you can get these terms on our 6-month CD is to be a member of Portfolio 50. Besides taking advantage of this great rate, members also qualify for special banking services. These include a Checking-with-Interest account with no regular monthly service charge, free credit card registration, and no-fee traveler's checks and cashier's checks. Plus, a Discount Book with over 700 coupons that save you money on dining, shopping, hotels and car rentals all over New England.

The Portfolio 50 6-month CD from Bank of Boston. It's the kind of feature mature audiences have been waiting for. For more information on this and other rates, stop by any Bank of Boston office.

BANK OF BOSTON

Put our strength to work for you.

To qualify, you must be at least 50 years old and open a Portfolio 50 Checking-with-Interest Account and keep a balance of $10,000 in almost any combination of deposit accounts. *Offer for individual deposits only, excluding IRAs. Substantial penalty for early withdrawal. Rate cannot be combined with any other interest rate premium. Member FDIC. © 1990 The First National Bank of Boston

Stephen Hart leads schools on a mission

By Alison Cohen
Mariner staff

For almost 22 years, Stephen Hart has been helping to shape the future of Cohasset.

Cohasset's children have known him as a guidance counselor, assistant superintendent and superintendent. It's a relationship he takes seriously.

He came to education by a circuitous route.

After he graduated from Merrimack College with a degree in biology, he taught science for one year and then joined Dow Chemical and later New England Nuclear Corporation as a technical representative.

Business paid better, but he missed teaching.

"I enjoyed the one on one relationship with students," he said. So he went back to school to get a graduate degree in guidance.

"Most people were doing it the other way around back then," he remembers.

He decided to come to a small community where he could be involved in a lot of different areas. One of the areas he got involved in was special education when Chapter 766 came into being in 1974.

The program mandated educational services for developmentally disabled children.

With a strong and involved parent group, Cohasset began mainstreaming special needs children early on. Today it is the cutting edge of special education.

"It was kind of an exciting time because it was a time when a lot of new programs were starting," Hart said. And not just in special education.

Times have changed since then.

It's not that Cohasset lost its commitment to children. Finding money to support programs is more difficult.

"There is more scrutiny, which is good," he said. "Cohasset is fairly conservative on spending money." When the town funds something now, he said, it's with an increased sense of commitment.

As committed as the town is to educational excellence, the new economic reality is forcing difficult decisions. Cohasset isn't alone in this.

"We're getting to the point where we have to cut into programs," Hart said. "We've cut back on the comprehensiveness of the school by cutting industrial arts, home economics and foreign language courses."

Hart hastens to explain that it's not because the school system does not value those disciplines. It's been a matter of cutting the courses that attract the fewest students.

"We based the decisions on the needs of the majority of students," Hart said. In Cohasset, 90 percent of the students go on to higher education.

In the beginning the cuts were easier. Declining enrollments took care of the reductions. As more courses are cut, it's harder to say the school is providing a comprehensive education.

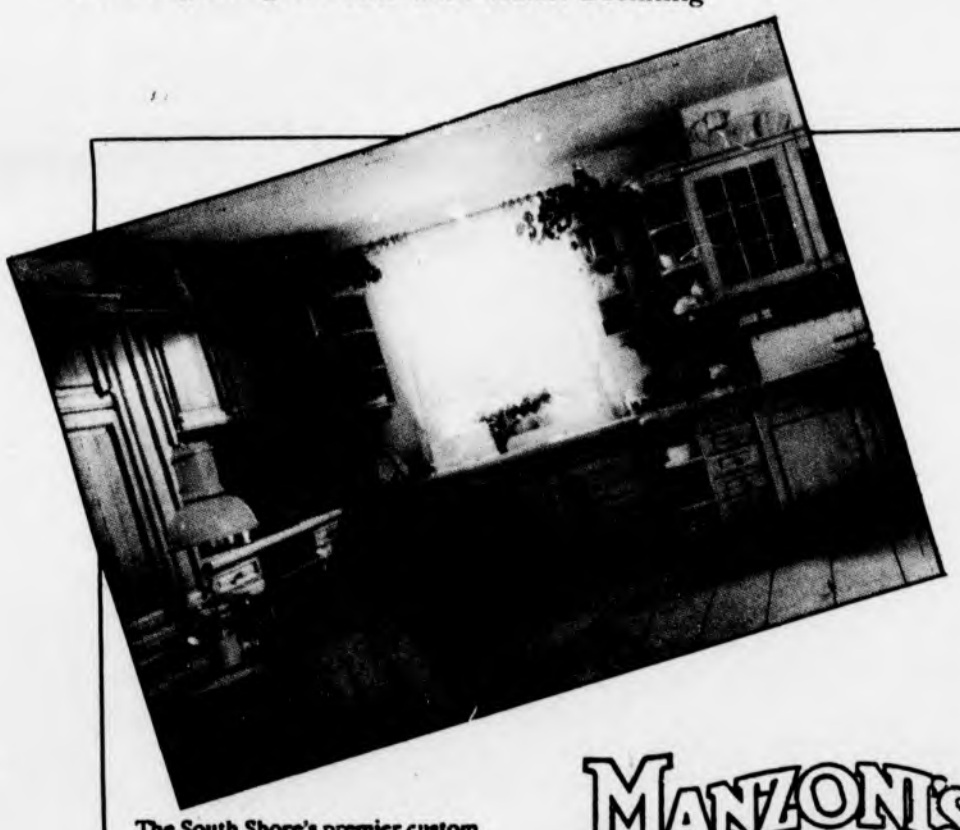
"The other 10 percent still need other opportunities," he said. Although South Shore Vo-tech is an option and provides a safety valve, students don't want to be forced to leave town and leave behind friendships in order to get an education in industrial arts or home economics.

"Where do we go next?" he worries. "We are going to have to fight and try and convince the town that it is our mission to provide an education to all our students," Hart said.

(Please see page 10)

A candlelight vigil was held on Cohasset Common to honor servicemen stationed in the Gulf and to pray for peace. The vigil was organized by a high school student whose father is stationed in the Middle East. (Staff photo by Jodi L. Rome)

Cohasset and Hingham banks plan merger



Paul E. Bulman, President and CEO of Hingham Institution for Savings ("Hingham"), and Donald E. Bates, President and CEO of Cohasset Savings Bank ("Cohasset"), jointly announced today that the Boards of Directors of the two banks have agreed in principle to the merger of Cohasset with and into Hingham. The merger would provide for the shareholders of Cohasset to receive a number of Hingham shares, representing Cohasset's contribution to the capital of the combined organization. Hingham shareholders would continue to hold Hingham shares. The exact exchange ratio and other material terms of the merger are expected to be negotiated in the near future.

The agreement announced today is subject to the execution of a definitive merger agreement between the parties and approval of the shareholders of both banks. The merger is also subject to various regulatory approvals, including those of the Massachusetts Commissioner of Banks and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation.

Hingham maintains banking offices in the towns of Hingham, Hanover, and Hull. On September 30, 1990, total assets were $153,951,000 and stockholders' equity totaled $15,750,000, for a book value of $12.60 per share.

Cohasset maintains banking offices in the towns of Scituate and Cohasset. On September 30, 1990, total assets were $65,749,000 and stockholders' equity totaled $11,825,000, for a book value of $11.79 per share.

The stock of both banks is quoted and traded on the NASDAQ National Market System with Hingham under the symbol "HIFS" and Cohasset under the symbol "CHTB".

South Shore Coalition wants to raise its fee

By Mary Calandrella
Mariner staff

Members of the South Shore Coalition believe that their joint purchasing effort will more than pay for a $500 increase in membership fees.

The group's executive board has recommended that the membership fee be increased from $2,000 to $2,500 a year.

The Town of Cohasset is level funding budgets this year, Martha Gjesteby said. "I'll be lucky if I can get $2,000," she said.

"If we solve one problem in a regional way, we've got our money back in spades," Marshfield Selectman Richard Levin replied. The state is funding regional initiatives, he added.

"Barring a political problem, I can't believe that a community won't pay $2,500," he said.

During the next year the group will continue to work on cooperative purchasing and development of a regional solid waste disposal plan, coalition Chairman Rebecca Freed of Norwell said.

The coalition will shortly undertake a joint purchasing effort for computer paper. It has hired, on a trial basis, a woman with cerebral palsy, who will work from her home computer.

The consultants who are developing a model regional solid waste disposal plan are being paid by a state grant.

And, Coastal Zone Management representative Robert Fultz told the group Thursday night, more regional money will be available, under the Mass. Bays Program, for protection, preservation and rehabilitation of estuaries. The federal program is being coordinated by CZM and the Environmental Protection Agency.

Coastal towns and those which contain rivers that flow into estuaries will be asked to name representatives to identify projects that may be eligible for grant money. Collaborative efforts will be encouraged, Fultz said.

Roughly $100,000 will be available for projects this fiscal year, with a probable maximum of $25,000 per project, he said.

One member from each of the five designated regions — Cape Cod, the South Shore, Boston, the North Shore and the Merrimac Valley — will be selected to to serve on a council for the five regions.

Because so many of the towns that would be involved have different issues, coalition members suggested that a larger council would be necessary. The representatives should be conservation or planning professionals, Freed added.

The members should have summaries of projects ready by Jan. 20, Fultz said, adding that the time frame is short because the workplan didn't get passed until the "last minute."

Members voted to include support for the Old Colony Line restoration in amendments which they are suggesting to the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's MetroPlan 2000. The plan is a regional effort to target areas for development in an economically and environmentally aware manner, rather than continuing the current mode of scattered development, MAPC officials say.

The amendments will be discussed at the MAPC meeting in February, Executive Director David Soule said.

Coalition members are also concerned about a delay in the release of the transportation improvement plan. That report will be "an integral part of how we make amendments to MetroPlan 2000," Freed said.

Soule agreed, but said the coalition could work from information on South Shore projects, which it could present as a list and he assured members that the MAPC will not endorse projects until the report has had a "full and fair community review. Members will be allowed to submit amendments in January, he said.

MAPC will work closely with state and federal agencies to encourage investment in areas of the region where development fits the elements of MetroPlan 2000. Higher priority will be given to areas which have been designated as subregional growth centers under the plan.

Coalition members have expressed concern that the area covered by the coalition will not receive needed grant money to make improvements to the towns' infrastructures because the area has not been designated as a subregional growth center.

Steve Landau of MAPC told the coalition that that the council will present a capital improvement priority investment list at the February meeting. To develop the list, the MAPC has been establishing how much money has been spent on capital improvements in the metropolitan area over the past 20 years.

Over the past 20 years, the federal grant money received by the metropolitan area has shrunk from $3.6 to $1.4 billion, he said. A great deal of maintenance on roads, sewer and waterworks has been deferred and now, "in a shrinking economy, the bills are due," Landau said.

The priority surveys, which are being completed by coalition members towns', will be used to develop a broad agenda, he said.

Woodworking class gets underway soon

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept telephone registrations for a furniture restoration-refinishing-revitalization class, to be taught by Kenneth Sargent of Cohasset Country Workshop, by calling the recreation office at 383-6791.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting on Wednesday or Saturday mornings, 9 to 11 a.m., at Cohasset Town Hall. The fee for the 10 hour program is $50 per person, and classes are restricted in size to allow for individual attention.

Participants should select a piece of furniture, that is relatively portable, for class work. A chair or small table is ideal. Participants will not only learn the arts involved with restoration and refinishing, but will also have a completed piece of furniture by the end of the session.

Sargent has been a professional refinisher for a number of years in Cohasset, and has taught the art of restoration and refinishing to a number of classes over the years.

Participants will be required to bring some supplies with them to class, other supplies will be provided. When you call to register, please indicate what piece of furniture you will be bringing to class. Non-Cohasset residents will be accepted for enrollment upon a space available basis, and the next session is scheduled to begin during Mid-January.

'We're Moving To The Townhouse at" Scituate Country Club

. . . so we have a house to sell . . .

"Our family is now all grown up and we have bought the home of our dreams, a Townhouse at the Scituate Country Club, and now we are selling the beautiful home that we have loved so much over the span of years. Our home is a classic nine room colonial with four bedrooms and 2-1/2 baths. We have a den, a delight of a kitchen, a 25 foot family room with brick fireplace, an outside deck and a wonderful in-ground swimming pool. We are located in the Egypt section of seaside Scituate.

Call our broker, Mary Pecce of the Jack Conway Co. and come to see us. Mary has the key."

A farewell to readers who CARE

By Alix White
Special to the Mariner

This year has been a wonderful beginning for this column. Through interviews, "Tips & Troubleshooting," commentaries, and news, I have brought the big environmental issues home to Cohasset in a usable style. Some of the topics that I covered were recycling, waste management, composting, pesticides, herbicides, water pollution and conservation — you know, the usual day to day problems of living in our modern world.

This column began as a public service from the Cohasset Recycling Committee and this newspaper. When the Recycling/Transfer Facility (RTF) opened a year ago, the Board of Health started enforcing mandatory recycling. The recycling committee understood that education was even more important than enforcement. The Mariner agreed to give the committee space in the paper for recycling education. I agreed to write that article. Jennifer Longley, who has subsequently moved to the Cape, helped co-write the column for several months.

I have been flushing toilets, bagging up newspapers, and rinsing out bottles most of my life. I know that environmental issues can either get pretty dull or seem too overwhelming to do anything about. I have taken wonderful naps reading important but incredibly boring environmental articles. If I had wanted you to fall asleep, I would have simply recycled those articles at your house. No, I wanted you to know that you could recycle 80% of your waste, reduce 40% of your water usage, and replace the hazardous waste in your home without even trying.

This column has made it easy to learn how to make simple changes for a better environment. In this time of recession, you have probably also noticed that you are saving money. I have enjoyed sharing these ideas with you, watching the success of the recycling program at the RTF, and hearing of your successes at home.

I would like to continue writing this column, but I need your help. For a year, I have written the CARE column as a community service to you through the Cohasset Recycling Committee and the Mariner. I would like to do more interviews and more research. I am unable to continue doing this for free. This is where I need your help. If this column is an important part of the Mariner to you, please let Pat Desmond, editor of the Cohasset Mariner, know. You can call her at 1-800-874-6969. Better yet, you can write her a short letter.

The address is Pat Desmond, editor, Cohasset Mariner, P.O. Box 682, Marshfield, MA 02050.

Thank you for your on-going support.

Take a swing at indoor golf this winter

The Cohasset and Scituate Recreation Departments are jointly sponsoring winter, indoor golf lessons, scheduled to begin on Wednesday evening, from 7 to 8 p.m., Jan. 9, at the Cushing School, Aberdeen Drive, Scituate.

Sessions are five weeks in duration, meeting each Wednesday evening, from Jan. 9 to Feb. 6, and should demand dictate; flexibility to offer more than one class exists. The cost for the program is $50 per person, and golf clubs will be provided for lessons to those individuals who may require them.

Instructing will be Chuck Young, area golf pro, who has taught at the U.S. Golf Academy and throughout the Midwest and west, as well as being a Pan Am tournament player.

To register for this unique program, which makes an ideal Christmas gift, please call either the Cohasset or Scituate Recreation Department Office, at: 383-6791 or 545-6700, Ext. 238.

Editorial

Happy new year

What a difference a decade makes.

Was it only 10 years ago that 52 Americans were being held hostage in their embassy in Teheran while official America was aiding and abetting Iraq in its war against Iran?

Now the United States is seeking the aid and comfort of the Iranians and the Arab world as it moves toward the brink of war with Iraq, ostensibly over the invasion of Kuwait.

Was it only 10 years ago that Soviet troops were being held at bay by guerrilla fighters in a place called Afghanistan and America was so upset about it that its athletes were forbidden to take part in the summer Olympic games in Moscow?

Now the once powerful Soviet Union is showing signs of breaking apart at the seams and America is contemplating shipments of emergency food supplies to carry Moscovites through the winter season.

Was it only 10 years ago that, without the help of the United States, the Sandinistas were struggling to set up a government in Nicaragua after having ousted the regime of Anastasio Somoza in a revolution?

Now, with the help of the United States, the anti-Sandinistas are struggling to set up a government in Nicaragua after having ousted the regime of Daniel Ortega at the ballot box.

Was it only 10 years ago that, with "the Massachusetts Miracle" still around the corner, local officials were awaiting with some trepidation the advent of Proposition 2-1/2, which would place a limit on the amount of money they could raise through the property tax?

Now, with "the Massachusetts Miracle" only a pleasant memory for most, local officials are awaiting with some trepidation the advent of a new state administration, Republican this time, which holds the cities and towns in thrall through the medium of local aid.

Was it only 10 years ago that former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, having been defeated for a second term by Gov. Edward J. King, was home in Brookline nursing his wounds and plotting a comeback in the 1982 election?

Now, a soon-to-be former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, having chosen not to run for a fourth term as even members of his own party closed in with tar and feathers, is home in Brookline nursing his wounds and plotting . . . what, in 1992?

Could it have been less than 10 years ago (1982) that Israel invaded Lebanon to get at the terrorist bases of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the ensuing malaise spread to such an extent that Lebanon virtually ceased to exists as a nation and 237 U. S. Marines were killed in a terrorist explosion (1983) in Beirut?

Could it have been less than 10 years ago (1986) that the space shuttle Challenger, with seven astronauts, including Christa McAuliffe, aboard, exploded after launch at Cape Canaveral, sending America's space program into a tailspin that lasts even today?

The decade of the 1980s, the last decade of the 20th Century, the last decade of the Second Millenium, ends next week.

So here's to the decade just now closing. For some, it was the best of times. For others, it was the worst. But for all, it was a time worth living for the best of all reasons — just to see what happens next.

Hey Santa, I'm really a believer

Commentary

Don't tell me Santa Claus isn't real? I have proof he's indeed alive and well.

Wait this isn't another "I saw Elvis shopping at 7-Eleven story." This is not a crank tale.

When I was eight years old, I discovered Santa Claus was real.

With careful planning, I set up a trap to find out if the guy in the red suit was for real. Christmas Eve I put out some milk and cookies out for him and waited for Santa to arrive.

I wrote Santa a letter. I wanted to have him sign it so I could show the girl next door.

She was nine and one of those real know-it-alls. We used to wait for the bus in front of my house.

One day, she asked me what I had been watching on T.V. before I came to the bus stop.

"I was watching Bozo the Clown," I told her one morning. "He's great. I'd like to go on the show and visit his house."

She laughed.

"You dummy, Bozo isn't real," she replied. "He's some guy dressed up in a clown suit."

"You mean he doesn't have that neat orange hair?" I asked.

"Don't be a jerk," she said. "He's not real. Major Mudd isn't really an astronaut. And Santa Claus isn't real."

"Wait a minute, Santa Claus is real. Who else would bring you all the gifts at Christmas? I don't believe you," I said. "I'm going to prove to you that Santa Claus is real. Besides my mother told me if I didn't believe I won't get any presents."

The girl next neighbor couldn't have been right. I had to prove that she was wrong. No matter how long it took me to do so.

If it meant staying up all night before Christmas, I was going to prove to her that Santa was real.

I drew up my battle plan. I was going to have my letter to Santa ready for him to sign. Santa would put the gifts under the tree and then he'd sit down for some milk and cookies.

We'd talk for awhile. There was the matter of last Christmas to discuss with him. I wanted a fire truck.

Santa could just give me that kid's number. I could call him up and bring the dump truck over to swap with him.

I figured even Santa made mistakes.

When Christmas Eve came I waited. Every half-hour, I would get up and look out the window.

By 9:30 p.m., I had looked out the window about a hundred times.

"Why don't you go to bed," my mother suggested. "We'll make sure Santa gets the letter and signs it for you."

I thought about it for awhile. Finally, I decided to go to sleep. Hey if a guy can't trust his mother, you can he trust.

I went to bed. About 6:30 a.m. I got up and raced to the living room. The milk and cookies were gone. My new toys were all over the living room floor.

He had. Santa was real. That ought to shut up the girl next door.

Did Santa sign the letter?

I clutched the letter, but only being eight I had a little trouble reading it. I raced into my sister's room. Hey, if you have to have a big sister, you might as well use her for something good every once and awhile.

She read the letter to me.

"Dear Mike:

"I'm real. I live at the North Pole and on Christmas my reindeer and I fly all over the world giving gifts.

"I'm sorry about the dump truck mix-up last year. I left one this year so everything should be all right.

"I enjoyed the milk and cookies, but next year you could leave me a vodka on the rocks. It gets a bit nippy on the ride.

"I hope you have a nice Christmas.

"Santa."

I couldn't wait to run next door and show her the letter. I had proof.

In the afternoon, I went outside to find her.

"See Santa signed this letter," I said.

"It's a fake," she replied.

There was just no way of convincing her that she was wrong. I finally gave up.

I knew Santa was real. And I still believe in him.

I don't get as many presents as I used to, but Santa still gets his vodka.

I figure as long as I leave his drink, he'll keep coming to my house.

Santa, if you're reading this, I'd really like a big screen T.V. The vodka will be in the usual place.

Boats were budget victim

To the Editor:

The commuter boat has been a major success story since we began providing the service in 1985.

After four years of growth averaging 30%, ridership has declined in recent months.

This year the MBTA budget actually proposed expanding the service to add a late night trip to expand market reach and mitigate further losses.

Unfortunately the Advisory Board, made up of the 78 cities and towns, voted on November 30 to reduce funding for the commuter boat service.

Members of the Advisory Board from the South Shore fought to restore the funding but were unsuccessful before the full Board.

Regrettably, therefore, we must now seek ways to reduce service to implement this budget cut.

Happy new year

What a difference a decade makes.

Was it only 10 years ago that 52 Americans were being held hostage in their embassy in Teheran while official America was aiding and abetting Iraq in its war against Iran?

Now the United States is seeking the aid and comfort of the Iranians and the Arab world as it moves toward the brink of war with Iraq, ostensibly over the invasion of Kuwait.

Was it only 10 years ago that Soviet troops were being held at bay by guerrilla fighters in a place called Afghanistan and America was so upset about it that its athletes were forbidden to take part in the summer Olympic games in Moscow?

Now the once powerful Soviet Union is showing signs of breaking apart at the seams and America is contemplating shipments of emergency food supplies to carry Moscovites through the winter season.

Was it only 10 years ago that, without the help of the United States, the Sandinistas were struggling to set up a government in Nicaragua after having ousted the regime of Anastasio Somoza in a revolution?

Now, with the help of the United States, the anti-Sandinistas are struggling to set up a government in Nicaragua after having ousted the regime of Daniel Ortega at the ballot box.

Was it only 10 years ago that, with "the Massachusetts Miracle" still around the corner, local officials were awaiting with some trepidation the advent of Proposition 2-1/2, which would place a limit on the amount of money they could raise through the property tax?

Now, with "the Massachusetts Miracle" only a pleasant memory for most, local officials are awaiting with some trepidation the advent of a new state administration, Republican this time, which holds the cities and towns in thrall through the medium of local aid.

Was it only 10 years ago that former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, having been defeated for a second term by Gov. Edward J. King, was home in Brookline nursing his wounds and plotting a comeback in the 1982 election?

Now, a soon-to-be former Gov. Michael S. Dukakis, having chosen not to run for a fourth term as even members of his own party closed in with tar and feathers, is home in Brookline nursing his wounds and plotting . . . what, in 1992?

Could it have been less than 10 years ago (1982) that Israel invaded Lebanon to get at the terrorist bases of the Palestine Liberation Organization and the ensuing malaise spread to such an extent that Lebanon virtually ceased to exists as a nation and 237 U. Hart works to teach the children

Another difficulty in cutting back classes is the difficulty in scheduling. Students are finding it difficult to get in all the courses they need.

Although regionalization may offer some solutions, scheduling and transportation concerns make it difficult to accomplish.

"We are doing a regional workshop for teachers," Hart said. "There are 12 teachers from three other towns coming to reduce the costs, but it took a lot of work just to coordinate that one."

Interestingly, Hart said regionalization can offer more choices, but not always at bargain rates.

"Regionalization does not necessarily equal lower costs," he said. "Sometimes it costs more per pupil."

New technologies offer some possibilities. Interactive cablesystems are one way to expand course offerings. But there are advantages and problems.

"It takes planning and money," Hart said. Those are two commodities hard to come by in a small system that is scrambling just to hold the line on services.

On a brighter note, Hart is an enthusiastic supporter of the alternative school.

"I think it really provides a very useful and viable asset to Cohasset," he said. "It provides programs for certain students within the system, and because it's part of the school it's really a resource for the whole school."

The alternative program reaches out to students of all ability levels for whom a traditional approach is not appropriate. Some students may be at risk of dropping out, others are so far advanced that they need to individualize their course work.

The alternative school also offers broader kinds of educational opportunities. Some students are working on the boat restoration project under the auspices of the Hull Lifesaving Museum. Others are setting up a ropes course.

"It meets the needs of a lot of different students," Hart said.

Cohasset prides itself on keeping its focus on the children.

"We want to develop programs that respond to student needs," he said. "We want to give students the opportunity to be successful at their own pace in their own way."

One of the keys to Cohasset's success is its staff, according to Hart.

"A lot of it has to do with the individual teacher. Hiring is very important," he said. "The school committee places emphasis on that process."

He said the hiring process is demanding, but people can feel sure the person is the right one for the job in the end.

Having a school committee, administration and staff that is committed to the system is critically important, he said.

"Everyone is being asked to do more with less," Hart said. "Parents have done more, too. People who don't even have anyone in the school system are helping."

When Hart isn't walking around surveying his domain in Cohasset, he can probably be found at home in Hingham doing a remodeling project on the house.

He and his wife, Miriam, spend a lot of time with family. The last of their three daughters is in college now. Both Hart and his wife have elderly parents who require time as well.

Stephen Hart

He enjoys theater, downhill skiing and traveling to warmer climes when he can get away.

As an educator, he spends a lot of time on professional reading. For light diversion, Hart escapes with mysteries or spy novels.

Another recent piece of reading for pleasure came during a reading program at Deer Hill School. Hart was one of many "celebrities" sharing a book with students.

When his turn came up, he chose one of his daughters' favorite books to read, Shel Silverstein's The Giving Tree.

Most of the reading he'll be doing for the next few months will have lots of dollar signs. It's town budget time, again.

When the going gets tough, he may recall one book he read recently that bridged business and pleasure.

Going to Extremes is a book about the North Slope School District of Alaska. No matter how difficult budget season may be, at least Hart doesn't have to get to the schools under his supervision by bush plane!

IT'S A FACT
Chiropractic Can Help
Chiropractors have a very special education and training in treating nerve-related health problems caused by spinal misalignment. Chiropractors find the areas along the spinal column wher nerves may be "pinched" by a spinal vertebra. After finding the problem, the chiropractor manipulates the misaligned vertebra back toward normal. This restroes normal nerve supply and function. The result is that the body heals itself with no drugs, surgery or continued discomfort.

Drama classes begin again next month

The next session of the successful Drama Workshop for children and youth, co-sponsored by the Cohasset Dramatic Club and Cohasset Recreation Department, is scheduled to commence on Saturday, Jan. 12, meeting for eight weeks, culminating with a performance on Saturday, March 9.

Registrations for the winter session are currently being accepted by calling the Cohasset Recreation Department Office at: 383-6791. The fee for this program is $55 per participant, for the eight week session which will meet at the 'New Study', at Cohasset High School. Classes will be organized as follows: Ages 6 to 10 meet from 10 a.m. to noon; ages 11 to 17 meet from 2 to 4 p.m. New Study - CHS

Teachers for the session are Darcy Pratt and Peggy Corrigan; both are Cohasset Dramatic Club board members. Darcy is from Scituate, is a BU graduate in Communications, and most recently directed children's productions of "Oliver," "Harvey," "Sound of Music," "South Pacific," and "The Little Mermaid" at a summer camp in New York State. Peggy, a lawyer turned mom, played in the Nov. 16-18 CDC production of "Silent Night, Lonely Night" by Robert Anderson, at Town Hall.

Goals of the CDC workshop are to encourage playwriting, dramatic creativity and self-confidence, and to provide children with an all-around basis in the dramatic arts. The Winter Drama Workshop will be more advanced, depending on continued registration, but both workshops will give attention to makeup, costumes, set and lighting design, acting and playwriting. For information, call Pratt 545-2429, Corrigan 383-0296.

Artists do an 'About Face'

Three artists working in different mediums join forces for the exhibition: "About Face" at the South Shore Art Center in Cohasset Jan. 3-Feb. 2.

Mary Good, a photographer, will present large black and white photographs of AIDS patients. The photographs, haunting in subject matter are generally four-foot square in size capturing just the expression filled faces.

Susan Kilmartin creates small copper etchings and oils capturing the spirit of people and their lives in her portraits. Her main inspiration springs from her own family relationships and all of the emotions contained therein.

Syma, a clay sculptor will exhibit masks, for which she is renowned. These masks always have a purpose, and usually a mystical reference or influence. Many of the masks were influenced or inspired by her "muse" which on occasion eludes the artist. Photography, etchings and small oils and clay sculpture joined by the common bond of "faces" will undoubtedly form a most unique and dynamic exhibition.

On January 3 from 6-8 p.m., the public is cordially invited to the opening reception at the Art Center. For more information, call the Art Center Tuesday-Saturdays from 10 a.m. -4 p.m. at 383-9548.

CCC offers winter fun

The Cohasset Community Center has new winter courses for the entire family to get involved in through the long winter months.

A new boy's gymnastics class is being offered for 6 and 7 year olds at the Community Center. The class will run for 10 weeks beginning Wednesday, Jan. 2, from 5:30 to 6:30 p.m. The cost is $50 for members and $60 for non-members.

There are also a few openings in gymnastic classes for 3, 4 and 5 years old boys and girls.

The bowling alleys are open from 3 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 1 to 5 on Saturday. Learn how to bowl and keep score. The cost is $1 a string for members and $1.25 a string for non-members.

The Deer Hill Bowling League will be starting up again on Friday, Jan. 4. Call 383-0088 to reserve a place.

For Pre-Schoolers the Community Center has a For Kids Only Playgroup for children ages 2 yrs. 9 months to 4 years old. For children age 3 to 5 a Science and Nature class, a Tiny Tot Chef class, and Kodaly Music Classes will be starting again in January.

The puppet show for the month of January will feature "The Princess and the Dragon." Designed especially for young children, the puppet show comes alive on Friday morning, Jan. 4 at 10:30 a.m. Admission is $2 per person at the door.

Celebrate a birthday with your child's favorite activity at the Community Center. We will provide the activity while parents provide the cake and ice cream, snacks, and decorations. Choose from a bowling party, a gymnastics party, a gym dandy, or a craft party. All parties must be scheduled in advance.

A Moms and Tot Playgroup will be starting again on Wednesday afternoons starting Jan. 16.

Gym Dandy classes will be available for 1 and 2 year old children starting on Jan. 30 and 31.

Youth and Teens can keep busy with many new afternoon and evening classes such as Babysitting which starts Jan. 23, International Cooking which starts Jan. 10, Spanish For Kids which starts Jan. 28, Nature Nuts which starts Jan. 10, and a new class which will teach Study Skills for grades 4, 5, and 6 which will meet on Tuesday afternoon from 4 to 5 starting Jan. 25. Study skills for grades 7-12 will be held on Monday nights from 7 to 8 starting Jan. 24.

Adults have a wide variety of courses to choose from. Beginning Jan. 14 there will be Ballroom Dancing and Bridge. Yoga begins again on Jan. 21, Tai Chi starts Jan. 9. Planning For Retirement and Computers for the Novice start Jan. 17. Jackie Fee's Sweater Samplers for the experienced knitter begins Jan. 28. Getting Smart about Investing begins Jan. 28.

The annual "Frosty Frolic Dance" will be held on Saturday evening Jan. 26 (please note the date change from the 19th). Chase away the winter doldrums and dance the night away at The Cohasset Community Center! Everyone is invited to attend. Tickets may be purchased in advance for $30 per couple. This is our annual fundraiser to help reduce the mortgage.

Channel 53

Thursday, January 3

5:30 p.m. Children's Corner. This week Bob will read the works of two local children's book author-illustrators, Jan Brett of Norwell and Marc Brown of Hingham. Both are nationally known. Featured will be Jan's The Mitten (published in the fall of 1989) and one of her earlier works Fritz and the Wild Horses. Marc Brown will be represented by three books, from his very popular Arthur series, Arthur's Pet Business, Arthur's Eyes, and Arthur's Teacher Trouble, his book people are extraordinarily appealing.

Tuesday, January 8

8:30 p.m. Bob Detwiler's Journal. Although Bob features Norwell School committee men Bob Carson, chairman, and Scott Babcock, vice chairman, talking about Norwell's educational system, its problems and accomplishments are generic to other systems on the South Shore, so tune in.

COHASSET
BOARD OF HEALTH
PUBLIC HEARING
NOTICE

The Board of Health will conduct a public hearing on Tuesday, January 8, 1991 at 7:30 PM at 41 Highland Avenue, Cohasset (Town Hall auditorium) relative to proposing a by-law for 1991 Annual Town Meeting. It is proposed to: 1) increase the number of restaurant seats for non-smoking from twenty-five to seventy-five percent; 2) establish smoking in the work place policies; 3) set cigarette vending machine restrictions; and other related matters.

Michael H. Sullivan, Chairman
Sharon L. Becker, Clerk
William E. Baird, P.E.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS
LAND COURT
42731 Conf.

To the Town of Cohasset, a municipal corporation, located in the County of Norfolk, and said Commonwealth; Florence R. Stoddard, Kathrynne L. Cummings, James Shipsky and Nan Shipsky, all of said Cohasset; Pilgrim Co-operative Bank, a duly existing corporation, having an usual place of business in said Cohasset; Catherine Hardwick, Abby C. Griggs, George Hardwick, Samuel Hardwick, Elizabeth A. Lemieux and Mary A. Richardson, all residences unknown; or their heirs devisees or legal representatives; and to all whom it may concern:

Whereas, a petition has been presented to said Court by Stewart S. Sargent and Eileen F. Sargent, both of Grantham, in the State of New Hampshire; to confirm their title in the following described land:

A certain parcel of land with the buildings thereon, situate in said Cohasset, bounded and described as follows:

Northeasterly by Doane Street, 58.00 feet;

Southeasterly by land now or formerly of Florence R. Stoddard and Kathrynne L. Cummings, 30.00 feet; and Southwesterly and Northwesterly by land now or formerly of Stewart St. Sargent and Eileen F. Sargent, 58.00 feet and 30.00 feet, respectively.

The petitioners deny any rights of way as referred to in deed recorded with Norfolk Deeds Book 1014, Page 631, and seeks to have the same eliminated.

The above described land is shown on a plan filed with said petition and all boundary lines are claimed to be located on the ground as shown on said plan.

If you desire to make any objection or defense to said petition you or your attorney must file a written appearance and an answer under oath, setting forth clearly and specifically your objections or defense to each part of said petition, in the office of the Recorder of said Court in Boston (at the Court House), on or before the twenty-first day of January next.

Unless an appearance is so filed by or for you, your default will be recorded, the said petition will be taken as confessed and you will be forever barred from contesting said petition or any decree entered thereon.

WITNESS, JOHN E. FENTON, JR., Chief Justice of said Court, this thirteenth day of December in the year nineteen hundred and ninety.

Attest with Seal of said Court.

A True Copy Attest,
Charles W. Trombly, Jr.
